(d) The name signed purports to be that of a pledgee, beneficial owner, or attorney-in-fact of the member and, if the nonprofit corporation requests, evidence acceptable to the nonprofit corporation of the signatory's authority to sign for the member has been presented with respect to the vote, consent, written ballot, waiver, proxy appointment, or proxy appointment revocation;

(e) Two or more persons are the member as cotenants or fiduciaries and the name signed purports to be the name of at least one of the cotenants or fiduciaries and the person signing appears to be acting on behalf of all the cotenants or fiduciaries; or

(f) The acceptance of the vote, consent, written ballot, waiver, proxy appointment, or proxy appointment revocation is otherwise proper under rules established by the nonprofit corporation that are not inconsistent with the provisions of this subsection (2).

(3) The nonprofit corporation is entitled to reject a vote, consent, written ballot, waiver, proxy appointment, or proxy appointment revocation if the secretary or other officer or agent authorized to tabulate votes, acting in good faith, has reasonable basis for doubt about the validity of the signature on it or about the signatory's authority to sign for the member.

(4) The nonprofit corporation and its officer or agent who accepts or rejects a vote, consent, written ballot, waiver, proxy appointment, or proxy appointment revocation in good faith and in accordance with the standards of this section are not liable in damages for the consequences of the acceptance or rejection.

(5) Corporate action based on the acceptance or rejection of a vote, consent, written ballot, waiver, proxy appointment, or proxy appointment revocation under this section is valid unless a court of competent jurisdiction determines otherwise.

7-127-205. Quorum and voting requirements for voting groups. (1) Members entitled to vote as a separate voting group may take action on a matter at a meeting only if a quorum of those members exists with respect to that matter. Unless otherwise provided in articles 121 to 137 of this title or the bylaws, twenty-five percent of the votes entitled to be cast on the matter by the voting group constitutes a quorum of that voting group for action on that matter.

(2) Once a member is represented for any purpose at a meeting, including the purpose of determining that a quorum exists, the member is deemed present for quorum purposes for the remainder of the meeting and for any adjournment of that meeting, unless otherwise provided in the bylaws or unless a new record date is or shall be set for that adjourned meeting.

(3) If a quorum exists, action on a matter other than the election of directors by a voting group is approved if the votes cast within the voting group favoring the action exceed the votes cast within the voting group opposing the action, unless a greater number of affirmative votes is required by articles 121 to 137 of this title or the bylaws.

(4) An amendment to the articles of incorporation or the bylaws adding, changing, or deleting a quorum or voting requirement for a voting group greater than that specified in subsection (1) or (3) of this section is governed by section 7-127-207 (2).

(5) The election of directors is governed by section 7-127-208.

7-127-206. Action by single and multiple voting groups. (1) If articles 121 to 137 of this title or the bylaws provide for voting by a single voting group on a matter, action on that matter is taken when voted upon by that voting group as provided in section 7-127-205.

(2) If articles 121 to 137 of this title or the bylaws provide for voting by two or more voting groups on a matter, action on that matter is taken only when voted upon by each of those voting groups counted separately as provided in section 7-127-205. One voting group may vote on a matter even though no action is taken by another voting group entitled to vote on the matter.

7-127-207. Lesser or greater quorum or greater voting requirements. (1) The bylaws may provide for a lesser or a greater quorum requirement, or a greater voting requirement for members or voting groups than is provided for by articles 121 to 137 of this title.

(2) An amendment to the articles of incorporation or the bylaws that adds, changes, or deletes a lesser or a greater quorum requirement or a greater voting requirement shall meet the same quorum requirement and be adopted by the same vote and voting groups required to take action under the quorum and voting requirements then in effect or proposed to be adopted, whichever is greater.

7-127-208. Voting for directors - cumulative voting. (1) If the bylaws provide for cumulative voting for directors by the voting members, voting members may so vote, by multiplying the number of votes the voting members are entitled to cast by the number of directors for whom they are entitled to vote and cast the product for a single candidate or distribute the product among two or more candidates.

(2) Cumulative voting is not authorized at a particular meeting unless:

(a) The meeting notice or statement accompanying the notice states that cumulative voting will take place; or

(b) A voting member gives notice during the meeting and before the vote is taken of the voting member's intent to cumulate votes, and if one voting member gives this notice all other voting members participating in the election are entitled to cumulate their votes without giving further notice.

(3) If cumulative voting is in effect, a director may not be removed if the number of votes cast against such removal, or not consenting in writing to such removal, would be sufficient to elect such director if voted cumulatively at an election for such director.

(4) Members may not vote cumulatively if the directors and members are identical.

(5) In an election of multiple directors, that number of candidates equaling the number of directors to be elected, having the highest number of votes cast in favor of their election, are elected to the board of directors. When only one director is being voted upon, the affirmative vote of a majority of the members constituting a quorum at the meeting at which the election occurs shall be required for election to the board of directors.

7-127-209. Other methods of electing directors. (1) A nonprofit corporation may provide in its bylaws for election of directors by voting members or delegates:

- (a) On the basis of chapter or other organizational unit;
- (b) By region or other geographic unit;
- (c) By preferential voting; or
- (d) By any other reasonable method.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

7-128-101. Requirement for board of directors. (1) Unless otherwise provided in the articles of incorporation, each nonprofit corporation shall have a board of directors. The board of directors and the directors may be known by any other names designated in the bylaws.

(2) Subject to any provision stated in the articles of incorporation, all corporate powers shall be exercised by or under the authority of, and the business and affairs of the nonprofit corporation managed under the direction of, the board of directors or such other persons as the articles of incorporation provide shall have the authority and perform the duties of a board of directors. To the extent the articles of incorporation provide that other persons shall have the authority and perform the duties of the board of directors, the directors shall be relieved to that extent from such authority and duties.

7-128-102. Qualifications of directors. A director shall be an individual. The bylaws may prescribe other qualifications for directors. A director need not be a resident of this state or a member of the nonprofit corporation unless the bylaws so prescribe.

Source: L. 97: Entire article added, p. 688, § 3, effective July 1, 1998. L. 2004: Entire section amended, p. 1510, § 295, effective July 1; entire section amended, p. 342, § 1, effective August 4.

Editor's note: Amendments to this section by House Bill 04-1398 and House Bill 04-1224 were harmonized.

7-128-103. Number of directors. (1) A board of directors shall consist of one or more directors, with the number stated in, or fixed in accordance with, the bylaws.

(2) The bylaws may establish, or permit the voting members or the board of directors to establish, a range for the size of the board of directors by fixing a minimum and maximum number of directors. If a range is established, the number of directors may be fixed or changed from time to time within the range by the voting members or the board of directors.

7-128-104. Election, appointment, and designation of directors. (1) All directors except the initial directors shall be elected, appointed, or designated as provided in the bylaws. If no method of election, appointment, or designation is stated in the bylaws, the directors other than the initial directors shall be elected as follows:

(a) If the nonprofit corporation has voting members, all directors except the initial directors shall be elected by the voting members at each annual meeting of the voting members; and

(b) If the nonprofit corporation does not have voting members, all directors except the initial directors shall be elected by the board of directors.

(2) The bylaws may authorize the election of all or a stated number or portion of directors, except the initial directors, by the members of one or more voting groups of voting members or by the directors of one or more authorized classes of directors. A class of voting members or directors entitled to elect one or more directors is a separate voting group for purposes of the election of directors.

(3) The bylaws may authorize the appointment of one or more directors by such person or persons, or by the holder of such office or position, as the bylaws shall state.

(4) For purposes of articles 121 to 137 of this title, designation occurs when the bylaws name an individual as a director or designate the holder of some office or position as a director.

7-128-105. Terms of directors generally. (1) The bylaws may state the terms of directors. In the absence of any term stated in the bylaws, the term of each director shall be one year. Unless otherwise provided in the bylaws, directors may be elected for successive terms.

(2) Unless otherwise provided in the bylaws, the terms of the initial directors of a nonprofit corporation expire at the first meeting at which directors are elected or appointed.

(3) A decrease in the number of directors or in the term of office does not shorten an incumbent director's term.

(4) Unless otherwise provided in the bylaws, the term of a director filling a vacancy expires at the end of the unexpired term that such director is filling.

(5) Despite the expiration of a director's term, a director continues to serve until the director's successor is elected, appointed, or designated and qualifies, or until there is a decrease in the number of directors.

7-128-107. Resignation of directors. (1) A director may resign at any time by giving written notice of resignation to the nonprofit corporation.

(2) A resignation of a director is effective when the notice is received by the nonprofit corporation unless the notice states a later effective date.

(3) Repealed.

(4) If, at the beginning of a director's term on the board, the bylaws provide that a director may be deemed to have resigned for failing to attend a stated number of board meetings, or for failing to meet other stated obligations of directors, and if such failure to attend or meet obligations is confirmed by an affirmative vote of the board of directors, then such failure to attend or meet obligations shall be effective as a resignation at the time of such vote of the board.

7-128-108. Removal of directors. (1) Directors elected by voting members or directors may be removed as follows:

(a) The voting members may remove one or more directors elected by them with or without cause unless the bylaws provide that directors may be removed only for cause.

(b) If a director is elected by a voting group, only that voting group may participate in the vote to remove that director.

(c) Subject to section 7-127-208 (3), a director may be removed only if the number of votes cast to remove the director would be sufficient to elect the director at a meeting to elect directors.

(d) A director elected by voting members may be removed by the voting members only at a meeting called for the purpose of removing that director, and the meeting notice shall state that the purpose, or one of the purposes, of the meeting is removal of the director.

(e) An entire board of directors may be removed under paragraphs (a) to (d) of this subsection (1).

(f) A director elected by the board of directors may be removed with or without cause by the vote of a majority of the directors then in office or such greater number as is stated in the bylaws; except that a director elected by the board of directors to fill the vacancy of a director elected by the voting members may be removed without cause by the voting members, but not the board of directors.

(g) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2000, p. 983, § 83, effective July 1, 2000.)

(2) Unless otherwise provided in the bylaws:

(a) An appointed director may be removed without cause by the person appointing the director;

(b) The person removing the director shall do so by giving written notice of the removal to the director and to the nonprofit corporation; and

(c) A removal is effective when the notice is received by both the director to be removed and the nonprofit corporation unless the notice states a later effective date.

(3) A designated director may be removed by an amendment to the bylaws deleting or changing the designation.

7-128-109. Removal of directors by judicial proceeding. (1) A director may be removed by the district court for the county in this state in which the address of the nonprofit corporation's principal office is located or, if the nonprofit corporation has no principal office in this state, by the district court for the county in which the street address of its registered agent is located, or, if the nonprofit corporation has no registered agent, by the district court for the city and county of Denver, in a proceeding commenced either by the nonprofit corporation or by voting members holding at least ten percent of the votes entitled to be cast in the election of such director's successor, if the court finds that the director engaged in fraudulent or dishonest conduct or gross abuse of authority or discretion with respect to the nonprofit corporation, or a final judgment has been entered finding that the director has violated a duty set forth in part 4 of this article, and that removal is in the best interests of the nonprofit corporation.

(2) The court that removes a director may bar the director from reelection for a period prescribed by the court.

(3) If voting members commence a proceeding under subsection (1) of this section, they shall make the nonprofit corporation a party defendant.

7-128-110. Vacancy on board. (1) Unless otherwise provided in the bylaws, if a vacancy occurs on a board of directors, including a vacancy resulting from an increase in the number of directors:

(a) The voting members, if any, may fill the vacancy;

(b) The board of directors may fill the vacancy; or

(c) If the directors remaining in office constitute fewer than a quorum of the board of directors, they may fill the vacancy by the affirmative vote of a majority of all the directors remaining in office.

(2) Notwithstanding subsection (1) of this section, unless otherwise provided in the bylaws, if the vacant office was held by a director elected by a voting group of voting members:

(a) If one or more of the remaining directors were elected by the same voting group of voting members, only such directors are entitled to vote to fill the vacancy if it is filled by directors, and they may do so by the affirmative vote of a majority of such directors remaining in office; and

(b) Only that voting group is entitled to vote to fill the vacancy if it is filled by the voting members.

(3) Notwithstanding subsection (1) of this section, unless otherwise provided in the bylaws, if the vacant office was held by a director elected by a voting group of directors, and if any persons in that voting group remain as directors, only such directors are entitled to vote to fill the vacancy.

(4) Unless otherwise provided in the bylaws, if a vacant office was held by an appointed director, only the person who appointed the director may fill the vacancy.

(5) If a vacant office was held by a designated director, the vacancy shall be filled as provided in the bylaws. In the absence of an applicable bylaw provision, the vacancy may not be filled by the board.

(6) A vacancy that will occur at a specific later date, by reason of a resignation effective at a later date under section 7-128-107 (2) or otherwise, may be filled before the vacancy occurs, but the new director may not take office until the vacancy occurs.

PART 2

MEETINGS AND ACTION OF THE BOARD

7-128-201. Meetings. (1) The board of directors may hold regular or special meetings in or out of this state.

(2) Unless otherwise provided in the bylaws, the board of directors may permit any director to participate in a regular or special meeting by, or conduct the meeting through the use of, any means of communication by which all directors participating may hear each other during the meeting. A director participating in a meeting by this means is deemed to be present in person at the meeting.

7-128-202. Action without meeting. (1) Unless otherwise provided in the bylaws, any action required or permitted by articles 121 to 137 of this title to be taken at a board of directors' meeting may be taken without a meeting if notice is transmitted in writing to each member of the board and each member of the board by the time stated in the notice:

(a) Votes in writing for such action; or
(b) (I) Votes in writing against such action, abstains in writing from voting, or fails to respond or vote; and

(II) Fails to demand in writing that action not be taken without a meeting.

(2) The notice required by subsection (1) of this section shall state:

(a) The action to be taken;

(b) The time by which a director must respond;

(c) That failure to respond by the time stated in the notice will have the same effect as abstaining in writing by the time stated in the notice and failing to demand in writing by the time stated in the notice that action not be taken without a meeting; and

(d) Any other matters the nonprofit corporation determines to include.

(3) Action is taken under this section only if, at the end of the time stated in the notice transmitted pursuant to subsection (1) of this section:

(a) The affirmative votes in writing for such action received by the nonprofit corporation and not revoked pursuant to subsection (5) of this section equal or exceed the minimum number of votes that would be necessary to take such action at a meeting at which all of the directors then in office were present and voted; and

(b) The nonprofit corporation has not received a written demand by a director that such action not be taken without a meeting other than a demand that has been revoked pursuant to subsection (5) of this section.

(4) A director's right to demand that action not be taken without a meeting shall be deemed to have been waived unless the nonprofit corporation receives such demand from the director in writing by the time stated in the notice transmitted pursuant to subsection (1) of this section and such demand has not been revoked pursuant to subsection (5) of this section.

(5) Any director who in writing has voted, abstained, or demanded action not be taken without a meeting pursuant to this section may revoke such vote, abstention, or demand in writing received by the nonprofit corporation by the time stated in the notice transmitted pursuant to subsection (1) of this section.

(6) Unless the notice transmitted pursuant to subsection (1) of this section states a different effective date, action taken pursuant to this section shall be effective at the end of the time stated in the notice transmitted pursuant to subsection (1) of this section.

(7) A writing by a director under this section shall be in a form sufficient to inform the nonprofit corporation of the identity of the director, the vote, abstention, demand, or revocation of the director, and the proposed action to which such vote, abstention, demand, or revocation relates. Unless otherwise provided by the bylaws, all communications under this section may be transmitted or received by the nonprofit corporation by electronically transmitted facsimile, e-mail, or other form of wire or wireless communication. For purposes of this section, communications to the nonprofit corporation are not effective until received.

(8) Action taken pursuant to this section has the same effect as action taken at a meeting of directors and may be described as such in any document.

(9) All writings made pursuant to this section shall be filed with the minutes of the meetings of the board of directors.

7-128-203. Notice of meeting - rights of residential members. (1) Unless otherwise provided in articles 121 to 137 of this title or in the bylaws, regular meetings of the board of directors may be held without notice of the date, time, place, or purpose of the meeting.

(2) Unless the bylaws provide for a longer or shorter period, special meetings of the board of directors shall be preceded by at least two days' notice of the date, time, and place of the meeting. The notice need not describe the purpose of the special meeting unless otherwise required by articles 121 to 137 of this title or the bylaws.

(3) Notwithstanding subsections (1) and (2) of this section, and notwithstanding any provision of the articles of incorporation or bylaws to the contrary, the following rules and procedures apply to meetings of the board of directors of a residential nonprofit corporation or any committee of the board:

(a) (I) (A) All regular and special meetings of the residential nonprofit corporation's board of directors or executive committee, or any committee of the board that is authorized to take final action on the board's behalf, must be open to attendance by all residential members or their representatives. The board shall make agendas for meetings of the board, and agendas for meetings of committees of the board that are authorized to take final action on the board's behalf, reasonably available for examination in advance by all residential members or their representatives. If there is no formal agenda, residential members or their representatives are nonetheless entitled to a general description of the purpose of the meeting and the subject matter that will be discussed.

(B) The board shall inform all members, at least annually, of the method by which meeting agendas and other information required by sub-subparagraph (A) of this subparagraph (I) will be provided, including the physical location of places where agendas and meeting notices may be posted or the web address where on-line postings may be made. The board shall give at least thirty days' advance notice of any change in the manner or means by which meeting information will be provided.

(II) The residential nonprofit corporation is encouraged to provide all notices and agendas required by this article in electronic form, by posting on a web site or otherwise, in addition to printed form. If such electronic means are available, the corporation shall provide notice of all regular and special meetings of residential members by electronic mail to all residential members who so request and who furnish the corporation with their electronic mail addresses. Electronic notice of a special meeting must be given as soon as possible but at least twenty-four hours before the meeting.

(b) At an appropriate time determined by the board of directors, but before the board votes on an issue under discussion, the board shall permit residential members or their designated representatives to speak regarding the issue. The board may place reasonable time restrictions on persons speaking during the meeting. If more than one person desires to address an issue and there are opposing views, the board shall provide for a reasonable number of persons to speak on each side of the issue.

(c) The board of directors or any committee of the board may hold an executive or closed-door session and may restrict attendance to board members and such other persons requested by the board during a regular or specially announced meeting or a part thereof. The matters to be discussed at such an executive session may include only matters enumerated in paragraph (d) of this subsection (3).

(d) Matters for discussion by an executive or closed session are limited to:

(I) Matters pertaining to employees of the residential nonprofit corporation or the managing agent's contract or involving the employment, promotion, discipline, or dismissal of an officer, agent, or employee of the corporation;

(II) Consultation with legal counsel concerning disputes that are the subject of pending or imminent court proceedings or matters that are privileged or confidential between attorney and client;

(III) Investigative proceedings concerning possible or actual criminal misconduct;

(IV) Matters subject to specific constitutional, statutory, or judicially imposed requirements protecting particular proceedings or matters from public disclosure;

(V) Any matter the disclosure of which would constitute an unwarranted invasion of individual privacy;

(VI) Review of or discussion relating to any written or oral communication from legal counsel.

(e) Upon the final resolution of any matter for which the board of directors received legal advice or that concerned pending or contemplated litigation, the board may elect to preserve the attorney-client privilege in any appropriate manner, or it may elect to disclose such information, as it deems appropriate, about such matter in an open meeting.

(f) Before the board of directors or any committee of the board convenes in executive session, the chair of the body shall announce the general matter of discussion as enumerated in paragraph (d) of this subsection (3).

(g) The board of directors shall not adopt any change to the residential nonprofit corporation's articles of incorporation or bylaws during an executive session. An articles of incorporation or bylaw change may be validly adopted only during a regular or special meeting or after the board of directors goes back into regular session following an executive session.

(h) The minutes of all meetings at which an executive session was held must indicate that an executive session was held and the general subject matter of the executive session.

7-128-204. Waiver of notice. (1) A director may waive any notice of a meeting before or after the time and date of the meeting stated in the notice. Except as provided by subsection (2) of this section, the waiver shall be in writing and signed by the director entitled to the notice. Such waiver shall be delivered to the nonprofit corporation for filing with the corporate records, but such delivery and filing shall not be conditions of the effectiveness of the waiver.

(2) A director's attendance at or participation in a meeting waives any required notice to that director of the meeting unless:

(a) At the beginning of the meeting or promptly upon the director's later arrival, the director objects to holding the meeting or transacting business at the meeting because of lack of notice or defective notice and does not thereafter vote for or assent to action taken at the meeting; or

(b) If special notice was required of a particular purpose pursuant to section 7-128-203 (2), the director objects to transacting business with respect to the purpose for which such special notice was required and does not thereafter vote for or assent to action taken at the meeting with respect to such purpose.

7-128-205. Quorum and voting. (1) Unless a greater or lesser number is required by the bylaws, a quorum of a board of directors consists of a majority of the number of directors in office immediately before the meeting begins.

(2) The bylaws may authorize a quorum of a board of directors to consist of:

(a) No fewer than one-third of the number of directors fixed if the corporation has a fixed board size; or

(b) No fewer than one-third of the number of directors fixed or, if no number is fixed, of the number in office immediately before the meeting begins, if a range for the size of the board is established pursuant to section 7-128-103 (2).

(3) If a quorum is present when a vote is taken, the affirmative vote of a majority of directors present is the act of the board of directors unless the vote of a greater number of directors is required by articles 121 to 137 of this title or the bylaws.

(4) If provided in the bylaws, for purposes of determining a quorum with respect to a particular proposal, and for purposes of casting a vote for or against a particular proposal, a director may be deemed to be present at a meeting and to vote if the director has granted a signed written proxy to another director who is present at the meeting, authorizing the other director to cast the vote that is directed to be cast by the written proxy with respect to the particular proposal that is described with reasonable specificity in the proxy. Except as provided in this subsection (4) and as permitted by section 7-128-202, directors may not vote or otherwise act by proxy.

(5) A director who is present at a meeting of the board of directors when corporate action is taken is deemed to have assented to all action taken at the meeting unless:

(a) The director objects at the beginning of the meeting, or promptly upon the director's arrival, to holding the meeting or transacting business at the meeting and does not thereafter vote for or assent to any action taken at the meeting;

(b) The director contemporaneously requests that the director's dissent or abstention as to any specific action taken be entered in the minutes of the meeting; or

(c) The director causes written notice of the director's dissent or abstention as to any specific action to be received by the presiding officer of the meeting before adjournment of the meeting or by the nonprofit corporation promptly after adjournment of the meeting.

(6) The right of dissent or abstention pursuant to subsection (5) of this section as to a specific action is not available to a director who votes in favor of the action taken.

7-128-206. Committees of the board. (1) Unless otherwise provided in the bylaws and subject to the provisions of section 7-129-106, the board of directors may create one or more committees of the board and appoint one or more directors to serve on them.

(2) Unless otherwise provided in the bylaws, the creation of a committee of the board and appointment of directors to it shall be approved by the greater of a majority of all the directors in office when the action is taken or the number of directors required by the bylaws to take action under section 7-128-205.

(3) Unless otherwise provided in the bylaws, sections 7-128-201 to 7-128-205, which govern meetings, action without meeting, notice, waiver of notice, and quorum and voting requirements of the board of directors, apply to committees of the board and their members as well.

(4) To the extent stated in the bylaws or by the board of directors, each committee of the board shall have the authority of the board of directors under section 7-128-101; except that a committee of the board shall not:

(a) Authorize distributions;

(b) Approve or propose to members action that articles 121 to 137 of this title require to be approved by members;

(5) The creation of, delegation of authority to, or action by a committee does not alone constitute compliance by a director with the standards of conduct described in section 7-128-401.

(6) Nothing in this part 2 shall prohibit or restrict a nonprofit corporation from establishing in its bylaws or by action of the board of directors or otherwise one or more committees, advisory boards, auxiliaries, or other bodies of any kind, having such members and rules of procedure as the bylaws or board of directors may provide, in order to provide such advice, service, and assistance to the nonprofit corporation, and to carry out such duties and responsibilities for the nonprofit corporation, as may be stated in the bylaws or by the board of directors; except that, if any such committee or other body has one or more members thereof who are entitled to vote on committee matters and who are not then also directors, such committee or other body may not exercise any power or authority reserved to the board of directors in articles 121 to 137 of this title, in the articles of incorporation, or in the bylaws.

STANDARDS OF CONDUCT

7-128-401. General standards of conduct for directors and officers. (1) Each director shall discharge the director's duties as a director, including the director's duties as a member of a committee of the board, and each officer with discretionary authority shall discharge the officer's duties under that authority:

(a) In good faith;

(b) With the care an ordinarily prudent person in a like position would exercise under similar circumstances; and

(c) In a manner the director or officer reasonably believes to be in the best interests of the nonprofit corporation.

(2) In discharging duties, a director or officer is entitled to rely on information, opinions, reports, or statements, including financial statements and other financial data, if prepared or presented by:

(a) One or more officers or employees of the nonprofit corporation whom the director or officer reasonably believes to be reliable and competent in the matters presented;

(b) Legal counsel, a public accountant, or another person as to matters the director or officer reasonably believes are within such person's professional or expert competence;

(c) Religious authorities or ministers, priests, rabbis, or other persons whose position or duties in the nonprofit corporation, or in a religious organization with which the nonprofit corporation is affiliated, the director or officer believes justify reliance and confidence and who the director or officer believes to be reliable and competent in the matters presented; or

(d) In the case of a director, a committee of the board of directors of which the director is not a member if the director reasonably believes the committee merits confidence.

(3) A director or officer is not acting in good faith if the director or officer has knowledge concerning the matter in question that makes reliance otherwise permitted by subsection (2) of this section unwarranted.

(4) A director or officer is not liable as such to the nonprofit corporation or its members for any action taken or omitted to be taken as a director or officer, as the case may be, if, in connection with such action or omission, the director or officer performed the duties of the position in compliance with this section.

(5) A director, regardless of title, shall not be deemed to be a trustee with respect to the nonprofit corporation or with respect to any property held or administered by the nonprofit corporation including, without limitation, property that may be subject to restrictions imposed by the donor or transferor of such property.

(6) A director or officer of a nonprofit corporation, in the performance of duties in that capacity, shall not have any fiduciary duty to any creditor of the nonprofit corporation arising only from the status as a creditor.

(7) No person shall be liable in contract or tort merely by reason of being a director, officer, or member of a nonprofit corporation that was suspended, declared defunct, administratively dissolved, or dissolved by operation of law, and the business or activities of which have been continued for nonprofit purposes, with or without knowledge of the suspension, declaration, or dissolution, and the business and activities of which have not been wound up.

7-128-402. Limitation of certain liabilities of directors and officers. (1) If so provided in the articles of incorporation, the nonprofit corporation shall eliminate or limit the personal liability of a director to the nonprofit corporation or to its members for monetary damages for breach of fiduciary duty as a director; except that any such provision shall not eliminate or limit the liability of a director to the nonprofit corporation or to its members for monetary damages for any breach of the director's duty of loyalty to the nonprofit corporation or to its members, acts or omissions not in good faith or that involve intentional misconduct or a knowing violation of law, acts specified in section 7-128-403 or 7-128-501 (2), or any transaction from which the director directly or indirectly derived an improper personal benefit. No such provision shall eliminate or limit the liability of a director to the nonprofit corporation or to its members for monetary damages for any act or omission occurring before the date when such provision becomes effective.

(2) No director or officer shall be personally liable for any injury to person or property arising out of a tort committed by an employee unless such director or officer was personally involved in the situation giving rise to the litigation or unless such director or officer committed a criminal offense in connection with such situation. The protection afforded in this subsection (2) shall not restrict other common law protections and rights that a director or officer may have. This subsection (2) shall not restrict the nonprofit corporation's right to eliminate or limit the personal liability of a director to the nonprofit corporation or to its members for monetary damages for breach of fiduciary duty as a director as provided in subsection (1) of this section.

7-128-403. Liability of directors for unlawful distributions. (1) A director who votes for or assents to a distribution made in violation of section 7-133-101 or the articles of incorporation is personally liable to the nonprofit corporation for the amount of the distribution that exceeds what could have been distributed without violating said section or the articles of incorporation if it is established that the director did not perform the director's duties in compliance with section 7-128-401. In any proceeding commenced under this section, a director shall have all of the defenses ordinarily available to a director.

(2) A director held liable under subsection (1) of this section for an unlawful distribution is entitled to contribution:

(a) From every other director who could be held liable under subsection (1) of this section for the unlawful distribution; and

(b) From each person who accepted the distribution knowing the distribution was made in violation of section 7-133-101 or the articles of incorporation, the amount of the contribution from such person being the amount of the distribution to that person that exceeds what could have been distributed to that person without violating section 7-133-101 or the articles of incorporation.

DIRECTORS' CONFLICTING INTEREST TRANSACTIONS

7-128-501. Conflicting interest transaction. (1) As used in this section, "conflicting interest transaction" means: A contract, transaction, or other financial relationship between a nonprofit corporation and a director of the nonprofit corporation, or between the nonprofit corporation and a party related to a director, or between the nonprofit corporation and an entity in which a director of the nonprofit corporation is a director or officer or has a financial interest.

(2) No loans shall be made by a corporation to its directors or officers. Any director or officer who assents to or participates in the making of any such loan shall be liable to the corporation for the amount of such loan until the repayment thereof.

(3) No conflicting interest transaction shall be void or voidable or be enjoined, set aside, or give rise to an award of damages or other sanctions in a proceeding by a member or by or in the right of the nonprofit corporation, solely because the conflicting interest transaction involves a director of the nonprofit corporation or a party related to a director or an entity in which a director of the nonprofit corporation is a director or officer or has a financial interest or solely because the director is present at or participates in the meeting of the nonprofit corporation's board of directors or of the committee of the board of directors that authorizes, approves, or ratifies the conflicting interest transaction or solely because the director's vote is counted for such purpose if:

(a) The material facts as to the director's relationship or interest and as to the conflicting interest transaction are disclosed or are known to the board of directors or the committee, and the board of directors or committee in good faith authorizes, approves, or ratifies the conflicting interest transaction by the affirmative vote of a majority of the disinterested directors, even though the disinterested directors are less than a quorum; or

(b) The material facts as to the director's relationship or interest and as to the conflicting interest transaction are disclosed or are known to the members entitled to vote thereon, and the conflicting interest transaction is specifically authorized, approved, or ratified in good faith by a vote of the members entitled to vote thereon; or

(c) The conflicting interest transaction is fair as to the nonprofit corporation.

(4) Common or interested directors may be counted in determining the presence of a quorum at a meeting of the board of directors or of a committee which authorizes, approves, or ratifies the conflicting interest transaction.

(5) For purposes of this section, a "party related to a director" shall mean a spouse, a descendant, an ancestor, a sibling, the spouse or descendant of a sibling, an estate or trust in which the director or a party related to a director has a beneficial interest, or an entity in which a party related to a director is a director, officer, or has a financial interest.

A director is considered to be serving an employee benefit plan at the nonprofit corporation’s request if the director’s duties to the nonprofit corporation also impose duties on, or otherwise involve services by, the director to the plan or to participants in or beneficiaries of the plan. “Director” includes, unless the context requires otherwise, the estate or personal representative of a deceased director.

(2) “Expenses” includes counsel fees.

(3) “Liability” means the obligation incurred with respect to a proceeding to pay a judgment, settlement, penalty, fine, including an excise tax assessed with respect to an employee benefit plan, or reasonable expenses.

7-129-102. Authority to indemnify directors. (1) Except as provided in subsection (4) of this section, a nonprofit corporation may indemnify a person made a party to a proceeding because the person is or was a director against liability incurred in the proceeding if:

(a) The person’s conduct was in good faith; and

(b) The person reasonably believed:

(1) In the case of conduct in an official capacity with the nonprofit corporation, that the conduct was in the nonprofit corporation’s best interests; and

(II) In all other cases, that the conduct was at least not opposed to the nonprofit corporation's best interests; and

(c) In the case of any criminal proceeding, the person had no reasonable cause to believe the conduct was unlawful.

(2) A director's conduct with respect to an employee benefit plan for a purpose the director reasonably believed to be in the interests of the participants in or beneficiaries of the plan is conduct that satisfies the requirement of subparagraph (II) of paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of this section. A director's conduct with respect to an employee benefit plan for a purpose that the director did not reasonably believe to be in the interests of the participants in or beneficiaries of the plan shall be deemed not to satisfy the requirements of paragraph (a) of subsection (1) of this section.

(3) The termination of a proceeding by judgment, order, settlement, or conviction or upon a plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent is not, of itself, determinative that the director did not meet the standard of conduct described in this section.

(4) A nonprofit corporation may not indemnify a director under this section:

(a) In connection with a proceeding by or in the right of the nonprofit corporation in which the director was adjudged liable to the nonprofit corporation; or

(b) In connection with any other proceeding charging that the director derived an improper personal benefit, whether or not involving action in an official capacity, in which proceeding the director was adjudged liable on the basis that the director derived an improper personal benefit.

(5) Indemnification permitted under this section in connection with a proceeding by or in the right of the nonprofit corporation is limited to reasonable expenses incurred in connection with the proceeding.

7-129-103. Mandatory indemnification of directors. Unless limited by its articles of incorporation, a nonprofit corporation shall indemnify a person who was wholly successful, on the merits or otherwise, in the defense of any proceeding to which the person was a party because the person is or was a director, against reasonable expenses incurred by the person in connection with the proceeding.

7-129-104. Advance of expenses to directors. (1) A nonprofit corporation may pay for or reimburse the reasonable expenses incurred by a director who is a party to a proceeding in advance of final disposition of the proceeding if:

(a) The director furnishes to the nonprofit corporation a written affirmation of the director's good faith belief that the director has met the standard of conduct described in section 7-129-102;

(b) The director furnishes to the nonprofit corporation a written undertaking, executed personally or on the director's behalf, to repay the advance if it is ultimately determined that the director did not meet the standard of conduct; and

(c) A determination is made that the facts then known to those making the determination would not preclude indemnification under this article.

(2) The undertaking required by paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of this section shall be an unlimited general obligation of the director but need not be secured and may be accepted without reference to financial ability to make repayment.

(3) Determinations and authorizations of payments under this section shall be made in the manner specified in section 7-129-106.

7-129-105. Court-ordered indemnification of directors. (1) Unless otherwise provided in the articles of incorporation, a director who is or was a party to a proceeding may apply for indemnification to the court conducting the proceeding or to another court of competent jurisdiction. On receipt of an application, the court, after giving any notice the court considers necessary, may order indemnification in the following manner:

(a) If it determines that the director is entitled to mandatory indemnification under section 7-129-103, the court shall order indemnification, in which case the court shall also order the nonprofit corporation to pay the director's reasonable expenses incurred to obtain court-ordered indemnification.

(b) If it determines that the director is fairly and reasonably entitled to indemnification in view of all the relevant circumstances, whether or not the director met the standard of conduct set forth in section 7-129-102 (1) or was adjudged liable in the circumstances described in section 7-129-102 (4), the court may order such indemnification as the court deems proper; except that the indemnification with respect to any proceeding in which liability shall have been adjudged in the circumstances described in section 7-129-102 (4) is limited to reasonable expenses incurred in connection with the proceeding and reasonable expenses incurred to obtain court-ordered indemnification.

7-129-106. Determination and authorization of indemnification of directors.

(1) A nonprofit corporation may not indemnify a director under section 7-129-102 unless authorized in the specific case after a determination has been made that indemnification of the director is permissible in the circumstances because the director has met the standard of conduct set forth in section 7-129-102. A nonprofit corporation shall not advance expenses to a director under section 7-129-104 unless authorized in the specific case after the written affirmation and undertaking required by section 7-129-104 (1) (a) and (1) (b) are received and the determination required by section 7-129-104 (1) (c) has been made.

(2) The determinations required by subsection (1) of this section shall be made:

(a) By the board of directors by a majority vote of those present at a meeting at which a quorum is present, and only those directors not parties to the proceeding shall be counted in satisfying the quorum; or

(b) If a quorum cannot be obtained, by a majority vote of a committee of the board of directors designated by the board of directors, which committee shall consist of two or more directors not parties to the proceeding; except that directors who are parties to the proceeding may participate in the designation of directors for the committee.

(3) If a quorum cannot be obtained as contemplated in paragraph (a) of subsection (2) of this section, and a committee cannot be established under paragraph (b) of subsection (2) of this section, or, even if a quorum is obtained or a committee is designated, if a majority of the directors constituting such quorum or such committee so directs, the determination required to be made by subsection (1) of this section shall be made:

(a) By independent legal counsel selected by a vote of the board of directors or the committee in the manner specified in paragraph (a) or (b) of subsection (2) of this section or, if a quorum of the full board cannot be obtained and a committee cannot be established, by independent legal counsel selected by a majority vote of the full board of directors; or

(b) By the voting members, but voting members who are also directors and who are at the time seeking indemnification may not vote on the determination.

(4) Authorization of indemnification and advance of expenses shall be made in the same manner as the determination that indemnification or advance of expenses is permissible; except that, if the determination that indemnification or advance of expenses is permissible is made by independent legal counsel, authorization of indemnification and advance of expenses shall be made by the body that selected such counsel.

Application to existing corporations. (1) (a) For purposes of this article, “existing corporate entity” means any corporate entity that was in existence on June 30, 1998, and that was incorporated under articles 20 to 29 of this title or elected to accept such articles as provided therein.

(b) A corporate entity that was either incorporated under or elected to accept articles 20 to 29 of this title and that was suspended or, as a consequence of such suspension, dissolved by operation of law before July 1, 1998, and was eligible for reinstatement or restoration, renewal, and revival on June 30, 1998, shall be deemed to be in existence on that date for purposes of this subsection (1) and shall be deemed administratively dissolved on the date of such suspension for purposes of section 7-134-105.

(c) A corporate entity that was either incorporated under or elected to accept articles 20 to 29 of this title and that was suspended or, as a consequence of such suspension, dissolved by operation of law before July 1, 1998, and was not eligible for reinstatement or restoration, renewal, and revival on June 30, 1998, shall be treated as a domestic entity as to which a constituent filed document has been filed by, or placed in the records of, the secretary of state and that has been dissolved for purposes of section 7-90-1001.

(2) Subject to this section, articles 121 to 137 of this title apply to all existing corporate entities subject to articles 20 to 29 of this title.

(3) Unless the articles of incorporation or bylaws of an existing corporate entity recognize the right of a member to transfer such member’s membership interests in such corporate entity, such interests shall be presumed to be nontransferable. However, if the transferability of such interests is not prohibited by such articles of incorporation or bylaws, such transferability may be established by a preponderance of the evidence taking into account any representation made by the corporate entity, the practice of such corporate entity, other transactions involving such interests, and other facts bearing on the existence of the rights to transfer such interests.

(4) Until the articles of incorporation of an existing corporate entity are amended or restated on or after July 1, 1998, they need not be amended or restated to comply with articles 121 to 137 of this title.

(5) Unless changed by an amendment to its articles of incorporation, members or classes of members of an existing corporate entity shall be deemed to be voting members for purposes of articles 121 to 137 of this title if such members or classes of members, on June 30, 1998, had the right by reason of a provision of the corporate entity’s articles of incorporation or bylaws, or by a custom, practice, or tradition, to vote for the election of a director or directors.

(6) The bylaws of an existing corporate entity may be amended as provided in its articles of incorporation or bylaws. Unless otherwise so provided, the power to amend such bylaws shall be vested in the board of directors.

50, or 51 of this title, any corporate entity formed before January 1, 1968, under article 40 or 50 of this title without shares of capital stock, and any corporate entity whether with or without shares of capital stock and formed before January 1, 1968, under any general law or created by any special act of the general assembly for a purpose for which a nonprofit corporation may be formed under articles 121 to 137 of this title may elect to accept said articles in the following manner:

(a) If there are members or stockholders entitled to vote thereon, the board of directors shall adopt a resolution recommending that the corporate entity accept articles 121 to 137 of this title and directing that the question of acceptance be submitted to a vote at a meeting of the members or stockholders entitled to vote thereon, which may be either an annual or special meeting. The question shall also be submitted whenever one-twentieth of the members or stockholders entitled to vote thereon so request. Written notice stating that the purpose, or one of the purposes, of the meeting is to consider electing to accept said articles shall be given to each member or stockholder entitled to vote at the meeting within the time and in the manner provided in said articles for the giving of notice of meetings to members or stockholders. Such election to accept said articles shall require for adoption at least two-thirds of the votes that members or stockholders present at such meeting in person or by proxy are entitled to cast.

(b) If there are no members or stockholders entitled to vote thereon, election to accept articles 121 to 137 of this title may be made at a meeting of the board of directors pursuant to a majority vote of the directors in office.

The adoption of a domestic entity name that is in conformity with said part 6 by the members or stockholders of the corporate entity, and its inclusion in the statement of election to accept articles 121 to 137 as the entity name, shall be the only action necessary to effect the change. The articles of incorporation, affidavit, or other basic organizational charter shall be deemed for all purposes amended to conform to the entity name.

(4) All corporate entities accepting articles 121 to 137 of this title whose articles of incorporation, affidavits of incorporation, or other basic charters, by whatever names denominated, are not on file in the records of the secretary of state as required by section 7-137-102 (2) shall deliver to the secretary of state, for filing pursuant to part 3 of article 90 of this title, a certified copy of such articles of incorporation, affidavits of incorporation, or other basic charters at the time of delivery of the statement of election to accept articles 121 to 137 of this title.

The act establishing this article was not irregularly passed because the purpose of the bill was changed during its course through the two houses. People v. UMW, Dist. 15, 70 Colo. 269, 201 P. 54 (1921).

One who goes from farm to farm operating a thresher is not a farm laborer within the exception contained in subsection (7)(c) of this section. Indus. Comm'n v. Shadowen, 68 Colo. 69, 187 P. 926 (1920).

By its definitions, the Industrial Relations Act grants the right to strike to all employees, private and public, and concurrently places conditions on the exercise of that right. Martin v. Montezuma-Cortez Sch. Dist. RE-1, 841 P.2d 237 (Colo. 1992).

Reading the Industrial Relations Act with the express definitions of employer and employee in mind, it can be concluded that public employees have a qualified or conditional right to strike, as do private employees. Martin v. Montezuma-Cortez Sch. Dist. RE-1, 841 P.2d 237 (Colo. 1992).

Disputes in the public sector, particularly those leading to strikes, are subject to the authority of the director of the division of labor. Martin v. Montezuma-Cortez Sch. Dist. RE-1, 841 P.2d 237 (Colo. 1992).

Teaching in a public school is certainly an "occupation" or "position" within the meaning of the Industrial Relations Act. Martin v. Montezuma-Cortez Sch. Dist. RE-1, 841 P.2d 237 (Colo. 1992).

As school districts are expressly included in the definition of employer, the director has the power to supervise the employment relationship between school districts and their teachers. Martin v. Montezuma-Cortez Sch. Dist. RE-1, 841 P.2d 237 (Colo. 1992).

In view of the general assembly's demonstrated ability to be selective by expressly excluding certain employers from the provisions of the Industrial Relations Act, the court cannot exclude public employers from the substantive provisions of the Industrial Relations Act, especially when those public employers are expressly included. Martin v. Montezuma-Cortez Sch. Dist. RE-1, 841 P.2d 237 (Colo. 1992).

Arguments advanced by the school district against the right of public employees to strike that invoke concepts of sovereignty and the control of the public purse and that are predicated on the classical distinction between the private and public sectors, are better directed to the general assembly since the plain definitions in the Industrial Relations Act include public employers and their employees. Martin v. Montezuma-Cortez Sch. Dist. RE-1, 841 P.2d 237 (Colo. 1992).

The principle of statutory construction that statutes in derogation of the common law must be narrowly construed is a principle applicable only when an ambiguity in the language of the statute in question permits such narrowing construction and when the intent of the legislature is not to the contrary and cannot be invoked to defeat the plain and manifest language of the Industrial Relations Act. Martin v. Montezuma-Cortez Sch. Dist. RE-1, 841 P.2d 237 (Colo. 1992).

The Industrial Relations Act and the Labor Peace Act do not conflict and the court will not infer from the passage of another act regulating collective bargaining in the private sector that the legislature intended to repeal the express provisions of the Industrial Relations Act and to return public sector labor relations to adjudication by the common law. Martin v. Montezuma-Cortez Sch. Dist. RE-1, 841 P.2d 237 (Colo. 1992).

Because the Industrial Relations Act provides the regulatory framework for the resolution of public sector labor disputes and ample statutory remedies, the common law need not be searched for remedies to resolve those disputes or claims arising from those disputes. Martin v. Montezuma-Cortez Sch. Dist. RE-1, 841 P.2d 237 (Colo. 1992).

8-1-102. Industrial claim appeals office - creation - powers and duties. (1) There is hereby created in the office of the executive director of the department of labor and employment the industrial claim appeals office, which may consist of five industrial claim appeals examiners, who shall be appointed to serve on the industrial claim appeals panel by the executive director pursuant to section 13 of article XII of the state constitution and the laws and rules governing the state personnel system. Each industrial claim appeals examiner shall exercise such examiner's powers and perform such examiner's duties and functions in the industrial claim appeals office within the office of the executive director of the department as if transferred thereto by a type 2 transfer as such transfer is defined in the "Administrative Organization Act of 1968", article 1 of title 24, C.R.S. Decisions and orders of the industrial claim appeals panel may be made by two appeals examiners. In the event of a disagreement between such two appeals examiners, a third appeals examiner shall review the case, and the decision and final order of the appeals panel shall reflect the collective decision of all three appeals examiners.

(2) The industrial claim appeals panel has the duty and the power to conduct administrative appellate review of any order entered pursuant to articles 43 and 74 of this title and to make a decision on said appeal.

ANNOTATION

The increase in the number of panel members made by the 1989 amendment was not intended to result in a modification of the procedure for reviewing workers' compensation cases. Orders signed by two members are authorized and valid. O'Gorman v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 826 P.2d 390 (Colo. App. 1991).

Requiring three members to address each case would frustrate the purposes of the 1989 amendment, which were to address the heavy load of cases and the delay in resolving them. O'Gorman v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 826 P.2d 390 (Colo. App. 1991).

Industrial Claim Appeals Office is a public body within the meaning of § 2-4-110 and for decisions rendered prior to March 19, 1992, is subject to the limitation of § 2-4-110 to act through a majority of its members. O'Gorman v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 839 P.2d 1149 (Colo. 1992).

Where Industrial Claim Appeals Panel rendered decision within statutory time limit and in good faith belief that it had authority to act, but court determines that decision rendered by the panel was ineffective because taken by only two members when a majority was required, proper course is to remand case to the panel for reconsideration. (Decided under § 8-1-102 as it existed prior to 1992 amendment.) O'Gorman v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 839 P.2d 1149 (Colo. 1992).

This section does not require or authorize the panel to entertain an untimely appeal. The procedure for perfecting an appeal to the panel is set forth exclusively in § 8-43-301 (2). Brodeur v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 159 P.3d 810 (Colo. App. 2007).

8-1-103. Division of labor - director - employees - qualifications - compensation - expenses. (1) There is hereby created a division of labor in the department of labor and employment. Pursuant to section 13 of article XII of the state constitution, the executive director of the department of labor and employment shall appoint the director of the division of labor, and the director shall appoint such deputies, experts, statisticians, accountants, inspectors, clerks, and other employees as are necessary to carry out the provisions of law and to perform the duties and exercise the powers conferred by law upon the division and the director. The director shall be the chief administrative officer of the division with such powers, duties, and functions as prescribed by law.

(2) All employees, except experts, shall have been for one year prior to such employment or appointment bona fide residents of this state and, while in the employ of the division, shall receive such compensation as is fixed by the state personnel system laws of this state, such compensation to be paid monthly from funds appropriated for the use of the division. All expenses incurred by the division and its employees pursuant to the provisions of law shall be paid from funds appropriated for its use upon the approval of the director. The traveling expenses of the director or of any employee of the division incurred while on business of the division outside this state shall be paid in the manner prescribed in this subsection (2), but only when such expenses are authorized in advance.

(3) The powers, duties, and functions of the director prescribed under this article, including rule-making, regulation, licensing, promulgation of rules, rates, regulations, and standards, and the rendering of findings, orders, and adjudications, shall be performed under the direction and supervision of the executive director of the department of labor and employment, as prescribed by section 24-1-105 (4), C.R.S.

The division is authorized to procure all necessary office furniture, stationery, books, periodicals, maps, instruments, apparatus, appliances, and other supplies and incur such other expenses as necessary, and the same shall be paid for in the same manner as other expenses authorized by law. ## ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For comment on the administrative review of workmen's compensation claims, see 45 U. Colo. L. Rev. 195 (1973).

Annotator's note. Cases included in the annotations to this section which refer to the industrial commission were decided prior to the enactment of 1986 Senate Bill No. 12 which abolished said commission and transferred its powers, duties, and functions under this section to the division of labor.

The industrial commission has no power to appoint to an office that does not exist, nor to draw upon the employment agency fund to pay an appointee thereto. Stong v. Milliken, 76 Colo. 515, 233 P. 154 (1925).

There are no provisions under article I of the industrial commission act under which one can obtain damages from an employer. Indus. Comm'n v. Sheard, 170 Colo. 76, 459 P.2d 127 (1969).

Commission not stripped of authority to hold hearings and make findings. The general assembly did not intend to strip the commission of its general authority to hold hearings and make findings of fact, although such language was deleted from § 8-53-106 (2) by amendment in 1973. There are numerous other references within the workmen's compensation act to the commission's general authority to hold hearings and make factual findings. Harrison W. Corp. v. Hicks' Claimants, 185 Colo. 142, 522 P.2d 722 (1974).

The authority of the director in subsection (2)(d) to "enforce the provisions of §§ 22-32-124 and 23-71-122" relating to building inspections is not exclusive but may also be taken by a fire protection district absent the school district or junior college district's exercise of authority to contract with a qualified fire inspector. West Adams County Fire v. Adams County Sch. Dist. 12, 926 P.2d 172 (Colo. App. 1996).

Applied in Matthews v. Indus. Comm'n, 44 Colo. App. 159, 609 P.2d 1127 (1980).

8-1-108. Orders effective - when - validity presumed. (1) All general orders shall be effective ten days after they are adopted by the director and posted upon the bulletin board of the division in its offices in the city and county of Denver. Special orders shall take effect as therein directed.

(2) The director, upon application of any person, may grant such time as may be reasonably necessary for compliance with any order. Any person may petition the director for an extension of time, which the director shall grant if he finds such an extension of time necessary.

(3) All orders of the division shall be valid and in force and prima facie reasonable and lawful until they are found otherwise in an action brought for that purpose, pursuant to the provisions of this article, or until altered or revoked by the director.

(4) Substantial compliance with the requirements of this article shall be sufficient to give effect to the orders or awards of the director, and they shall not be declared inoperative, illegal, or void for any omission of a technical nature with respect thereto.

8-1-111. Jurisdiction over employer and employee relation. The director is vested with the power and jurisdiction to have such supervision of every employment and place of employment in this state as may be necessary adequately to ascertain and determine the conditions under which the employees labor, and the manner and extent of the obedience by the employer to all laws and all lawful orders requiring such employment and places of employment to be safe, and requiring the protection of the life, health, and safety of every employee in such employment or place of employment, and to enforce all provisions of law relating thereto. The director is also vested with power and jurisdiction to administer all provisions of this article with respect to the relations between employer and employee and to do all other acts and things convenient and necessary to accomplish the purposes of this article including entering into reciprocal agreements with other states and governmental entities.

8-1-112. Officers to assist in enforcing orders. It is the duty of all officers and employees of the state, counties, and municipalities, upon request of the director, to enforce in their respective departments all lawful orders of the director, insofar as the same may be applicable and consistent with the general duties of such officers and employees. It is also their duty to make such reports as the director may require concerning matters within their knowledge pertaining to the purposes of this article and to furnish to the division such facts, data, statistics, and information as may from time to time come to them pertaining to the purposes of this article and the duties of the division thereunder, and particularly all information coming to their knowledge respecting the condition of all places of employment subject to the provisions of this article as regards the health, protection, and safety of employees and the conditions under which they labor. contemplated by the provisions of this article, the director, with the approval of the executive director of the department of labor and employment, has the power to appoint temporarily, by an order in writing, any deputy or any other competent person as an agent, whose duties shall be prescribed in such order.

(2) In the discharge of his duties such agent has every power whatsoever for obtaining information granted in this article to the director and the division, and all powers granted by law to officers authorized to take depositions are granted to such agent.

(3) The director may conduct any number of investigations contemporaneously through different agents and may delegate to such agents the taking of all testimony bearing upon any investigation or hearing. The decision of the director shall be based upon his examination of all testimony and records. The recommendations made by such agent shall be advisory only and shall not preclude any further investigation or the taking of further testimony if the director so orders.

It is the duty of the division to furnish such blanks to the employer free of charge upon request therefor. Every employer receiving from the division any blanks, with directions to fill out same, shall answer fully and correctly all questions therein propounded and give all the information therein sought, or, if unable to do so, he shall give in writing good and sufficient reasons for the failure. The director may require that the information required to be furnished be verified under oath and returned to the division within the period fixed by him or by law. The director, or any person employed by the division for that purpose, has the right to examine, under oath, any employee or employer, or the officer, agent, or employee thereof, for the purpose of ascertaining any information which such employer or employee is required by this article to furnish to the division.

8-1-115. Information not public - penalty for divulging. (1) The information contained in the reports lawfully required to be furnished by the employer in section 8-1-114, such other information as may be furnished to the division by employers and employees in pursuance of the provisions of this article, and such information obtained through inspections or other proceedings of this article which might reveal a trade secret shall be for the exclusive use and information of said division in the discharge of its official duties. The director may treat and file the information or any part thereof as confidential, and, when so treated or filed by the director, the same shall be considered to be confidential information for the sole use of the division and shall not be open to the public nor be used in any court in any action or proceeding pending therein unless the division is a party to such action or proceeding. Annotator's note. Cases included in the annotations to this section which refer to the industrial commission were decided prior to the 1969 amendment to this section vesting in the director of the division of labor powers and duties previously exercised by the industrial commission.

This section cannot be so construed as to wipe out basic and fundamental rules governing the competency of evidence required to establish a fact in all judicial or quasi-judicial proceedings and which are essential ingredients of due process of law. A right created by statute cannot be denied where the sole support for that denial is evidence which under the law of the land has been held incompetent by the courts. Neither can a liability created by law attach where the only support therefor is incompetent evidence, to the introduction of which proper objection is made. Williams v. New Amsterdam Cas. Co., 136 Colo. 458, 319 P.2d 1078 (1957).

For this section means that, while the industrial commission's inquiry is not limited by the common law or statutory rules of evidence or by technical or formal rules of procedure and that it may, in its discretion, accept any evidence that is offered, in the end there must be a residuum of legal evidence to support the claim before an award can be made. Williams v. New Amster- dam Cas. Co., 136 Colo. 458, 319 P.2d 1078 (1957).

However, it is not required that the residuum of legal evidence should independently of hearsay evidence establish an accident, as the sufficiency of the residuum of legal evidence cannot be measured by the mechanical formula. Williams v. New Amsterdam Cas. Co., 136 Colo. 458, 319 P.2d 1078 (1957).

Rather, there must be evidence setting forth facts of a probative character outside of hearsay statements to prove the award and show it is fair and just. Williams v. New Amsterdam Cas. Co., 136 Colo. 458, 319 P.2d 1078 (1957).

And reviewing courts may not interfere with the findings of the commission if there is competent probative evidence in support thereof. It is only when the showing made is without probative force and effect, or is of such a character as not to constitute any legitimate evidence, that the award will be disturbed. Williams v. New Amsterdam Cas. Co., 136 Colo. 458, 319 P.2d 1078 (1957).

Industrial commission is not bound to follow rigid rules of evidence in justly administering the workmen's compensation act. San Isabel Elec. Ass'n v. Bramer, 182 Colo. 15, 510 P.2d 438 (1973).

Admission of hearsay evidence by claimant was proper where testimony was merely cumulative and augmented competent evidence so as not to vitiate findings. San Isabel Elec. Ass'n v. Bramer, 182 Colo. 15, 510 P.2d 438 (1973).

Introduction of evidence and examination of witnesses by employer's representative. Hearings are sufficiently informal so as to permit the employer's representative to question witnesses and introduce evidence when invited to do so by a hearing officer. Ross v. Indus. Comm'n, 39 Colo. App. 204, 566 P.2d 367 (1977).

8-1-119. Record of proceedings. (1) A full and complete record shall be kept of all proceedings had before or under the order of the director on any investigation, and all testimony shall be taken down by a shorthand reporter appointed by the director.

(2) A transcribed copy of the evidence and proceedings, or any specific part thereof, of any investigation or hearing taken by a shorthand reporter appointed by the director, being certified by such shorthand reporter to be a true and correct transcript of the testimony, or a specific part thereof, on the investigation or hearing of a particular witness, carefully compared by him with his original notes, and to be a correct statement of the evidence and proceedings had on such investigation or hearing so purporting to be taken and subscribed, may be received as evidence by the director or any agent of the division and by any court with the same effect as if such shorthand reporter were present and testified to the facts so certified. A copy of such transcript shall be furnished on demand to any party upon the payment of fifty cents per folio.

Depositions. In any investigation, the director or any other party may cause the depositions of witnesses residing within or without the state to be taken in the manner prescribed by law for like depositions in civil actions in district courts. (2) Any person serving a subpoena or order shall receive the same fees as a sheriff for like service. Such subpoena or order may be served by any officer duly authorized to subpoena witnesses, or by any person designated by the director for such purpose, and proof of the serving of such subpoena or order shall be by the return of such person or officer endorsed thereon or attached thereto. Each witness who appears in answer to a subpoena before the director or his agent, if so ordered by the director, shall receive for his attendance the fees and mileage provided for in civil cases in the district court in the county where such witness attends which shall be paid in the same manner as other expenses of the division are paid.

(3) No witness subpoenaed at the instance of a party other than the director or his agent shall be entitled to compensation unless the director in his discretion shall so order.

8-1-122. Inquiries - scope - report. (1) The director shall inquire into the general condition of labor in the principal industries in the state of Colorado and especially in those which are carried on in corporate forms; into existing relations between employers and employees; into the effect of industrial conditions on public welfare and into the rights and powers of the community to deal therewith; into the conditions of sanitation and safety of employees and the provisions for protecting the life, limb, and health of the employees; into relations existing between lessees of state lands and the state as to production and royalties or rentals paid and the relations between said lessees and their employees with respect to wages paid and conditions of labor; into the growth of associations of employers and wage earners and the effect of such associations upon the relations between employers and employees; into the extent and results of methods of collective bargaining; into any methods which have been tried in any state or in foreign countries for maintaining mutually satisfactory relations between employees and employers; into methods of avoiding or adjusting labor disputes through peaceable and conciliatory mediation and negotiations; and into the scope, methods, and resources of existing bureaus of labor and possible ways of increasing their efficiency and usefulness.

(2) The director shall seek to discover the underlying causes of dissatisfaction in the industrial situation, take all necessary means and methods within the powers of such director as provided by law, to alleviate the same, and report such remedial legislation as in the judgment of the director may be advisable, with his recommendations thereon. Such report shall accompany the annual report required in section 8-1-107 (2) (j).

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. The case included in the annotations to this section which refers to the industrial commission was decided prior to the 1969 amendment to this section vesting in the director of the division of labor powers and duties previously exercised by the industrial commission.

This section contains broad investiture of power in the industrial commission of its own volition to inquire into the general conditions of labor in the principal industries of the state. Indus. Comm'n v. People ex rel. Metz, 86 Colo. 377, 281 P. 742 (1929).

But powers are limited and decisions may be set aside. While the commission is invested with broad and comprehensive powers in the investigation, adjustment, and settlement of labor disputes, its powers are limited and its decisions may be set aside by the courts where there is a manifest abuse of discretion, as where the commission has acted in excess of its powers or where its findings are not supported by the evidence. Indus. Comm'n v. People ex rel. Metz, 86 Colo. 377, 281 P. 742 (1929).

The director may inquire into the existing relations between school districts and their teachers, may collect any information regarding such relationship, and may develop policies aimed at avoiding or adjusting disputes arising within that relationship in order to further the purposes of the Industrial Relations Act. Martin v. Montezuma-Cortez Sch. Dist. RE-1, 841 P.2d 237 (Colo. 1992).

8-1-123. Arbitration. The director shall do all in his power to promote the voluntary arbitration, mediation, and conciliation of disputes arising under an existing written agreement between employers and employees and to avoid the necessity of resorting to strikes, lockouts, boycotts, blacklists, discriminations, and legal proceedings in matters of employment. Arbitration undertaken pursuant to this section shall employ the procedures provided in part 2 of article 22 of title 13, C.R.S.

Annotator's note. The case included in the annotations to this section which refers to the industrial commission was decided prior to the 1969 amendment to this section vesting in the director of the division of labor powers and duties previously exercised by the industrial commission.

Undoubtedly the chief purpose of the exercise of the director's jurisdiction under the Industrial Relations Act is to avoid the necessity of resorting to strikes, lockouts, boycotts, blacklists, discriminations, and legal proceedings in matters of employment. Martin v. Montezuma-Cortez Sch. Dist. RE-1, 841 P.2d 237 (Colo. 1992).

8-1-125. Disputes - jurisdiction - request for intervention - penalty. (1) The director may exercise jurisdiction over any dispute between employer and employee affecting conditions of employment, or with respect to wages or hours, only when the employer and the employee request such intervention or when the dispute, as determined by the executive director, affects the public interest, and such jurisdiction shall continue until after the final hearing of such dispute and the entry of the final award therein or until said director shall enter an order disposing of or terminating such jurisdiction. The relation of the employer and employee shall continue uninterrupted by the dispute or anything arising out of the dispute until the final determination thereof by said director; and neither the employer nor any employee affected by any such dispute shall alter the conditions of employment with respect to wages or hours or any other condition of said employment; neither shall they, on account of such dispute, do or be concerned in doing directly or indirectly anything in the nature of a lockout or strike or suspension or discontinuance of work or employment.

(2) A request for intervention shall be submitted to the director by both the employer and the employee and shall set forth the facts, issues, or demands involved in the controversy or dispute, and each party to such dispute shall furnish the director such information within the time and as may be requested by the director.

(3) If either party uses this or any other provision of articles 1 to 18 of this title and part 3 of article 34 of title 24, C.R.S., for the purpose of unjustly maintaining a given condition of affairs through delay, such party is guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not more than one hundred dollars.

(4) The director shall proceed with reasonable diligence in hearing all disputes and shall render a final award or decision therein without unnecessary delay.

The Industrial Relations Act guarantees that there is no absolute right to strike by public employees in Colorado and that once the director takes jurisdiction of a labor dispute, the status quo shall be maintained since so long as the director has jurisdiction of a labor dispute, several tiers of substantive and procedural conditions on the right to strike, which determine when public employees may exercise their right to strike, preclude the dangers otherwise inherent to an absolute right to strike. Martin v. Montezuma-Cortez Sch. Dist. RE-1, 841 P.2d 237 (Colo. 1992).

"Conditions of employment" does not include matters such as union representation and picketing. People ex rel. Shaffer v. Teamsters Local 961, 175 Colo. 187, 486 P.2d 10 (1971).

ment" which directly affect the physical safety, health, and welfare of employees. People ex rel. Shaffer v. Teamsters Local 961, 175 Colo. 187, 486 P.2d 10 (1971).

Director of division of labor and employment had jurisdiction to continue teachers' employment conditions during labor dispute. The teachers selected their association as their representative and the relationship between the association and the school district is essentially that of employer and employee. Denver Classroom Teachers Ass'n v. Sch. Dist. No. 1, 921 P.2d 70 (Colo. App. 1996).

School district's duty to deduct teachers association dues was a "condition of employment" and was within the director's order that the school district and teachers association not alter conditions of employment during labor dispute. *Denver Classroom Teachers Ass'n v. 8-1-126. Lockouts and strikes unlawful - when. (1) It is unlawful for any employee in the state personnel system or for any labor organization, through formal action or through its agents, to incite, encourage, aid, or participate in a strike, stoppage of work, slowdown, or interruption of operations by employees in the state personnel system.

(2) It is unlawful for any employer to declare or cause a lockout, or for any employee to go on strike, on account of any dispute prior to or during an investigation, hearing, or arbitration of such dispute by the director, or the board, under the provisions of this article. Nothing in this article shall prohibit the suspension or discontinuance of any industry or of the working of any persons therein for any cause not constituting a lockout or strike, or to prohibit the suspension or discontinuance of any industry or of the working of any person therein, which industry is not affected with a public interest. Nothing in this article shall be held to restrain any employer from declaring a lockout, or any employee, except an employee who is in the state personnel system, from going on strike in respect to any dispute after the same has been duly investigated, heard, or arbitrated, under the provisions of this article.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Public Employee Strikes in Colorado: The Supreme Court Adopts a New Rule", see 22 Colo. Law. 1 (1993).

This section is constitutional only because it excludes from its operation all business "not affected with a public interest" as that phrase is usually interpreted and applied. People v. UMW, Dist. 15, 70 Colo. 269, 201 P. 54 (1921); People ex rel. Indus. Comm'n v. Aladdin Theater Corp., 96 Colo. 527, 44 P.2d 1022 (1935).

And one reason for holding a business to be affected with a public interest is that it is a practical monopoly. People v. UMW, Dist. 15, 70 Colo. 269, 201 P. 54 (1921).

Coal mining is affected with a public interest. People v. UMW, Dist. 15, 70 Colo. 269, 201 P. 54 (1921), distinguishing In re Morgan, 26 Colo. 415, 58 P. 1071 (1899).

This section provides for the situation where negotiations between school districts and their teachers over salaries and services may reach an impasse and a strike may appear to the teachers as the only remaining alternative, by forbidding a strike while the director maintains jurisdiction but permitting a strike after that jurisdiction terminates should the employees deem a strike to be in their best interests. Martin v. Montezuma-Cortez Sch. Dist. RE-1, 841 P.2d 237 (Colo. 1992).

This section provides that nothing in the Industrial Relations Act shall be construed to restrain any employee from striking in any dispute over which the director's jurisdiction is concluded, and when the director terminated jurisdiction, the teachers were free to exercise their right to strike or not according to their view of their best interests. Martin v. Montezuma-Cortez Sch. Dist. RE-1, 841 P.2d 237 (Colo. 1992).

While the theater business is not included in the phrase "affected with a public interest" it is not so easy to say what is included. Many attempts to do so have been made by the courts, but the theater business cannot pass the test of any. Perhaps the best discussion of the subject is to be found in Wolff Packing Co. v. Court of Indus. Relations (262 U.S. 522, 43 S. Ct. 630, 67 L. Ed. 1103 (1923)). Such being the correct interpretation of the phrase in question, the entire controversy is disposed of by Tyson & Bro. v. Banton (273 U.S. 418, 47 S. Ct. 426, 71 L. Ed. 718 (1927)), holding the theater business not affected with a public interest. People ex rel. Indus. Comm'n v. Aladdin Theater Corp., 96 Colo. 527, 44 P.2d 1022 (1935).

A charge in the language of the statute is sufficient. People v. Fontuccio, 73 Colo. 288, 215 P. 145 (1923).

This section was held not pertinent to determining whether employees were qualified for unemployment compensation benefits when their unemployment was due to a labor dispute where the director of labor was enjoined by a federal court from taking any further action in the proceeding. Kania v. Shaffer, 31 Colo. App. 538, 506 P.2d 384 (1972).

Any respondent may move such court to dissolve such mandatory writ as to such respondent, and, upon at least five days' previous notice to the director, such motion shall be set down for hearing, but such mandatory writ shall not be dissolved without proof of full compliance by such respondent with all the provisions of this article and orders of the director and that the continuance in effect of such mandatory writ is causing or will cause such respondent great and irreparable injury. The court may require such security of said respondent as the court determines adequate to enforce obedience to the provisions of this article on the part of such respondent before such mandatory writ shall be dissolved.

Annotator’s note. The case included in the annotations to this section which refers to the industrial commission was decided prior to the enactment of 1986 Senate Bill No. 12 which abolished said commission and transferred some of its powers, duties, and functions under the workmen’s compensation act to the division of labor.

Combination of employees for peaceable objects lawful. It is not unlawful for any two or more persons to unite, combine, or agree in any manner, to advise or encourage, by peaceable means, any persons to enter into any combination in relation to entering into or remaining in the employment of any person or corporation, or in relation to the amount of wages or compensation to be paid for labor, or for the purpose of regulating the hours of labor, or for the procuring of fair and just treatment from employers, or for the purpose of aiding and protecting their welfare and interests in any other manner not in violation of the constitution of this state or the laws made in pursuance thereof. This section shall not be so construed as to permit two or more persons, by threats of either bodily or financial injury, or by any display of force, to prevent or intimidate any other person from continuing in such employment as he may see fit, or to boycott or intimidate any employer of labor.

ANNOTATION

This section limits combinations of employees to lawful purposes, some of which are specifically mentioned, and does not permit an unlawful combination in restraint of trade. Denver Jobbers' Ass'n v. People ex rel. Dickson, 21 Colo. App. 326, 122 P. 404 (1912).

8-2-103. Penalty for coercing employees. Any person or any member of any firm or an agent, officer, or employee of any such company or corporation, violating the provisions of section 8-2-102 is guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than six months nor more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

8-2-104. Obtaining workmen by misrepresentation unlawful. It is unlawful for any person, company, corporation, society, association, or organization of any kind doing business in this state, by itself or its agents or attorneys, to induce, influence, persuade, or engage workmen to change from one place of employment to another in this state, or to bring workmen of any class or calling into this state to work in any of the departments of labor in this state, through or by means of false or deceptive representations, false advertising, or false pretenses concerning the kind and character of the work to be done, or amount and character of the compensation to be paid for such work, or the sanitary or other conditions of the employment, or as to the existence or nonexistence of a strike or lockout pending between employer and employees, or failure to state in any advertisement, proposal, or contract for the employment that there is a strike, lockout, or other labor trouble at the place of the proposed employment, when in fact such strike, lockout, or other labor trouble then actually exists at such place, and it is deemed false advertisement and misrepresentation for the purposes of sections 8-2-104 to 8-2-107.

ANNOTATION

This section authorizes a claim for statutory fraud. Pittman v. Larson Distrib. Co., 724 P.2d 1379 (Colo. App. 1986).

No cause of action for misrepresentation where employee lived in Colorado before and after employment with defendant. Vaske v. DuCharme, McMillan & Assocs., Inc., 757 F. Supp. 1158 (D. Colo. 1990).

This section contemplates a strike, lockout, or other labor trouble that is in actual existence. The fact that the potential for such a dispute exists because a new collective bargaining agreement was being negotiated, combined with fact that potential employer told potential employees they were to be hired after new labor agreement was negotiated, does not allow individuals to claim that they were hired under false pretenses concerning employer's relationship with labor union. DeJean v. United Airlines, Inc., 839 P.2d 1153 (Colo. 1992).

The elements of statutory fraud are the same as those for common law fraud, and, when the statements relied upon were mere predictions of future events rather than commitments or facts and were neither false when made nor made with the intent not to perform, there was no cause of action. Nelson v. Gas Research Inst., 121 P.3d 340 (Colo. App. 2005).

Applied in Roberts v. Conoco, Inc., 717 F. Supp. 724 (D. Colo. 1989).

8-2-105. Penalty. Any person, company, corporation, society, association, or organization of any kind doing business in this state, as well as its agents, attorneys, servants, or associates, found guilty of violating section 8-2-104 or any part thereof, is guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not more than two thousand dollars or by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, where the defendants are natural persons.

8-2-106. Armed guards - when lawful. Any person who hires, aids, abets, or assists in hiring, through agencies or otherwise, persons to guard with arms or deadly weapons of any kind other persons or property in this state, or any person who enters this state armed with deadly weapons of any kind for any such purpose, without a permit in writing from the governor of this state commits a class 6 felony and shall be punished as provided in section 18-1.3-401, C.R.S. Nothing in sections 8-2-104 to 8-2-107 shall be construed to interfere with the right of any person, company, corporation, society, association, or organization to guard or protect its private property or private interests as is now provided by law. Sections 8-2-104 to 8-2-107 shall be construed only to apply in cases where workmen are brought into this state, or induced to go from one place to another in this state by any false pretenses, false advertising, or deceptive representations, or brought into this state under arms, or removed from one place to another in this state under arms.

8-2-107. Workman engaged by false representations to recover damages. Any workman of this state, or any workman of another state who is influenced, induced, or persuaded to engage with any persons mentioned in section 8-2-104, through or by means of any of the things therein prohibited has a right of action for recovery of all damages that each such workman has sustained in consequence of the false or deceptive representations, false advertising, and false pretenses used to induce him to change his place of employment against any person, corporation, company, or association, directly or indirectly, causing such damages. In addition to all actual damages such workmen may have sustained, they shall be entitled to recover such reasonable attorney fees as the court shall fix, to be taxed as costs in any judgment recovered.

ANNOTATION

No false representation by defendant where, although plaintiff expressed an interest in "permanent" employment at time of interview, defendant never represented employment as "permanent" and handbook provided to plaintiff specifically stated that employment was subject to changing conditions. Further, fact that plaintiff moved to Colorado from out-of-state for the job and provided services commensurate with position, alone, without plaintiff providing any extra or special consideration for which a jury might find that plaintiff had purchased the job, inadequate for finding of promise of permanent employment. Schur v. Storage Tech. Corp., 878 P.2d 51 (Colo. App. 1994).

8-2-108. Unlawful for employer to prevent employees participating in politics.

(1) It is unlawful for any corporation, company, partnership, association, individual, or any employer of labor, or for any agent thereof to make, adopt, or enforce any rule, regulation, or policy forbidding or preventing any of his employees from engaging or participating in politics or from becoming a candidate for public office or being elected to and entering upon the duties of any public office. Any person violating any of the provisions of this section is guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not more than two thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent the injured employee from recovering damages from his employer for injury suffered through a violation of this section.

8-2-109. Rights of person charged with contempt. (1) In all cases where a person is charged with indirect criminal contempt for violation of a protection order or injunction issued by a court, the accused shall enjoy:

(a) The right as to admission to bail that is accorded to persons accused of crime;

(b) The right to be notified of the accusation and a reasonable time to make a defense, if the alleged contempt is not committed in the immediate view or presence of the court;

(c) Upon demand, the right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury of the judicial district wherein the contempt has been committed. This requirement shall not be construed to apply to contempts committed in the presence of the court or so near thereto as to interfere directly with the administration of justice or to apply to the misbehavior, misconduct, or disobedience of any officer of the court in respect to the writs, order, or process of the court.

(d) The right to file with the court a demand for the retirement of the judge sitting in the proceeding, if the contempt arises from an attack upon the character or conduct of such judge and if the attack occurred otherwise than in open court. Upon the filing of any such demand, the judge shall proceed no further, but another judge shall be designated by the presiding judge of said court. The demand shall be filed prior to the hearing in the contempt proceeding.

8-2-111.5. Certain employment references - exception to blacklisting prohibition.

(1) The general assembly hereby finds, determines, and declares that the intent and purpose of the provisions of sections 8-2-110 and 8-2-111 which prohibit the maintenance or use of blacklists were enacted to protect employees from retribution and harassment in the pursuit of their lawful activities. The general assembly further finds, determines, and declares that these prohibitions against blacklisting have in some instances been abused and have been used as a shield for persons responsible for thefts and other misappropriations of funds from financial institutions regulated under title 11, C.R.S., or under federal law in securing employment from other such financial institutions. These abuses of the antiblacklisting provisions have resulted in pattern and serial criminal activities at great expense and harm to such financial institutions and their customers.

(2) In response to a request by another bank, savings and loan association, credit card or travel and entertainment card company, industrial bank, trust company, credit union, or other state or federally chartered lending institution operating in Colorado, it shall not be unlawful nor a violation of the prohibitions against blacklisting specified in sections 8-2-110 and 8-2-111 for a bank, savings and loan association, credit card or travel and entertainment card company, industrial bank, trust company, credit union, or other state or federally chartered lending institution operating in Colorado, when acting in good faith, to disclose any information about any involvement in a theft, embezzlement, misappropriation, or other defalcation by an employee or former employee.

(3) No bank, savings and loan association, credit card or travel and entertainment card company, industrial bank, trust company, credit union, or other state or federally chartered lending institution operating in Colorado or any officer, director, or employee thereof shall be civilly liable for providing such an employment reference upon request if the information is provided in good faith.

(4) The provision of such employment information shall not constitute a violation of the prohibition against blacklisting as provided in sections 8-2-110 and 8-2-111, nor shall it constitute an unfair labor practice in violation of any provision of article 3 of this title.

(5) A bank, savings and loan association, credit card or travel and entertainment card company, industrial bank, trust company, credit union, or other state or federally chartered lending institution operating in Colorado or any officer, director, or employee thereof who discloses information under this section shall be presumed to be acting in good faith unless it is shown by a preponderance of the evidence that the institution, officer, director, or employee intentionally or recklessly disclosed false information about the employee or former employee.

8-2-111.6. Health care employers - immunity from civil liability - requirements - exception to blacklisting prohibition - legislative declaration.

(1) The general assembly hereby finds, determines, and declares that the intent and purpose of sections 8-2-110 and 8-2-111, which prohibit the maintenance or use of blacklists, is to protect employees from retribution and harassment in the pursuit of their lawful activities. The general assembly further finds, determines, and declares that, in the area of health care, these prohibitions against blacklisting have in some instances been abused and have been used as a shield by persons responsible for drug violations or for patient endangerment.

(2) In response to a request by a prospective or current employer of a health care worker, it is neither unlawful nor a violation of the prohibitions against blacklisting specified in sections 8-2-110 and 8-2-111 for an employer, when acting in good faith, to disclose information known about any involvement in drug diversion, drug tampering, patient abuse, violation of drug or alcohol policies of the employer, or crimes of violence as listed in section 18-1.3-406 (2) (a), C.R.S., by the health care worker who is an employee or a former employee of the responding employer.

(3) (a) (I) An employer who provides information in accordance with subsection (2) of this section is immune from civil liability for providing the information or for any consequences that result from the disclosure of the information unless the health care worker shows by a preponderance of the evidence that the information is false and the employer providing the information knew or reasonably should have known that the information is false.

(II) The provision of employment information in accordance with subsection (2) of this section does not constitute blacklisting under section 8-2-110 or 8-2-111, nor does it constitute an unfair labor practice in violation of article 3 of this title.

(b) This subsection (3) applies to any employee, agent, or other representative of the responding employer who is authorized to provide and provides information to an employer in accordance with subsection (2) of this section.

(4) An employer or any officer, director, employee, or representative of the employer who discloses information under this section shall be presumed to be acting in good faith unless it is shown by a preponderance of the evidence that the facility, officer, director, employee, or representative of the employer intentionally or recklessly disclosed false information about the employee or former employee.

8-2-111.7. Employees working with persons with developmental disabilities - immunity from civil liability - requirements - exception to blacklisting prohibition - legislative declaration - definitions. (1) The general assembly hereby finds, determines, and declares that the intent and purpose of sections 8-2-110 and 8-2-111, which prohibit the maintenance or use of blacklists, is to protect employees from retribution and harassment in the pursuit of their lawful activities. The general assembly further finds, determines, and declares that these prohibitions against blacklisting have in some instances been abused and have been used as a shield by caregivers responsible for mistreatment, exploitation, neglect, or abuse of persons with developmental disabilities.

(2) In response to a request by a current or prospective employer of a caregiver, it is neither unlawful nor a violation of the prohibitions against blacklisting specified in sections 8-2-110 and 8-2-111 for an employer, when acting in good faith, to disclose information known about any involvement in the mistreatment, exploitation, neglect, or abuse of persons with developmental disabilities as prohibited by section 27-10.5-115, C.R.S., by a caregiver.

(3) (a) (I) An employer who provides information in accordance with subsection (2) of this section is immune from civil liability for providing the information or for any consequences that result from the disclosure of the information unless the caregiver shows by a preponderance of the evidence that the information is false and the employer providing the information knew or reasonably should have known that the information is false.

(II) The provision of employment information in accordance with subsection (2) of this section does not constitute blacklisting under section 8-2-110 or 8-2-111, nor does it constitute an unfair labor practice in violation of article 3 of this title.

(b) This subsection (3) applies to any employee, agent, or other representative of the responding employer who is authorized to provide and provides information to a current or prospective employer in accordance with subsection (2) of this section.

(4) An employer or any officer, director, employee, or representative of the employer who discloses information under this section is presumed to be acting in good faith unless it is shown by a preponderance of the evidence that the facility, officer, director, employee, or representative of the employer intentionally or recklessly disclosed false information about the caregiver.

Broad language of license agreement that would perpetually limit licensee swimming instructors' ability to train other instructors in the widely-known skill of teaching swimming to infants and young children worldwide is an unenforceable covenant not to compete. Harvey Barnett, Inc. v. Shidler, 143 F. Supp.2d 1247 (D. Colo. 2001).

Noncompetition agreement that is worldwide and perpetual is unduly broad, both as to time and geographic scope, and is thus void. Nutting v. RAM Southwest, Inc., 106 F. Supp.2d 1121 (D. Colo. 2000).

Noncompetition covenant in contract between dentist and professional corporation was void as against public policy, where the contract provided for the dentist's use of the corporation's facilities but stated that the dentist was not an agent or employee of the corporation for any purpose. Smith v. Sellers, 747 P.2d 15 (Colo. App. 1987).

Noncompetition covenant not validated by trade secret provision. A trade secret provision in an employment agreement does not validate an unrelated restrictive covenant whose sole purpose is to prohibit all competition. Colo. Accounting Machs., Inc. v. Mergenthaler, 44 Colo. App. 155, 609 P.2d 1125 (1980); Dresser Industries, Inc. v. Sandvick, 732 F.2d 783 (10th Cir. 1984).

Employer must establish that a restrictive covenant not to compete is not void under this section before a preliminary injunction will be granted. Porter Industries, Inc. v. Higgins, 680 P.2d 1339 (Colo. App. 1984).

Nothing in the statute itself limits its applicability only to covenants not to compete de- signed to protect buyers, therefore, given appropriate circumstances, a covenant running in favor of a franchiser is an enforceable covenant under the statute. Keller Corp. v. Kelley, 187 P.3d 1133 (Colo. App. 2008).

Injunctive relief is the most common and generally preferred relief for breach of a covenant not to compete; however, the conditional language of a bill of sale and covenant not to compete referenced in the promissory note is the equivalent of a liquidated damage provision, which amounts to a penalty and is therefore not enforceable. DBA Enter., Inc. v. Findlay, 923 P.2d 298 (Colo. App. 1996).

Covenant not to compete extinguished when business ceases to exist. If a covenant not to compete which was binding on the seller of the business were enforced by the buyer after the business had ceased to exist, the covenant would constitute a void and unenforceable restraint of trade. Gibson v. Eberle, 762 P.2d 777 (Colo. App. 1988).

The reasonableness of covenants ancillary to the sale of a business depends on whether the restraint on competition provides fair protection to the buyer's purchase of good will, while imposing restrictions no greater than necessary to protect the value of that good will. Reed Mill & Lumber Co. v. Jensen, 165 P.3d 733 (Colo. App. 2006).

A covenant not to compete ancillary to the sale of a business is unreasonable if its restrictions are greater than necessary to protect legitimate business interests. Reed Mill & Lumber Co. v. Jensen, 165 P.3d 733 (Colo. App. 2006).

Evidence established "sale of business" under subsection (2)(a). Boulder Medical Center v. Moore, 651 P.2d 464 (Colo. App. 1982); King v. PA Consulting Group, Inc., 485 F.3d 577 (10th Cir. 2007).

Under "sale of business" exception, where plain language of covenant prohibited "working" for competitors, case was reversed and remanded to determine whether activities beyond merely loaning money or leasing property to a competitor materially breached the covenant. Nat'l Propane Corp. v. Miller, 18 P.3d 782 (Colo. App. 2000).

"Sale of business" and "management personnel" exceptions applied to covenant required as part of property disposition in dissolution of marriage. In re Fischer, 834 P.2d 270 (Colo. App. 1992).

Test for determining whether a covenant fits within the "trade secrets" exception: (1) Is the restrictive covenant justified at all in light of the facts; and (2) are the specific terms reasonable? Management Recruiters of Boulder v. Miller, 762 P.2d 763 (Colo. App. 1988).

For a covenant not to compete to fit within the trade secret exception of subsection (2), the purpose of the covenant must be the protection of trade secrets, and the covenant must be reasonably limited in scope to the protection of those trade secrets. Gold Messenger, Inc. v. McGuay, 937 P.2d 907 (Colo. App. 1997).

Whether a particular group of employees qualifies under the exception of subsection (2)(d) is an issue of fact. Occusafe, Inc. v. EG&G Rocky Flats, Inc., 54 F.3d 618 (10th Cir. 1995).

Whether a nonsolicitation clause in a contract fits within the trade secrets exception in subsection (2) is an issue of fact. Saturn Sys., Inc. v. Militare, 252 P.3d 516 (Colo. App. 2011).

A person who conducts or supervises a business is "management personnel". A person who supervises 50 employees in a division with a ten million dollar budget is "management personnel" and therefore falls under the management personnel exception, which is broader than covering merely a few key personnel. DISH Network Corp. v. Altomari, 224 P.3d 362 (Colo. App. 2009).

Management exception to the statutory limit on noncompetition clauses does not apply when an employee does not manage any other employees and there are three levels of management employees above the employee. Atmel Corp. v. Vitesse Semiconductor Corp., 30 P.3d 789 (Colo. App. 2001).

The "professional staff to executive and management personnel" exception is limited to those persons who, while qualifying as "professionals" and reporting to managers and executives, primarily serve as key members of the manager's or executive's staff in the implementation of management and executive functions. Phoenix Capital, Inc. v. Dowell, 176 P.3d 835 (Colo. App. 2007).

Invalidity of noncompetition agreement also renders invalid an agreement not to solicit customers of former employer. Agreement not to solicit customers is form of agreement not to compete that has effect of restricting former employee from working in same business for another employer. Phoenix Capital, Inc. v. Dowell, 176 P.3d 835 (Colo. App. 2007).

Colorado has not recognized an employer's right to protect good will created by an employee's relationships with the employer's customers. Reed Mill & Lumber Co. v. Jensen, 165 P.3d 733 (Colo. App. 2006).

Whether industrial hygienists constitute "professional staff to executive and management personnel" is an issue of fact. Occusafe, Inc. v. EG&G Rocky Flats Inc., 54 F.3d 618 (10th Cir. 1995).

Section applies to independent contractors as well as employees. Colo. Supply Co., Inc. v. Stewart, 797 P.2d 1303 (Colo. App. 1990).

Noncompetition provision specifying the amount of damages and setting a fee percentage as liquidated damages in a physician's employment contract violated subsection (3). The contract requirement that the plaintiff pay defendant a percentage of his fees for two years provided for damages that were not "reasonably related to the injury suffered" by the defendant by reason of the termination of the contract with plaintiff. Also, the fee percentage set as liquidated damages in the noncompetition provision was disproportionate to any possible loss incurred by the defendant. Wojtowicz v. Greeley Anesthesia Servs., 961 P.2d 520 (Colo. App. 1997).

Applied in Harrison v. Albright, 40 Colo. App. 227, 577 P.2d 302 (1977).

8-2-114. Immunity from civil liability for employer disclosing information - employer shall not maintain blacklist - credit lists excepted. (1) For purposes of this section, "job performance" means:

(a) The suitability of the employee for reemployment;
(b) The employee's work-related skills, abilities, and habits as they may relate to suitability for future employment; and

(c) In the case of a former employee, the reason for the employee's separation.

(2) It is unlawful for any employer to maintain a blacklist, or to notify any other employer that any current or former employee has been blacklisted by such employer, for the purpose of preventing such employee from receiving employment. Sections 8-2-112 to 8-2-115 shall not be construed to prevent any merchant or professional person, or any association thereof, from maintaining or publishing a list concerning the credit or financial responsibility of any person dealing with them on credit.

(3) Any employer who provides information about a current or former employee's job history or job performance to a prospective employer of the current or former employee upon request of the prospective employer or the current or former employee is immune from civil liability and is not liable in civil damages for the disclosure or any consequences of the disclosure. This immunity shall not apply when such employee shows by a preponderance of the evidence both of the following:

(a) The information disclosed by the current or former employer was false; and

(b) The employer providing the information knew or reasonably should have known that the information was false.

(4) This section applies to any employee, agent, or other representative of the current or former employer who is authorized to provide and who provides information in accordance with this section.

(5) Any employer that provides written information to a prospective employer about a current or a former employee shall send, upon the request of such current or former employee, a copy of the information provided to the last-known address of the person who is the subject of the reference. Any person who is the subject of such a reference may obtain a copy of the reference information by appearing at the employer's or former employer's place of business during normal business hours. The employer or former employer may charge a fair and reasonable amount for reproduction costs if multiple copies are requested.

(6) Nothing in this section shall be construed to abrogate or contradict the provisions of part 4 of article 34 of title 24, C.R.S.

(2) The person ordering an award of back pay shall notify the director of the division of unemployment insurance of the award within five days after the date of the order.

(3) If, during the period for which back pay is awarded, the recipient of the award has been receiving unemployment benefits pursuant to the provisions of articles 70 to 82 of this title, the entity ordering the award shall reduce the amount of the award by the amount of benefits the person received, and the employer shall withhold that amount from the award. 8-2-120. Residency requirements prohibited for public employment - legislative declaration - definitions. (1) The general assembly hereby finds, determines, and declares that the imposition of residency requirements by public employers works to the detriment of the public health, welfare, and morale as well as to the detriment of the economic well-being of the state. The general assembly further finds, determines, and declares that the right of the individual to work in or for any local government is a matter of statewide concern and accordingly the provisions of this section preempt any provisions of any such local government to the contrary. The general assembly declares that the problem and hardships to the citizens of this state occasioned by the imposition of employee residency requirements far outweigh any gain devolving to the public employer from the imposition of said requirements.

(2) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Employee" means any person who works for a salary or for hourly wages, whether full-time or part-time and whether temporary or permanent. Such term does not include a local government's elected officials or its key appointed officials such as cabinet members, director of public safety, superintendent of schools, fire chief, or police chief and does not include members of a local government's boards or committees if residency requirements are set forth by any ordinance, charter, resolution, or statute of the local government.

(b) "Local government" means a county, city and county, city, municipality, town, school district, junior college district, a local improvement and service district, special district, or any other independent local entity having the authority under the general laws of this state to levy taxes or impose assessments.

(3) On and after July 1, 1988, any employee of any local government may at his sole option reside and dwell anywhere such employee chooses, whether within or without the territorial boundaries of the local government, except as provided in paragraph (b) of subsection (4) of this section.

(4) (a) On and after July 1, 1988, no residency requirement may be imposed on any employee by any local government. To the extent that any local government ordinance, charter, resolution, or statute conflicts with this provision, it is hereby preempted by this provision.

(b) Key employees with duties which clearly and demonstrably require them to be close to their place of employment may be subject to reasonable requirements as to the maximum distance the employee's residence may be from the place of work. Such condition may be imposed, after hearing, by ordinance or resolution.

ANNOTATION

Unconstitutional interference with power of home rule municipalities. The residency of municipal employees is a matter of local concern and is therefore governed by charter provision or ordinance of a home rule city; an inconsistent home rule provision preempts this section. *City and County of Denver v. Factors considered in determining whether state statute preempts inconsistent home rule

The director or the director's designee may conduct random audits of employers in Colorado to obtain the documentation. When the director has reason to believe that an employer has not complied with the employment verification and examination requirements, the director shall request the employer to submit the documentation.

(4) An employer who, with reckless disregard, fails to submit the documentation required by this section, or who, with reckless disregard, submits false or fraudulent documentation, shall be subject to a fine of not more than five thousand dollars for the first offense and not more than twenty-five thousand dollars for the second and any subsequent offense. The moneys collected pursuant to this subsection (4) shall be deposited in the employment verification cash fund, which is hereby created in the state treasury. The moneys in the fund shall be appropriated to the department of labor and employment for the purpose of implementing, administering, and enforcing this section. The moneys in the fund shall remain in the fund and not revert to the general fund or any other fund at the end of any fiscal year.

(II) (A) In notifying employers of the e-verify program pursuant to subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (a), the department shall include language similar to the following:

As with all current employee verification programs, the e-verify program is not one hundred percent accurate, and an employee has recourse available if the employee is legally documented to work in the United States but the employer receives a final notice of nonconfirmation of work eligibility regarding the employee through the e-verify program.

(B) Additionally, the department shall provide employers information about when, during the hiring process, an employer may lawfully use the e-verify program, specifying that the e-verify program can only be used after an employee is hired and cannot be used to verify the work eligibility status of existing employees. 8-2-125. Identification of workers engaged in off-site work - permissible forms of identification - exceptions - definitions. (1) (a) When an employer dispatches an employee to an off-site premises to perform work on behalf of the employer for a customer located at the off-site premises, the employee may provide an employer-issued identification card to the custodian of the off-site premises in lieu of a government-issued identification card for purposes of verifying the identity of the employee. Except as provided in paragraph (c) of this subsection (1), the custodian of the off-site premises shall not require the employee to surrender his or her government-issued identification card to the custodian or retain the employee's government-issued identification card while the employee is physically present on the off-site premises engaged in the performance of work on behalf of the employer.

(b) If the employee has an employer-issued identification card, the custodian may require the employee to surrender his or her employer-issued identification card for purposes of verifying the employee's identity, and the custodian may hold the employer-issued identification card at all times while the employee is present on the off-site premises.

(c) Notwithstanding the prohibition in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1), if the employee does not surrender an employer-issued identification card, the custodian may require the employee to surrender the employee's government-issued identification card to verify the employee's identity, and the custodian may hold the government-issued identification card at all times while the employee is present on the off-site premises.

(d) If the employee provides his or her employer-issued identification card to the custodian pursuant to paragraph (b) of this subsection (1), the custodian may require the employee to allow the custodian to examine a secondary form of identification containing the employee's photograph, including a government-issued identification card.

(2) This section does not apply to a person who enters into a defense contract with the federal government pursuant to the national industrial security program, or its successor program, under which the person is contractually obligated to verify identification using a government-issued identification card.

(3) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Custodian" means the person who is authorized to provide or restrict access to the off-site premises, including security personnel for a commercial building or multi-residential property.

(b) "Employer-issued identification card" means an identification card issued by an employer to an employee that contains, at a minimum, the name of the employer and the employee's name and photograph.

(c) "Government-issued identification card" means a state-issued driver's license or identification card containing the person's photograph, an identification card or passport issued by the federal government containing the person's photograph, a native American tribal document identifying the person and containing the person's photograph, or any other form of identification issued by the federal or a state government that contains the person's photograph and identifying information.

(d) "Off-site premises" means a building or property that is not owned, leased, operated, or otherwise under the control of the employer of the employee who is dispatched to the premises, including:

- (I) A commercial building, other than a federal, state, or local government building; or
- (II) A multi-residential property.

EMPLOYER'S LIABILITY

Editor's note: In the original Volume 3, Colorado Revised Statutes 1973, this part 2 was included under article 42 of the "Workmen's Compensation Act of Colorado". It was moved to this article in 1976 for correct location since it was not enacted by the General Assembly as a part of the "Workmen's Compensation Act of Colorado" (see chapter 113, p. 294, Session Laws of Colorado 1911, and chapter 210, p. 700, Session Laws of Colorado 1919, and article 5 of chapter 80 and article 1 of chapter 81, C.R.S. 1963, prior to the recodification of the statutes in 1973).

8-2-201. Damages - fellow servant rule abolished - limitation on admission of criminal history. (1) Every corporation or individual who employs agents, servants, or employees, such agents, servants, or employees being in the exercise of due care, shall be liable to respond in damages for injuries or death sustained by any such agent, servant, or employee resulting from the carelessness, omission of duty, or negligence of such employer, or which may have resulted from the carelessness, omission of duty, or negligence of any other agent, servant, or employee of the employer, in the same manner and to the same extent as if the carelessness, omission of duty, or negligence causing the injury or death was that of the employer.

(2) (a) Information regarding the criminal history of an employee or former employee may not be introduced as evidence in a civil action against an employer or its employees or agents that is based on the conduct of the employee or former employee if:

(I) The nature of the criminal history does not bear a direct relationship to the facts underlying the cause of action; or

(II) Before the occurrence of the act giving rise to the civil action, a court order sealed any record of the criminal case or the employee or former employee received a pardon; or

(III) The record is of an arrest or charge that did not result in a criminal conviction; or

(IV) The employee or former employee received a deferred judgment at sentence and the deferred judgment was not revoked.

(b) This subsection (2) does not supersede any statutory requirement to conduct a criminal history background investigation or consider criminal history records in hiring for particular types of employment.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "One Year Review of Torts", see 35 Dicta 53 (1958).

Annotator's note. Cases decided prior to the earliest source of § 8-2-201 have been included in the annotations to this section.

At common law, a master is not responsible for negligence of fellow servant. Portland Gold Mining Co. v. Duke, 164 F. 180 (8th Cir. 1908).

But under this section the master is liable to a servant for the neglect of a fellow servant, to the same extent as for his own neglects. Portland Gold Mining Co. v. Duke, 191 F. 692 (8th Cir. 1911); Kett v. Colo. & S. Ry., 58 Colo. 392, 146 P. 245 (1915); Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 319 P.2d 975 (1957).

For this section and §§ 8-2-202 through 8-2-204 give a right of action in derogation of the common law, and supersede it to the extent necessary to give full force and effect thereto. Ferguson v. Ringsby Truck Line, 174 F.2d 744 (10th Cir. 1949); Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 319 P.2d 975 (1957).

But not available remedy under workmen's compensation. A workmen's compensation claimant cannot rely upon the provisions of §§ 8-2-201 through 8-2-205 as providing an available remedy excepted from abolition by the workmen's compensation act in § 8-42-102, even though those sections were mistakenly placed within the scope of the latter section by the 1973 revisor. Ryan v. Centennial Race Track, Inc., 196 Colo. 30, 580 P.2d 794 (1978).

The purpose and effect of this section is not only to abolish the fellow servant doctrine, but also to create in the employee or his survivors a statutory action for the employer's negligence within the time specified therein. Ferguson v. Ringsby Truck Line, 174 F.2d 744 (10th Cir. 1949); Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 319 P.2d 975 (1957).

And this section is constitutional. Vindicator Consol. Gold Mining Co. v. Firstbrook, 36 Colo. 498, 86 P. 313 (1906); Big Kanawha Leasing Co. v. Jones, 45 Colo. 381, 102 P. 171 (1909); Colo. & S. Ry. v. Davis, 23 Colo. App. 41, 127 P. 249 (1912).

Because this section is not contrary to the due process clause of the constitution. Vindicator Consol. Gold Mining Co. v. Firstbrook, 36 Colo. 498, 86 P. 313 (1906); Rio Grande Sampling Co. v. Catlin, 40 Colo. 450, 94 P. 323 (1907); Colo. & S. Ry. v. Davis, 21 Colo. App. 1, 120 P. 1048, rev'd on other grounds, 23 Colo. App. 41, 127 P. 249 (1912).

Even though the servant is not required to give notice of the injury. Lange v. Union P. R. R., 126 F. 338 (8th Cir. 1903), cert. denied, 193 U.S. 671, 24 S. Ct. 853, 48 L. Ed. 841 (1904); Carlock v. Denver & R. G. R. R., 55 Colo. 146, 133 P. 1103 (1913); Kett v. Colo. & S. Ry., 58 Colo. 392, 146 P. 245 (1915).

Scope of employment may be enlarged by custom known to master. The servant's scope of employment may be enlarged by a practice sufficiently uniform, open, and long-established, to prove a custom, and knowledge of which is brought home to the master. Big Five Tunnel Ore Reduction & Transp. Co. v. Johnson, 44 Colo. 236, 99 P. 63 (1908).

And knowledge of foreman is knowledge of master. Knowledge of the foreman of a mine, as to the usage and practice of those working under him, is the knowledge of the mine owner. Big Five Tunnel Ore Reduction & Transp. Co. v. Johnson, 44 Colo. 236, 99 P. 63 (1908).

Applied in Northwestern Eng'r Co. v. Rooks, 166 Colo. 297, 443 P.2d 977 (1968).

II. NEGLIGENCE, CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, AND ASSUMPTION OF RISK.

The test of whether a master was negligent is whether his conduct was that of an ordinarily prudent man. Colo. Milling & Elevator Co. v. Bright, 76 Colo. 338, 231 P. 1111 (1924).

Master liable for defective appliance causing accident where defect was unknown to servant. Nat'l Fuel Co. v. Green, 50 Colo. 307, 115 P. 709 (1911).

An employee is generally excusable for obeying orders in and about his employer's business when such orders are given by one in authority over him as a representative of his employer, unless the danger incurred by such obedience is so manifest that a prudent person would not obey even under the penalty of being discharged. Colo. M. Ry. v. O'Brien, 16 Colo. 219, 27 P. 701 (1891); Nat'l Fuel Co. v. Green, 50 Colo. 307, 115 P. 709 (1911).

And miner is not negligent in failing to anticipate that experienced fellow miner will throw burning fuse toward open can of powder. Rapson Coal Mining Co. v. Micheli, 62 Colo. 330, 164 P. 311 (1916).

Thus, the doctrine of assumption of risk as to the negligence of a fellow servant has no place under this section. Vindicator Consol. Gold Mining Co. v. Firstbrook, 36 Colo. 498, 86 P. 313 (1906); Kett v. Colo. & S. Ry., 58 Colo. 392, 146 P. 245 (1915).

III. ACTIONS.

A. In General.

Rescission of release given without consideration is not prerequisite to action. Where, in an action for damages for the death of an employee, defendant pleads a release, and plaintiff pleads that it was given without consideration and the jury so found, defendant cannot object that plaintiff cannot maintain the action without first rescinding the release and tendering a return of the consideration received, as there was neither a contract of release to rescind nor any consideration received by the plaintiff for the alleged release which she could tender back. Vindicator Consol. Gold Mining Co. v. Firstbrook, 36 Colo. 498, 86 P. 313 (1906).

B. Complaint.

Election not required between counts alleging failure to furnish safe place to work and negligence of fellow servant. Cramer v. Oppenstein, 16 Colo. 504, 27 P. 716 (1891); Manders v. Craft, 3 Colo. App. 236, 32 P. 836 (1893); Leonard v. Roberts, 20 Colo. 88, 36 P. 880 (1894); Vindicator Consol. Gold Mining Co. v. Firstbrook, 36 Colo. 498, 86 P. 313 (1906).

Allegations that pit was negligently left uncovered held sufficient. Colo. Milling & Elevator Co. v. Bright, 76 Colo. 338, 231 P. 1111 (1924).

For the sufficiency of allegation of failure to furnish safe appliances, see Denver Consol. Elec. Co. v. Lawrence, 31 Colo. 301, 73 P. 39 (1903); Nat'l Fuel Co. v. Green, 50 Colo. 307, 115 P. 709 (1911).

For the failure to allege name of negligent fellow servant, see Denver & R. G. R. v. Vitello, 21 Colo. App. 51, 121 P. 112 (1912).

C. Burden of Proof.

Defendant alleging contributory negligence has burden of proof. Big Five Tunnel Ore Reduction & Transp. Co. v. Johnson, 44 Colo. 236, 99 P. 63 (1908).

Likewise, master alleging negligent fellow servant was acting outside scope of employment. Where, in an action against the master for the death of a servant attributed to negligence of a fellow servant, there is a plea that the offending servant was acting without the scope of employment, the master has the burden of proof; and if the negligence of two working together occasioned the accident, and one of them was acting outside his employment, the defendant must go further and prove that the other did not materially participate in the negligent act. Big Five Tunnel Ore Reduction & Transp. Co. v. Johnson, 44 Colo. 236, 99 P. 63 (1908).

D. Reference to Insurance.

Asking jurors whether they are interested in insurance company is not error. Vindicator Consol. Gold Mining Co. v. Firstbrook, 36 Colo. 498, 86 P. 313 (1906).

But statement to juror that suggests insurance company is real party in interest justifies reversal. Parkdale Fuel Co. v. Taylor, 26 Colo. App. 304, 144 P. 1138 (1914).

Unless great weight of evidence favors plaintiff. Tanner v. Harper, 32 Colo. 156, 75 P. 404 (1904); Parkdale Fuel Co. v. Taylor, 26 Colo. App. 304, 144 P. 1138 (1914).

But comment by counsel on custom of companies to carry insurance is error. Coe v. Van Why, 33 Colo. 315, 80 P. 894 (1905); Parkdale Fuel Co. v. Taylor, 26 Colo. App. 304, 144 P. 1138 (1914).

E. Questions of Law and Fact.

Whether a servant is acting within the scope of his authority is generally a question of fact for the jury under proper instructions, and not a question of law for the court. Ward v. Teller Reservoir & Irrigation Co., 60 Colo. 47, 153 P. 219 (1915); Rapson Coal Mining Co. v. Micheli, 62 Colo. 330, 164 P. 311 (1916).

Likewise, question of servant's contributory negligence is for the jury except in the clearest cases, where the facts are undisputed, and where all intelligent men can draw but one inference, when the question of contributory negligence is for the court, and especially is this true when the measure of duty is ordinary and reasonable care, as in such cases the standard duty is variable. Vindicator Consol. Gold Mining Co. v. Firstbrook, 36 Colo. 498, 86 P. 313 (1906); Phillips v. Denver City Tramway Co., 53 Colo. 458, 128 P. 460 (1912); Kett v. Colo. & S. Ry., 58 Colo. 392, 146 P. 245 (1915).

And question of fact for jury as to whose duty it is to keep appliances in repair. Nat'l Fuel Co. v. Green, 50 Colo. 307, 115 P. 709 (1911).

But where there is no room for two opinions as to master's negligence, question is a matter of law, and court may direct a verdict. Colo. Milling & Elevator Co. v. Bright, 76 Colo. 338, 231 P. 1111 (1924).

F. Instructions.

Instructions must be considered as a whole. And where, in an action by servant against master for negligence in the matter of appliances, the duty of the master is properly and clearly stated in the charge, as that of reasonable care only, objection made to a subsequent passage in which it is declared that the master is liable if the appliances were not of such character as a reasonably prudent person would consider safe, was held to be without merit. Nat'l Fuel Co. v. Green, 50 Colo. 307, 115 P. 709 (1911).

Instructions will not be reviewed which trial court was not given opportunity to correct. Where objection interposed was general, on the subject of damages, it does not avail as against an instruction which contains two or more independent and distinct propositions of law, some of which are right, because it fails to point out that which is incorrect from that which is correct. Beals v. Cone, 27 Colo. 473, 62 P. 948 (1900), appeal dismissed, 188 U.S. 184, 23 S. Ct. 275, 47 L. Ed. 435 (1903); City of Pueblo v. Timbers, 31 Colo. 215, 72 P. 1059 (1903); Hasse v. Herring, 36 Colo. 383, 85 P. 629 (1906); Nat'l Fuel Co. v. Green, 50 Colo. 307, 115 P. 709 (1911).

G. Variance.

Evidence of master's negligence sufficient under complaint charging negligence of master and fellow servant. Nat'l Fuel Co. v. Green, 50 Colo. 307, 115 P. 709 (1911).

Charge of failure to supply safe appliance supported by proof that appliance provided was useless. Nat'l Fuel Co. v. Green, 50 Colo. 307, 115 P. 709 (1911).

H. Damages.

Minor may recover for expenses incurred for treatment. A minor suing for a personal injury may recover not only for the mental and bodily suffering occasioned by the injury, but for liabilities incurred by him in being cured or treated for his injury. That he might avoid liability for the expenses so incurred, by reason of his minority, is no bar to the recovery. His minority is a personal privilege of which no third person can have advantage. Nat'l Fuel Co. v. Green, 50 Colo. 307, 115 P. 709 (1911).

But contract to furnish hospital care does not entitle servant to recover money expended for specialist. Assurances given to the servant at the time of his employment that in case of sickness or injury he will be received into a hospital maintained by the employer, and receive board, bed, medicines, and medical attendance free, do not entitle the servant to recover the expense of a trip to a distant city, and moneys expended there for the services of a specialist, although this was upon the advice of the physician in charge of the hospital. The employer is not even bound to provide a specialist at the hospital. Miller v. Camp Bird, Ltd., 46 Colo. 569, 105 P. 1105 (1909).

And error in awarding damages to which one is not entitled may be cured by a remittitur in writing, filed with the clerk of the trial court. Nat'l Fuel Co. v. Green, 50 Colo. 307, 115 P. 709 (1911).

8-2-202. Damages in case of death - limit. If the death of a person is caused by an act of carelessness, omission of duty, or negligence as provided in section 8-2-201, the corporation or individual who would have been liable if the death had not ensued shall be liable to an action for damages regardless of the death of the party injured. In each such case the jury may award such damages as it deems fair and just, with reference to the necessary injury resulting from such death, to the parties who may be entitled to sue under this part 2; except that, if the decedent left neither a widow, widower, or minor children nor a dependent father or mother, the damages recoverable in any such action shall not exceed forty-five thousand dollars.

Cross references: For damages in general, see article 21 of title 13.

8-2-203. Who may sue - consolidation of actions. (1) Every such action shall in case of death be maintained:

- (a) By the husband or wife of the deceased;
- (b) If there is no husband or wife or if he or she fails to sue within one year after such death, by the children of the deceased or their descendants;
- (c) If such deceased is a minor or unmarried, without issue, by the father or mother or by both jointly; or
- (d) If there is no such person entitled to sue, by such other next of kin of the deceased as may be dependent upon the deceased for support.

(2) Every such action, in case of death, may be maintained by any person entitled to sue for the use and benefit of the others so entitled to sue as well as for the plaintiff so suing, and the verdict of the jury and the judgment of the court shall specify the amount of damages awarded to each person, and, if any such actions are separately brought, the same shall be consolidated with the action first commenced in the court which has jurisdiction of said actions when so consolidated.

ANNOTATION

Federal statute regulating liability of interstate carriers precludes death action by widow. The federal statute regulating the liability of interstate carriers to their employees supercedes and displaces the provisions of the state statute within its purview, and since the former statute confers upon the personal representative of the employee the right of action for the death of such employee, attributable to the negligence of the master, the employee's widow is not permitted to maintain an action in her own name. Denver & R. G. R. v. Wilson, 62 Colo. 492, 163 P. 857 (1917).

8-2-204. Limitation of actions - limit of damages. All actions provided for by this part 2 shall be brought within the time period prescribed in section 13-80-102, C.R.S. The amount of damages recoverable under this part 2 in case of personal injury resulting solely from negligence of a coemployee shall not exceed the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars.

Amended answer pleading statute. After issues are joined and a cause has been set for trial, a court may in the exercise of reasonable discretion and in the interest of justice permit the filing of an amended answer pleading additional defenses, such as the two-year statute of limitations under this section. 37 C.J. 1227; Walters v. Webster, 52 Colo. 549, 123 P. 952 (1912); Maryland Cas. Co. v. City & County of Denver, 90 Colo. 20, 6 P.2d 6 (1931).

And damages may not exceed $25,000. Under this section, damages against an employer by an employee for injuries resulting from the negligence of the employer or a fellow employee may not exceed the sum of $25,000. Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 319 P.2d 975 legedly caused by its negligence in furnishing an "unsafe, insecure and defective" appliance for the performance of his duties. Ferguson v. Ringsby Truck Line, 174 F.2d 744 (10th Cir. 1949).

8-2-205. Assumption of risk abolished. If any agent, servant, or employee, while in the performance of his duty for his employer, is injured or killed in the employer's service on account of the employer's negligence or any defect or peril connected with ways, works, machinery, or instrumentalities used in the business of the employer which could have been remedied or made safer by the use of ordinary diligence, a recovery for such injury or death may be had. The fact that such employee had knowledge of the defect or peril shall not be a bar to a recovery unless the repairing or remedying of such defect or peril was his principal duty. All stipulations, contracts, or agreements between an employee and his employer or between other persons contrary to the provisions of this section shall be null and void.

But this section does not purport to create any new right of action. It merely abates a common-law defense to a statutory cause of action. Ferguson v. Ringsby Truck Line, 174 F.2d 744 (10th Cir. 1949).

And this section relieves the employees and workmen from the assumption of risk for injuries or death. Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 319 P.2d 975 (1957).

Prior to the enactment of this section, the servant assumed only such risks as were obvious to a person of ordinary intelligence, ability and experience, and which arose out of the conditions that surrounded him at the time. Miller v. Camp Bird, Ltd., 46 Colo. 569, 105 P. 1105 (1909).

But workman still assumes risks not created by master's negligence. Since the enactment of this section, and the workmen's compensation act, the doctrine of assumption of any risk created by the master's negligence has disappeared, but the question of whether the employer was negligent remains, and the workman still assumes, so far as a suit for damages is concerned, the risks not created by the master's negligence. Colo. Milling & Elevator Co. v. Bright, 76 Colo. 338, 231 P. 1111 (1924).

Instruction held correct. An instruction that if the defendant was negligent, and its negligence was the proximate cause of the injury, there was no assumption of risk was held correct. Colo. Milling & Elevator Co. v. Bright, 76 Colo. 338, 231 P. 1111 (1924).

Evidence of negligence requiring submission of case to jury. In action by a farm hand to recover for injuries sustained when his hand was caught in a corn husker, it was held that there was a sufficient showing of negligence on the part of the employer to require submission of the case to the jury. Huddleston v. Ingersoll Co., 109 Colo. 134, 123 P.2d 1016 (1942).

Freedom of Legislative and Judicial Access Act

8-2.5-101. Preventing legislative and judicial access to employees - intimidation of legislative witnesses - penalty.

8-2.5-101. Preventing legislative and judicial access to employees - intimidation of legislative witnesses - penalty. (1) (a) It is unlawful for any person to adopt or enforce any rule, regulation, or policy forbidding or preventing any of its employees, franchisees, or agents or entities under its control or oversight from, or to take any action against its employees, franchisees, or agents or entities under its control or oversight solely for, testifying before a committee of the general assembly or a court of law or speaking to a member of the general assembly at the request of such committee, court, or member regarding any action, policy, rule, regulation, practice, or procedure of any person or regarding any grievance relating thereto. Any person violating any provision of this section is guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars.

(b) The prohibition in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1) shall not apply to testimony before a committee of the general assembly or a court of law that discloses confidential, proprietary, or otherwise privileged information of any person.

(1.5) (a) It is unlawful for any person:

(I) To intimidate a legislative witness, by use of a threat, in order to intentionally influence or induce a legislative witness:

(A) To appear or not appear before a committee of the general assembly;

(B) To give or refrain from giving testimony to a committee of the general assembly;

(C) To testify falsely before a committee of the general assembly; or

(D) To avoid legal process summoning the legislative witness to attend and testify before a committee of the general assembly; or

(II) To take any action against a legislative witness for testifying before a committee of the general assembly.

(b) For the purposes of this subsection (1.5):

(I) "Legislative witness" means any individual that intends to testify or testifies before a committee of the general assembly either voluntarily or pursuant to a subpoena issued by any committee of the general assembly or of either house thereof.

(II) "Threat" means to communicate directly the intent to do any act that is intended to harm the health, safety, property, business, or financial condition of the legislative witness.

(c) Any person violating any provision of this subsection (1.5) is guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars.

(2) (a) An employee, a franchisee, an agent or an entity under the control of any person, or a legislative witness may recover damages, including reasonable attorney fees, from any person for injuries suffered through a violation of this section.

(b) Nothing in this section shall be construed to prohibit an employee, a franchisee, an agent or an entity under the control of any person, or a legislative witness from pursuing any other right of action permitted pursuant to law for injuries suffered through a violation of this section.

(3) Nothing in this section shall obligate any person to compensate an employee or agent for time spent testifying before a committee of the general assembly or a court of law or speaking to a member of the general assembly at the request or invitation of such committee, court, or member regarding any action, policy, rule, regulation, practice, or procedure of any person or regarding any grievance relating thereto.

(4) For purposes of this section, "person" means a corporation, a limited liability company, a partnership, an association, a firm, a state agency as defined in section 24-50.5-102 (4), C.R.S., a county, a city and county, a municipality, a federal agency, an individual, or any officer or agent thereof.

ANNOTATION

There is no basis to conclude that this section clearly expresses a public policy that forbids an employer from terminating an employee for filing a motion for a temporary restraining order or a lawsuit against an employer. The section does not clearly mandate a general public policy protecting access to the courts. Slaughter v. John Elway Dodge S.W./AutoNation, 107 P.3d 1165 (Colo. App. 2005).

To bring a successful claim under this section, a plaintiff must establish that any action taken was solely because of plaintiff's testimony. Emerson v. Wembley USA Inc., 433 F. Supp. 2d 1200 (D. Colo. 2006).

The labor peace act, enacted in 1943, is a comprehensive statute regulating the conduct of parties to a labor dispute. City of Golden v. Ford, 141 Colo. 472, 348 P.2d 951 (1960).

Consequently, a municipal ordinance insofar as it deals with the conduct of parties to a "labor dispute" in an attempt to cover in a different and sometimes conflicting manner the same field as is covered by the labor peace act must be held without force or effect; for municipalities are creatures of either legislative enactment or constitutional provision, having only powers expressly or impliedly granted to them, and no statute or constitutional provision has expressly given cities power to regulate labor disputes, nor can such be said to be an implied power when the proper conduct of labor activities is a matter of statewide concern. City of Golden v. Ford, 141 Colo. 472, 348 P.2d 951 (1960).

However, the labor peace act is itself inapplicable where preempted by federal labor legislation. Bldg. Constr. Trades Council v. Am. Bldrs., Inc., 139 Colo. 236, 337 P.2d 953 (1959).

Invalidity of such provisions to be determined by federal courts. Questions raised as to the invalidity of such provisions by virtue of the federal constitution and the jurisdiction of the state courts with the passage of federal labor acts must be determined by the federal courts. Denver Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Shore, 124 Colo. 57, 234 P.2d 620 (1951).

But this article as a whole is not unconstitutional upon the theory that, as to employees engaged in interstate commerce, it infringes upon the field preempted by the national labor relations act and upon the ground that it is in direct conflict with federal legislation. Am. Fed'n of Labor v. Reilly, 113 Colo. 90, 155 P.2d 145 (1944).

Nor is this article unconstitutional on the ground that the definition of a "labor dispute" in subsection (13) of § 8-3-104 is too narrow. Denver Milk Producers v. Int'l. Bhd. of Teamsters, 116 Colo. 389, 183 P.2d 529 (1947).

8-3-102. Legislative declaration - matter of statewide concern - prohibition on local enactments. (1) The public policy of the state as to employment relations and collective bargaining, in the furtherance of which this article is enacted, is declared to be as follows:

(a) It recognizes that there are three major interests involved, namely: That of the public, the employee, and the employer. These three interests are to a considerable extent interrelated. It is the policy of the state to protect and promote each of these interests with due regard to the situation and to the rights of the others.

(b) Industrial peace, regular and adequate income for the employee, and uninterrupted production of goods and services are promotive of all of these interests. They are largely dependent upon the maintenance of fair, friendly, and mutually satisfactory employment relations and the availability of suitable machinery for the peaceful adjustment of whatever legitimate controversies may arise. It is recognized that certain employers, including farmers and farmer cooperatives, in addition to their general employer problems, face special problems arising from perishable commodities and seasonal production which require adequate consideration. It is also recognized that whatever may be the rights of disputants with respect to each other in any controversy regarding employment relations,

Employer's alleged violation of act did not foreclose his right to independent remedy. Where employer alleged in its affirmative defenses and counterclaim that plaintiffs' activities violated the "Colorado labor peace act", such allegation did not foreclose the employer's right to an independent remedy, and the employer was not obliged to first utilize the administrative provisions of the act in seeking a remedy. Pipeliners Local 798 v. Ellerd, 503 F.2d 1193 (10th Cir. 1974).

The labor peace act is not restricted in its application to industry and trade only. Indus. Comm'n v. Wallace Vill. for Children, 165 Colo. 10, 437 P.2d 62 (1968).

And there is an express recognition of the right of employees to engage in peaceful picketing throughout the provisions of the labor peace act. People ex rel. Shaffer v. Teamster Local 961, 175 Colo. 187, 486 P.2d 10 (1971); Pueblo Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Harper Constr. Co., 134 Colo. 469, 307 P.2d 468 (1957).

If Colorado law is interpreted to allow an action by an employee for violation of a union's duty of fair representation, in order for employee to sustain the action, he must demonstrate that his claim of wrongful discharge has merit, so that it is probable he would have succeeded in any arbitration proceeding. If the union's invocation of arbitration proceedings would not have provided some relief to the employee, its refusal to take such action did not injure the employee. Hoff v. Amal. Transit Un., Div. 662, 758 P.2d 674 (Colo. App. 1987).

Trial court properly dismissed claim that employee was entitled to protection from retaliation on basis of work-related illness or injury or the filing of a claim for worker's compensation under this act where complaint did not allege any fact relating to efforts to organize under the labor peace act. Ferris v. Local 26, 867 P.2d 38 (Colo. App. 1993).

they should not be permitted in the conduct of their controversy to intrude directly or indirectly into the primary rights of third parties to earn a livelihood, transact business, and engage in the ordinary affairs of life by any lawful means and free from molestation, interference, intimidation, restraint, or coercion.

(c) Negotiations of terms and conditions of work should result from voluntary agreement between employer and employee. For the purpose of such negotiation, an employee has the right, if he desires, to associate with others in organizing and bargaining collectively through representatives of his own free choosing without intimidation or coercion from any source.

(d) All rights of persons to join labor organizations or unions and their rights and privileges as members thereof should be recognized, safeguarded, and protected. No person shall be denied membership in a labor organization or union on account of race, creed, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, marital status, disability, national origin, ancestry, or by any unfair or unjust discrimination. Arbitrary or excessive initiation fees and dues shall not be required, nor shall excessive, unwarranted, arbitrary, or oppressive fines, penalties, or forfeitures be imposed. The members are entitled to full and detailed reports from their officers, agents, or representatives of all financial transactions and shall have the right to elect officers by secret ballot and to determine and vote upon the question of striking, not striking, and other questions of policy affecting the entire membership.

(e) In order to preserve and promote the interests of the public, the employee, and the employer alike, the state shall establish standards of fair conduct in employment relations and provide a convenient, expeditious, and impartial tribunal by which these interests may have their respective rights and obligations adjudicated, without limiting the jurisdiction of the courts to protect property, and to prevent and punish the commission of unlawful acts. While limiting individual and group rights of aggression and defense, the state substitutes processes of justice for the more primitive methods of trial by combat.

(f) It is declared to be the common law of the state that no act which if done by one person would constitute a crime under the common law or statutes of this state is any less a crime if committed by two or more persons or corporations acting in concert, and no act which under the common law or statutes of this state is a wrongful act for which any person has a remedy against the wrongdoer if done by one person is any less a remedial wrong if done by two or more persons or corporations in concert, nor shall the injured person be denied relief in the courts of this state in law or equity except as such relief may be expressly limited by statute.

(g) (I) The general assembly hereby finds and determines that the matters contained in this article have important statewide ramifications for the labor force in this state. The general assembly, therefore, declares that the matters contained in this article are of statewide concern.

(II) No unit of local government, whether by acting through its governing body or an initiative, a referendum, or any other process, shall enact any jurisdiction-wide law or ordinance with respect to minimum wages unless specifically authorized to do so by this article; except that a unit of local government may set minimum wages paid to its own employees.

(II.5) Notwithstanding the provisions of subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (g), any local government regulation or law pertaining to minimum wages in effect as of January 1, 1999, shall remain in full force and effect until such law is repealed by the local government entity that enacted the law.

(III) If it is determined by the officer or agency responsible for distributing federal moneys to a local government that compliance with this paragraph (g) may cause denial of federal moneys that would otherwise be available or would otherwise be inconsistent with requirements of federal law, this section shall be suspended, but only to the extent necessary to prevent denial of the moneys or to eliminate the inconsistency with federal requirements.

ANNOTATION

Declarations of policy stated in labor legislation such as the labor peace act are persuasive in regard to the intended coverage of the act. St. Luke's Hosp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 142 Colo. 28, 349 P.2d 995 (1960).

The public policy established by the general assembly precludes courts from imposing a heightened standard of proof on persons seeking remedies against a labor union for allegedly tortious conduct. Vikman v. Int'l. Broth. of Elec. Workers, 889 P.2d 646 (Colo. 1995).

And the purpose of the labor peace act is to restrict the business judgment of both operators and employees in the promotion of the welfare of the industry and of the public. UMW v. Sunlight Coal Co., 129 Colo. 374, 270 P.2d 776 (1954).

Employer not required to conform to union rule opposed to policy of this section. A union does not have the right, based on an employer's contract to conform to any and all rules adopted by the union, to withdraw a shop card upon the employer's refusal to agree to a rule which is opposed to the public policy of the state of Colorado as declared by the general assembly in this section. Journeyman Barbers Local 205 v. Indus. Comm'n, 128 Colo. 121, 260 P.2d 941 (1953).

Such as violation of the principle of collective bargaining. To require the owner and operator of a business to become a limited or nonactive member of his employees' union is discriminatory and in violation of the cardinal principle of collective bargaining. Journeyman Barbers Local 205 v. Indus. Comm'n, 128 Colo. 121, 260 P.2d 941 (1953).

The isolated use of the term "industrial peace" in the declaration of public policy is not meant to limit the application of the labor peace act only to industry and trade, because the sentence involved goes on to itemize other conditions which the act is designed to promote, including the "uninterrupted production of goods and services". To ascertain the clear meaning of this phrase, it must be viewed in the disjunctive thereby indicating two separate conditions, to wit: uninterrupted production of goods and uninterrupted services. Indus. Comm'n v. Wallace Vill. for Children, 165 Colo. 10, 437 P.2d 62 (1968).

However, a charitable private hospital is not amenable to the collective bargaining provisions of the labor peace act. Indus. Comm'n v. Wallace Vill. for Children, 165 Colo. 10, 437 P.2d 62 (1968).

But a nonprofit school which works with handicapped children and hires teacher-therapists and counselors for this purpose, but does not provide surgical or medical services and does not employ or have in attendance doctors or nurses, is subject to the provisions of the labor peace act. Indus. Comm'n v. Wallace Vill. for Children, 165 Colo. 10, 437 P.2d 62 (1968).

8-3-103. Construction. Except as specifically provided in this article, nothing in this article shall be construed so as to interfere with or impede or diminish in any way the right to strike or the right of individuals to work, nor shall anything in this article be so construed as unlawfully to invade the right to freedom of speech. Nothing in this article shall be so construed or applied as to deprive any employee of any unemployment benefit which he might otherwise be entitled to receive under any other laws of the state of Colorado. The fact that any provisions of this article have been adopted from other states, or the language of the statutes of other states has been used in the preparation of this article shall not be taken to adopt as the construction of such provisions the decisions of other states construing such statutes of other states. It is not the intention of the legislature in adopting this article necessarily to adopt the construction that may have been placed upon similar provisions by the courts of other states.

ANNOTATION

The words "nor shall anything in this article be so construed as unlawfully to invade the right to freedom of speech", pertinent as they may be to the application of such regulatory provisions of the labor peace act as are not predicated upon the prerequisite of compulsory incorporation of a labor union, do not salvage those provisions which were enacted upon the assumption of the imposed corporate form on unions found to be unconstitutional. Am. Fed'n of Labor v. Reilly, 113 Colo. 90, 155 P.2d 145 (1944).

This section does not confer eligibility for unemployment compensation benefits upon a claimant who is otherwise ineligible. McClaffin v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 126 P.3d 288 (Colo. App. 2005).

8-3-104. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "All-union agreement" means a contractual provision between an employer or group of employers and a collective bargaining unit representing some or all of the employees of the employer or group of employers providing for any type of union security and compelling an employee's financial support or allegiance to a labor organization. "All-union agreement" includes, but is not limited to, contractual provision for a union shop, a modified union shop, an agency shop (meaning a contractual provision which provides for periodic payment of a sum in lieu of union dues but does not require union membership), a modified agency shop, a prehire agreement, maintenance of dues, or maintenance of membership.

(2) "Authority" means the state of Colorado; any board, commission, agency, or instrumentality thereof; or any district, municipality, city and county, county, or combination thereof, which acquires or operates a mass transportation system.

(3) "Collective bargaining" means negotiation by an employer and the representative of a majority of his employees who are in a collective bargaining unit or their representatives concerning representation or terms and conditions of employment of such employees in a mutually genuine effort to reach an agreement with reference to the subject under negotiation.

(4) "Collective bargaining unit" means an organization selected by secret ballot, as provided in section 8-3-107, by a majority vote of the employees of one employer employed within the state who vote at an election for the selection of such unit; except that, where a majority of such employees engaged in a single craft, division, department, or plant have voted by secret ballot that the employees of such single craft, division, department, or plant shall constitute their collective bargaining unit, it shall be so considered. Two or more collective bargaining units may bargain collectively through the same representative or where a majority of the employees in each separate unit have voted to do so by secret ballot, as provided in section 8-3-107.

(5) and (6) Repealed.

(7) "Company union" means an organization of employees, the members of which are the employees of only one employer.

(8) "Director" means the director of the division of labor.

(9) "Division" means the division of labor in the department of labor and employment.

(10) "Election" means a proceeding in which the employees authorized by this article cast a secret ballot to select a collective bargaining unit or for any other purpose specified in this article, including elections conducted by the division of labor or by any tribunal having competent jurisdiction or whose jurisdiction has been accepted by the parties.

(11) (a) "Employee" includes any person, other than an independent contractor, domestic servants employed in and about private homes, and farm and ranch labor, working for another for hire in the state of Colorado in a nonexecutive or nonsupervisory capacity, and shall not be limited to the employees of a particular employer and shall include any individual whose work has ceased solely as a consequence of or in connection with any current labor dispute or because of any unfair labor practice on the part of an employer; and

(b) Who has not refused or failed to return to work upon the final disposition of a labor dispute or a charge of an unfair labor practice by a tribunal having competent jurisdiction of the same or whose jurisdiction was accepted by the employee or his representative;

(c) Who has not been found to have committed or to have been a party to any unfair labor practice under this article;

(d) Who has not obtained regular and substantially equivalent employment elsewhere;

or

(e) Who has not been absent from his employment for a substantial period of time during which reasonable expectancy of settlement has ceased, except by an employer's unlawful refusal to bargain, and whose place has been filled by another engaged in the regular manner for an indefinite or protracted period and not merely for the duration of a strike or lockout; but shall not include any individual employed in the domestic service of a family or person at his home or any individual employed by his parent or spouse or any employee who is subject to the federal "Railway Labor Act".

(f) For purposes of this subsection (11), "farm" means stock, dairy, poultry, fur-bearing animal, and truck farms, plantations, ranches, nurseries, ranges, greenhouses, orchards, and other structures used for the raising of agricultural or horticultural commodities, provided such structures are utilized for at least fifty percent of the total output produced.

(12) "Employer" means a person who regularly engages the services of eight or more employees, other than persons within the classes expressly exempted under the terms of subsection (11) of this section, and includes any person acting on behalf of any such employer within the scope of his authority, express or implied. The term does not include the state or any political subdivision thereof, except where the state or any political subdivision thereof acquires or operates a mass transportation system, or any carrier by railroad, express company, or sleeping car company subject to the federal "Railway Labor Act", 45 U.S.C. sec. 151 et seq., or any labor organization or anyone acting in behalf of such organization other than when he is acting as an employer-in-fact.

(13) (a) "Labor dispute" means any controversy between an employer and such of his employees as are organized in a collective bargaining unit concerning the rights or process or details of collective bargaining. The entering into of a contract for an all-union agreement or the refusal of an employer to enter into an all-union agreement shall not constitute a labor dispute. It shall not be a labor dispute where the disputants do not stand in the proximate relation of employer and employee. No jurisdictional dispute or controversy between two or more unions as to which of them has or shall have jurisdiction over certain kinds of work; or as to which of two or more bargaining units constitutes the collective bargaining unit as to which the employer stands impartial or ready to negotiate or bargain with whichever is legally determined to be such bargaining unit, shall constitute a labor dispute.

(b) The general right of an employer to select his own employees is recognized and shall be fully protected. It shall not constitute a labor dispute if an employer discharges or refuses to employ an employee on account of incompetence, neglect of work, unsatisfactory service, or dishonesty; but the discharge of an employee or the refusal to employ an employee shall constitute a labor dispute only when such discharge or refusal to employ is founded upon membership in a union or labor organization or activity therein or when such discharge or failure to employ is in violation of a contract.

(c) No controversy between an employer and his employee shall constitute a labor dispute until after a bargaining unit in accordance with this article is created and a dispute arises between the bargaining unit and the employer.

(d) No labor dispute shall arise from the refusal of an employer to join a union or to cease work in his own business.

(14) "Local union" means an organization of employees employed in this state, the membership of which includes employees of one or more employers, whether or not they are affiliated with an organization of employees employed in one or more other states.

(15) "Mass transportation system" means any system which transports the general public by bus, rail, or any other means of conveyance moving along prescribed routes, except any railroad subject to the federal "Railway Labor Act", 45 U.S.C. sec. 151 et seq.

(16) "Person" includes one or more individuals, partnerships, associations, corporations, legal representatives, trustees, or receivers.

(17) "Representative" includes any person who is the duly authorized agent of a collective bargaining unit.

(18) "Secondary boycott" includes causing or threatening to cause, and combining or conspiring to cause or threaten to cause, injury to one not a party to the particular labor dispute, to aid which such boycott is initiated or continued, whether by:

(a) Withholding patronage, labor, or other beneficial business intercourse;

(b) Picketing;

(c) Refusing to handle, install, use, or work on particular materials, equipment, or supplies; or

(d) Any other unlawful means in order to bring him against his will into a concerted plan to coerce or inflict damage upon another or to compel the party with whom the labor dispute exists to comply with any particular demands.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "Labor Injunctions Under the Colorado Labor Peace Act", see 26 Dicta 63 (1949). For note, "Rural Poverty and the Law in Southern Colorado", see 47 Den. L.J. 82 (1970).

Applied in Ruff v. Kezer, 199 Colo. 182, 606 P.2d 441 (1980).

II. ALL-UNION AGREEMENT.

Regulation not limited to closed shop agreements. In view of the emphatic language contained in the legislative declaration of rights of employees in § 8-3-106, regulation of "all-union agreements" is not limited to closed shop agreements. Comm'n Workers of Am. v. W. Elec. Co., 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed. 2d 785, reh'g denied, 430 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 1341, 51 L. Ed. 2d 602 (1977).

Any financial obligation imposed upon employees pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement executed and sought to be enforced in Colorado has features of compulsory unionism and as such is to be considered an "all-union agreement" under subsection (1). Comm'n Workers of Am. v. W. Elec. Co., 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed. 2d 785, reh'g denied, 430 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 1341, 51 L. Ed. 2d 602 (1977).

Compulsory monetary support of a union is the "practical equivalent" of compulsory membership. Comm'n Workers of Am. v. W. Elec. Co., 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed. 2d 785, reh'g denied, 430 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 1341, 51 L. Ed. 2d 602 (1977).

Procedures for establishment are incident to state's power. The procedures for establishing a collective bargaining unit under this article are merely an incident of the state's power to prohibit the application of union security agreements under the permissive grant of authority contained in section 14(b) of the federal Taft-Hartley act. Comm'n Workers of Am. v. W. Elec. Co., 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed. 2d 785, reh'g denied, 430 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 1341, 51 L. Ed. 2d 602 (1977).

"Collective bargaining unit" for purposes of § 8-3-108 (1)(c). In Colorado a "collective bargaining unit", for purposes of the union security agreement provision of this article, may be something different than a collective bargaining unit for other purposes of labor-management relations. Comm'n Workers of Am. v. W. Elec. Co., 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed. 2d 785, reh'g denied, 430 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 1341, 51 L. Ed. 2d 602 (1977).

Such unit must be established pursuant to requirements of subsection (4). In the context of § 8-3-108 (1)(c), a collective bargaining unit is a unique entity which may only be established pursuant to the requirements of subsection (4). Comm'n Workers of Am. v. W. Elec. Co., 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed. 2d 785, reh'g denied, 430 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 1341, 51 L. Ed. 2d 602 (1977).

Condition precedent to right to enter into all-union agreement with employer. A collective bargaining unit, as defined by subsection (4), is a condition precedent to any labor organization's right to enter into an all-union agreement with an employer under Colorado law. Comm'n Workers of Am. v. W. Elec. Co., 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed. 2d 785, reh'g denied, 430 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 1341, 51 L. Ed. 2d 602 (1977).

Application of subsection (4) is severable. The application of subsection (4) to the union security provisions of this article is severable from its application in other contexts of the act.

Comm'n's Workers of Am. v. W. Elec. Co., 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed. 2d 785, reh'g denied, 430 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 1341, 51 L. Ed. 2d 602 (1977).

III. COLLECTIVE BARGAINING UNIT.

The words "craft, division, department or plant" of subsection (4) are drawn out of custom and usage of industrial and business organization. Dry Cleaners & Laundry Workers Local 304 v. Sunnyside Cleaners & Shirt Laundry, 146 Colo. 31, 360 P.2d 446 (1961).

And determinations of what constitutes a "craft, division, department or plant" is left to the discretion of the fact finder. Dry Cleaners & Laundry Workers Local 304 v. Sunnyside Cleaners & Shirt Laundry, 146 Colo. 31, 360 P.2d 446 (1961).

IV. EMPLOYEE AND EMPLOYER.

In defining the terms "employer", and "employee", this section does not exclude an employer such as a nonprofit school for handicapped children nor its employees from the labor peace act. Indus. Comm'n v. Wallace Vill. for Children, 165 Colo. 10, 437 P.2d 62 (1968).

Furthermore, none of the phraseology of this section premises an interpretation of exclusion of nonindustrial employers and employees. Indus. Comm'n v. Wallace Vill. for Children, 165 Colo. 10, 437 P.2d 62 (1968).

Public employees. There is no state legislation concerning the rights of public employees to engage in collective bargaining. This article, with an exception, excludes the state or any political subdivision thereof. Greeley Police Union v. City Council, 191 Colo. 419, 553 P.2d 790 (1976).

Coming within the statutory definition of an "employer" is a necessary basis for jurisdiction under the labor peace act. UMW v. Sunlight Coal Co., 129 Colo. 374, 270 P.2d 776 (1954).

For the labor peace act does not apply where an employer employs less than eight employees. Associated Master Barbers Local 115 v. Journeymen Barbers Local 205, 132 Colo. 52, 285 P.2d 599 (1955).

However, it is not necessary that eight employees should be employed during the entire year, but it is sufficient if such employment continues through a reasonably definite period of time and is not casual. UMW v. Sunlight Coal Co., 129 Colo. 374, 270 P.2d 776 (1954).

Since this section does not define an "employer" as one who has an average employment of eight or more employees through the preceding year or as one who has regularly engaged the services of eight or more employees for any specified period of time, as the term

"regularly engages" is not further defined in this section. UMW v. Sunlight Coal Co., 129 Colo. 374, 270 P.2d 776 (1954).

Rather, "regularly", as used in subsection (12), refers to the question whether the occurrence is or is not in an established mode or plan in the operation of the business and has no reference to the constancy of the occurrence. UMW v. Sunlight Coal Co., 129 Colo. 374, 270 P.2d 776 (1954).

As the word "regularly" is not synonymous with constantly or continuously; the work may be intermittent and yet regular, and men may be regularly but not continuously employed. UMW v. Sunlight Coal Co., 129 Colo. 374, 270 P.2d 776 (1954).

Labor Peace Act does not limit or constrain the law on metropolitan sewage disposal districts concerning the determination of prevailing rates of pay. Such a district is not required to negotiate or engage in collective bargaining in fixing employee compensation at prevailing rates for equivalent work. Local 1 v. Metro Wastewater Reclamation, 876 P.2d 82 (Colo. App. 1994).

V. LABOR DISPUTE.

The definition of a "labor dispute" in subsection (13) is not invalid on the ground that it is too narrow. Denver Milk Producers v. Int'l. Bhd. of Teamsters, 116 Colo. 389, 183 P.2d 529 (1947); Amalgamated Meat Cutters & Butcher Workmen v. Green, 119 Colo. 92, 200 P.2d 924 (1948).

One need not be in a "labor dispute" as defined by this section to have a right under the fourteenth amendment to express a grievance in a labor matter by publication unattended by violence, coercion, or conduct otherwise unlawful or oppressive. Pueblo Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Harper Constr. Co., 134 Colo. 469, 307 P.2d 468 (1957).

For the right of free speech does not depend in such a case on whether or not a "labor dispute" as defined in this section is involved. Pueblo Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Harper Constr. Co., 134 Colo. 469, 307 P.2d 468 (1957).

And forbidding resort to peaceful persuasion through picketing because there is no immediate employer-employee dispute is such a ban of free communications as to be inconsistent with the guarantee of freedom of speech. Pueblo Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Harper Constr. Co., 134 Colo. 469, 307 P.2d 468 (1957).

As union members have a right to picket a nonunion employer in the absence of a "labor dispute" as defined by subsection (13), because a state cannot exclude working men from peacefully exercising the right of free communication by drawing the circle of economic competition between employers and workers so small as to contain only an employer and those directly employed by him. the interdependence of economic interest of all engaged in the same industry has become a commonplace, and so the right of free communication cannot, therefore, be mutilated by denying it to workers, in a "dispute" with an employer, even though they are not in his employ. Pueblo Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Harper Constr. Co., 134 Colo. 469, 307 P.2d 468 (1957).

Moreover, a labor dispute as defined in this section may exist even though there is no controversy between an employer and his own employees. Pueblo Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Harper Constr. Co., 134 Colo. 469, 307 P.2d 468 (1957).

But a bona fide dispute must exist to allow picketing. Where the record shows the absence of any negotiations having taken place, or a dispute having occurred, or a statement of grievances having been submitted by the individuals striking and picketing to the individuals against whom the strike is called and against whom the pickets are picketing, it is against public interest to allow such picketing because a bona fide dispute has not been shown to exist. Int'l. Bhd. of Teamsters v. Publix Cab Co., 119 Colo. 208, 202 P.2d 154 (1949).

Subsection (13)(d), which cannot give rise to a legal labor dispute, cannot become the basis of a rupture of harmonious labor relations which admittedly existed prior to it. A labor union, or an employer cannot use such a provision as the basis for disturbing preexisting labor relations. To attempt any other construction would be to abandon all logic and reason, to ignore the plain meaning of words, and to discard all fundamental rules of statutory construction. Journeymen Barbers Local 205 v. Indus. Comm'n, 128 Colo. 121, 260 P.2d 941 (1953).

8-3-105. Director to administer - adopt rules and regulations. The director shall enforce and administer the provisions of this article and may adopt reasonable rules and regulations relative to its administration and to the conduct of all elections and hearings pertaining to mass transportation as defined in section 8-3-104 (15). Such rules and regulations shall not be effective until ten days after the date thereof.

Applied in People ex rel. Shaffer v. Teamsters Local 961, 175 Colo. 187, 486 P.2d 10 (1971).

VI. PERSON.

Definition of "person" does not exclude nonprofit school for handicapped children. Indus. Comm'n v. Wallace Vill. for Children, 165 Colo. 10, 437 P.2d 62 (1968).

VII. MASS TRANSPORTATION SYSTEM.

City-operated bus company is considered a "mass transportation system" operated by a political subdivision of the state for purposes of the "Labor Peace Act". Hoff v. Amal. Transit Un., Div. 662, 758 P.2d 674 (Colo. App. 1987).

Regional Transportation District is an "authority" within meaning of this section. Reg'l Transp. Dist. v. Dept. of Labor, 830 P.2d 942 (Colo. 1992).

ANNOTATION

I. Administration.

II. Rules and Regulations.

I. ADMINISTRATION.

Annotator's note. Cases included in the annotations to this section which refer to the industrial commission were decided prior to the 1969 amendment to this section which placed the duty of enforcing and administering the "Labor Peace Act" on the director of the division of labor instead of the industrial commission.

The labor peace act confers jurisdiction on the industrial commission only in cases where the number of employees is eight or more. Int'l. Bhd. of Teamsters v. Publix Cab Co., 119 Colo. 208, 202 P.2d 154 (1949).

The commission has jurisdiction to enforce the provisions of the labor peace act against a nonprofit school for handicapped children which does not provide medical services of any sort. Indus. Comm'n v. Wallace Vill. for Children, 165 Colo. 10, 437 P.2d 62 (1968).

II. RULES AND REGULATIONS.

Annotator's note. Cases included in the annotations to this section which refer to the industrial commission were decided prior to the enactment of 1986 Senate Bill No. 12 which abolished said commission and transferred rulemaking authority under this section to the director of the division of labor.

Rules and regulations adopted by the commission, unless expressly or impliedly authorized by statute, are without force or effect if they add to, change, or modify existing statutes. Graham Furn. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 138 Colo. 244, 331 P.2d 507 (1958).

For the commission's authority to regulate does not include the authority to legislate, but is strictly limited by the law under which it is pursued. Graham Furn. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 138 Colo. 244, 331 P.2d 507 (1958).

Hence, when a statute clearly provides a method for accomplishing a desired result, the commission cannot set up a regulation which is contrary thereto, as its regulations must fit within the framework of the statute itself. Graham Furn. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 138 Colo. 244, 331 P.2d 507 (1958).

Regulations protecting right to petition for election to ratify all-union agreement. The director of the division of labor does not have the authority to adopt rules protecting employees' right to petition for an election to ratify an all-union agreement; the authority to promulgate such regulations is with the industrial commission. Ruff v. Kezer, 199 Colo. 182, 606 P.2d 441 (1980).

8-3-106. Rights of employees. In accordance with the provisions of this article, employees have the right of self-organization and the right to form, join, or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own free choosing, and to engage in lawful, concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection. Each employee also has the right to refrain from any of such activities. The rights of each employee are essential rights, and nothing contained in this article shall be so construed as to infringe upon or have any operation against or in conflict with such rights.

Western Elec. Co.*, 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50

Metro Wastewater Reclamation*, 876 P.2d 82 (Colo. App. 1994).

Section held preempted by federal labor legislation since the labor management relations act contains a provision (29 U.S.C. § 157) which is the equivalent of this section. Bldg. Constr. Trades Council v. Am. Bldrs., Inc., 139 Colo. 236, 337 P.2d 953 (1959).

Regulation of all-union agreements not limited to closed shop agreements. In view of the emphatic language contained in the legislative declaration of rights of employees in this section, regulation of "all-union agreements" is not limited to closed shop agreements. Comm'n's Workers of Am. v. Western Elec. Co., 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed.2d 785, reh'g denied, 430 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 1341, 51 L. Ed.2d 602 (1977).

8-3-107. Representatives and elections. (1) A unit chosen for the purpose of collective bargaining shall be the exclusive representative of all of the employees in such unit, if the majority of the employees of one employer, or the majority of the employees of one employer in a craft, vote at an election. But employees individually have the right at any time to present grievances to their employer in person or through representatives of their own free choosing, and the employer shall confer with them in relation thereto.

(2) When a question arises concerning the selection of a collective bargaining unit, it shall be determined by secret ballot, and the director, upon request, shall cause the ballot to be taken in such manner as to show separately the wishes of the employees in any craft, division, department, or plant as to the selection of the collective bargaining unit.

(3) When a question arises concerning the selection of a collective bargaining unit, the director shall determine the question thereof by taking a secret ballot of employees and certifying in writing the results thereof to the bargaining units involved and to their employer. There shall be included on any ballot for the selection of a bargaining unit the names or suitable description of each bargaining unit submitted to the director and claimed to be the appropriate unit by an employee or group of employees participating in the election; except that the director, in his discretion, may exclude from the ballot any bargaining unit which, at the time of the election, stands deprived of its rights under this article by reason of a prior adjudication of its having engaged in an unfair labor practice. The ballot shall be so prepared as to permit a vote against representation by any unit named on the ballot. The director's certification of the results of any election shall be conclusive as to the findings included therein, unless reviewed in the manner provided by section 8-3-110 (8), for review of orders of the director.

(4) Questions concerning the selection of collective bargaining units may be raised by petition of any employee or his employer or the representative of either of them. Where it appears by the petition that any emergency exists requiring prompt action, the director shall act upon said petition forthwith and hold the election requested within such time as will meet the requirements of the emergency presented. The fact that one election has been held shall not prevent the holding of another election among the same group of employees, if it appears to the director that sufficient reason therefor exists.

(5) The director shall investigate and determine which persons shall be qualified and entitled to vote at any election held by him and shall prepare and certify a poll list of such qualified voters and shall file the same in the office of the director not later than twenty-four nor earlier than forty-eight hours preceding the time of such balloting. The list shall be available to the collective bargaining units whose interests are involved in the election. On request of any employee, the list shall be prepared so as to show separately which employees are entitled to vote for general representation of the employees and which employees are entitled to vote separately for craft representation or representation of any one of several plants of a common employer. No person whose name is not so certified shall be entitled to vote at such election. The director shall protect the secrecy of the ballot and shall take all proper measures for the accurate counting thereof and shall certify the result thereof and immediately file such certificate in the records of the division and make the same available for the inspection of any person interested. The bargaining units so elected and certified shall be the respective representatives of the employees so electing them and recognized as such under this article. The names of all persons voting at the election for the selection of a bargaining unit shall be certified to the division and filed in its records and shall constitute the voting roll for said bargaining unit for all purposes under this article. The name of any person leaving such employment shall be removed from the roll; except that any employee whose name appears on said voting roll may have his name withdrawn from said roll by notice in writing to the division.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Selection of Collective Bargaining Unit.
- III. Determination of Qualified Voters.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For notes, "Evolving Standards for Duty of Fair Representation Cases Under Section 301", see 62 Den. U. L. Rev 627 (1985). For comment, "Local No. 82 Furniture Movers v. Crowley: Title I Relief When Title IV Claims Are at Issue Under the LMRDA", see 62 Den. U. L. Rev. 675 (1985).

Annotator's note. Cases included in the annotations to this section which refer to the industrial commission were decided prior to the 1969 amendment to this section which placed the duty of enforcing and administering the "Labor Peace Act" on the director of the division of labor instead of the industrial commission.

II. SELECTION OF COLLECTIVE BARGAINING UNIT.

There is a strong policy in this section in favor of fractional representation of the employees of one employer. Dry Cleaners & Laundry Workers Local 304 v. Sunnyside Cleaners & Shirt Laundry, 146 Colo. 31, 360 P.2d 446 (1961).

And the determination of the proper group of employees to be represented in a collective bargaining unit is a matter for the industrial commission. Dry Cleaners & Laundry Workers Local 304 v. Sunnyside Cleaners & Shirt Laundry, 146 Colo. 31, 360 P.2d 446 (1961).

Moreover, absent a showing that such determination is unlawful, a court of review is not justified in voiding his ruling, as determinations of this nature have been left by this section to the informed discretion of the director empowered to administer the law. Dry Cleaners & Laundry Workers Local 304 v. Sunnyside Cleaners & Shirt Laundry, 146 Colo. 31, 360 P.2d 446 (1961).

This section does not specify any particular point in time when a request for a separate election among a certain craft, division, or department must be made. Dry Cleaners & Laun- dry Workers Local 304 v. Sunnyside Cleaners & Shirt Laundry, 146 Colo. 31, 360 P.2d 446 (1961).

III. DETERMINATION OF QUALIFIED VOTERS.

The procedure for certifying election lists by the industrial commission is specifically set forth in this section. Graham Furn. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 138 Colo. 244, 331 P.2d 507 (1958).

And this section is complete as to how one attains the status of an eligible voter. Graham Furn. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 138 Colo. 244, 331 P.2d 507 (1958).

Hence, a commission regulation providing for challenges at voting is of no effect. To hold that the clear words of this section can be circumvented by a regulation adopted by the industrial commission providing for challenges at the time of voting is to ignore their plain meaning and confer legislative powers on the commission, and such a regulation is without legal force or effect. Graham Furn. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 138 Colo. 244, 331 P.2d 507 (1958).

Nor are regulations of the NLRB. The rules and regulations of the national labor relations board relating to challenges at elections have no application in view of the precise wording of this section, which does not permit challenges at the time of voting. Graham Furn. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 138 Colo. 244, 331 P.2d 507 (1958).

This section, as thus construed, preserves the secrecy of the ballot to those who vote in an election. Graham Furn. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 138 Colo. 244, 331 P.2d 507 (1958).

However, the union, or those employees, who sought the election have the right to make challenges prior to final certification of the polling list, and it is at that time that any evidence which it is contended affects the eligibility of any person on the voting list must be presented. Graham Furn. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 138 Colo. 244, 331 P.2d 507 (1958).

But challenging change in polling list after its approval cannot be raised for first time on appeal. Dry Cleaners & Laundry Workers Local 304 v. Sunnyside Cleaners & Shirt Laundry, 146 Colo. 31, 360 P.2d 446 (1961).

8-3-108. What are unfair labor practices. (1) It is an unfair labor practice for an employer, individually or in concert with others, to:

(a) Interfere with, restrain, or coerce his employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in section 8-3-106;

(b) Initiate, create, dominate, or interfere with the formation or administration of any labor organization or contribute financial support to it; except that an employer shall not be prohibited from reimbursing employees at their prevailing wage rate for time spent conferring with him, nor from cooperating with representatives of at least a majority of his employees in a collective bargaining unit, at their request, by permitting employee organizational activities on employer premises or the use of employer facilities where such activities or use create no additional expense to the employer;

(c) (I) Encourage or discourage membership in any labor organization, employee agency, committee, association, or representation plan by discrimination in regard to hiring, tenure, or other terms or conditions of employment; except that an employer shall not be prohibited from entering into an all-union agreement with the representatives of his employees in a collective bargaining unit if such all-union agreement is approved by the affirmative vote of at least a majority of all the employees eligible to vote or three-quarters or more of the employees who actually voted, whichever is greater, by secret ballot in favor of such all-union agreement in an election provided for in this paragraph (c) conducted under the supervision of the director. Where the collective bargaining unit involved is currently recognized under sections 8 or 9 of the "National Labor Relations Act", as amended, (49 Stat. 449; 61 Stat. 136), or where the collective bargaining unit involved is currently recognized by reason of certification by the director or the national labor relations board, or where such units were so recognized at the time of an election provided for in this paragraph (c), there is and shall be deemed to have been no need for a certification election as a precedent to an election provided for in this paragraph (c) in such collective bargaining unit on the issue of an all-union agreement. The employees in such a recognized or certified unit within this state shall be the only employees eligible to vote in an election provided for in this paragraph (c) held in such unit.

(II) (A) Any agreement as defined in section 8-3-104 (1) between an employer and a labor organization in existence on June 29, 1977, which has not been voted upon by the employees covered by it may, by written mutual agreement of such employer and labor organization, be ratified and upon such ratification shall be filed with the director. Any agreement as defined in section 8-3-104 (1) between an employer and a labor organization in existence on June 29, 1977, which has not been ratified and filed, as provided in this subparagraph (II), shall not be legal, valid, or enforceable during the remaining term of that labor contract unless and until either the employer, the labor organization, or at least twenty percent of the employees covered by such agreement file a petition upon forms provided by the division, demanding an election submitting the question of the all-union agreement to the employees covered by such agreement and said agreement is approved by the affirmative vote of at least a majority of all the employees eligible to vote or three-quarters or more of the employees who actually voted, whichever is greater, by secret ballot in favor of such all-union agreement in an election provided for in this paragraph (c) conducted under the supervision of the director.

(B) Upon filing of such instrument of ratification with the director, the director shall certify that such agreement complies with the provisions of section 8-3-104 (1) notwithstanding the absence of any other election requirements of this article, and by virtue of such ratification and certification, such agreement shall be deemed legal, valid, and enforceable to the extent permitted under the provisions of this article, subject to the provisions of sub-subparagraph (D) of this subparagraph (II).

(C) Within two weeks after the certification by the director provided for in sub-subparagraph (B) of this subparagraph (II), the employer which is a party to such agreement shall post or give written notice to all employees covered by such agreement on the date of ratification of the fact that the agreement has been ratified and certified pursuant to the provisions of this subparagraph (II) and of the right of such employees to file a petition demanding an election as provided in sub-subparagraph (D) of this subparagraph (II). Proof of giving of notice shall be filed with the director within twenty days after the certification by the director provided for in sub-subparagraph (B) of this subparagraph (II).

(D) Within forty-five days after the certification by the director provided for in sub-subparagraph (B) of this subparagraph (II) twenty percent of the employees covered by such agreement may file a petition, upon forms provided by the division, demanding an election submitting the question of ratification of such agreement to the employees covered by such agreement. If ratification of the agreement is approved by the affirmative vote of at least a majority of all the employees eligible to vote or three-quarters or more of the employees who actually voted, whichever is greater, in said election, the agreement shall be conclusively deemed ratified. Such election shall be held as promptly as possible following the filing of the petition. In the event that a certified contract expires or is terminated prior to the conducting of such an election, such certification shall be applicable to any subsequent agreement between the same parties until such election may be held.

(III) The director shall declare any such all-union agreement terminated whenever:

(A) He finds that the labor organization involved unreasonably has refused to receive as a member any employee of such employer, and any person interested may come before the director, as provided in section 8-3-110, and ask the performance of this duty; or

(B) The employer or twenty percent of the employees covered by such agreement file a petition with the director on forms provided by the division seeking to revoke such all-union agreement and, in an election conducted under the supervision of the director, there is not an affirmative vote of at least a majority of all the employees eligible to vote or three-quarters or more of the employees who actually voted, whichever is greater, in such election by secret ballot in favor of such all-union agreement. Such petition may only be filed within a time period between one hundred twenty and one hundred five days prior to the end of the collective bargaining agreement or prior to a triennial anniversary of the date of such agreement, and the division must complete said election within sixty days prior to the termination or triennial anniversary of said collective bargaining agreement. The director may conduct an election within a collective bargaining unit no more often than once during the term of any collective bargaining agreement or once every three years in the case of agreements for a period longer than three years.

(IV) The director shall provide a means by which employees may submit confidential petitions for an election under this paragraph (c), a means for verifying the employment, status, and eligibility of petitioners, and a means for determining the sufficiency of such petitions with respect to the twenty percent signature requirement, all of which shall be accomplished without disclosing the identification of such petitioners, except as allowed under subparagraph (V) of this paragraph (c). This duty shall apply to petitions filed pursuant to subparagraph (II) (A), (II) (D), or (III) (B) of this paragraph (c).

(V) No officer or employee of the division shall disclose the names of any signers to a petition or disclose how any person voted in an election to any person outside the division except pursuant to a court order or subpoena issued by a governmental authority or a court, and any such officer or employee who violates such nondisclosure provisions or who refuses to call an election pursuant to this paragraph (c) or prevents or conspires to prevent such call of an election commits a class 2 misdemeanor and shall be punished as provided in section 18-1.3-501, C.R.S.

(d) Refuse to bargain collectively with the representatives of his employees in any collective bargaining unit; except that where an employer with reasonable cause files with the division a petition requesting a determination as to bargaining unit representation, he shall not be deemed to have refused to bargain until an election has been held and the result thereof has been certified to him by the director;

(e) Enter into an all-union agreement except in the manner provided in paragraph (c) of this subsection (1);

(f) Violate the terms of a collective bargaining agreement, including an agreement to accept an arbitration award;

(g) Refuse or fail to recognize or accept as conclusive of any issue in any controversy as to employment relations the final determination, after appeal, if any, of any tribunal having competent jurisdiction of the same or whose jurisdiction the employer has accepted;

(h) Discharge or otherwise discriminate against an employee because he has filed charges or given information or testimony in good faith under the provisions of this article;

(i) Deduct labor organization dues or assessments from an employee's earnings, unless the employer has been presented with an individual order therefor, signed by the employee personally and terminable at any time by the employee's giving at least thirty days' written notice of such termination;

(j) Employ any person to spy upon employees or their representatives respecting their exercise of any right created or approved by this article;

(k) Make, circulate, or cause to be circulated a blacklist as described in section 8-2-110;

(l) Commit any crime or misdemeanor in connection with any controversy as to employment relations;

(m) Require a potential employee to furnish preemployment application information regarding said applicant's record of civil or military disobedience, unless any such matters resulted in a plea of guilty or a conviction by a court of competent jurisdiction.

(2) It is an unfair labor practice for an employee, individually or in concert with others, to:

(a) Coerce or intimidate an employee in the enjoyment of his legal rights, including those guaranteed in section 8-3-106, or to intimidate his family or any member thereof, picket his domicile, or injure the person or property of such employee or his family or of any member thereof;

(b) Coerce, intimidate, or induce any employer to interfere with any of his employees in the enjoyment of their legal rights, including those guaranteed in section 8-3-106, or to engage in any practice with regard to his employees which would constitute an unfair labor practice if undertaken by him on his own initiative;

(c) Violate the terms of a collective bargaining agreement, including an agreement to accept an arbitration award;

(d) Refuse or fail to recognize or accept as conclusive of any issue in any controversy as to employment relations the final determination, after appeal, if any, of any tribunal having competent jurisdiction of the same or whose jurisdiction the employees or their representatives accepted;

(e) Cooperate in engaging in, promoting, or inducing picketing, boycotting, or any other overt concomitant of a strike unless a majority in a collective bargaining unit of the employees of an employer against whom such acts are primarily directed have voted by secret ballot to call a strike;

(f) Hinder or prevent, by mass picketing, threats, intimidation, force, or coercion of any kind, the pursuit of any lawful work or employment; or to obstruct or interfere with entrance to or egress from any place of employment; or to obstruct or interfere with free and uninterrupted use of public roads, streets, highways, railways, airports, or other ways of travel or conveyance;

(g) Engage in a secondary boycott, or to hinder or prevent, by threats, intimidation, force, coercion, or sabotage, the obtaining, use, or disposition of materials, equipment, or services, or to combine or conspire to hinder or prevent, by any means whatsoever, the obtaining, use, or disposition of materials, equipment, or services;

(h) Take, retain, or remain in unauthorized possession of property or any part thereof of the employer, or to engage in any concerted effort to interfere with production, except by leaving the premises in an orderly manner for the purpose of going on strike;

(i) Engage in a sit-down strike on the premises or property of the employer;

(j) Fail to give the notice of intention to strike provided in section 8-3-113;

(k) Commit any crime or misdemeanor in connection with any controversy as to employment relations;

(l) Demand or require any stand-in employee to be hired or employed by an employer, or to demand or require that the employer employ or pay for an employee to stand by or stand in for work being done by other employees, or to require the employer to employ or pay for any employee not required by the employer or necessary for the work of the employer;

(m) Do or cause to be done, on behalf of or in the interest of employers or employees, or in connection with or to influence the outcome of any controversy as to employment relations, any act prohibited by subsections (1) and (2) of this section.

(3) It is an unfair labor practice for an employee, individually or in concert with others, or for a labor organization or any of its agents to:

(a) Induce or encourage the employees of an employer to engage in a strike or concerted refusal in the course of their employment, or by any means to force or require an employer or any one or more employees to refrain from or prevent the use of any material, device, tool, or equipment intended or calculated to reduce the cost of the work;

(b) Require or force an employer to use any materials or do any work or render any service in connection with any task, job, work, or service as a condition of using any labor-saving device, equipment, tool, or instrument in the performance of such task, job, work, or service;

(c) Impose on any employee any fine, penalty, or forfeiture because such employee has used, is using, or has attempted to use a labor-saving device;

(d) (I) Engage in or induce or encourage employees of any employer to engage in a strike or concerted refusal in the course of their employment to use, manufacture, process, transport, or otherwise handle or work on any goods, articles, materials, or commodities or to perform any service where an object thereof is forcing or requiring any employer to assign particular work to employees in a particular trade, craft, or class rather than to employees in another labor organization or in another trade, craft, or class unless such employer is failing to conform to an order of the director or certification determining the bargaining representative for employees performing such work; but nothing contained in this subsection (3) shall be construed to make unlawful a refusal by any person to enter upon the premises of any employer (other than his own employer). Whenever a complaint is filed charging that any person or labor organization is engaged in the unfair labor practice defined in this paragraph (d), the director shall hear and determine the dispute concerning the assignment of work out of which such complaint arises, unless within ten days the parties to the dispute provide evidence to the director that the dispute is properly adjusted, in which case the complaint shall be dismissed by the director.

(II) Upon the filing of a complaint under this paragraph (d), the director shall make a preliminary investigation, and, if he finds that there is reasonable cause that the complaint is true, he may issue an order directing that the employees or labor organization cease and desist from striking, picketing, or refusing to handle or work on goods pending a resolution by the director of the dispute out of which the complaint arises.

(III) Upon the failure or refusal of any person or labor organization against whom such order is issued to comply with this order or direction, the district court of the district wherein the strike, picketing, or refusal to handle or work on goods takes place may, upon application of the director, issue injunctive relief in the manner provided in the Colorado rules of civil procedure for courts of record in Colorado.

(e) With regard to the entirety of this subsection (3), the following shall apply: Such material, device, tool, or equipment is germane to the employees' craft and not injurious to the employees' health and safety or the public generally, and nothing in this subsection (3) shall negate the rights of an employer and a labor organization to bargain collectively pursuant to subsection (1) (d) of this section.

(4) It is an unfair labor practice to do or cause to be done, on behalf of or in the interest of employers or employees, or in connection with or to influence the outcome of any controversy as to employment relations, any act prohibited by subsections (1), (2), and (3) of this section.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "The Extent to Which Taft-Hartley Act Has Superseded State Labor Laws", see 28 Dicta 47 (1951). For article; "The Regional Transportation District Strike and the Colorado Labor Peace Act: A Study in Public Sector Collective Bargaining", see 54 U. Colo. L. Rev. 203 (1983).

This section lists a number of things denominated "unfair labor practices". Pueblo Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Harper Constr. Co., 134 Colo. 469, 307 P.2d 468 (1957).

These may arise because of conduct on the part of management as well as on the part of employees of a particular employer, or on the part of third parties. Pueblo Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Harper Constr. Co., 134 Colo. 469, 307 P.2d 468 (1957); Bldg. Constr. Trades Council v. Am. Bldrs., Inc., 139 Colo. 236, 337 P.2d 953 (1959).

The labor management relations act (29 U.S.C. § 158) has as its facsimile parts of this section. Bldg. Constr. Trades Council v. Am. Bldrs., Inc., 139 Colo. 236, 337 P.2d 953 (1959).

Private right of action against criminal labor statute violator. The general assembly's broad definition of unfair labor practices indicates an intent to create a private right of action to anyone who can prove by a preponderance of the evidence that a defendant has violated a criminal labor statute. Rawson v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 530 F. Supp. 776 (D. Colo. 1982); Bennett v. Furr's Cafeterias, Inc., 549 F. Supp. 887 (D. Colo. 1982).

Not exception to rule of employment at will. Statutory pronouncement which makes it unlawful "to coerce or intimidate an employee in the enjoyment of his legal rights" is a broad, general statement of policy which is inadequate to justify adoption of an exception to the rule that an indefinite general hiring is terminable at will by either party to the employment. Corbin v. Sinclair Marketing, Inc., 684 P.2d 265 (Colo. App. 1984).

II. UNFAIR LABOR PRACTICES FOR EMPLOYERS.

- A. Interference with Right of Self-organization.

Law reviews. For comment on Bennett's Restaurant v. Indus. Comm'n appearing below, see 30 Dicta 307 (1953).

Subsections (1)(a) and (1)(c) do not interfere with the normal exercise of the right of the employer to select its employees or to discharge them. Bennett's Restaurant v. Indus. Comm'n, 127 Colo. 271, 256 P.2d 891 (1953).

But an employer may not, under cover of this right, intimidate or coerce its employees with respect to their self-organization and representation. Bennett's Restaurant v. Indus. Comm'n, 127 Colo. 271, 256 P.2d 891 (1953).

And on the other hand, the labor board is not entitled to make its authority a pretext for interfering with the right of discharge when that right is exercised for other reasons than such intimidation and coercion. Bennett's Restaurant v. Indus. Comm'n, 127 Colo. 271, 256 P.2d 891 (1953).

Evidence held to show that employees were wrongfully discharged for organizational activities. UMW v. Sunlight Coal Co., 129 Colo. 374, 270 P.2d 776 (1954).

- B. Contribute Financial Support.

An employer cannot be compelled to join a union if contributions in the form of dues and initiation fees are required, since the financial support of unions consists chiefly, if not wholly, of the dues paid by its members, and if dues paid by members would constitute financial support for a union, there is no reason why dues paid by employers would not also constitute financial support of a union. Journeymen Barbers Local 205 v. Indus. Comm'n, 128 Colo. 121, 260 P.2d 941 (1953).

However, the term "financial support" is much broader than the mere payment of dues and covers and includes financial support of any kind, character, or description, whether large or small in amount. Journeymen Barbers Local 205 v. Indus. Comm'n, 128 Colo. 121, 260 P.2d 941 (1953).

- C. All-union Agreements.

Colorado does not have a right-to-work law. Bldg. Constr. Trades Council v. Am. Bldrs., Inc., 139 Colo. 236, 337 P.2d 953 (1959).

So an agreement requiring membership in a labor organization as a condition of employment is under certain circumstances permitted by this section. Bldg. Constr. Trades Council v. Am. Bldrs., Inc., 139 Colo. 236, 337 P.2d 953 (1959).

The regulation of union security provisions is not a matter of exclusive federal concern, but states are free to pursue their own more restrictive policies. Commc'ns Workers of Am. v. Western Elec. Co., 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed.2d 785, reh'g denied, 430 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 1341, 51 L. Ed.2d 602 (1977).

The provisions of this section are an important incident of the state's power to prohibit the application of certain union security provisions, which power has not been supplanted by federal law. Comm'ns Workers of Am. v. Western Elec. Co., 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed.2d 785, reh'g denied, 430 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 1341, 51 L. Ed.2d 602 (1977).

The procedures for establishing a collective bargaining unit under this article are merely an incident of the state's power to prohibit the application of union security agreements under the permissive grant of authority contained in section 14(b) of the federal Taft-Hartley act. Comm'ns Workers of Am. v. Western Elec. Co., 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed.2d 785, reh'g denied, 430 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 1341, 51 L. Ed.2d 602 (1977).

Subsection (1)(c) is a manifestation of the legislative intent to protect the working man's right to freely chart his own course with regard to labor organization activities in that it severely restricts the circumstances in which an employee may be subjected to "all-union agreements". Comm'ns Workers of Am. v. Western Elec. Co., 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed.2d 785, reh'g denied, 430 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 1341, 51 L. Ed.2d 602 (1977).

Application of section. This section applies to union security clauses in collective bargaining agreements negotiated and executed by multi-state employers engaged in interstate commerce and doing business in Colorado. Comm'ns Workers of Am. v. Western Elec. Co., 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed.2d 785, reh'g denied, 430 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 1341, 51 L. Ed.2d 602 (1977).

Regulation of all-union agreements not limited to closed shop agreements. In view of the emphatic language contained in the legislative declaration of rights of employees in § 8-3-106, regulation of "all-union agreements" is not limited to closed shop agreements. Comm'ns Workers of Am. v. Western Elec. Co., 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed.2d 785, reh'g denied, 430 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 1341, 51 L. Ed.2d 602 (1977).

What is considered "all-union agreement". Any financial obligation imposed upon employees pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement executed and sought to be enforced in Colorado has features of compulsory unionism and as such is to be considered an "all-union agreement" under § 8-3-104 (1). Comm'ns Workers of Am. v. Western Elec. Co., 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed.2d 785, reh'g denied, 430 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 1341, 51 L. Ed.2d 602 (1977).

Compulsory monetary support of a union is the "practical equivalent" of compulsory membership. Comm'ns Workers of Am. v. Western Elec. Co., 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed.2d 785, reh'g denied, 430 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 1341, 51 L. Ed.2d 602 (1977).

The application of § 8-3-104 (4) to the union security provisions of this article is severable from its application in other contexts of the act. Comm'ns Workers of Am. v. Western Elec. Co., 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed.2d 785, reh'g denied, 430 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 1341, 51 L. Ed.2d 602 (1977).

"Collective bargaining unit" for purposes of subsection (1)(c). In Colorado a "collective bargaining unit", for purposes of the union security agreement provision of this article, may be something different than a collective bargaining unit for other purposes of labor-management relations. Comm'ns Workers of Am. v. Western Elec. Co., 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed.2d 785, reh'g denied, 430 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 1341, 51 L. Ed.2d 602 (1977).

Such unit is condition precedent to right to enter into all-union agreement. A collective bargaining unit, as defined by § 8-3-104 (4), is a condition precedent to any labor organization's right to enter into an all-union agreement with an employer under Colorado law. Comm'ns Workers of Am. v. Western Elec. Co., 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed.2d 785, reh'g denied, 430 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 1341, 51 L. Ed.2d 602 (1977).

And must be established pursuant to § 8-3-104 (4). In the context of subsection (1)(c), a collective bargaining unit is a unique entity which may only be established pursuant to the requirements of § 8-3-104 (4). Comm'ns Workers of Am. v. Western Elec. Co., 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed.2d 785, reh'g denied, 430 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 1341, 51 L. Ed.2d 602 (1977).

Collective bargaining unit recognized only by secret ballot election. A secret ballot election, as described by § 8-3-104 (4), is the exclusive method by which a collective bargaining unit subject to the "all-union" referendum [now election] provisions of subsection (1)(c) may be recognized. Comm'ns Workers of Am. v. Western Elec. Co., 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed.2d 785, reh'g denied, 430 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 1341, 51 L. Ed.2d 602 (1977).

Where election to be conducted. Subsection (1)(c) plainly directs that the referendum [now election] should be conducted among the employees of a collective bargaining unit. Comm'ns Workers of Am. v. Western Elec.

Co., 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed.2d 785, reh'g denied, 430 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 1341, 51 L. Ed.2d 602 (1977).

Regulations protecting right to petition for ratification election. The director of the division of labor does not have the authority to adopt rules protecting employees' right to petition for a ratification election under subsection (1)(c)(II)(D); the authority to promulgate such regulations is with the industrial commission. Ruff v. Kezer, 199 Colo. 182, 606 P.2d 441 (1980).

Required employer conduct in all-union agreement election. While subsection (1)(c) specifies notice to the employees, a period of time for circulating petitions requiring an election, and the number of signatures which must be obtained before an election concerning ratification of an all-union agreement will be required, it does not require any course of action by the employer, let alone such specific conduct as the provision of bulletin board space or access to lists of employees. Ruff v. Kezer, 199 Colo. 182, 606 P.2d 441 (1980).

Withholding of access to employee lists. Where access to company bulletin boards is subject to federal determination because of a collective bargaining agreement and access to lists of employees is restricted by National Labor Relations Board procedures, an employer's withholding of such access from petitioners for a ratification election is not an unfair labor practice under this section. Ruff v. Kezer, 199 Colo. 182, 606 P.2d 441 (1980).

Clauses of collective bargaining agreements were invalid where they were not approved through an all-union referendum [now election] by an appropriately designated employee group. Comm'n Workers of Am. v. Western Elec. Co., 191 Colo. 128, 551 P.2d 1065 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1067, 97 S. Ct. 799, 50 L. Ed.2d 785, reh'g denied, 430 U.S. 923, 97 S. Ct. 1341, 51 L. Ed.2d 602 (1977).

III. UNFAIR LABOR PRACTICES FOR EMPLOYEES.

A. In General.

Provisions restricting mass picketing are contained in subsection (2). City of Golden v. Ford, 141 Colo. 472, 348 P.2d 951 (1960).

B. Intimidation of Employees.

Harassment incidents insufficient basis to enjoin agreement. Three relatively isolated incidents of harassment during the first 10 days of petitioning activity, none of which was shown to have had a widespread impact on the willingness of employees to sign the petitions, and none of which was physically violent, are not sufficient basis for enjoining operation of an all-union agreement after failure to obtain sufficient petition signatures for a separate ratification election. Ruff v. Kezer, 199 Colo. 182, 606 P.2d 441 (1980).

Subsection (2)(a) of this section, when read together with §§ 8-3-118(1) and 8-3-110(1), allows the trial court to enjoin the union and its members from engaging in an unfair labor practice. CF&I Steel, L.P. v. United Steel Workers of Am., 990 P.2d 1124 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd, 23 P.3d 1197 (Colo. 2001).

C. Picketing.

Law reviews. For article, "Mass Picketing and the Constitutional Guarantee of Freedom of Speech", see 22 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 28 (1949). For article, "A Review of the 1959 Constitutional and Administrative Law Decisions", see 37 Dicta 81 (1960).

Picketing may be lawful or unlawful depending upon the purpose of the picketing and the manner in which it is conducted. UMW v. Golden Cycle Corp., 134 Colo. 140, 300 P.2d 799 (1956).

And subsection (2)(e) declaring that to cooperate in, engaging in, or inducing picketing is an unfair labor practice must be construed in harmony with §§ 8-3-103 and 8-3-109 (2) as to the right of free speech, if possible; and so construed, the work "picketing" as employed in the labor peace act must be held as intended in its coercive and not in its persuasive, sense. Otherwise the limitation on picketing constitutes a limitation on the right to express views concerning labor relationships and invades the right to freedom of speech, contrary to the explicit provisions of these sections. Denver Milk Producers v. Int'l. Bhd. of Teamsters, 116 Colo. 389, 183 P.2d 529 (1947).

Hence, it is not an unfair labor practice for members of a labor union to peacefully picket an employer of nonunion labor even though there is no immediate employer-employee dispute, inasmuch as § 8-3-109 (2) preserves the right of free speech concerning "any labor relationship" and one need not be in a "labor dispute" as defined by § 8-3-104 (13)(a) to have a right under the fourteenth amendment to express a grievance in a labor matter by publication unattended by violence, coercion, or conduct otherwise unlawful or oppressive. Pueblo Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Harper Constr. Co., 134 Colo. 469, 307 P.2d 468 (1957).

Injunction against peaceful residential picketing held unconstitutional under federal first amendment and equal protection guarantees. CF&I Steel, L.P. v. United Steel Workers of Am., 990 P.2d 1124 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd on other grounds, 23 P.3d 1197 (Colo. 2001).

But picketing that is not peaceful may be enjoined as a valid exercise of the state's police power. CF&I Steel, L.P. v. United Steel Workers of Am., 23 P.3d 1197 (Colo. 2001).

Blanket prohibition against residential picketing in subsection (2)(a) is unconstitutional under federal first amendment and equal protection guarantees. CF&I Steel, L.P. v. United Steel Workers of Am., 23 P.3d 1197 (Colo. 2001).

"Peaceable picketing" means simply, tranquil conduct, conduct devoid of noise or tumult, the absence of a quarrelsome demeanor, a course of conduct that does not violate or disturb the public peace. UMW v. Golden Cycle Corp., 134 Colo. 140, 300 P.2d 799 (1956).

One cannot be convicted of violating a municipal ordinance regulating picketing, inasmuch as the general assembly has enacted comprehensive legislation regulating picketing in situations where labor disputes are involved and this legislation completely covers the field. City of Golden v. Ford, 141 Colo. 472, 348 P.2d 951 (1960).

D. Hindering Place of Employment by Mass Picketing, etc.

Subsection (2)(f) makes an unfair labor practice of mass picketing, threats, intimidation, force, or coercion to hinder or prevent any lawful work or employment. Pueblo Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Harper Constr. Co., 134 Colo. 469, 307 P.2d 468 (1957).

"Illegal picketing" as by "mass picketing", defined. Boisterous conduct, the use of vile language, bellicose demeanor, threats, violence, coercion, intimidation, shouting and interference with the use of premises or impeding a public highway, as by mass picketing, which is the use of a large number of pickets, is not peaceable picketing, but is illegal picketing. UMW v. Golden Cycle Corp., 134 Colo. 140, 300 P.2d 799 (1956).

8-3-109. What are not unfair labor practices. (1) It is not an unfair labor practice for any employer to refuse to grant a closed shop or all-union agreement or to accede to any proposal therefor as provided in this article.

(2) The right of both employer and employee freely to express, declare, and publish their respective views and proposals concerning any labor relationship shall not be abrogated or limited by this article, nor shall the exercise of such right constitute an unfair labor practice. No strike shall be lawful unless it is authorized by a majority vote of the employees in the union involved taken by secret ballot such as is provided in this article.

(3) It shall not be an unfair labor practice for an employer engaged primarily in the building and construction industry to enter into an all-union agreement, except an agreement providing for an agency shop or modified agency shop, with a labor organization, which agreement is limited in its coverage to employees who, upon their employment, will be engaged in the building and construction industry, if a copy of such agreement is filed with the director and certified by him as provided in section 8-3-108 (1) (c) (II) (B). Such agreement may be ratified as provided in section 8-3-108 (1) (c) (II) (C) or terminated by the director as provided in section 8-3-108 (1) (c) (III).

Source: L. 43: p. 403, § 7. CSA: C. 97, § 94(7). CRS 53: § 80-5-7. C.R.S. 1963: § 80-4-7. L. 77: (3) added, p. 422, § 3, effective June 29.

ANNOTATION

Subsection (2) of this section excludes from the category of "unfair labor practice" the right of both employer and employee freely to express, declare, and publish their respective views and proposals concerning any labor relationship. Pueblo Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Harper Constr. Co., 134 Colo. 469, 307 P.2d 468 (1957).

Subsection (2) is a recognition of the constitutional right of every citizen. Pueblo Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Harper Constr. Co., 134 Colo. 469, 307 P.2d 468 (1957).

Peaceful picketing is a form of free speech and as such protected by constitutional guaranty, for to hold otherwise would be to fix a limitation on the right to express views concerning a labor relationship, and invade the right of freedom of speech contrary to the explicit provisions of this section. People v. Harris, 104 Colo. 386, 91 P.2d 989 (1939); Local 13, Teamsters v. Perry Truck Lines, Inc., 106 Colo. 25, 101 P.2d 436 (1940); Pueblo Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Harper Constr. Co., 134 Colo. 469, 307 P.2d 468 (1957).

Moreover, this right of free communication cannot be mutilated by denying it to workers in a "dispute" with an employer even though they are not in his employ, inasmuch as a state cannot exclude working men from peacefully exercising the right of free communication by drawing the circle of economic competition between employers and workers so small as to contain only an employer and those directly employed by him, for the interdependence of economic interest of all engaged in the same industry has become a commonplace. Pueblo Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Harper Constr. Co., 134 Colo. 469, 307 P.2d 468 (1957).

Therefore, this section does not prohibit picketing by a labor union of an employer of nonunion labor even though there is no immediate employer-employee dispute, as such a ban of free communication is inconsistent with the guarantee of freedom of speech. Pueblo Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Harper Constr. Co., 134 Colo. 469, 307 P.2d 468 (1957).

However, picketing must be "peaceful", and "peaceful picketing" means simply, tranquil conduct, conduct devoid of noise or tumult, the absence of a quarrelsome demeanor, a course of conduct that does not violate or disturb the public peace. As a necessary corollary, boisterous conduct, the use of vile language, bellicose demeanor, threats, violence, coercion, intimidation, shouting and interference with the use of premises or impeding a public highway, as by mass picketing, which is the use of a large number of pickets, is not peaceable picketing, but is illegal picketing. UMW v. Golden Cycle Corp., 134 Colo. 140, 300 P.2d 799 (1956).

8-3-110. Prevention of unfair labor practices. (1) Any controversy concerning unfair labor practices may be submitted to the division in the manner and with the effect provided in this article; but nothing in this article shall prevent the pursuit of equitable or legal relief in courts of competent jurisdiction, nor shall it be any ground for refusal of such relief that all of the administrative remedies provided in this article before the division have not been exhausted.

(2) Upon the filing with the division by any party in interest of a complaint in writing on a form provided by the division charging any person with having engaged in any specific unfair labor practice, the division shall mail a copy of such complaint to all persons so charged. Any other person claiming interest in the dispute or controversy, as an employer, an employee, or representative thereof, shall be made a party upon application. The director may bring in additional parties by service of a copy of the complaint. Only one such complaint shall issue against a person with respect to a single controversy, but any such complaint may be amended in the discretion of the director at any time prior to the issuance of a final order based thereon. The persons so complained of have the right to file an answer to the original or amended complaint and to appear in person or otherwise and give testimony at the place and time fixed in the notice of hearing. The director shall fix a time for the hearing on such complaint, which shall not be less than ten nor more than forty days after the filing of such complaint. Notice shall be given to the complainant and to each party named in the pleadings by service on him personally or by mailing a copy thereof to him at his last known post office address at least ten days before such hearing. In case a party in interest is located without the state and has no known post office address within this state, a copy of the complaint and copies of all notices shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state and shall also be sent by registered mail to the last known post office address of such party. Such filing and mailing shall constitute sufficient service with the same force and effect as if served upon the party located within this state. Such hearing may be adjourned from time to time in the discretion of the director and hearings may be held at such places as the director designates. The director may initiate and file any such complaint of his own motion or at the request of any interested person. Should the director file such a complaint on request, he shall not disclose the name or interest of the person upon whose request the complaint is filed, if in his judgment such disclosure would tend to prejudice the interest of any person who may be affected by any order that the director may enter upon such complaint.

(3) The director has the power to issue subpoenas and administer oaths. Depositions may be taken in the manner prescribed by the Colorado rules of civil procedure, and all such depositions shall be taken upon commissions issued by the director. No person shall be excused from attending and testifying or from producing books, records, correspondence, documents, or other evidence in obedience to the subpoena of the director on the ground that the testimony or evidence required of him may tend to incriminate him or subject him to a penalty or forfeiture under the laws of the state of Colorado. No individual shall be prosecuted or subjected to any penalty or forfeiture for any transaction, matter, or thing concerning which he may testify or produce evidence, documentary or otherwise, before the director in obedience to a subpoena issued by him. An individual so testifying shall not be exempt from prosecution and punishment for perjury in the first degree committed in so testifying.

(4) Any person who willfully and unlawfully fails or neglects to appear or testify or to produce books, papers, and records as required, upon application to a district court, shall be ordered to appear before the director to testify or produce evidence if so ordered, and failure to obey such order of the court may be punished by the court as a contempt thereof.

(5) Each witness who appears before the director by his order or subpoena shall receive for his attendance the fees and mileage provided for witnesses in civil cases in courts of record, which shall be audited and paid by the state in the same manner as other expenses are audited and paid, upon presentation of properly verified vouchers approved by the director and charged to the proper appropriation for the division.

(6) A complete record shall be kept of all proceedings had before the director, and all testimony and proceedings shall be taken down by the reporter appointed by the director. Such proceedings shall not be governed by the technical rules of evidence, but by such rules as are prescribed by the director for administrative hearings.

(7) After the final hearing the director shall promptly make and file his findings of fact upon all of the issues involved in the controversy and his order which shall state his determination as to the rights of the parties. Pending the final determination of any controversy before him, the director, after hearing, may make interlocutory findings and orders, which may be enforced in the same manner as final orders. Final orders may dismiss the charges or require the person complained of to cease and desist from the unfair labor practices found to have been committed; suspend his rights, immunities, privileges, or remedies granted or afforded by this article as the director may specify, but not more than one year; and require an employer to take such affirmative action, including reinstatement of employees with or without pay, as the director may deem proper. Any order may further require such person to make reports from time to time showing the extent to which he has complied with the order.

(8) The director may authorize a deputy, referee, or administrative law judge appointed pursuant to part 10 of article 30 of title 24, C.R.S., to take evidence and to make findings and report them to the director. Any party in interest who is dissatisfied with the findings or order of the director may seek judicial review pursuant to section 24-4-106, C.R.S.

(9) The director, on his own motion, may set aside, modify, or change any of his findings or orders at any time within twenty days from the date thereof if he discovers any mistake therein or upon the ground of newly discovered evidence.

(10) If any party fails or neglects to obey an order of the director while the same is in effect, the director may file a complaint in the district court of the county wherein such person resides or usually transacts business for the enforcement of such order for appropriate temporary relief or restraining order, and shall certify and file in the court the record in the proceedings, including all documents and papers on file in the matter, and pleadings and testimony upon which such order was entered, and the findings and order of the director. Upon the filing the director shall cause notice thereof to be served upon such party by mailing a copy to his last known post office address, and thereupon the court has jurisdiction of the proceedings and of the question determined therein. Said action may thereupon be brought on for hearing upon such order by the director serving ten days' written notice upon the respondent, subject, however, to the Colorado rules of civil procedure for a change of the place of trial or the calling in of another judge. Upon such hearing the court may confirm, modify, or set aside the order of the director and enter an appropriate decree. No objection that was not urged before the director shall be considered by the court unless the failure or neglect to urge such objection is excused because of extraordinary circumstances. The findings of fact made by the director, if supported by credible and competent evidence in the record, shall be conclusive. The court in its discretion may grant leave to adduce additional evidence before the court where such evidence appears to be material and reasonable cause is shown for failure to have adduced such evidence in the hearing before the director. The director may modify his findings as to facts, or make new findings by reason of such additional evidence, and he shall file such modified or new findings with the same effect as his original findings and shall file his recommendations, if any, for the modification or setting aside of his original order. The court's judgment and decree shall be final; except that the same shall be subject to appellate review as provided by law.

(11) to (14) Repealed.

(15) Substantial compliance with the procedures of this article is sufficient to give effect to the orders of the director, and they shall not be declared inoperative, illegal, or void for any omission of a technical nature in respect thereto.

(16) The right of any person to proceed under this section and section 8-3-121 shall not extend beyond six months from the date of the specific act or unfair labor practice alleged.

(17) The director also has the power by himself and on his own motion to initiate proceedings in the manner provided in this section. It is likewise the duty of the director to so initiate a proceeding in his own name whenever complaint is made to him by any party in interest if it appears to the director that the disclosure of the name of the complainant, either as an employee or group of employees or as an employer or agent or representative of the employer, would jeopardize the rights or interests or standing of any party in interest. The proceedings so initiated by the director shall be conducted in the same manner and have the same effect as provided for in this section.

(18) (a) The director has the power and it is his duty in carrying out the public policy of the state, either upon his own initiative or upon the complaint of any party in interest or any organization or persons representing any public interests, if there is picketing which in the opinion of the director might tend to lead to riots, disturbances, or assaults or disturb public peace or injure the property or persons of individuals, to limit the number of pickets that may be permitted; and to prescribe the distance from any plant, entrance, or exit where such picketing may be permitted; and to otherwise prescribe limits to such picketing, including not only the number of persons picketing but also the manner or method thereof; and to prevent the use of weapons of any kind or threats or intimidation.

(b) Upon the failure or refusal of any person against whom any such order or direction is issued to comply with such order or direction, the district court of the district wherein the picketing takes place or the violation occurs, upon application of the director, may issue injunctive relief in the manner provided in the Colorado rules of civil procedure for courts of record in Colorado.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Annotator's note. Cases included in the annotations to this section which refer to the industrial commission were decided prior to the 1969 amendment to this section which placed the duty of enforcing and administering the labor peace act on the director of the division of labor instead of the industrial commission.

Municipalities do not have the power to adopt ordinances regulating activities con- nected with labor disputes. City of Golden v. Ford, 141 Colo. 472, 348 P.2d 951 (1960).

This act does not contain a comprehensive administrative scheme that precludes assertion of claim for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy; accordingly, the filing of a claim under this act does not preclude litigation of other causes of action arising out of the same circumstances. Ferris v. Local 26, 867 P.2d 38 (Colo. App. 1993).

II. FEDERAL PREEMPTION.

Law reviews. For article, "The Extent to Which Taft-Hartley Act Has Superseded State Labor Laws", see 28 Dicta 47 (1951). For article, "Federal Preemption Under the NLRA: A Rule In Search of A Reason", see 62 Den. U. L. Rev. 531 (1985).

Federal authority is solitary and exclusive in situations where both state and federal laws forbid certain labor conduct and provide machinery for enforcement. Bldg. Constr. Trades Council v. Am. Bldrs., Inc., 139 Colo. 236, 337 P.2d 953 (1959).

Thus the state cannot supply a congruous yet rival remedy to that furnished by the federal act. Bldg. Constr. Trades Council v. Am. Bldrs., Inc., 139 Colo. 236, 337 P.2d 953 (1959).

And there can be no concurrency of remedy, because the federal remedy, when applicable, is preemptive and solitary. Bldg. Constr. Trades Council v. Am. Bldrs., Inc., 139 Colo. 236, 337 P.2d 953 (1959).

The labor management relations act in essence establishes exclusion of state power in matters involving an unfair labor practice affecting commerce. Bldg. Constr. Trades Council v. Am. Bldrs., Inc., 139 Colo. 236, 337 P.2d 953 (1959).

And exclusive primary jurisdiction to pass on a union's picketing is delegated by the Taft-Hartley Act to the national labor relations board. Bldg. Constr. Trades Council v. Am. Bldrs., Inc., 139 Colo. 236, 337 P.2d 953 (1959).

Notwithstanding, power is vested in the national labor relations board to "cede" jurisdiction to a state agency of a case having to do with a labor dispute affecting commerce if the state has a statute applicable to the problem not inconsistent with the federal act. Bldg. Constr. Trades Council v. Am. Bldrs., Inc., 139 Colo. 236, 337 P.2d 953 (1959).

But until cession is made, the state is without such power. Bldg. Constr. Trades Council v. Am. Bldrs., Inc., 139 Colo. 236, 337 P.2d 953 (1959).

But there remains in the state power to regulate picketing. Although much of the area of control and regulation of labor disputes has been preempted by federal legislation, there remains in the states, within the confines of constitutional limitations, certain power to regulate picketing and to protect public safety in so doing. City of Golden v. Ford, 141 Colo. 472, 348 P.2d 951 (1960).

For Taft-Hartley Act is not exclusive in controlling violence. With the passage of the Taft-Hartley Act in 1947, Congress recognized that labor unions also might commit unfair labor practices to the detriment of employees, and prohibited, among other practices, coercion of employees who wish to refrain from striking; but this amendment did not eliminate a state's power to control picketing activities through state labor statutes, as section 8 (b)(1) of the Taft-Hartley Act is not the exclusive method of controlling violence even against employees, much less violence interfering with others approaching an area where a strike is in progress. UMW v. Golden Cycle Corp., 134 Colo. 140, 300 P.2d 799 (1956).

Nor should the fact that a union commits a federal unfair labor practice while engaging in violent conduct prevent state from taking steps to stop the violence; for the states are the natural guardians of the public against violence, and it is the local communities that suffer most from the fear and loss occasioned by coercion and destruction. Hence, an act of congress cannot be interpreted to leave them powerless to avert such emergencies without compelling directions to that effect. UMW v. Golden Cycle Corp., 134 Colo. 140, 300 P.2d 799 (1956).

Furthermore, where union activity is not protected by the federal act, it is not immunized from state action. Denver Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Shore, 132 Colo. 187, 287 P.2d 267 (1955).

State laws adopted pursuant to 29 U.S.C. § 164(b) represent an area where state laws will control. Ruff v. Kezer, 199 Colo. 182, 606 P.2d 441 (1980).

III. COMPLAINTS.

A. Initiation of Complaint.

The industrial commission is authorized to investigate every charge which alleges an unfair labor practice. People ex rel. Shaffer v. Teamsters Local 961, 175 Colo. 187, 486 P.2d 10 (1971).

B. Hearing.

In ascertaining whether an employee was discharged because of union activities the industrial commission may consider circumstantial, as well as direct, evidence, but when circumstantial evidence is relied on there must be evidence of circumstances from which the commission may conclude with reasonable certainty that the employee was discharged because of union activity. Bennett's Restaurant v. Indus. Comm'n, 127 Colo. 271, 256 P.2d 891 (1953).

And the fact that some of the evidence relating to a discriminatory discharge is hearsay affords no basis for objecting to the finding. Bennett's Restaurant v. Indus. Comm'n, 127 Colo. 271, 256 P.2d 891 (1953).

However, mere suspicion or conjecture alone is not sufficient on which to base a finding of discriminatory discharge. Bennett's Restaurant v. Indus. Comm'n, 127 Colo. 271, 256 P.2d 891 (1953).

The division of labor's duty to hold hearings and to make decisions determining the rights of parties necessarily and implicitly includes the authority to interpret statutes pertinent to the dispute. Denver Local 2-477 v. Metro Wastewater Reclamation Dist., 7 P.3d 1042 (Colo. App. 1999).

C. Remedies.

Reinstatement of employees wrongfully discharged will not compel an employer to operate in a manner that would be contrary to business judgment with a totalitarian result of confiscation where no such result appears from the record, for the business judgment of employers must always be limited by the applicable requirements of statutes and the very purpose of the labor peace act is to restrict the business judgment of both employers and employees in the promotion of the welfare of industry and of the public. UMW v. Sunlight Coal Co., 129 Colo. 374, 270 P.2d 776 (1954).

However, an order for reinstatement of such employees does not necessarily require their continuance for any specified time in future employment. Rather, they are to return to the same status which existed at the time of their discharge, subject to termination of their employment upon valid grounds not contrary to the provisions of the labor peace act at any time thereafter. UMW v. Sunlight Coal Co., 129 Colo. 374, 270 P.2d 776 (1954).

IV. POST HEARING.

A complaint for review has to be filed within 30 days under former provisions of section unless the time was extended by reason of prejudice "because of exceptional delay in the receipt of a copy of order of the commission". Indus. Comm'n v. Sheard, 170 Colo. 76, 459 P.2d 127 (1969).

And misadvice of attorney that there is 60 days to seek review was not a ground for extension under this section. Indus. Comm'n v. Sheard, 170 Colo. 76, 459 P.2d 127 (1969).

By failing to seek review within 30 days the right of appeal was lost. Indus. Comm'n v. Sheard, 170 Colo. 76, 459 P.2d 127 (1969).

On appeal the question to be resolved was whether the findings were supported by any credible and competent evidence in the record. Bennett's Restaurant v. Indus. Comm'n, 127 Colo. 271, 256 P.2d 891 (1953).

And court errs in making its own findings. The court erred in making its own findings where the matter was not one in which the testimony was short and undisputed. Indus. Comm'n v. Sheard, 170 Colo. 76, 459 P.2d 127 (1969).

V. REGULATION OF PICKETING.

A. In General.

The state, through its general assembly and courts, can reasonably regulate picketing and rights of assembly with proper constitutional safeguards for those affected thereby, for picketing is not an absolute right at all times and places. City of Golden v. Ford, 141 Colo. 472, 348 P.2d 951 (1960).

And a bona fide dispute must be shown to exist to allow picketing. Int'l. Bhd. of Teamsters v. Publix Cab Co., 119 Colo. 208, 202 P.2d 154 (1949).

Declaratory judgment as to validity of subsection (18) refused absent a concrete situation. Am. Fed'n of Labor v. Reilly, 113 Colo. 90, 115 P.2d 145 (1944).

B. Injunctions.

Law reviews. For article, "Labor Injunctions Under the Colorado Labor Peace Act", see 26 Dicta 63 (1949).

While investigating unfair labor practices, the director has jurisdiction to issue restraining orders or injunctions to enjoin strikes and lockouts, but not peaceful picketing. People ex rel. Shaffer v. Teamsters Local 961, 175 Colo. 187, 486 P.2d 10 (1971).

For this section does not provide for issuance of injunctions to restrain peaceful picketing. People ex rel. Shaffer v. Teamsters Local 961, 175 Colo. 187, 486 P.2d 10 (1971); CF&I Steel, L.P. v. United Steel Workers of Am., 990 P.2d 1124 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd, 23 P.3d 1197 (Colo. 2001).

Subsection (1) of this section, when read together with §§ 8-3-108(2)(a) and 8-3-118(1), allows the trial court to enjoin the union and its members from engaging in an unfair labor practice. CF&I Steel, L.P. v. United Steel Workers of Am., 990 P.2d 1124 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd, 23 P.3d 1197 (Colo. 2001).

8-3-111. Protection of employees when authority acquires certain operations.

(1) Before any authority may acquire and operate any property of a privately or publicly owned mass transportation system, fair and equitable protective arrangements, as determined by the director, shall be made to insure certain rights of employees. Such protective arrangements shall include, without being limited to, such provisions as may be necessary to accomplish the following objectives:

(a) The preservation of existing rights, privileges, and benefits of employees under existing collective bargaining agreements between the mass transportation system and the employees thereof, including the continuation of all pension rights and benefits of the employees and their beneficiaries;

(b) The continuation of all collective bargaining in any situation existing at the time of such acquisition and the assurance of employment of all the employees of such mass transportation system so acquired;

(c) The protection of all individual employees with respect to their employment, including priorities, seniorities, and right of advancement when in agreement with any existing collective bargaining agreement;

(d) Training and retraining programs of employees and managing personnel.

(2) The contract whereby an authority acquires any property of a privately or publicly owned mass transportation system shall specify with particularity, the terms and conditions of all the protective arrangements set forth in this section, including all other protective arrangements which may be added through collective bargaining or by direction of the director.

(3) The determination of the sufficiency of protective arrangements shall be made by the director in accordance with such rules and regulations as the commission may from time to time establish.

8-3-112. Arbitration. (1) Parties to a labor dispute may agree in writing to have the director act as arbitrator or to name arbitrators to arbitrate all or any part of such dispute, and thereupon the director shall have the power so to act. The director shall appoint as arbitrators only competent, impartial, and disinterested persons. Proceedings in any such arbitration shall be as provided by the rules of arbitration under the Colorado rules of civil procedure.

(2) All parties to any labor dispute when the employer is an authority shall submit to arbitration upon written order of the director when such written order is the result of the procedure set forth in section 8-3-113 (3). Any order so given shall be subject to appeal within five days of the receipt of such order by either the employee's representative or the authority, who are parties in interest. Appeal of the order shall be made to the district court in the judicial district where the most substantial number of the employees concerned are employed. Such court shall either confirm, deny, amend, or continue the order within sixty days following the application for appeal. The results of any arbitration conducted in accordance with the procedure set forth in this article shall be binding upon all parties in interest with the right of appeal to any court of competent jurisdiction on the grounds that the director or arbitration board has been unfair, capricious, or unjust in its conduct, determinations, or award.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For note, "Judicial Intervention in Arbitration Enforcement Cases - The Tenth Circuit Expands Upon the Limited Judicial Review Standard of Enterprise Wheel", see 62 Den. U. L. Rev. 593 (1985).

This section is constitutional. Reg'l Transp.

Dist. v. Dept. of Labor, 830 P.2d 942 (Colo. 1992).

Provisions for an arbitrator do not constitute too broad a delegation of legislative authority since arbitrator's discretion to set terms and conditions of employment is limited by sufficient standards of judicial review. Reg'l Transp. v. Dept. of Labor, 830 P.2d 942 (Colo. 1992).

Availability of judicial review of arbitrator's award and of director's decision to order arbitration under this section imposed sufficient standards and safeguards. Therefore, no unlawful delegation of legislative authority occurred. Reg'l Transp. Dist. v. Dept. of Labor, 830 P.2d 942 (Colo. 1992).

RTD is not a municipality and is not performing a municipal function within the meaning of section 35 of article V and therefore, the nondelegation requirement does not prevent the general assembly from requiring binding interest arbitration pursuant to this section. Reg'l Transp. v. Dept. of Labor, 830 P.2d 942 (Colo. 1992).

8-3-113. Mediation. (1) The director has power to appoint any competent, impartial, disinterested person to act as mediator in any labor dispute either upon his own initiative or upon the request of one of the parties to the dispute. It is the function of such mediator to bring the parties together voluntarily under such favorable auspices as will tend to effectuate settlement of the dispute, but neither the mediator nor the director has any power of compulsion in mediation proceedings. The director shall provide necessary expenses and order reasonable compensation for such mediators as he may appoint.

(2) Where, as provided by this article, the exercise of the right to strike by the employees of any employer engaged in the state of Colorado in the production, harvesting, or initial processing, the latter after leaving the farm, of any farm or dairy product produced in this state would tend to cause the destruction or serious deterioration of such product, the employees shall give to the division at least thirty days' notice of their intention to strike, and, in the case of employees in all other industries or occupations, at least twenty days' notice of their intention to strike. The division shall immediately notify the employer of the receipt of such notice. Upon receipt of such notice, the director shall take immediate steps to effect mediation, if possible. In the event of the failure of the efforts to mediate, the director shall endeavor to induce the parties to arbitrate the controversy. Any strike called or made effective before the expiration of twenty days from the date of such notice shall constitute an unfair labor practice.

(3) Where the exercise of the right to strike is desired by the employees of any authority, the employees or their representatives shall file with the division written notice of intent to strike not less than forty calendar days prior to the date contemplated for such strike. Within twenty days of the filing of the notice, the director shall enter an order allowing or denying the strike based on the grounds of whether or not such strike would interfere with the preservation of the public peace, health, and safety in accordance with rules and regulations of the division. Any order denying a strike under this section shall include an order to arbitrate in accordance with section 8-3-112. Such arbitration shall be entered into not later than one hundred days from the filing of the notice of intent to strike. Immediately upon receipt of a notice of intent to strike, the director shall take steps to effect mediation, if possible. In the event of failure to mediate, the director shall endeavor to induce the parties to arbitrate the controversy. Any strike before the expiration of forty days from the giving of notice of intent to strike or in violation of an order of the director, unless such order is changed on appeal or otherwise, shall constitute an unfair labor practice.

(4) The division shall prescribe reasonable rules of procedure for mediation under this section.

ANNOTATION

This section is constitutional. Reg'l Transp. Dist. v. Dept. of Labor, 830 P.2d 942 (Colo. 1992).

The Labor Peace Act provides that the director may deny the right to strike under circumstances that would interfere with the pub- lic peace, health, and safety, but balances the denial with the provision for mandatory arbitration. Reg'l Transp. v. Dept. of Labor, 830 P.2d 942 (Colo. 1992).

The reference to "employees in all other industries or occupations" in this section is so clear and so unambiguous as to the intention of the general assembly not to restrict the labor peace act to only industry and trade that it is unnecessary to even consider the usual rules of construction where ambiguities and uncertainties are found in statutory provisions. Indus. Comm'n v. Wallace Vill. for Children, 165 Colo. 10, 437 P.2d 62 (1968).

Declaratory judgment as to validity of subsection (2) refused in absence of concrete situation. Am. Fed'n of Labor v. Reilly, 113 Colo. 90, 155 P.2d 145 (1944).

8-3-114. Duties of attorney general and district attorneys. Upon the request of the director, the attorney general or the district attorney of the county in which a proceeding is brought before the district court for the purpose of enforcing or reviewing an order of the director shall appear and act as counsel for the director in such proceeding and in any proceeding to review the action of the district court affirming, modifying, or reversing such order.

8-3-115. Employer and employee committees. The director, from time to time, may appoint joint, standing, or special committees composed in equal numbers of representatives of employees and employers. 8-3-118. Jurisdiction to issue restraining orders or injunctions. (1) Except as otherwise provided in this article, no court has jurisdiction to issue in any case involving or growing out of a labor dispute any restraining order or temporary or permanent injunction which in specific or general terms prohibits any person from doing, whether singly or in concert, any of the following acts:

(a) Ceasing or refusing to perform any work or to remain in any relation of employment, regardless of any promise, undertaking, contract, or agreement to do such work or to remain in such employment;

(b) Becoming or remaining a member of any labor organization or of any employer organization, regardless of any undertaking or promise as is described in section 8-3-119;

(c) Paying or giving to or withholding from any person any strike or unemployment benefits or insurance or other moneys or things of value;

(d) Aiding, by all lawful means, any person who is being proceeded against in, or is prosecuting any action or suit in, any court of this state;

(e) Giving publicity to and obtaining or communicating information regarding the existence of or the facts involved in any dispute, whether by advertising, speaking, without intimidation or coercion, or by any other method not involving fraud, violence, breach of the peace, or threat thereof;

(f) Ceasing as an organization to patronize any person with whom the organization has a labor dispute or requiring it to employ any person;

(g) Assembling peaceably to do or to organize to do any of the acts specified in this section or to promote lawful interests;

(h) Advising or notifying any person of an intention to do any of the acts specified in this section;

(i) Agreeing with other persons to do or not to do any of the acts specified in this section;

(j) Advising, urging, or inducing, without fraud, violence, or threat thereof, others to do the acts specified in this section, regardless of any such undertaking or promise as is described in section 8-3-119;

(k) Doing in concert any acts specified in this section on the ground that the persons engaged therein constitute an unlawful combination or conspiracy.

ANNOTATION

I. General Consideration.

II. Federal Preemption.

III. Publicizing Labor Disputes.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "Labor Injunctions Under the Colorado Labor Peace Act", see 26 Dicta 63 (1949).

Annotator's note. Since § 8-3-118 is similar to repealed CSA, C. 97, §§ 76-84, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section does not take away any rights from employees and unions, but bestows upon them additional rights in "labor disputes" not theretofore possessed, as it creates a defense in labor disputes against actions for restraining orders and injunctions not permitted in other disputes. Denver Milk Producers, Inc. v. Int'l. Bhd. of Teamsters, 116 Colo. 389, 183 P.2d 529 (1947).

And it is only in cases involving labor disputes that a court does not have jurisdiction to grant such orders. Denver Milk Producers, Inc. v. Int'l. Bhd. of Teamsters, 116 Colo. 389, 183 P.2d 529 (1947).

For, in the absence of any statute on this subject matter, there is no restriction on the courts in granting restraining orders or injunc- tions in any case. Denver Milk Producers, Inc. v. Int'l. Bhd. of Teamsters, 116 Colo. 389, 183 P.2d 529 (1947).

However, where there is no "labor dispute", as defined in § 8-3-104 (13), between employer and his employees, there is no restraint on the court by virtue of this section to issue an injunction restraining a union's picketing and other acts. Amalgamated Meat Cutters & Butcher Workmen v. Green, 119 Colo. 92, 200 P.2d 924 (1948).

Earlier provision held constitutional. Local 13, Teamsters v. Perry Truck Lines, Inc., 106 Colo. 25, 101 P.2d 436 (1940).

But other section which made picketing unlawful held unconstitutional. People v. Harris, 104 Colo. 386, 91 P.2d 989 (1939).

However, provisions protecting activities that are normal incidents of picketing are contained in this section. City of Golden v. Ford, 141 Colo. 472, 348 P.2d 951 (1960).

II. FEDERAL PREEMPTION.

Law reviews. For article, "The Extent to Which Taft-Hartley Act Has Superseded State Labor Laws", see 28 Dicta 47 (1951).

The state may not enjoin conduct which has been made an unfair labor practice under the federal statutes. UMW v. Golden Cycle Corp., 134 Colo. 140, 300 P.2d 799 (1956); Bldg. Constr. Trades Council v. Am. Bldrs., Inc., 139 Colo. 236, 337 P.2d 953 (1959).

But this rule does not take from the state power to prevent mass picketing, violence, and overt threats of violence, for the dominant interest of the state in preventing violence and property damage cannot be questioned; it is a matter of genuine local concern. UMW v. Golden Cycle Corp., 134 Colo. 140, 300 P.2d 799 (1956).

And such conduct is not subject to the federal board. The state is allowed to enjoin mass picketing, threats of bodily injury and property damage to employees, obstruction of streets and public roads, the blocking of entrance to and egress from a factory, and the picketing of the homes of employees, as such conduct is not subject to the federal board, either by prohibition or protection. UMW v. Golden Cycle Corp., 134 Colo. 140, 300 P.2d 799 (1956).

Therefore, state courts do have jurisdiction to enjoin threats of personal injury and property damage to employees and management. UMW v. Golden Cycle Corp., 134 Colo. 140, 300 P.2d 799 (1956).

III. PUBLICIZING LABOR DISPUTES.

Law reviews. For note, "Colorado's Anti-Picketing Law is Scrapped", see 11 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 255 (1939).

Courts are free to decide whether to permit or suppress any particular picket line for any reason other than a blanket policy against all picketing. City of Golden v. Ford, 141 Colo. 472, 348 P.2d 951 (1960).

But this section does not provide for issuance of injunctions to restrain peaceful picketing. People ex rel. Shaffer v. Teamsters Local 961, 175 Colo. 187, 486 P.2d 10 (1971).

Freedom of speech in labor disputes is guaranteed by the federal constitution. That a state has ample power to regulate the local problems thrown up by modern industry and to preserve the peace is axiomatic, but not even these essential powers are unfettered by the requirements of the bill of rights; and the scope of the fourteenth amendment is not confined by the notion of the state regarding the wise limits of an injunction in an industrial dispute, whether those limits be defined by statute or by the judicial organ of the state. Consequently, members of a union might, without special statutory authorization by the state, make known the facts of a labor dispute for freedom of speech is guaranteed by the federal constitution. Pueblo Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Harper Constr. Co., 134 Colo. 469, 307 P.2d 468 (1957).

Even though the dispute is not an immediate employer-employee one, peaceful picketing in connection with a labor dispute has its basic roots in the constitutional guaranties of liberty and freedom of speech, and a state may not by its common-law or statutory policy prohibit persuasion, through peaceful picketing, notwithstanding the occasioning labor dispute is not an immediate employer-employee one; inasmuch as a state cannot exclude working men from peacefully exercising the right of free communication by drawing the circle of economic competition between employers and workers so small as to contain only an employer and those directly employed by him, the interdependence of economic interest of all engaged in the same industry has become a commonplace. Pueblo Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Harper Constr. Co., 134 Colo. 469, 307 P.2d 468 (1957).

However, "nonpeaceful" picketing may constitutionally be enjoined. When picketing is not peaceful or where, while peaceful in itself, it is set against a background of acts of violence, injunctive relief may be granted constitutionally. Local 13, Teamsters v. Buckingham Transp. Co., 108 Colo. 419, 118 P.2d 1088 (1941); CF&I Steel, L.P. v. United Steel Workers of Am., 990 P.2d 1124 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd, 23 P.3d 1197 (Colo. 2001).

As such does not infringe the fourteenth amendment. Where a controversy is attended by peaceful picketing and by acts of violence, and the violence is such that continuation of the picketing will operate coercively by exciting fear that violence will be resumed, an injunction by a state court forbidding the picketing as well as the violence does not infringe the fourteenth amendment. Pueblo Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Harper Constr. Co., 134 Colo. 469, 307 P.2d 468 (1957).

This section must be considered with § 8-3-109 (2). Amalgamated Meat Cutters & Butcher Workmen v. Green, 119 Colo. 92, 200 P.2d 924 (1948).

When so considered and taken together, these sections mean that courts are divested of all jurisdiction to grant restraining orders or injunctions which prohibit any person from doing certain specific things therein mentioned, in any case involving or growing out of a labor dispute. Amalgamated Meat Cutters & Butcher Workmen v. Green, 119 Colo. 92, 200 P.2d 924, (1948).

Subsection (1) of this section, when read together with §§ 8-3-108(2)(a) and 8-3-110(1), confers jurisdiction upon the trial court to enjoin the union and its members from engaging in an unfair labor practice. CF&I Steel, L.P. v. United Steel Workers of Am., 990 P.2d 1124 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd, 23 P.3d 1197 (Colo. 2001).

A labor union cannot legally be enjoined from peaceful picketing or restrained in their conduct. Local 13, Teamsters v. Perry Truck Lines, Inc., 106 Colo. 25, 101 P.2d 436 (1940).

In “any dispute”. Subsection (1)(e) of this section provides that no court may issue an injunction in any case involving a labor dispute to restrain giving publicity to and obtaining or communicating information regarding the existence of, or the facts involved in “any dispute”, whether by advertising, speaking, without intimidation or coercion, or by any other method not involving fraud, violence, breach of the peace, or threat thereof. Pueblo Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Harper Constr. Co., 134 Colo. 469, 307 P.2d 468 (1957).

8-3-119. Relations contrary to public policy. (1) The following is declared to be contrary to public policy and shall not afford any basis for the granting of legal or equitable relief by any court against a party to such undertaking or promise or against any other persons who may advise, urge, or induce, without fraud, violence, or threat thereof, either party thereto to act in disregard of the undertaking or promise: Every undertaking or promise made on or after April 1, 1943, whether written or oral, express or implied, between any employee or prospective employee and his employer, prospective employer, or any other individual, firm, company, association, or corporation, whereby:

(a) Either party thereto undertakes or promises to join or to remain a member of some specific labor organization or to join or remain a member of some specific employer organization or any employer organization; or

(b) Either party thereto undertakes or promises not to join or not to remain a member of some specific labor organization or of some specific employer organization or any employer organizations; or

(c) Either party thereto undertakes or promises that he will withdraw from an employment relation in the event that he joins or remains a member of some specific labor organization or any labor organization or of some specific employer organization or any employer organization.

8-3-120. Conflict of provisions. Wherever the application of the provisions of other statutes or laws conflict with the application of the provisions of this article, this article shall prevail; except that, in any situation where the provisions of this article cannot be validly enforced, the provisions of such other statutes or laws shall apply.

ANNOTATION

Labor Peace Act does not limit or constrain the law on metropolitan sewage disposal districts concerning the determination of prevailing rates of pay. Such a district is not required to negotiate or engage in collective bargaining in fixing employee compensation at prevailing rates for equivalent work. Local 1 v. Metro Wastewater Reclamation, 876 P.2d 82 (Colo. App. 1994).

Applied in People ex rel. Shaffer v. Teamsters Local 961, 175 Colo. 187, 486 P.2d 10 (1971).

8-3-121. Civil liability for damages. (1) Any person who suffers injury because of an unfair labor practice has a right of action, jointly and severally, against all persons participating in said practice for damages caused to the injured person thereby.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Unfair Labor Practices.
- III. Violation of Contract.
- IV. Damages.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Liability for damages existed prior to legislation. Prior to the enactment of legislation, state and national, designed for the peaceful settlement of labor disputes and controversy, one interfering with a work project of another would be held liable to the extent of all damages caused by such intrusion, and unless by the enactment of legislation the right to be so protected has been eliminated, modified, or otherwise circumscribed, it still exists. Denver Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Shore, 132 Colo. 187, 287 P.2d 267 (1955).

But there is nothing under the labor peace act which allows either interest or attorney fees. Denver Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Shore, 132 Colo. 187, 287 P.2d 267 (1955).

Applied in Bennett v. Furr's Cafeterias, Inc., 549 F. Supp. 887 (D. Colo. 1982).

II. UNFAIR LABOR PRACTICES.

Damages for tortious labor conduct are recoverable in any court of competent jurisdiction, whether state or federal. Denver Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Shore, 132 Colo. 187, 287 P.2d 267 (1955).

Even where the national labor relations board establishes a violation, recovery of damages for the resulting injury is left to any court of competent jurisdiction. Denver Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Shore, 132 Colo. 187, 287 P.2d 267 (1955).

Violation of § 8-2-116 is an unfair labor practice and thus damages are recoverable under this section. Rawson v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 530 F. Supp. 776 (D. Colo. 1982).

III. VIOLATION OF CONTRACT.

There is nothing inherently illegal in requiring a labor organization to live up to its written contracts. Denver Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Shore, 132 Colo. 187, 287 P.2d 267 (1955).

And so where the members of a union violate their contract and walk off a job, individually refuse to cross a picket line, and, supported by the union, refuse to furnish union members to operate machines, completely immobilize and render entirely useless all of the machinery to the same extent as though it had been retained in their possession and actually impounded, it is simply a method of depriving the employer of the use of his property and is ineffective to relieve them of liability for their breach of contract. Denver Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Shore, 132 Colo. 187, 287 P.2d 267 (1955).

IV. DAMAGES.

Damages, as used in this section, includes those damages recoverable in a common law tort action. Rawson v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 585 F. Supp. 1393 (D. Colo. 1984).

Damages where heavy equipment is kept idle is its fair rental value. It is impossible to allocate to each of several heavy machines on a job the proportion of the overall profit attributable to the agency of each thereof, and so where, through unlawful or wrongful acts, heavy equipment is kept idle and the work expected to be accomplished thereby delayed, the fair rental value of such equipment during the period of prevention of its use is generally adopted as a proper measure for determination of the extent of damage. This loss of use rule is in keeping with the general rule that damages should be calculated in such manner as is most favorable to the party liable, and it is logical that the rental cost or value of a machine would be less than the amount expected to be derived from its use - if it can be rented for a sum equal to the amount it will return in use, why use it; if one should rent a machine to do a specific job, would he not expect to make a profit for himself over and above the rental he would have to pay? Denver Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Shore, 132 Colo. 187, 287 P.2d 267 (1955).

8-3-122. Penalty for violation. Any person, firm, or corporation who violates any of the provisions of this article is guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined for the first offense not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars and for the second and subsequent offenses not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, together with costs.

8-3-123. Nonapplicability of other statutes. The provisions of sections 8-1-108, 8-1-120, and 8-1-123 shall not apply to this article, but this article and the administration thereof are governed and controlled as to all matters contained in sections 8-1-108, 8-1-120, and 8-1-123 by the special provisions of this article.

8-3.5-101. Short title. This article shall be known and may be cited as the "Colorado Nonimmigrant Agricultural Seasonal Worker Pilot Program Act".

Source: L. 2008: Entire article added, p. 2299, § 2, effective August 5.

8-3.5-102. Legislative declaration. It is the intent of the general assembly to establish a nonimmigrant agricultural seasonal worker pilot program to expedite the seasonal worker application and approval process in compliance with the existing federal H-2A visa certification process so that eligible workers may come to Colorado legally, safely, and in a timely manner to meet the demands of Colorado producers.

Source: L. 2008: Entire article added, p. 2299, § 2, effective August 5.

8-3.5-103. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

  - (a) Developing and submitting appropriate application materials to the state employment security agency and the department responsible for issuing labor certifications for a specific employer and job;
  - (b) Coordinating local recruitment with the employer and state employment security agency;
  - (c) Developing appropriate documentation of employer requirements and employment terms for use in selecting foreign workers; and
  - (d) Filing for visa petition approval and coordinating visa issuance by the United States consulate or embassy in the worker's country of origin.

(2) "Commissioner" means the commissioner of the Colorado department of agriculture or his or her designee.

(3) "Department" means the Colorado department of labor and employment.

(4) "Director" means the executive director of the department of labor and employment or his or her designee.

(7) (a) "H-2A visa" means a temporary agricultural nonimmigrant visa that allows foreign nationals to enter into the United States to perform agricultural labor or services of a temporary or seasonal nature and that is issued pursuant to the federal "Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986", 8 U.S.C. sec. 1101 et seq.

(b) An H-2A visa allows for the admission of nonimmigrant foreign workers into the United States to perform agricultural work that is temporary in nature, such as harvesting crops. Nonimmigrants are persons legally admitted into the United States for a specific purpose and time period and who do not intend to make the United States their permanent residence. H-2A visas are administered jointly by the United States department of labor and the United States citizenship and immigration services.

Employers who anticipate a shortage of available United States workers needed to perform agricultural labor on a temporary basis may apply to the United States department of labor for certification. The application for certification must include a copy of the job offer that will be used by each employer for the recruitment of United States and H-2A workers, the estimated number of workers needed by the employer, and the date by which the workers are needed. Employers are required to apply for certification at least forty-five days in advance of their estimated date of need.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. The following annotations include cases decided under this section as it existed prior to the 2003 amendment to article 4, which resulted in the relocation of provisions.

The provisions of the Wage Claim Act should be liberally construed to carry out its purpose of assuring timely payment of wages and providing adequate judicial relief when wages are not paid. Hofer v. Polly Little Realtors, Inc., 543 P.2d 114 (1975); Cusimano v. Metro Auto, Inc., 860 P.2d 532 (Colo. App. 1992).

Therefore, construing the Act to impose personal liability for wages on high ranking corporate officers furthers that legislative purpose. Cusimano v. Metro Auto, Inc., 860 P.2d 532 (Colo. App. 1992).

Wage Claim Act provides a clear, comprehensive statutory scheme designed to require an employer to pay wages earned by their employees in a timely manner. Lambdin v. Dist. Ct. of Arapahoe Cty., 903 P.2d 1126 (Colo. 1995).

Timely compensation or judicial relief intended. The beneficial purpose of the general assembly in drafting this section was to assure that employees would be timely compensated for labor or services and that when not so compensated they would be entitled to adequate judicial relief. Hofer v. Polly Little Realtors, Inc., 37 Colo. App. 86, 543 P.2d 114 (1975).

A plaintiff may bring claims under both the federal Fair Labor Standards Act and the state Wage Claim Act. Redmond v. Chains, Inc., 996 P.2d 759 (Colo. App. 2000).

Real estate salesman not "employee" within definition of subsection (5). Hyland v. Pikes Peak Capital Corp. 714 P.2d 914 (Colo. App. 1985).

Association of counties and municipal corporations excepted from "employer". Since counties and municipal corporations are excepted from the definition of "employer", an association which consists of counties and municipal corporations is also excepted. Paulu v. Lower Ark. Valley Council of Gov'ts, 655 P.2d 1391 (Colo. App. 1982).

Definition of "employer" in subsection (6) does not include individual officers and agents of a corporation. Leonard v. McMorris, 63 P.3d 323 (Colo. 2003) (disagreeing with Cusimano v. Metro Auto., Inc., cited below).

Corporate officers not individually liable for wages. The officers and agents of a corporation are not jointly and severally liable for payment of employee wages and other compensation the corporation owes its employees under the employment contract and the Colorado Wage Claim Act. Leonard v. McMorris, 63 P.3d 323 (Colo.) (disagreeing with Cusimano v. Metro Auto., Inc., cited below), 320 F.3d 1116 (10th Cir. 2003).

Definition of "employer" in subsection (6) clearly discloses an intent to impose personal liability for wages on at least high ranking corporate officers based solely on their status as officers, and the definition is not expressly limited to corporate officers with duties in relation to the unpaid employee. Cusimano v. Metro Auto, Inc., 860 P.2d 532 (Colo. App. 1992); Major v. Chons Bros., Inc., 53 P.3d 781 (Colo. App. 2002).

A general manager whose duties included scheduling of overtime work but who had been given no authority or responsibility over wage payment policies was not subject to personal liability under the Wage Claim Act. Major v. Chons Bros., Inc., 53 P.3d 781 (Colo. App. 2002).

Federal Bankruptcy Code does not preempt claims against corporate officers under the Wage Claim Act. Claims under the Wage Claim Act would be preempted if brought against the corporation because the corporation filed a bankruptcy petition. The Bankruptcy Code does not, however, extend its protections to individuals or entities that have not filed a bankruptcy petition. In the absence of such a statutory provision, no direct conflict exists between the Bankruptcy Code and the Wage Claim Act. Leonard v. McMorris, 106 F. Supp.2d 1098 (D. Colo. 2000), rev'd on other grounds, 320 F.3d 1116 (10th Cir. 2003).

The term "corporation" in subsection (6) refers to private corporations, since municipal and quasi-municipal corporations are mentioned separately as exceptions. Paulu v. Lower Ark. Valley Council of Gov'ts, 655 P.2d 1391 (Colo. App. 1982).

The term "employer" in subsection (6) does not include the state of Colorado. The Wage Claim Act does not apply to the state or state agencies. Lang v. Colo. Mental Health Inst. in Pueblo, 44 P.3d 262 (Colo. App. 2001).

Vacation pay is within the definition of "wages or compensation". Hartman v. Freedman, 197 Colo. 275, 591 P.2d 1318 (1979); Thompson v. Cheyenne Mtn. Sch. Dist., 844 P.2d 1235 (Colo. App. 1992).

Payments under employer's growth bonus program were "wages" where plan replaced existing commission programs, provided for cash payments to supplement employees' regular earnings based on their efforts in areas of sales and company growth, no components of the fund were based on net profit, and only one component was based on "gross profit". Gray v. Empire Gas, Inc., 679 P.2d 610 (Colo. App. 1984).

Bonus is "wages or compensation" where it is both vested and determinable as of the date of termination, where the bonus is disproportionately large in relation to the base salary, and where bonus was owed as compensation for services performed by individual employee rather than pursuant to profit-sharing plan. Rohr v. Ted Neiters Motor Co., 758 P.2d 186 (Colo. 1988).

There is an implied right to compensation for unused vacation time upon termination of contract with school district absent an express agreement to the contrary. Thompson v. Cheyenne Mtn. Sch. Dist., 844 P.2d 1235 (Colo. App. 1992).

This section was amended to specifically exclude severance pay as wages or compensation, effective August 6, 2003, however the general assembly appears to acknowledge that a severance payment could constitute wages or compensation under the previous version of the statute. Fang v. Showa Entetsu Co., 91 P.3d 419 (Colo. App. 2003).

Liability of corporate officers for wages. Subsection (6) is at least susceptible to the interpretation that corporate officers are personally liable for wages due employees. Fischer v. District Court, 561 P.2d 1266 (1977); Cusimano v. Metro Auto, Inc., 860 P.2d 532 (Colo. App. 1992); Major v. Chons Bros., Inc., 53 P.3d 781 (Colo. App. 2002).

Labor Peace Act does not limit or constrain the law on metropolitan sewage disposal districts concerning the determination of prevailing rates of pay. Such a district is not required to negotiate or engage in collective bargaining in fixing employee compensation at prevailing rates for equivalent work. Local 1 v. Metro Wastewater Reclamation, 876 P.2d 82 (Colo. App. 1994).

Applied in Cavic v. Pioneer Astro Indus., Inc., 825 F.2d 1421 (10th Cir. 1987); Olsen v. Bondurant and Co., 759 P.2d 861 (Colo. App. 1988).

8-4-102. Proper payment - record of wages. (1) Negotiable instrument required. No employer or agent or officer thereof shall issue, in payment of or as an evidence of indebtedness for wages due an employee, any order, check, draft, note, memorandum, or other acknowledgment of indebtedness unless the same is negotiable and payable upon demand without discount in cash at a bank organized and existing under the general banking laws of the state of Colorado or the United States or at some established place of business in the state. The name and address of the drawee shall appear upon the face of the order, check, draft, note, memorandum, or other acknowledgment of indebtedness; except that such provisions shall not apply to a public utility engaged in interstate commerce and otherwise subject to the power of the public utilities commission. At the time of the issuance of same, the maker or drawer shall have sufficient funds in or credit with the bank or other drawee for the payment of same. Where such order, check, draft, note, memorandum, or other acknowledgment of indebtedness is protested or dishonored on the ground of insufficiency of funds or credit, the notice of memorandum of protest or dishonor thereof shall be admissible as proof of presentation, nonpayment, and protest.

(2) Direct deposit. Nothing in this article shall prohibit an employer from depositing wages due or to become due or an advance on wages to be earned in an account in any bank, savings and loan association, credit union, or other financial institution authorized by the United States or one of the several states to receive deposits in the United States if the employee has voluntarily authorized such deposit in the financial institution of the employee's choice.

(2.5) Paycard. (a) Nothing in this article shall prohibit an employer from depositing an employee's wages on a paycard, so long as the employee:

(I) Is provided free means of access to the entire amount of net pay at least once per pay period; or

(II) May choose to use other means for payment of wages as authorized in subsections (1) and (2) of this section.

(b) As used in this section, "paycard" means an access device that an employee uses to receive his or her payroll funds from his or her employer.

(3) Scrip prohibited. No employer or agent or officer thereof shall issue in payment of wages due, or wages to become due an employee, or as an advance on wages to be earned by an employee any scrip, coupons, cards, or other things redeemable in merchandise unless such scrip, coupons, cards, or other things may be redeemed in cash when due, but nothing contained in this section shall be construed to prohibit an employer from guaranteeing the payment of bills incurred by an employee for the necessities of life or for the tools and implements used by such employee in the performance of his or her duties.

8-4-103. Payment of wages - insufficient funds - pay statement - record retention - tip notification. (1) (a) All wages or compensation, other than those mentioned in section 8-4-109, earned by any employee in any employment, other than those specified in subsection (3) of this section, shall be due and payable for regular pay periods of no greater duration than one calendar month or thirty days, whichever is longer, and on regular paydays no later than ten days following the close of each pay period unless the employer and the employee shall mutually agree on any other alternative period of wage or salary payments.

(b) An employer is subject to the penalties specified in section 8-4-113 (1) if, two or more times within any twenty-four-month period, the employer causes an employee's check, draft, or order to not be paid because the employer's bank does not honor an employee's paycheck upon presentment. The director may investigate complaints regarding alleged violations of this paragraph (b).

(2) (a) In agricultural, horticultural, and floricultural pursuits and in stock or poultry raising, when the employee in such employments is boarded and lodged by the employer, all wages or compensation earned by any employee in such employment shall be due and payable for regular periods of no greater duration than one month and on paydays no later than ten days following the close of each pay period.

(b) Nothing in paragraph (a) of this subsection (2), as amended by House Bill 05-1180, as enacted at the first regular session of the sixty-fifth general assembly, shall be construed as changing the property tax classification of property owned by a floricultural operation.

(3) Nothing in this article shall apply to compensation payments due an employee under a profit-sharing plan, a pension plan, or other similar deferred compensation programs.

(4) Every employer shall at least monthly, or at the time of each payment of wages or compensation, furnish to each employee an itemized pay statement in writing showing the following:

(a) Gross wages earned;
 (b) All withholdings and deductions;
 (c) Net wages earned;
 (d) The inclusive dates of the pay period;
 (e) The name of the employee or the employee's social security number; and
 (f) The name and address of the employer.
 (5) Each field labor contractor shall keep, for a period of three years on each migratory laborer, records of wage rates offered, wages earned, number of hours worked, or, in the case of contractual or piecework where a field labor contractor pays the employee, the aggregate amount earned and all withholdings from wages on a form furnished by and in the manner prescribed by the division. In addition, in each pay period, each field labor contractor shall provide to each migratory laborer engaged in agricultural employment a statement of the gross earnings of the laborer for the period and all deductions and withholdings therefrom. The director may prescribe appropriate forms for use pursuant to this subsection (5). All such payroll records shall be filed with the division quarterly or at any time said labor contractor leaves this state or terminates his or her contract. The director is charged with the responsibility of making periodic reports to the governor's committee on migrant labor.

(6) It is unlawful for any employer engaged in any business where the custom prevails of the giving of presents, tips, or gratuities by patrons thereof to an employee of said business to assert any claim to, or right of ownership in, or control over such presents, tips, or gratuities; and such presents, tips, or gratuities shall be the sole property of the employee of said business unless the employer posts in his or her place of business in a conspicuous place a printed card, at least twelve inches by fifteen inches in size, containing a notice to the general public in letters at least one-half inch high that all presents, tips, or gratuities given by any patron of said business to an employee thereof are not the property of said employee but belong to the employer. Nothing in this section shall prevent an employer covered hereby from requiring employees to share or allocate such presents, tips, or gratuities on a preestablished basis among the employees of such business.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 8-4-103 is similar to § 8-4-105 as it existed prior to the 2003 amendment to article 4, which resulted in the relocation of provisions, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

A contract to pay wages "when convenient to pay" must be construed as imposing an obligation to pay at some time. Royal Tiger Mines Co. v. Ahearn, 97 Colo. 116, 47 P.2d 692 (1935) (decided under repealed CSA, C. 97, § 200).

Section 8-4-104 and this section are mutually exclusive. Hofer v. Polly Little Realtors, Inc., 37 Colo. App. 86, 543 P.2d 114 (1975).

And distinguishable. Section 8-4-104 creates a right in an employee under one set of circumstances together with a cause of action for a penalty, while this section creates a right in an employee under a different set of circumstances, and does not provide for a penalty.

Hofer v. Polly Little Realtors, Inc., 37 Colo. App. 86, 543 P.2d 114 (1975).

Entitlement to attorney fees. If plaintiff were required to bring a claim for both wages and penalties under § 8-4-104 and this section in order to be entitled to attorney fees, the reference to this section in § 8-4-114 would be meaningless, contrary to the other language of the statute, and inconsistent with the rules of statutory construction which require that the "entire statute is intended to be effective", and that every word must be given effect, if possible. Hofer v. Polly Little Realtors, Inc., 37 Colo. App. 86, 543 P.2d 114 (1975).

Section 8-4-114 applies to recovery under either. Even though it is not clear from the judgment, based on the jury verdict, whether the employee's recovery was under § 8-4-104 or this section, § 8-4-114 applies to either. Keeton v. Rike, 38 Colo. App. 505, 559 P.2d 262 (1977).

8-4-104. Funds available to pay wages - mining industry. Every person, firm, association, corporation, or agent, manager, superintendent, or officer thereof engaged in the business of extracting or of extracting and refining or reducing metals or minerals other than petroleum, or other than parties having a free unencumbered title to the fee simple of the property being worked, and also other than mining partnerships in respect to the members of the partnerships, shall, before commencing work in any period for which a single payment of wages is to be made, have on hand, either physically or by deposit with a bank or trust company in the county where such property is located or, if there is no bank or trust company in the county, in the bank or trust company nearest the property, cash or readily salable securities of a market value equivalent to such cash, or accounts receivable payable in the normal course of business prior to the next payday, in a sufficient amount to make the payment of wages without discount or loss to any person employed on the mining property for such period.

ANNOTATION

Applied in Lampley v. Celebrity Homes, Inc., 42 Colo. App. 359, 594 P.2d 605 (1979) (decided under former law).

8-4-105. Payroll deductions permitted. (1) No employer shall make a deduction from the wages or compensation of an employee except as follows:

(a) Deductions mandated by or in accordance with local, state, or federal law including, but not limited to, deductions for taxes, “Federal Insurance Contributions Act” (“FICA”) requirements, garnishments, or any other court-ordered deduction;

(a.5) Deductions for contributions attributable to automatic enrollment in an employee retirement plan, as defined in section 8-4-105.5, regardless of whether the plan is subject to the federal “Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974”, as amended;

(b) Deductions for loans, advances, goods or services, and equipment or property provided by an employer to an employee pursuant to a written agreement between such employer and employee, so long as it is enforceable and not in violation of law;

(c) Any deduction necessary to cover the replacement cost of a shortage due to theft by an employee if a report has been filed with the proper law enforcement agency in connection with such theft pending a final adjudication by a court of competent jurisdiction; except that, if the accused employee is found not guilty in a court action or if criminal charges related to such theft are not filed against the accused employee within ninety days after the filing of the report with the proper law enforcement agency, or such charges are dismissed, the accused employee shall be entitled to recover any amount wrongfully withheld plus interest. In the event an employer acts without good faith, in addition to the amount wrongfully withheld and legally proven to be due, the accused employee may be awarded an amount not to exceed treble the amount wrongfully withheld. In any such action the prevailing party shall be entitled to reasonable costs related to the recovery of such amount including attorney fees and court costs.

(d) Any deduction, not listed in paragraph (a), (a.5), (b), or (c) of this subsection (1), that is authorized by an employee if the authorization is revocable, including deductions for hospitalization and medical insurance, other insurance, savings plans, stock purchases, supplemental retirement plans, charities, and deposits to financial institutions;

(e) A deduction for the amount of money or the value of property that the employee failed to properly pay or return to the employer in the case where a terminated employee was entrusted during his or her employment with the collection, disbursement, or handling of such money or property. The employer shall have ten calendar days after the termination of employment to audit and adjust the accounts and property value of any items entrusted to the employee before the employee's wages or compensation shall be paid as provided in section 8-4-109. This is an exception to the pay requirements in section 8-4-109. The penalty provided in section 8-4-109 shall apply only from the date of demand made after the expiration of the ten-day period allowed for payment of the employee's wages or compensation. If, upon such audit and adjustment of the accounts and property value of any items entrusted to the employee, it is found that any money or property entrusted to the employee by the employer has not been properly paid or returned the employer as provided by the terms of any agreement between the employer and the employee, the employee shall not be entitled to the benefit of payment pursuant to section 8-4-109, but the claim for unpaid wages or compensation of such employee shall be disposed of as provided for by this article.

8-4-105.5. Automatic enrollment in retirement plans - relief from liability - conditions - definitions. (1) (a) (I) An employer that provides automatic enrollment in an employee retirement plan is not liable for the investment decisions made by the employer on behalf of any participating employee with respect to the default investment of contributions made for that employee to the plan if:

(A) The plan provides the participating employee at least quarterly opportunities to select investments for the employee's contributions among investment alternatives available under the plan;

(B) The participating employee is given notice of the investment decisions that will be made in the absence of direction from the employee, a description of all the investment alternatives available for employee investment direction under the plan, and a brief description of procedures available for the employee to change investments; and

(C) The employee is given at least annual notice of the actual default investments made of contributions attributable to the employee.

(II) The relief from liability of the employer under this subsection (1) extends to any employee retirement plan official who makes the actual default investment decisions on behalf of participating employees.

(b) Nothing in this subsection (1) modifies any existing responsibility of employers or other plan officials for the selection of investment funds for participating employees.

(2) As used in this section:

(a) "Automatic enrollment" means an employee retirement plan provision under which an employee will have a specified contribution made to the plan, equal to a compensation reduction, that will be made for the employee unless the employee affirmatively elects, in accordance with the federal "Pension Protection Act of 2006", Pub.L. 109-280, either not to have any compensation reduction contributions or a compensation reduction contribution in an alternative amount.

(b) "Employee retirement plan" means a plan described in sections 401(k) or 403(b) of the federal "Internal Revenue Code of 1986", as amended; a governmental deferred compensation plan described in section 457 of the federal "Internal Revenue Code of 1986", as amended; or a payroll deduction individual retirement account plan described in sections 408 or 408A of the federal "Internal Revenue Code of 1986", as amended.

Source: L. 2003: Entire article amended with relocations, p. 1856, § 1, effective August 6.

8-4-107. Post notice of paydays. Every employer shall post and keep posted conspicuously at the place of work if practicable, or otherwise where it can be seen as employees come or go to their places of work, or at the office or nearest agency for payment kept by the employer a notice specifying the regular paydays and the time and place of payment, in accordance with the provisions of section 8-4-103, and also any changes concerning them that may occur from time to time.

8-4-108. Payment in the event of strike. (1) In the event of a strike, every employee who is discharged shall be paid at the place of discharge, and every employee who quits or resigns shall be paid at the office or agency of the employer in the county or city and county where such employee has been performing the labor or service for the employer. All payments of money or compensation shall be made in the manner provided by law.

(2) In the event of any strike, the unpaid wages or compensation earned by such striking employee shall become due and payable on the employer's next regular payday, and the payment or settlement shall include all amounts due such striking employee without abatement or reduction. The employer shall return to each striking employee, upon request, any deposit or money or other guaranty required by the employer from the employee for the faithful performance of the duties of his or her employment.

8-4-109. Termination of employment - payments required - civil penalties - payments to surviving spouse or heir. (1) (a) When an interruption in the employer-employee relationship by volition of the employer occurs, the wages or compensation for labor or service earned, vested, determinable, and unpaid at the time of such discharge is due and payable immediately. If at such time the employer's accounting unit, responsible for the drawing of payroll checks, is not regularly scheduled to be operational, then the wages due the separated employee shall be made available to the employee no later than six hours after the start of such employer's accounting unit's next regular workday; except that, if the accounting unit is located off the work site, the employer shall deliver the check for wages due the separated employee no later than twenty-four hours after the start of such employer's accounting unit's next regular workday to one of the following locations selected by the employer:

- (I) The work site;
- (II) The employer's local office; or
- (III) The employee's last-known mailing address.

(b) When an employee quits or resigns such employee's employment, the wages or compensation shall become due and payable upon the next regular payday. When a separation of employment occurs, the employer shall make the separated employee's check for wages due available at one of the following locations selected by the employer:

- (I) The work site;
- (II) The employer's local office; or

(III) The employee's last-known mailing address.

(2) Nothing in subsection (1) of this section shall limit the right of an employer to set off any deductions pursuant to section 8-4-105 owing by the employee to the employer or require the payment at the time employment is severed of compensation not yet fully earned under the compensation agreement between the employee and employer, whether written or oral.

(3) (a) If an employer refuses to pay wages or compensation in accordance with subsection (1) of this section, the employee or his or her designated agent shall make a written demand for the payment within sixty days after the date of separation and shall state in the demand where such payment can be received.

(a.5) If the employer disputes the amount of wages or compensation claimed by an employee under this article and if, within fourteen days after the employee's demand, the employer makes a legal tender of the amount that the employer in good faith believes is due, the employer shall not be liable for any penalty unless, in a legal action, the employee recovers a greater sum than the amount so tendered.

(b) If an employee's earned, vested, and determinable wages or compensation are not mailed to the place of receipt specified in a demand for payment and postmarked within fourteen days after the receipt of such demand, the employer shall be liable to the employee for the wages or compensation, and a penalty of the sum of the following amounts of wages or compensation due or, if greater, the employee's average daily earnings for each day, not to exceed ten days, until such payment or other settlement satisfactory to the employee is made:

(I) One hundred twenty-five percent of that amount of such wages or compensation up to and including seven thousand five hundred dollars; and

(II) Fifty percent of that amount of such wages or compensation that exceed seven thousand five hundred dollars.

(c) If the employee can show that the employer's failure to pay is willful, the penalty required under paragraph (b) of this subsection (3) shall increase by fifty percent. Evidence that a judgment has, within the previous five years, been entered against the employer for failure to pay wages or compensation shall be admissible as evidence of willful conduct.

(d) The daily earnings penalty shall not begin to accrue until the employer receives the written demand set forth in paragraph (a) of this subsection (3). The employee or his or her designated agent may commence a civil action to recover the penalty set forth in this subsection (3). Any employee or his or her designated agent who has not made a written demand for the payment within sixty days after the date of separation or who has otherwise not been available to receive payment shall not be entitled to any such penalty under this subsection (3). A payment under this subsection (3) shall be made in the form of a check draft or voucher in the name of the employee.

(4) If, at the time of the death of any employee, an employer is indebted to the employee for wages or compensation, and no personal representative of the employee's estate has been appointed, such employer shall pay the amount earned, vested, and determinable to the deceased employee's surviving spouse. If there is no surviving spouse, the employer shall pay the amount due to the deceased employee's next legal heir upon the request of such heir. If a personal representative for the employee has been appointed and is known to the employer prior to payment of the amount due to the spouse or other legal heir, the employer shall pay the amount due to such personal representative upon the request of such representative. The employer shall require proof of a claimant's relationship to the deceased employee by affidavit and require such claimant to acknowledge the receipt of any payment in writing. Any payments made by the employer pursuant to the provisions of this section shall operate as a full and complete discharge of the employer's indebtedness to the extent of the payment, and no employer shall thereafter be liable to the deceased employee's estate or to the deceased employee's personal representative. Any amounts received by a surviving spouse or legal heir shall be considered in diminution of the allowance to the spouse or legal heir pursuant to the "Colorado Probate Code", articles 10 to 17 of title 15, C.R.S. Nothing in this section shall create a substantive right that does not exist in any agreement between the employer and the employee.

Annotator's note. Since § 8-4-109 is similar to § 8-4-104 as it existed prior to the 2003 amendment to article 4, which resulted in the relocation of provisions, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

The purpose of the Colorado Wage Claim Act is to ensure that wages are paid in a timely manner and to provide adequate judicial relief in the event wages are not paid. An employer is liable under the act if the employer does not pay an employee wages he or she earned at the time of discharge. Fang v. Showa Entetsu Co., 91 P.3d 419 (Colo. App. 2003).

Vacation pay is within the definition of "wages or compensation". Hartman v. Freedman, 197 Colo. 275, 591 P.2d 1318 (1979).

Employee entitled to additional wages based on a company "comp time" program. Remote Switch Sys. v. Delangis, 126 P.3d 269 (Colo. App. 2005).

Stock options may be within the definition of "wages or compensation". Therefore, district court improperly dismissed claim for stock option. Montemayor v. Jacor Commc'ns, Inc., 64 P.3d 916 (Colo. App. 2002).

Share of a legal fee was not "wages or compensation". Coffee v. Inman, 728 P.2d 376 (Colo. App. 1986).

Uncollected commissions are wages earned and due at discharge. Where salesmen were terminated prior to the closing and the collection of the commissions by the broker, wages were earned or due at the time of their discharge. Hofer v. Polly Little Realtors, Inc., 37 Colo. App. 86, 543 P.2d 114 (1975).

Or at time fully earned. At the time the employment relationship is severed, an employer need not pay, immediately, compensation not yet fully earned under a compensation agreement. But the implication is clear that such wages become immediately due at the time they are fully earned. Hofer v. Polly Little Realtors, Inc., 37 Colo. App. 86, 543 P.2d 114 (1975).

This section fails to offer any relief to employees whose wages are withheld while they are still employed. Consequently, plaintiff had no choice but to wait until he left the company to pursue his claim, because the claim accrued when the employment relationship ended, not when the wages were withheld. Farris v. ITT Cannon, a Div. of ITT Corp., 834 F. Supp. 1260 (D. Colo. 1993).

This section and § 8-4-105 are mutually exclusive. Hofer v. Polly Little Realtors, Inc., 37 Colo. App. 86, 543 P.2d 114 (1975).

And distinguishable. This section creates a right in an employee under one set of circumstances together with a cause of action for a penalty, while § 8-4-105 creates a right in an employee under a different set of circumstances and does not provide for a penalty. Hofer v. Polly Little Realtors, Inc., 37 Colo. App. 86, 543 P.2d 114 (1975).

Salesmen employed on a commission basis cannot be terminated with impunity prior to a closing and thus be deprived of large commissions obtained for their employers as a result of their efforts. Hofer v. Polly Little Realtors, Inc., 37 Colo. App. 86, 543 P.2d 114 (1975).

Determination of good faith under subsection (3) is matter for trial court. Cortez v. Brokaw, 632 P.2d 635 (Colo. App. 1981); Kennedy v. Leo Payne Broad., 648 P.2d 673 (Colo. App. 1982); Jet Courier Serv., Inc. v. Mulei, 771 P.2d 486 (Colo. 1989); Porter v. Castle Rock Ford Lincoln, 895 P.2d 1146 (Colo. App. 1995).

Trial court properly awarded the statutory penalty pursuant to subsection (3). "Without good faith legal justification" means willfully withheld without good cause; however, willful withholding does not require a showing of malice or similar motivation, rather, there need only be a demonstration that compensation is willfully withheld without good cause. Porter v. Castle Rock Ford Lincoln, 895 P.2d 1146 (Colo. App. 1995).

A plaintiff granted a money judgment under this section is a winning party entitled to reasonable attorney fees, and a defendant does not become the "winning party" simply because the plaintiff does not prevail on each of its asserted claims. Porter v. Castle Rock Ford Lincoln, 895 P.2d 1146 (Colo. App. 1995).

Entitlement to attorney fees. If plaintiff was required to bring a claim for both wages and penalties under this section and § 8-4-105 in order to be entitled to attorney fees, the reference to § 8-4-105 in § 8-4-114 would be meaningless, contrary to the other language of the statute, and inconsistent with the rules of statutory construction which require that the "entire statute is intended to be effective" and that every word must be given effect, if possible. Hofer v. Polly Little Realtors, Inc., 37 Colo. App. 86, 543 P.2d 114 (1975).

Employee commenced an action within the meaning of the Wage Claim Act seeking additional wages owed to him or her. Because employee prevailed in that action, as the "winning party" under that claim, he or she was entitled to an award of attorney fees relating to the prosecution of that claim. Remote Switch Sys. v. Delangis, 126 P.3d 269 (Colo. App. 2005) (decided under former § 8-4-114).

Failure to specify in complaint the precise statute on which claim is based does not prevent plaintiff from seeking attorney fees. Fang v. Showa Entetsu Co., 91 P.3d 419 (Colo. App. 2003) (decided under former § 8-4-114).

Section 8-4-114 applies to recovery under either. Even though it is not clear from the judgment, based on the jury verdict, whether the employee's recovery was under this section or § 8-4-105, § 8-4-114 applies to either. Keeton v. Rike, 38 Colo. App. 505, 559 P.2d 262 (1977).

Attorney fees to be taxed as a cost of suit cannot be construed as an additional penalty, i.e., recoverable only if the judgment in favor of the employee contains a penalty. Such a construction would discourage employees from instituting suit, since the judgment intended to make them whole would be substantially reduced by outlays for attorney fees. The consequence of this latter construction would be to defeat the fundamental purpose of the statute. One cannot assume that an unjust or oppressive result was contemplated by the general assembly. Hofer v. Polly Little Realtors, Inc., 37 Colo. App. 86, 543 P.2d 114 (1975).

Penalty assessable under subsection (3) is for wages undisputed but unpaid. Hartman v. Freedman, 197 Colo. 275, 591 P.2d 1318 (1979).

An employer who fails to pay an employee the wages earned by the employee at the time of the employee's discharge is liable under section, even if the employer had the absolute right to discharge the employee. Lee v. Great Empire Broad., Inc., 794 P.2d 1032 (Colo. App. 1989).

Conversely, even though an employee's discharge may constitute a violation of contract or other legal wrong by the employer, this section is not applicable to the circumstance if the employer pays all wages earned by the employee at the time of the employee's discharge. Lee v. Great Empire Broad., Inc., 794 P.2d 1032 (Colo. App. 1989).

This section has been held to apply to payments becoming due after the date of the discharge, provided those future payments have been "earned," i.e., they are "vested and determinable," at the time of employee's termination. In such circumstances, the future payment must be made immediately upon becoming due or the employer becomes liable for the statutory penalty under the provisions of subsection (3). Lee v. Great Empire Broad., Inc., 794 P.2d 1032 (Colo. App. 1989).

Liability of corporate officers for wages and attorney fees. Proof of good faith legal justification for refusal to pay wages by an employer is not required for the recovery of wages and attorney fees by an employee. Cusimano v. Metro Auto, Inc., 860 P.2d 532 (Colo. App. 1992).

An employer's claim of breach of fiduciary duty is not a good faith legal justification for not timely paying an employee's final wages pursuant to this article. Hartman v. Cmty. Responsibility Ctr., Inc., 87 P.3d 202 (Colo. App. 2003).

The officers and agents of a corporation are not jointly and severally liable for payment of employee wages and other compensation the corporation owes to its employees under the employment contract and the Colorado Wage Claim Act. Leonard v. McMorris, 320 F.3d 1116 (10th Cir. 2003).

A general manager whose duties included scheduling of overtime work but who had been given no authority or responsibility over wage payment policies was not subject to personal liability under the Wage Claim Act. Major v. Chons Bros., Inc., 53 P.3d 781 (Colo. App. 2002).

Federal Bankruptcy Code does not preempt claims against corporate officers under the Wage Claim Act. Claims under the Wage Claim Act would be preempted if brought against the corporation because the corporation filed a bankruptcy petition. The Bankruptcy Code does not, however, extend its protections to individuals or entities that have not filed a bankruptcy petition. In the absence of such a statutory provision, no direct conflict exists between the Bankruptcy Code and the Wage Claim Act. Leonard v. McMorris, 106 F. Supp.2d 1098 (D. Colo. 2000), rev'd on other grounds, 320 F.3d 1116 (10th Cir. 2003).

Evidence held sufficient to support finding that defendant employer owed plaintiff wages and commissions. Brogan v. Bill Eger Motors, Inc., 39 Colo. App. 104, 561 P.2d 377 (1977).

"Without a good-faith legal justification" construed. In order to impose a penalty under this section, a trial court must find from the evidence that the employer willfully withheld compensation due and owing the employee. Beasley v. Mincomp Corp., 683 P.2d 370 (Colo. App. 1984).

Statutory penalty will not be assessed where there was bona fide dispute as to bonus due and payable. Rohr v. Ted Neiters Motor Co., 758 P.2d 186 (Colo. 1988).

Applied in Mau v. E.P.H. Corp., 638 P.2d 777 (Colo. 1981); Paulu v. Lower Ark. Valley Council of Gov'ts, 655 P.2d 1391 (Colo. App. 1982).

8-4-110. Disputes - fees. (1) If, in any action, the employee fails to recover a greater sum than the amount tendered by the employer, the court may award the employer reasonable costs and attorney fees incurred in such action when, in any pleading or other court filing, the employee claims wages or compensation that exceed the greater of seven thousand five hundred dollars in wages or compensation or the jurisdictional limit for the small claims court, whether or not the case was filed in small claims court or whether or not the total amount sought in the action was within small claims court jurisdictional limits. If, in any such action in which the employee seeks to recover any amount of wages or compensation, the employee recovers a sum greater than the amount tendered by the employer, the court may award the employee reasonable costs and attorney fees incurred in such action. If an employer fails or refuses to make a tender within fourteen days after the demand, then such failure or refusal shall be treated as a tender of no money for any purpose under this article.

(1.5) This section shall not apply to a claimant who is found to be an independent contractor and not an employee.

(2) Any person claiming to be aggrieved by violation of any provisions of this article or regulations prescribed pursuant to this article may file suit in any court having jurisdiction over the parties without regard to exhaustion of any administrative remedies.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 8-4-110 is similar to § 8-4-123 as it existed prior to the 2003 amendment to article 4, which resulted in the relocation of provisions, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Arbitration provision in an employment contract that denied the employee the right to a timely civil action pursuant to this section in a Colorado court is void. Lambdin v. Dist. Ct. of Arapahoe Cty., 903 P.2d 1126 (Colo. 1995).

This section explicitly creates a civil remedy to enable employees to pursue their claims for past due wages. Lambdin v. Dist. Ct. of Arapahoe Cty., 903 P.2d 1126 (Colo. 1995).

Award of attorney fees is not conditioned on finding that claim was "frivolous". Carruthers v. Carrier Access Corp., 251 P.3d 1199 (Colo. App. 2010).

Guidelines for exercise of court's discretion to award attorney fees under subsection (1) require consideration of all relevant circumstances, including 10 factors specifically listed. Carruthers v. Carrier Access Corp., 251 P.3d 1199 (Colo. App. 2010).

"Discretion" does not imply a complete lack of standards. When awarding attorney fees, the court is required to make sufficient findings to permit meaningful appellate review. Carruthers v. Carrier Access Corp., 251 P.3d 1199 (Colo. App. 2010).

Denial of a $2,000 "per diem courtesy" for a witness, as an item of costs, was within the court's discretion. Carruthers v. Carrier Access Corp., 251 P.3d 1199 (Colo. App. 2010).

Denial of attorney fees incurred on appeal was permissible where defendant did not fully prevail on its challenge to the trial court's award of attorney fees and costs. Carruthers v. Carrier Access Corp., 251 P.3d 1199 (Colo. App. 2010).

Where plaintiff is determined not to have been an "employee" but an independent contractor, award of attorney fees to defendant is proper. Voller v. Gertz, 107 P.3d 1129 (Colo. App. 2004) (decided under former § 8-4-114).

Where defendant prevails solely because the trier of fact determines that plaintiff was not an "employee", but was instead an independent contractor, an award of attorney fees to defendant is improper. Mahan v. Capitol Hill Internal Med. P.C., 151 P.3d 685 (Colo.

App. 2006) (following Hyland v. Pikes Peak Capital Corp., 714 P.2d 914 (Colo. App. 1985) and declining to follow Voller v. Gertz, 107 P.3d 1129 (Colo. App. 2004)) (all decided under former § 8-4-114 prior to its repeal in 2003).

8-4-111. Enforcement - duty of director - duties of district or city attorneys. (1) It is the duty of the director to inquire diligently for any violation of this article, and to institute the actions for penalties provided for in this article in such cases as he or she may deem proper, and to enforce generally the provisions of this article.

(2) Nothing in this article shall be construed to limit the authority of the district attorney of any county or city and county or the city attorney of any city to prosecute actions for such violations of this article as may come to his or her knowledge, or to enforce the provisions of this article independently and without specific direction of the director, or to limit the right of any wage claimant to sue directly or through an assignee for any wages or penalty due him or her under the provisions of this article.

Obedience to subpoenas issued by the director or his or her duly authorized representative shall be enforced by the courts in any county or city and county, as provided in section 24-4-105 (5), C.R.S., if said subpoenas do not call for any appearance at a distance greater than one hundred miles.

For the convenience and necessity of the parties or their representatives, the division is authorized to conduct such hearing by telephone if the employer would otherwise be required to travel to locations of the division of labor from outside the general vicinity of such locations.

(2) A certified copy of any final order of the director, imposing a fine or penalty pursuant to this article, may be filed with the clerk of the district court having jurisdiction over the parties at any time after the entry of the order. The certified copy shall be recorded by the clerk of the district court in the judgment book of said court and entry thereof made in the judgment docket, and it shall thenceforth have all the effect of a judgment of the district court, and execution may issue thereon out of said court as in other cases. All fines and penalties collected shall be paid to the division and transmitted to the state treasurer for credit to the general fund.

(2) In addition to any other penalty imposed by this article, any employer or agent of an employer who, being able to pay wages or compensation and being under a duty to pay, willfully refuses to pay as provided in this article, or falsely denies the amount of a wage claim, or the validity thereof, or that the same is due, with intent to secure for himself, herself, or another person any discount upon such indebtedness or any underpayment of such indebtedness or with intent to annoy, harass, oppress, hinder, delay, or defraud the person to whom such indebtedness is due, is guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not more than three hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than thirty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment. For purposes of this section, "being able to pay wages or compensation" does not include an employer who is unable to pay wages or compensation by reason of a chapter 7 bankruptcy action or other court action that results in the employer having limited control over his or her assets.

(b) Has consented to designation of the director as the agent available to accept service of process for any action against such field labor contractor at any and all times when such field labor contractor has departed from the jurisdiction of this state or has become unavailable to accept service;

(c) Has demonstrated evidence to the director that he or she has satisfied the insurance requirements of articles 40 to 47 of this title.

(2) Upon notice and hearing in accordance with rules prescribed by the director, the director may refuse to issue and may suspend, revoke, or refuse to renew a certificate of registration of any field labor contractor if the director finds that such field labor contractor:

In any case where a complaint has been filed with the director or the director's designated representative regarding a violation of this article, or where the director has reasonable grounds to believe that a field labor contractor has violated provisions of this article, the director or the director's designated representative may investigate and issue subpoenas as provided by section 8-4-112 requiring the attendance and testimony of any witness or the production of any evidence in connection with such investigation.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 8-4-121 is similar to § 8-4-125 as it existed prior to the 2003 amendment to article 4, which resulted in the relocation of provisions, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section, by its plain language, voids any agreement, written or oral, that constitutes a waiver or modification of any employee's rights under the Wage Claim Act. Morris v. Towers Financial Corp., 916 P.2d 678 (Colo. App. 1996).

The plain meaning of this section is that an agreement to arbitrate that conflicts with the rights established by the Wage Claim Act cannot be enforced against the employee. Lambdin v. Dist. Ct. of Arapahoe Cty., 903 P.2d 1126 (Colo. 1995).

The supremacy clause governs when the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) applies to an employment contract and requires arbitration even in a Colorado Wage Claim Act (CWCA) claim despite the firm state policy that CWCA claims should not be subject to arbitration. Where a contract containing an arbitration clause evidences a transaction involving commerce, the FAA applies and the agreement to arbitrate must be enforced. Grohn v. Sisters of Charity Health, 960 P.2d 722 (Colo. App. 1998); Byerly v. Kirkpatrick Pettis Smith Polian, Inc., 996 P.2d 771 (Colo. App. 2000).

The FAA preempts this section to the extent that an agreement to arbitrate a dispute relating to employee compensation is not void and that public policy is not thereby offended. Byerly v. Kirkpatrick Pettis Smith Polian, Inc., 996 P.2d 771 (Colo. App. 2000).

Since Wage Claim Act does not create a substantive right to compensation for labor and services performed, employee's right to compensation is governed by the employment agreement and not by the statute; therefore, employment contract is not void under this section. Barnes v. Van Schaack Mortg., 787 P.2d 207 (Colo. App. 1990).

Arbitration provision in an employment contract that denies the employee the right to a timely civil action in a Colorado court pursuant to § 8-2-123 is void. Lambdin v. Dist. Ct. of Arapahoe Ct., 903 P.2d 1126 (Colo. 1995).

8-4-122. Limitation of actions. All actions brought pursuant to this article shall be commenced within two years after the cause of action accrues and not after that time; except that all actions brought for a willful violation of this article shall be commenced within three years after the cause of action accrues and not after that time.

8-4-123. Termination of occupancy pursuant to contract of employment - legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly hereby finds, determines, and declares that many businesses, such as nursing homes or building management companies, either desire or are required by law to have staff on premises at all times. As part of the compensation for such employees, many employers offer housing to employees. However, once that employment relationship ceases, it may become undesirable for such employees to occupy the premises for many reasons, including the safety of the employer's patients, clients, customers, or tenants. Under traditional landlord and tenant law, such employees may have established the technical or legal right to occupy the premises for a fixed term that continues far beyond the cessation of the employment relationship. However, in employment situations, such occupancy is not a tenancy, but a license to occupy the premises pursuant to an employment relationship. The occupancy of the premises by the employee is not entered into by the employer for the purpose of providing housing, but merely as a means to provide services to the employer's patients, clients, customers, or tenants. In certain cases, it may be necessary to curtail the occupancy of former employees in order to protect the rights or safety of an employer's tenants or patients.

(2) (a) Pursuant to a written agreement meeting the requirements of paragraph (b) of this subsection (2), a license to occupy the premises entered into as part of an employee's compensation may be terminated at any time after the employment relationship ceases between an employer and employee. A termination of a license to occupy the premises shall be effective three days after the service of written notice of termination of a license to occupy the premises.

(b) An agreement made pursuant to this section shall be in writing and shall include the following:

(I) The names of the employer and employee;

(II) A statement that the license to occupy the premises is provided to the employee as part of the employee's compensation and is subject to termination at any time after the employment relationship ceases;

(III) The address of the premises; and

(IV) The signature of both the employer and the employee.

(c) The notice of termination of a license to occupy the premises shall describe the premises and shall set forth the time when the license to occupy the premises will terminate. The notice shall be signed by the employer or the employer's agent or attorney.

(3) If an employee fails to vacate the premises within three days after the receipt of the notice of termination of the license to occupy the premises, the employer may contact the county sheriff to have the employee removed from the premises. The county sheriff shall remove the employee and any personal property of the employee from the premises upon the showing to the county sheriff of the notice of termination of the license to occupy the premises and agreement pursuant to which the license to occupy the premises was granted.

8-6-101. Legislative declaration - minimum wage of workers - matter of statewide concern - prohibition on local minimum wage enactments. (1) The welfare of the state of Colorado demands that workers be protected from conditions of labor that have a pernicious effect on their health and morals, and it is therefore declared, in the exercise of the police and sovereign power of the state of Colorado, that inadequate wages and unsanitary conditions of labor exert such pernicious effect.

(2) The general assembly hereby finds and determines that issues related to the wages of workers in Colorado have important statewide ramifications for the labor force in this state. The general assembly, therefore, declares that the minimum wages of workers in this state are a matter of statewide concern.

(3) (a) No unit of local government, whether by acting through its governing body or an initiative, a referendum, or any other process, shall enact any jurisdiction-wide laws with respect to minimum wages; except that a unit of local government may set minimum wages paid to its own employees.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (3), any local government regulation or law pertaining to minimum wages in effect as of January 1, 1999, shall remain in full force and effect until such law is repealed by the local government entity that enacted the law.

(c) If it is determined by the officer or agency responsible for distributing federal moneys to a local government that compliance with this subsection (3) may cause denial of federal moneys that would otherwise be available or would otherwise be inconsistent with requirements of federal law, this section shall be suspended, but only to the extent necessary to prevent denial of the moneys or to eliminate the inconsistency with federal requirements.

ANNOTATION

Not exception to rule of employment at will. Statutory pronouncement that makes it unlawful to "employ workers in any occupation within this state under conditions of labor detrimental to their health or morals" is a broad, general statement of policy that is inadequate to justify adoption of an exception to the rule that an indefinite general hiring is terminable at will by either party to the employment. Corbin v. Sinclair Marketing, Inc., 684 P.2d 265 (Colo. App. 1984).

8-6-105. Director to investigate. It is the duty of the director to inquire into the wages paid to employees and into the conditions of labor surrounding said employees in any occupation in this state if the director has reason to believe that said conditions of labor are detrimental to the health or morals of said employees or that the wages paid to a substantial number of employees are inadequate to supply the necessary cost of living and to maintain such employees in health. At the request of not less than twenty-five persons engaged in any occupation, the director shall forthwith make such investigation as is provided in this article. Such investigation may be made at any time, upon the initiative of the director.

8-6-106. Determination of minimum wage and conditions. The director shall determine the minimum wages sufficient for living wages for persons of ordinary ability, including minimum wages sufficient for living wages, whether paid according to time rate or piece rate; the minimum wages sufficient for living wages for learners and apprentices; standards of conditions of labor and hours of employment not detrimental to health or morals for workers; and what are unreasonably long hours. In all such determinations, the director shall be bound by the provisions of this article and of section 15 of article XVIII of the state constitution; except that, if a higher minimum wage rate is established by applicable federal law or rules, the director shall be bound by such federal law or rules.

8-6-107. Powers of director - duty of employer. (1) The director, for the purposes of this article, has power to investigate and ascertain the conditions of labor and the wages in the different occupations, whether paid by time rate or piece rate, in the state of Colorado. The director has power, in person or through any authorized representative, to inspect and examine and make excerpts from any books, reports, contracts, payrolls, documents, papers, and other records of any employer that in any way pertain to the question of wages and to require from any such employer full and true statements of the wages paid.

(2) Every employer shall keep a register of the names, ages, dates of employment, and residence addresses of all employees. It is the duty of every such employer, whether a person, firm, or corporation, to furnish to the director, upon request, any reports or information which the director may require to carry out the purposes of this article, such reports and information to be verified by the oath of the person, or a member of the firm or the president, secretary, or manager of the corporation, furnishing the same if and when so requested by the director; and the director or any authorized representative shall be allowed free access to the place of business of such employer for the purpose of making any investigation authorized by this article.

8-6-108. Public hearings - witness fees - contempt - director to make rules.

(1) The director may hold public hearings at such times and places as he deems proper for the purpose of investigating any of the matters he is authorized to investigate by this article at which hearings employers, employees, or other interested persons may appear and give testimony as to the matter under consideration. The director has the power to subpoena and compel the attendance of any witness and to administer oaths, also, by subpoena, to compel the production of any books, papers, or other evidence at any public hearing of the director or at any session of any wage board. All witnesses subpoenaed by said director shall be paid the same mileage and per diem as are allowed by law to witnesses in civil cases before the district court of the state of Colorado. If any person fails to attend as a witness or to bring with him any books, papers, or other evidence when subpoenaed by the director or refuses to testify when ordered so to do, the director may apply to any district court in this state to compel obedience on the part of such person. The district court shall thereupon compel obedience by proceedings for contempt as in cases of disobedience of any order of said court in a proceeding pending before said court. The director shall not be bound by the technical rules of evidence. Said director may hold meetings for the transaction of any of his business at such times and places as he prescribes.

(2) The director has power to make reasonable and proper rules and procedure and to enforce said rules and procedure.

8-6-108.5. Minimum wage - rules. (1) Effective July 1, 1977, the minimum wage for minors may be fifteen percent below the minimum wage for other workers; except that the full minimum wage shall be paid to any emancipated minor. An emancipated minor shall mean any individual less than eighteen years of age who:

- (a) Has the sole or primary responsibility for his own support;
- (b) Is married and living away from parents or guardian;
- (c) Is able to show that his well-being is substantially dependent upon being gainfully employed.

(2) An employer may pay a rate of fifteen percent lower than the minimum wage to persons certified by the director to be less efficient due to a physical disability.

(3) The director may issue only such rules as are necessary to carry out the provisions of this article and as are consistent with the purposes and intent of section 8-6-101 and section 15 of article XVIII of the state constitution; except that, if a higher minimum wage rate is established by applicable federal law or rules, the director's rules shall be consistent with such federal law or rules.

8-6-109. Methods of establishing minimum wages - wage board. (1) If after investigation the director is of the opinion that the conditions of employment surrounding said employees are detrimental to the health or morals or that a substantial number of workers in any occupation are receiving wages, whether by time rate or piece rate, inadequate to supply the necessary costs of living and to maintain the workers in health, the director shall proceed to establish minimum wage rates either directly or by the indirect method described in subsection (2) of this section. If he selects the direct method, the director shall establish the minimum wage rates.

(2) If he adopts the indirect method, the director shall establish a wage board consisting of not more than three representatives of employers in the occupation in question, and of an equal number of persons to represent the employees in said occupation, and of an equal number of disinterested persons to represent the public, and someone representing the director if it is desired. The director shall name and appoint all members of the wage board and designate the chairman thereof. The selection of members representing employers and employees shall be, so far as practicable, through election by employers and employees respectively, subject to approval and selection by the director. The members of the wage board shall be compensated at the same rate and fees for service as jurors in courts of record, and they shall be allowed their necessary traveling and clerical expenses incurred in the actual performance of their duties, to be paid from the appropriations for the expenses of the division.

(3) The proceedings and deliberations of such wage board shall be made a matter of record for the use of the director and shall be admissible as evidence in any proceedings before the director. Each wage board has the same power as the director to subpoena witnesses, administer oaths, and compel the production of books, papers, and other evidence. Witnesses subpoenaed by a wage board shall be allowed the same compensation as when subpoenaed by the director.

ANNOTATION

Pursuant to Colorado's Minimum Wage Act, the director of the Colorado division of labor has been delegated the authority to investigate and determine the wages and employment conditions in certain occupations. If, following such investigation, the director finds that employment conditions in any industry endanger employees' health or morals, the director may directly or through a "wage board" adopt a wage order to establish minimum wage rates and standard conditions of employment in the affected industry. Weissman v. Crawford Rehab. Servs., 914 P.2d 380 (Colo. App. 1995).

8-6-110. Wage board - duties - report - quorum. The director may transmit to each wage board all pertinent information in his possession relative to the wages paid or material to the subject of inquiry of the occupation in question. Each wage board shall endeavor to determine, if requested so to do by the director, the standard conditions of employment; the minimum wage, whether by time rate or piece rate, adequate to maintain in health and to supply with the necessary cost of living an employee of ordinary ability in the occupation in question, or in any branches thereof; and suitable minimum wages, graded, so far as practicable, on a rising scale toward the minimum allowed experienced workers, for learners and apprentices. When a majority of the members of a wage board agree upon standard conditions of employment or minimum wage board determinations, they shall report such determinations to the director, together with the reasons therefor and the facts relating thereto. A majority of the members of any such wage board shall constitute a quorum.

affected industry. Weissman v. Crawford Rehab. Servs., 914 P.2d 380 (Colo. App. 1995).

8-6-111. Director to review report. (1) Upon the receipt of a report from a wage board, the director shall review the same and may approve or disapprove any determination or recommit the subject to the same or a new wage board. If the director approves any of the determinations of the wage board, said director shall publish notice not less than once a week for two successive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation published in the county in which any business directly affected thereby is located, that he will, on a date and at a place named in said notice, hold a public meeting, at which all persons in favor of or opposed to said recommendations will be given a hearing.

(2) After publication of notice and the meeting, the director, if so desired, may make and render such an order as may be proper or necessary to adopt the recommendations and carry the same into effect and require all employees in the occupation directly affected thereby to preserve and comply with such recommendations and order. Such order is effective thirty days after it is made and rendered and shall be in full force and effect on and after that day. After the order is effective, it is unlawful for any employer to violate or disregard any of the terms of the order or to employ any worker in any occupation covered by the order at lower wages or under other conditions than authorized or permitted by the order. The director shall, as far as is practicable, mail a copy of any such order to every employer affected thereby; and every employer affected by the order shall keep a copy thereof posted in a conspicuous place in such employer's establishment. Such order shall include a notice of the contents of sections 8-12-105 (3), 8-12-115 (4) (b) (II), and 8-12-116 (2).

(3) In case of an emergency the director may authorize or permit the employment of any person for more hours per day or per week than the maximum now fixed by law.

(4) Overtime, at a rate of one and one-half times the regular rate of pay, may be permitted by the director under conditions and rules and for increased minimum wages which the director, after investigation, determines and prescribes by order and which shall apply equally to all employers in such industry or occupation.

8-6-112. New determination of wages and conditions. Whenever a minimum wage rate or a new standard of conditions of employment has been established in any occupation, the director, if he deems proper or necessary so to do, upon petition of either employers or employees, may reconvene the wage board or establish a new wage board, and any recommendation made by such board shall be dealt with in the same manner as the original recommendation of a wage board. Pending any new determination, any minimum wage rate and any new standard of conditions of employment theretofore established shall be and continue in force and effect. It is the duty of the director to survey and review for adequacy established wage orders made pursuant to the provisions of section 8-6-111 at least every four years, whether or not the director is petitioned to do so by either employers or employees.

ANNOTATION

Section should be liberally construed. This section intended to secure wage earners against loss of their earnings from insolvency of employers, is based upon a sound public policy and should be liberally construed in order to accomplish the purpose of its enactment. Central Sav. Bank v. Newton, 59 Colo. 150, 147 P. 690 (1915).

But this section cannot be invoked for the purpose of supporting a decision not based upon the letter or spirit of its enactment, for the general assembly has not created a lien, but has made debts due for labor preferred claims against the property of the debtor, made claimants for wages preferred creditors, and provided that they shall be first paid, which is quite a different thing from the creation of a statutory lien. Central Sav. Bank v. Newton, 59 Colo. 150, 147 P. 690 (1915).

This section contains no provisions as to the time in which exceptions to claims must be filed. Central Sav. Bank v. Newton, 59 Colo. 150, 147 P. 690 (1915).

For an early enactment on the subject of this section, see Ray v. Hiller, 11 Colo. 445, 18 P. 622 (1888).

8-10-102. Statement of claim presented. Any laborer, servant, or employee desiring to enforce his claim for wages under this article shall present a statement under oath showing the amount due, the kind of work for which the wages are due, and when performed to the officer, person, or court charged with the property within twenty days after the seizure thereof on any execution or writ of attachment or within sixty days after same has been placed in the hands of any receiver or trustee, and thereupon it is the duty of the person or court having or receiving such statement to pay the amount of the claim to the person entitled thereto.

8-10-103. Payment - prorating - prior mortgage not impaired. No claim under this article shall be paid until after the expiration of the time in which to present such claim. If the funds realized from the sale of the property seized are insufficient to pay the total claims presented, such funds shall be prorated on such claims. The provisions of this article shall not be construed to extend to creditors who held a duly recorded mortgage upon the property attached which was given for a debt actually existing from such mortgage before the labor was performed.

ANNOTATION

This section places the claims of employees for labor in a preferred class to be paid in preference to other simple contract creditors. Central Sav. Bank v. Newton, 59 Colo. 150, 147 P. 690 (1915).

But it does not create an express statutory lien superior to all other liens without reference to priority. Central Sav. Bank v. Newton, 59 Colo. 150, 147 P. 690 (1915).

And it is not intended to give such claims a preference upon the corpus of mortgaged property. Central Sav. Bank v. Newton, 59 Colo. 150, 147 P. 690 (1915); Helm v. Smith, 62 Colo. 203, 162 P. 143 (1916).

A recorded mortgage for an existing debt takes precedence over claims for labor subsequently performed. Central Sav. Bank v. Newton, 59 Colo. 150, 147 P. 690 (1915).

Claims against a going railroad might be preferred over prior mortgage liens. First Nat'l Bank v. Wyman, 16 Colo. App. 468, 66 P. 456 (1901).

But ordinary liabilities of a railway company are preferred to a mortgage debt only when accrued within six months prior to the appointment of a receiver, and this rule is de- parted from only in extreme cases and for special reasons. Helm v. Smith, 62 Colo. 203, 162 P. 143 (1916).

Moreover, the very existence of such a rule presupposes an affirmative showing of facts sufficient to invoke and warrant its application; and where the record fails to disclose that the railroad involved is a public or quasi-public corporation, or that it had ever been operated as such, and there is no attempt to show that the claims were valid and existing obligations against the company at the time of presentment, much less that they have any of the other attributes or characteristics which would in equity entitle them to preference over a mortgage lien, preference will be denied. Central Sav. Bank v. Newton, 59 Colo. 150, 147 P. 690 (1915).

Thus the salary of an attorney which accrued more than 13 months prior to the appointment of a receiver for a railroad, no effort having been made to enforce payment and the attorney having all the time full knowledge of the bonded indebtedness, was not entitled to a preference. Helm v. Smith, 62 Colo. 203, 162 P. 143 (1916).

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "One Year Review of Torts", see 36 Dicta 64 (1959).

8-12-102. Legislative declaration. (1) It is the policy of this state to foster the economic, social, and educational development of young people through employment. Work is an integral factor in providing a sense of purpose, direction, and self-esteem necessary to the overall physical and mental health of an individual. In the first part of this century, state and federal laws and regulations were needed to prevent the exploitation of child labor. Unfortunately, such legislation also has tended, on occasion, to limit and curtail opportunities for minors to participate in reasonable work experiences. Young people, especially those who have completed high school or occupational training and no longer are in school, should not be denied employment opportunities because of arbitrary minimum age limits. Work, however, should be coordinated with schooling wherever appropriate. Work and study combined must be developed in the interest of the youth to be trained.

(2) (a) The general assembly hereby finds and determines that certain issues related to youth employment in Colorado have important statewide ramifications for the labor force in this state. In particular, the general assembly declares that the issue of minimum wages, as it relates to youth employment in this state, is a matter of statewide concern.

(b) No unit of local government, whether by acting through its governing body or an initiative, a referendum, or any other process, shall enact any jurisdiction-wide law or ordinance with respect to the minimum wages earned by young people unless otherwise specifically authorized to do so by this article; except that a unit of local government may enact such provisions with respect to its own employees.

This section does not contemplate nor create a private cause of action for parents against their children's employers. Wrongful death action brought by a minor employee's parents against the minor's employer for the death of the minor which occurred during the course of the scope of the minor's employment was properly dismissed as being barred by the exclusivity provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act. Henderson v. Bear, 968 P.2d 144 (Colo. App. 1998).

- (3) The director may grant exemptions from any provision of this article, except for sections 8-12-113 and 8-12-114, for an individual minor if he finds that such an exemption would be in the best interests of the minor involved. In granting exemptions, the director shall consider, among other things, the previous training which the minor has received in his proposed occupation and his knowledge of the proper safety measures to be taken in connection with such occupation. The director may require any applicant for an exemption from section 8-12-110 to submit to a test of his ability to perform the skills required for the proposed occupation. (2) The official who refused to issue or cancelled the school release permit shall, upon demand made within five days after the refusal or cancellation, promptly furnish the minor and his parent or guardian with a written statement of the reasons for such refusal or cancellation.

(3) Within five days after the receipt of such statement, the minor and his parent or guardian may petition the court for an order directing the issuance or reissuance of a school release permit. The petition shall state the reasons why the court should issue such an order, and the petitioner shall attach to such petition the statement of the issuing officer obtained as provided in subsection (2) of this section.

(4) The court shall hold a hearing and receive such further testimony and evidence as it deems necessary. If the court finds that the issuance or reissuance of a permit is in the best interest of the minor, it shall grant the petition.

(5) No fee shall be charged by the court in such proceedings.

Each day that the conduct constituting the violation is continued after the order is made final, and each minor employed in violation of this article, constitutes a separate offense. The order imposing the penalty shall become final upon issuance, and the penalty shall be due and payable thirty days after the order assessing the penalty is entered, unless prior to that time the order has been modified or a hearing on the penalty has been requested as provided by section 24-4-105, C.R.S. All penalties imposed by this section shall be collected as provided in section 8-1-142.

(b) (I) If investigation of any place of employment or complaint discloses a violation of section 8-12-105 (3), the director shall give the employer written notice describing the violation and specifying the provisions of this article that such employer is allegedly violating. Within ten days after receipt of such notice of violation, the employer may file a written request for a hearing on the issue of whether the violation exists, which hearing shall be conducted in accordance with section 24-4-105, C.R.S. At any time thereafter, the director may order the violating employer to pay a penalty pursuant to subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (b). The order imposing the penalty shall become final upon issuance, and the penalty shall be due and payable thirty days after the order assessing the penalty is entered, unless prior to that time the order has been modified or a hearing on the penalty has been requested as provided by section 24-4-105, C.R.S. All penalties imposed by this section shall be collected as provided in section 8-1-142.

(II) Failure to comply with the provisions of this paragraph (b) shall make the offender liable for administrative fines pursuant to the following penalty schedule:

8-13-102.1. Period of employment - relation to conservation of fuel. (1) The general assembly hereby finds and declares that in order to give full effect to state programs for the conservation of fuel and not to impede or prevent the execution of any fuel conservation powers the governor may impose pursuant to part 3 of article 20 of title 24, C.R.S., it is necessary to enact this section. The general assembly further finds and declares that it is necessary to enact this section in order for certain industries to support and cooperate with such state programs and powers and to assist their employees in the conservation of fuel by providing opportunity for certain employers to establish four-day workweeks thereby omitting one day of travel to and from work for employees.

A general contractor owes a duty of ordinary care to provide the employees of a subcontractor a reasonably safe place in which to work. J & K Constr. Co. v. Molton, 154 Colo. 214, 390 P.2d 68 (1964).

8-14-102. Scaffolding - complaints - duty of building inspector. (1) Whenever complaint is made to the building inspector of any town or city wherein work is being done that the scaffolding or the slings, hangers, blocks, pulleys, stays, braces, ladders, or ropes of any swinging or stationary scaffolding used in the construction, alteration, repairing, painting, cleaning, or pointing of buildings within the limits of such city are unsafe or liable to prove dangerous to the life or limb of any person, the building inspector shall immediately cause an inspection to be made of the scaffolding or the slings, hangers, blocks, pulleys, stays, braces, ladders, irons, or other parts connected therewith. If he declares it unsafe, he shall notify the person responsible for its erection of the fact at once, in writing, and warn him against the use thereof. Such notice may be served personally upon the person responsible for its erection or by affixing it conspicuously to the scaffolding or the part thereof declared to be unsafe. (II) Enter into a contract with a subcontractor that fails to certify to the contractor that the subcontractor shall not knowingly employ or contract with an illegal alien to perform work under the public contract for services.

(b) Each public contract for services shall also include the following provisions:

(I) A provision stating that the contractor has confirmed the employment eligibility of all employees who are newly hired for employment to perform work under the public contract for services through participation in either the e-verify program or the department program;

(II) A provision that prohibits the contractor from using either the e-verify program or the department program procedures to undertake preemployment screening of job applicants while the public contract for services is being performed;

(III) A provision that, if the contractor obtains actual knowledge that a subcontractor performing work under the public contract for services knowingly employs or contracts with an illegal alien, the contractor shall be required to:

(A) Notify the subcontractor and the contracting state agency or political subdivision within three days that the contractor has actual knowledge that the subcontractor is employing or contracting with an illegal alien; and

(B) Terminate the subcontract with the subcontractor if within three days of receiving the notice required pursuant to sub-subparagraph (A) of this subparagraph (III) the subcontractor does not stop employing or contracting with the illegal alien; except that the contractor shall not terminate the contract with the subcontractor if during such three days the subcontractor provides information to establish that the subcontractor has not knowingly employed or contracted with an illegal alien;

(IV) A provision that requires the contractor to comply with any reasonable request by the department made in the course of an investigation that the department is undertaking pursuant to the authority established in subsection (5) of this section.

(3) If a contractor violates a provision of the public contract for services required pursuant to subsection (2) of this section, the state agency or political subdivision may terminate the contract for a breach of the contract. If the contract is so terminated, the contractor shall be liable for actual and consequential damages to the state agency or political subdivision.

(4) A state agency or political subdivision shall notify the office of the secretary of state if a contractor violates a provision of a public contract for services required pursuant to subsection (2) of this section and the state agency or political subdivision terminates the contract for such breach. Based on this notification, the secretary of state shall maintain a list that includes the name of the contractor, the state agency or political subdivision that terminated the public contract for services, and the date of the termination. A contractor shall be removed from the list if two years have passed since the date the contract was terminated, or if a court of competent jurisdiction determines that there has not been a violation of the provision of the public contract for services required pursuant to subsection (2) of this section. A state agency or political subdivision shall notify the office of the secretary of state if a court has made such a determination. The list shall be available for public inspection at the office of the secretary of state and shall be published on the internet on the web site maintained by the office of the secretary of state.

(5) (a) The department may investigate whether a contractor is complying with the provisions of a public contract for services required pursuant to subsection (2) of this section. The department may conduct on-site inspections where a public contract for services is being performed within the state of Colorado, request and review documentation that proves the citizenship of any person performing work on a public contract for services, or take any other reasonable steps that are necessary to determine whether a contractor is complying with the provisions of a public contract for services required pursuant to subsection (2) of this section. The department shall receive complaints of suspected violations of a provision of a public contract for services required pursuant to subsection (2) of this section and shall have discretion to determine which complaints, if any, are to be investigated. The results of any investigation shall not constitute final agency action. The department is authorized to promulgate rules in accordance with article 4 of title 24, C.R.S., to implement the provisions of this subsection (5).

(b) The executive director shall notify a state agency or political subdivision if he or she suspects that there has been a breach of a provision in a public contract for services required pursuant to subsection (2) of this section.

(c) (I) There is hereby created the department program. Any contractor who participates in the department program shall notify the department and the contracting state agency or political subdivision of such participation. A participating contractor shall comply with the provisions of subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (c) and shall consent to department audits conducted in accordance with subparagraph (III) of this paragraph (c). Failure to meet either of these obligations shall constitute a violation of the department program. The executive director shall notify a contracting state agency or political subdivision of such violation.

(II) A participating contractor shall, within twenty days after hiring an employee who is newly hired for employment to perform work under the public contract for services, affirm that the contractor has examined the legal work status of such employee, retained file copies of the documents required by 8 U.S.C. sec. 1324a, and not altered or falsified the identification documents for such employees. The contractor shall provide a written, notarized copy of the affirmation to the contracting state agency or political subdivision.

(III) The department may conduct random audits of state agencies or political subdivisions to review the affidavits and of contractors to review copies of the documents required by subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (c). Audits shall not violate federal law.

(6) Nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring a contractor to violate any terms of participation in the e-verify program.

Such payment shall be made on forms prescribed and furnished by the executive director. The provisions of this section shall not apply to fuel that is especially prepared and sold for use in aircraft or railroad equipment or locomotives.

(b) In the event the available fund balance in the petroleum storage tank fund is greater than twelve million dollars, no surcharge shall be imposed, but if the available fund balance in the fund is less than:

(IV) The moneys in the liquefied petroleum gas inspection fund and all interest earned on the moneys in the fund shall remain in such fund and shall not be credited or transferred to the general fund or any other fund at the end of any fiscal year.

(1.5) Notwithstanding the amount specified for any fee or surcharge in subsection (1) of this section, the executive director by rule or as otherwise provided by law may reduce the amount of one or more of the fees or surcharges if necessary pursuant to section 24-75-402 (3), C.R.S., to reduce the uncommitted reserves of the fund to which all or any portion of one or more of the fees or surcharges is credited. After the uncommitted reserves of the fund are sufficiently reduced, the executive director by rule or as otherwise provided by law may increase the amount of one or more of the fees or surcharges as provided in section 24-75-402 (4), C.R.S.

(2) The fee or surcharge imposed by subsection (1) of this section shall be collected, administered, and enforced in the same manner as the fuel taxes imposed pursuant to the provisions of article 27 of title 39, C.R.S., and the same penalty and interest provisions shall apply.

(3) It is the duty of every manufacturer or distributor as described in subsection (1) of this section to compute the amount of the surcharge payable on all tank truckloads sold by him and separately state the surcharge due on statements issued with each purchase of fuel. In the event that the manufacturer or distributor sells such fuel to a retailer or consumer or consumes such fuel, he shall pay to the department of revenue the surcharge imposed in subsection (1) of this section.

(4) For the purposes of this section:

(a) "Available fund balance" means the sum of the current year revenues and the previous fund balance minus the sum of the obligations approved by the petroleum storage tank committee pursuant to section 8-20.5-104 and the costs incurred by the division of oil and public safety for purposes of administering articles 20 and 20.5 of this title.

8-20-213. Recycled or used motor oil - legislative declaration - definitions - sale. (1) The general assembly hereby finds and declares that the used oil generated by this state each year is a valuable resource that can be reused as an environmentally acceptable re-refined product. The general assembly further finds that the disposal of automotive engine oil and other lubricants is very costly, creates environmental and health hazards, and depletes the state's and the nation's dwindling supply of petroleum. It is the intent of the general assembly to reduce the amount of used oil that is improperly disposed of and to increase the amount that is reused as a re-refined product.

(2) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "API service classification" means one of the two letter classification performance ratings for engine oils, including re-refined oils, as determined by the American petroleum institute.

(b) "Lubricant" means a lubricating oil as defined in paragraph (c) of this subsection (2) or any other substance or mixture of substances used to reduce the friction caused by automotive parts moving against each other.

(c) "Lubricating oil" means oil classified for use in an internal combustion engine, hydraulic system, gear box, differential gear mechanism, or wheel bearing.

(d) "Recycled oil" means oil that is prepared for automotive use by reclaiming and otherwise reprocessing used oil.

(e) "Re-refined oil" means used oil that has been refined using processing technology to remove the physical and chemical contaminants acquired through use and which, by itself or when blended with new lubricating oil or additives, meets applicable API service classifications and SAE viscosity grades.

(f) "SAE viscosity grade" means the measure of an oil's, including a re-refined oil's, resistance to flow at a given temperature, as determined by the society of automotive engineers.

(g) "Used oil" means refined crude or synthetic oil that as a result of use has become unsuitable for its original purpose due to loss of original properties or the presence of impurities and that may be recycled in an economical manner and made suitable for further use as an automotive lubricant.

(3) (a) It is unlawful for a person to package and sell a container of:

(I) Lubricant unless the container prominently displays the applicable API service classification, API certification mark, and SAE viscosity grade of the contents; or

(II) Lubricant made wholly or partly from used or recycled oil unless the container is plainly labeled as containing used or recycled oil.

(b) The label or advertising on a container of used or recycled oil shall accurately reflect the type of oil stored in such container.

(c) A person may represent a product made wholly or partly from re-refined oil to be equal to or better than a similar product made from virgin oil if the product for sale conforms with applicable API service classifications, API certification mark, and SAE viscosity grades.

(d) Notwithstanding section 8-20-104, a person found guilty of violating this subsection (3) shall be subject to a fine of not less than one hundred dollars and not more than five hundred dollars for the first offense. A person found guilty of a second or subsequent offense shall be enjoined from selling or distributing used oil for not less than one year and not more than five years.

8-20-215. Mislabeling. No person shall mark, stencil, brand, or certify falsely any pump, receptacle, or container of fuel products, or change, alter, or deface the mark, brand, or a certificate on any such pump, receptacle, or container, or falsely represent the quality or grade of any fuel product.

8-20-218. Calibration of transport, tank truck, or delivery trucks. (1) The director of the division of oil and public safety shall calibrate transport, trailer, and delivery truck tanks to determine the legal capacity of each compartment, allowing for expansion outage to conform to DOT regulations, except in the case of delivery truck tanks where two percent outage will suffice. Each tank compartment shall have affixed and spot-welded by the owner or operator thereof a capacity marker, which shall be set by measuring with a steel rule from the bottom of a steel bar set across the fill opening to the bottom of the marker (floated). The compartment gallonage shall be marked or stenciled with paint in figures at least one inch in height on each compartment dome collar.

(2) All new or additional vehicular tanks purchased or leased after April 6, 1955, by any person for hauling class I, II, or III petroleum products within or into the state shall be calibrated by the director of the division of oil and public safety and a certificate of calibration shall be issued to the owner or operator thereof before such equipment is put in service. A copy of the certificate of calibration shall accompany the tank at all times.

(3) Whenever a certificate of calibration has been lost or mutilated, the director of the division of oil and public safety shall issue a duplicate of the original which shall serve the purpose of the original. The director of the division of oil and public safety may order, after proper inspection, a calibration or a recalibration of any transport, trailer, or delivery truck tank operating in the state, whether calibrated by the director previously or not, when inspection by the director or the director's deputy reveals that tank compartments or capacity markers have been altered intentionally or accidentally, and the owner or operator shall comply with such order within ten days. If the owner or operator of a delivery truck tank has available calibrating equipment acceptable to the director of the division of oil and public safety, the tanks shall be calibrated in the presence of the director or the director's deputy, at or near the place of business of the owner or operator, and the director shall issue a certificate of calibration for said tank.

ANNOTATION

The intent of this section is to prevent deception of the public by making certain that a retailer of gasoline fuels who offers for sale a trade-named product has not in any manner diluted or adulterated it and that the trade-named article is exactly what it is held out to be, nothing more, nothing less. Houston v. Symington Wayne Corp., 149 Colo. 332, 369 P.2d 424 (1962).

Therefore this section provides that no foreign liquid shall be substituted for, or mixed with, a trade-named product. Houston v. Symington Wayne Corp., 149 Colo. 332, 369 P.2d 424 (1962).

But this section does not preclude the mixing of trade-named regular and premium gasolines by a special type of fuel pump in accordance with the wishes of the customer. Houston v. Symington Wayne Corp., 149 Colo. 332, 369 P.2d 424 (1962).

8-20-232.5. Method of sales of motor fuels - gallon equivalents - conversion factors.

(1) In addition to any other allowed unit of measurement, motor fuels may be sold by gallon equivalents pursuant to the requirements of this section.

(2) (a) Any dispenser used for the sale of motor fuel in gallon equivalents shall display gallon equivalents as the primary display information provided. Such dispenser shall indicate the number of gallon equivalents and fractions of gallon equivalents sold, the total sales price of the motor fuel dispensed, and the sales price per gallon equivalent of motor fuel sold. Information concerning the sale of motor fuels by gallon equivalents may be provided at the point of sale in literature, signs, or other advertisements. Street sign advertisements regarding the sale of motor fuels by gallon equivalents may abbreviate the term "gallon gasoline equivalent" as "gallon G.E." and the term "gallon diesel equivalent" as "gallon D.E.".

(b) In addition to the information required by paragraph (a) of this subsection (2), the face of a dispenser that is used for the sale of motor fuel in gallon equivalents shall prominently display the conversion factor that is being used by the seller to determine the number of gallon equivalents sold based upon the type and amount of actual measured units of motor fuel that is dispensed. The information displayed on such a dispenser shall include, but is not limited to, the following statements concerning the conversion factor:

(I) "One gallon diesel equivalent of (type of motor fuel) is equivalent to (amount of actual units of measurement) of (type of motor fuel)."

(II) "One gallon diesel equivalent of (type of motor fuel) contains an average lower heating value of 128,000 BTUs of energy, but in no case contains a lower heating value of less than 124,000 BTUs of energy."

(III) "One gallon gasoline equivalent of (type of motor fuel) is equivalent to (amount of actual units of measurement) of (type of motor fuel)."

(IV) "One gallon gasoline equivalent of (type of motor fuel) contains an average lower heating value of 114,000 BTUs of energy, but in no case contains a lower heating value of less than 110,000 BTUs of energy."

(3) Any seller using gallon equivalents for motor fuel sales shall calculate the conversion factor used by the seller to convert the actual units by which a motor fuel is measured at the dispenser to gallon equivalent units based on the inferred energy content of such motor fuel as measured by one of the following methods:

(a) For conversions to gallon diesel equivalents:

(I) If the motor fuel is actually measured at the dispenser as a volume, the gallon diesel equivalent measurement shall be calculated by determining the number of measured volumetric units required to provide an average lower heating value of one hundred twenty-eight thousand BTUs (British thermal units), but in no case a lower heating value of less than one hundred twenty-four thousand BTUs.

(II) If the motor fuel is actually measured at the dispenser as a mass, the gallon diesel equivalent measurement shall be calculated by determining the number of measured mass units required to provide an average lower heating value of one hundred twenty-eight thousand BTUs (British thermal units), but in no case a lower heating value of less than one hundred twenty-four thousand BTUs.

(b) For conversions to gallon gasoline equivalents:

(I) If the motor fuel is actually measured at the dispenser as a volume, the gallon gasoline equivalent measurement shall be calculated by determining the number of measured volumetric units required to provide an average lower heating value of one hundred fourteen thousand BTUs (British thermal units), but in no case a lower heating value of less than one hundred ten thousand BTUs.

(II) If the motor fuel is actually measured at the dispenser as a mass, the gallon gasoline equivalent measurement shall be calculated by determining the number of measured mass units required to provide an average lower heating value of one hundred fourteen thousand BTUs (British thermal units), but in no case a lower heating value of less than one hundred ten thousand BTUs.

(4) The actual unit of measurement for a motor fuel sold in terms of gallon equivalents shall be calibrated by the seller with appropriate precision to ensure conformance with any required dispensing accuracies.

If a temperature compensating device is disconnected, deactivated, or removed for reasons other than repair, it shall not be reactivated for a period of one year from the date of removal. Notification of such removal or installation shall be in accordance with the provisions of section 8-20-408 (2).

8-20-235. Measuring gasoline and special fuel for sale to distributors. Notwithstanding any other provision of this part 2, the method of determining gallonage of gasoline or special fuel sold to distributors, as defined in section 39-27-101 (7), C.R.S., shall be on a gross or net gallons basis at the option of the distributor. Such election shall be for a twelve-month period.

Upon application of the manufacturer, packer, seller, or distributor, and the payment of a fee not to exceed twenty-five dollars for each sample of antifreeze submitted, the director of the division of oil and public safety shall inspect the antifreeze submitted as set forth in this subsection (1), but in no case shall an approved antifreeze be inspected more than one time for each antifreeze marketing year beginning May 1 and ending April 30, except as set forth in this section.

(2) If the antifreeze is not adulterated or misbranded, meets the standards of the director of the division of oil and public safety, and is not in violation of this part 8, the director of the division of oil and public safety shall give the applicant a written permit authorizing the sale by any person of such antifreeze in this state for the marketing year for which the inspection fee is paid. If the director of the division of oil and public safety at a later date finds that the product to be sold, exposed for sale, or held with intent to sell has been materially altered or adulterated, or that a change has been made in the name, brand, or trademark under which the antifreeze is sold, or that it violates the provisions of this part 8, the director of the division of oil and public safety shall notify the applicant and the permit shall be cancelled.

(3) In the event a manufacturer, packer, seller, or distributor changes the composition, content, or formula of any antifreeze which the manufacturer, packer, seller, or distributor is marketing under a permit from the director of the division of oil and public safety, it is the duty of said manufacturer, packer, seller, or distributor to immediately notify the director of the division of oil and public safety and submit a sample for test in compliance with this section.

(3.5) Moneys in the petroleum storage tank fund may be used as incentives to underground storage tank owners and operators to upgrade existing systems. The division of oil and public safety shall promulgate rules to implement this subsection (3.5).

(4) Appropriations of moneys out of the fund for the purpose of initial abatement response or for corrective action purposes in the cleanup of releases shall be used only for those stated purposes and shall not be used for any administrative costs incurred by the department. Any amounts used for initial abatement response or for corrective action purposes shall be reported annually to the general assembly and the joint budget committee.

(5) Subject to section 8-20.5-104, the fund shall be available only to those underground and aboveground storage tanks owners or operators who are in compliance with the provisions of section 8-20.5-209 and regulations promulgated pursuant to sections 8-20.5-202 and 8-20.5-302.

(c) Nothing in this subsection (7) shall be construed to modify the department's authority to regulate operation of or corrective action for underground and aboveground storage tanks on fee lands.

(8) The executive director of the department is authorized to issue bonds to reimburse assessment and corrective action costs to remediate petroleum contamination. 8-20.5-104. Rules - petroleum storage tank committee. (1) The governor shall appoint a petroleum storage tank committee, which shall consist of seven members who have technical expertise and knowledge in fields related to corrective actions taken to mitigate underground and aboveground storage tank releases. The director of the division of oil and public safety or the director's designee, the executive director of the department or the designee of the executive director, and an owner or operator shall be permanent members of the committee. The remaining four members of the committee shall be chosen from among the following groups, with no more than one member representing each group: Fire protection districts; elected local governmental officials; companies that refine and retail motor fuels in Colorado; companies that wholesale motor fuels in Colorado; owners and operators of independent retail outlets; companies that conduct corrective actions or install and repair underground and aboveground storage tanks; and private citizens or interest groups. The department shall provide staff to support the activities of the committee.

(2) Members of the committee shall serve three-year terms. All vacancies shall be filled by the governor to serve the remainder of the unexpired term.

(3) Members of the committee shall receive no additional salary or per diem reimbursement for their services as members of the committee, but shall be allowed travel and parking costs and maintenance expenses while on official committee business conducted more than one hundred miles from their respective residences.

(4) The committee shall be required to meet no more than twice in any month. The committee shall recommend all regulatory actions proposed by the committee to the director of the division of oil and public safety for adoption or ratification. The committee shall conduct the following activities in accordance with section 24-4-105, C.R.S., as its routine business:

(a) Establish procedures, practices, and policies governing the committee's activities;

(b) Review standards and regulations governing underground and aboveground storage tanks;

(c) Establish procedures, practices, and policies governing the form and procedures for applications to the petroleum storage tank fund for reimbursement compensation;

(d) (I) Establish procedures, practices, and policies governing any and all aspects of processing, adjusting, defending, or paying claims against the fund. To encourage tank owners and operators to report and remediate contamination and achieve compliance with rules promulgated by the director of the division of oil and public safety, the committee may approve claims involving tanks not operated in substantial compliance, but may also determine the amount, if any, by which such claims may be reduced for noncompliance. Before imposing any reduction for noncompliance the committee shall determine whether the rules issued by the director of the division of oil and public safety are both substantially and procedurally no more stringent than United States environmental protection agency regulations under 42 U.S.C. sec. 6991 and whether the areas of noncompliance were brought into compliance prior to application to the fund, where possible. The committee shall use the following guidelines when imposing a reduction for noncompliance:

(A) Up to a ten percent reduction for failure to register a tank;

(B) Up to a twenty-five percent reduction for improper release detection;

(C) Up to a ten percent reduction for improper release reporting;

(D) Up to a twenty percent reduction for improper out-of-service and closure.

(II) Nothing in this article shall be construed to require the committee to approve a claim involving substantial noncompliance. The committee shall establish specific criteria to define when denial for substantial noncompliance may be imposed.

(e) Establish priorities governing the types of corrective actions which shall be reimbursed from the fund;

(f) Review corrective action plans submitted pursuant to section 8-20.5-209, for which no agreement has been reached through informal conferences between the department and the owner or operator, and make a recommendation to the department, upon request from the department or the owner or the operator, as to the corrective action that is acceptable;

(g) Issue public notices and hold public hearings to obtain comment on the activities described in this subsection (4);

(h) (I) (A) Pay interest to all persons who file a properly and fully completed claim for reimbursement and are not reimbursed in a timely manner. For purposes of this paragraph (h), interest shall accrue on the amount approved for payment by the committee at the rate determined pursuant to section 39-21-110.5, C.R.S., for each day a properly and fully completed application is not processed in a timely manner.

(B) Notwithstanding this paragraph (h), if a claimant cannot be reimbursed in a timely manner because insufficient moneys in the petroleum storage tank fund prevent the issuance of a reimbursement check within thirty days after approval of the disbursement, interest shall not begin to accrue on the claim until thirty-one days after sufficient moneys are available in said fund.

(II) For purposes of this paragraph (h), "timely manner" means:

(A) That an application filed with the petroleum storage tank fund on or after January 1, 1996, shall be submitted for review by the committee within ninety working days of receipt;

(B) That an application filed with the petroleum storage tank fund on or after July 1, 1995, but before January 1, 1996, shall be submitted for review by the committee within one hundred twenty working days of receipt;

(C) That an application filed with the petroleum storage tank fund before July 1, 1995, shall be submitted for review by the committee no later than December 31, 1995;

(D) That reimbursement checks shall be issued within thirty days after disbursement is approved by the committee.

(5) The committee may, in order to perform any or all of its responsibilities and functions under subsection (4) of this section, contract for the use of outside experts, consultants, or services.

(6) Reductions determined by the committee because of noncompliance shall be cumulative and shall apply to all eligible costs approved by the committee in the initial and all supplemental claims for the occurrence as defined in section 8-20.5-206 (2); except that in no instance shall cumulative reductions for noncompliance apply to claims submitted in accordance with section 8-20.5-206 (3) or 8-20.5-303 (3).

(7) The reductions described in subsections (4) (d) and (6) of this section pertain to this section only and shall not be construed to have any impact on cost-recovery actions taken in accordance with section 8-20.5-209 or any civil or criminal penalties imposed as part of an enforcement proceeding.

(8) At its first meeting of each fiscal year, on or about July 1, the committee shall establish and set aside for reimbursements to those individuals who are eligible to make application to the fund in accordance with section 8-20.5-206 (3) or 8-20.5-303 (3), an amount equal to twenty percent of the total budget of the department from the petroleum storage tank fund, which amount shall be used for the purpose of conducting remediation activities in accordance with sections 8-20.5-206 (3), 8-20.5-209, and 8-20.5-303 (3) and shall protect the integrity of the fund as a financial assurance mechanism for tank owners and operators. The committee shall reexamine on a quarterly basis the unencumbered balance of this allocation and may set aside lesser or additional amounts for reimbursements to such applicants based on the relative number of requested reimbursements from the owners and operators of active sites, with preference given to the remediation of recently contaminated locations and to active tank sites based on their higher potential for environmental impact.

(9) The petroleum storage tank committee shall exercise its powers and perform its duties and functions specified by this section under the department of labor and employment and the executive director thereof as if the same were transferred to the department by a type 1 transfer, as such transfer is defined in section 24-1-105, C.R.S.

(2) Any person making such confidential records available to any person or organization without authorization from the affected operator or owner commits a class 3 misdemeanor and shall be punished as provided in section 18-1.3-501, C.R.S.

(3) Confidential records may be disclosed to officers, employees, or authorized representatives of the state or of the United States who have been charged with administering this article or subtitle I of the federal "Resource Conservation and Recovery Act of 1976", as amended. Injunctions. In addition to the remedies provided in this article, the director of the division of oil and public safety is authorized to apply to the district court, in the judicial district where the violation has occurred, for a temporary or permanent injunction restraining any person from violating any provision of this article, regardless of whether there is an adequate remedy at law.

8-20.5-107. Enforcement orders - civil penalties. (1) A notice of violation may be issued by the director of the division of oil and public safety to any person who is believed to have violated any provision of this article, any rule promulgated pursuant thereto, or any warrant issued pursuant to section 8-20.5-208. The notice of violation shall be served personally or by certified mail, return receipt requested, upon the alleged violator.

(2) The notice of violation shall set forth the facts which allegedly constitute the violation and the provisions which have allegedly been violated of either this article or any regulation promulgated pursuant thereto. The notice of violation may require the alleged violator to take any actions necessary to correct the alleged violation.

(3) Within ten working days after service of the notice of violation, the alleged violator may file a written request with the director of the division of oil and public safety for an informal conference regarding the notice of violation. If the alleged violator fails to timely request an informal conference, all provisions of the notice of violation shall become final and not subject to further administrative review. The director of the division of oil and public safety may then seek judicial enforcement of the notice of violation.

(4) Upon receipt of the written request, the director of the division of oil and public safety shall provide the alleged violator with a written notice of the date, time, and place of the informal conference. The director of the division of oil and public safety or a designee shall preside at the informal conference, during which the alleged violator and the entity that issued the notice of violation may present information and arguments regarding the allegations and requirements of the notice of violation.

(5) Within twenty working days after the informal conference, the director of the division of oil and public safety shall uphold, modify, or strike the allegations of the notice of violation and may issue an enforcement order. The decision shall be served upon the alleged violator personally or by certified mail, return receipt requested. Such notice of violation or enforcement order may be appealed within twenty working days to the executive director of the department. The executive director may either conduct the hearing personally or appoint an administrative law judge from the office of administrative courts in the department of personnel to conduct the hearing. The executive director may review such decision in accordance with the provisions of section 24-4-105, C.R.S., and final agency action shall be determined in accordance with the provisions of said section. Such final agency action shall be subject to judicial review in accordance with section 24-4-106, C.R.S.

(6) The enforcement order may require the alleged violator to pay a civil penalty not to exceed five thousand dollars per tank for each day of violation.

(7) The director of the division of oil and public safety may file suit in the district court for the judicial district in which violations have occurred to obtain judicial enforcement of the provisions of any enforcement order. The petroleum storage tank fund may be subrogated to the rights of an owner or operator with respect to a claimed amount at the time a claim is filed with the fund.

8-20.5-108. Petroleum storage tank administration - transfer to department of labor and employment - legislative declaration. (1) (a) The general assembly hereby finds, determines, and declares that there is a significant backlog in the processing of claims being made against the petroleum storage tank fund. Claims for reimbursement for cleaning up petroleum contamination are not acted upon in a timely manner, which places the storage tank owner in financial jeopardy. Lenders are reluctant to write loans on contaminated property, causing the next phase of remediation to be delayed and allowing contamination to spread, threatening the environment and unnecessarily escalating future cleanup expenses.

(b) The general assembly further finds, determines, and declares that it is in the best interest of this state to transfer petroleum storage tank administrative functions performed by the department of public health and environment to the department of labor and employment, and thereby consolidate the administration and regulation of petroleum storage tanks in this state under one department, which will minimize the cost of such functions and centralize management.

(2) (a) The administrative functions of the petroleum storage tank fund, including claims processing, corrective action plan review and approval, and any other responsibilities for petroleum storage tank programs performed by the department of public health and environment prior to July 1, 1995, are transferred to the department of labor and employment. All employees of the department of public health and environment, excluding any contract labor, who perform the functions transferred pursuant to this subsection (2) and whose employment in the department of labor and employment is deemed necessary by the executive director of the said department are transferred to the department of labor and employment and shall become employees thereof.

(b) Such employees shall retain all rights to the state personnel system and retirement benefits under the laws of this state, and their services shall be deemed to have been continuous. All transfers and any abolishment of positions in the state personnel system shall be made and processed in accordance with state personnel system laws and rules.

(c) On July 1, 1995, all items of property, real and personal, including office furniture and fixtures, books, documents, and records of the department of public health and environment pertaining to the duties and functions transferred to the department of labor and employment pursuant to this subsection (2) are transferred to the department of labor and employment and shall become the property of such department.

(3) Repealed.

8-20.5-201. Legislative declaration. The general assembly hereby finds and declares that the leakage of regulated substances from underground storage tanks constitutes a potential threat to the waters and the environment of the state of Colorado and presents a potential menace to the public health, safety, and welfare of the people of the state of Colorado and that, to that end, it is the purpose of this part 2 to establish a program for the protection of the environment and of the public health and safety by preventing and mitigating the contamination of the subsurface soil, groundwater, and surface water which may result from leaking underground storage tanks.

(2) The director of the division of oil and public safety shall ensure that:

- (a) All releases from underground storage tank systems are promptly assessed and that further releases are stopped;
  - (b) Actions are taken to identify, contain, and mitigate any immediate fire and safety hazards that are posed by a release;

8-20.5-204. Installation and upgrading of underground storage tanks. (1) Plans for any installation of a new underground storage tank and plans for the complete upgrading of an existing underground storage tank shall be submitted by the owner or operator of the proposed or existing underground storage tank to the director of the division of oil and public safety for approval prior to such installation or upgrading.

(2) Plans for the installation of a new underground storage tank or for the complete upgrading of an existing underground storage tank shall be in compliance with the rules promulgated pursuant to section 8-20.5-202 (1). The director of the division of oil and public safety or a designee shall approve or reject proposed plans and amendments thereto within twenty working days after submittal of the plan. If no action is taken by the director of the division of oil and public safety or a designee within twenty working days after submittal, the plans shall be deemed approved.

(4) The director of the division of oil and public safety or a designee shall make an on-site inspection of every new installation and every upgrading of an existing underground storage tank prior to the operational start-up of such tank to ensure that all of the standards established in this part 2 have been met. The director of the division of oil and public safety or a designee shall complete the on-site inspection within ten calendar days prior to the anticipated operational start-up date. 8-20.5-205. More stringent requirements prohibited. (1) No municipality, city, home rule city, city and county, county, or other political subdivision of the state shall adopt or enforce any requirement more stringent than the provisions of this part 2. This section does not apply to requirements established pursuant to the uniform fire code or the national fire protection association codes, nor does it apply to requirements established pursuant to local zoning regulations.

(2) The limitation in subsection (1) of this section shall not apply to any municipality, city, home rule city, city and county, county, or other political subdivision of the state which has received an exemption from the committee created in section 8-20.5-104. The committee may grant a site-specific exemption when the applicant demonstrates that such an exemption would be cost beneficial and serve the health, safety, or economic interest of its citizens based on consideration of local hydrologic, geologic, or other conditions, including location of population concentrations or commercial areas.

8-20.5-206. Financial responsibility for petroleum underground storage tanks.

(1) (a) Moneys in the petroleum storage tank fund, created pursuant to section 8-20.5-103, and referred to in this section as the "fund", may be used by certain owners and operators of petroleum storage tanks to demonstrate their compliance with the financial responsibility requirements in federal regulations. Owners and operators not eligible for access to the fund shall be solely responsible for securing independent financial assistance, but may use any federally approved financial assurance mechanism identified in 40 CFR 280.94 through 280.103 to help fund the cost of complying with such requirements.

(b) (I) After payment is made from the fund for remediation expenses, the owner or operator on whose behalf the payment was made shall pay to the fund the remediation amount or ten thousand dollars, whichever is less.

(II) The payment required pursuant to subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (b) shall be waived if:

(A) The owner or operator discovers the contamination while upgrading tanks to meet the December 22, 1998, deadline for corrosion protection, spill and overfill prevention, or monthly monitoring;

(B) The upgrade is completed no later than December 22, 1997; and

(C) The annual throughput of petroleum products at the site does not exceed six hundred thousand gallons during the year preceding the discovery of contamination.

(c) After payment is made from the fund for personal injury or property damage settlement expenses, or a combination of both, the owner or operator on whose behalf the payment was made shall pay to the fund the aggregate settlement payment amount or twenty-five thousand dollars, whichever is less.

(d) Moneys in the fund shall not be used for any remediation activity at a location that is within a site identified by the national priorities list, or where a response action by this state has begun pursuant to the federal "Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980".

(e) If an owner or operator cannot meet the financial requirements of paragraphs (b) and (c) of this subsection (1), another approved financial assurance mechanism must be identified for such owner or operator to remain in compliance with this section and to be allowed to continue operation of an underground petroleum storage tank.

(2) The maximum amount of liability of the fund under this section shall be three million dollars aggregate during a state fiscal year for multiple occurrences involving tanks that are the responsibility of an individual owner or operator, but in no event shall the liability of the fund exceed two million dollars per occurrence. For purposes of this section, an "occurrence" means the period of time from identification through remediation of a leak, spill, or release of a petroleum product from an underground storage tank. In the event the cost of remediation or third-party claims exceeds the amount available to pay such costs, such costs and claims shall be paid on a pro rata basis as determined by the committee created in section 8-20.5-104. Any balance owed shall be paid as moneys become available in the fund. Any excess costs that are not paid by the fund or by the federal leaking underground storage tank trust fund shall be paid by and are the sole responsibility of the responsible owner or operator.

(3) Moneys in the fund shall be available to pay required cleanup costs and third-party liability payments with no deductibles for the following applicants who are deemed to bear no responsibility for the release:

(a) A current or former property owner who has never owned, operated, leased, or managed petroleum underground storage tanks at the property where the release occurred, provided such property was acquired on or before June 3, 1992, and in the case of a preexisting release, the property owner had no reason to know that a release had occurred prior to acquiring the property;

(b) When an orphan or abandoned petroleum underground storage tank is involved and the applicant is a current or former owner, operator, or property owner who has never operated the tank or tanks and had no reason to know that a release had occurred prior to acquiring the property;

(c) A current owner or operator of petroleum underground storage tanks if at the time the owner or operator acquired such tanks such owner or operator had no reason to know that a release had already occurred, if such owner or operator has operated the tanks in accordance with sections 8-20.5-202 and 8-20.5-302, and if the release was detected on or before December 22, 1998;

(d) Any mortgagee or holder of an evidence of debt secured by a deed of trust who, through foreclosure of the mortgage or deed of trust or through receipt of a deed to the property in lieu of foreclosure, acquires property on which an underground storage tank is located, and such mortgage or deed of trust is dated on or before January 1, 1993;

(e) (I) (A) Any mortgagee or holder of an evidence of debt secured by a deed of trust who, through foreclosure of the mortgage or deed of trust or through receipt of a deed to the property in lieu of foreclosure, acquires property on which an underground storage tank is located, and such mortgage or deed of trust is dated after January 1, 1993, and the mortgagee or holder of an evidence of debt secured by a deed of trust has obtained a certificate of eligibility regarding the property in accordance with the rules of the director of the division of oil and public safety; or

(B) Any mortgagee or holder of an evidence of debt as described in sub-subparagraph (A) of this subparagraph (I), who sells the property on which an underground storage tank is located in lieu of remediating such property and transfers the certificate of eligibility to the purchaser. Such purchaser may receive fund moneys pursuant to this subsection (3).

(II) The director of the division of oil and public safety shall promulgate rules necessary to implement this program.

(4) In lieu of seeking reimbursement directly from the fund, an owner, operator, or current property owner who bears no responsibility for the release, under the provisions of subsection (3) of this section, may request that the department perform the cleanup using funds from the petroleum storage tank fund without further proving eligibility for such use. In addition to any purpose provided for in section 8-20.5-103, moneys in the petroleum storage tank fund may be appropriated by the general assembly to the department for the purpose of providing for the cleanup authorized in this section.

(5) Whenever appropriate, to pay costs that exceed the maximum allowed to be paid from the fund under this section, the state shall seek funding from the federal leaking underground storage tank trust fund.

(6) Underground storage tanks containing petroleum or other regulated substances that are owned or operated by, or are on property owned or leased by, an Indian tribe or the federal government, or an agency or subcontractor performing services on behalf of the federal government shall be subject to federal financial responsibility regulations. Any financial responsibility requirements for damages caused by such tanks are not the responsibility of the fund unless the tanks are owned or operated by a person, other than the federal government or such agency or subcontractor, and located on property that is leased from or otherwise occupied pursuant to a permit or other agreement with the United States or any agency thereof other than the department of defense or the department of energy.

(7) Nothing in this article shall create any liability for the state of Colorado that exceeds the amount available in the fund.

(8) Subject to subsection (6) of this section, owners and operators of underground storage tanks that are on fee lands may use the fund to demonstrate compliance with the financial responsibility requirements in federal regulations if the owners and operators have registered such tanks pursuant to section 8-20.5-102.

Promulgation of regulation establishing eligibility cut-off date for reimbursement claims from underground storage tank fund was within department of labor and employ- ment's statutory authority, because statute required fund claimants to be in compliance with all applicable regulations, and regulatory cut-off date was set at earliest possible date by which claimants could comply with regulations. *Diamond Shamrock Ref. and Mktg. 8-20.5-207. Financial responsibility for regulated substances other than petroleum. Owners and operators of underground storage tanks containing regulated substances other than petroleum may demonstrate financial responsibility for taking corrective action and for compensating third parties for bodily injury and property damages by using any one or more of the mechanisms allowable under 40 CFR sections 280.95, 280.96, 280.97, 280.98, 280.99, 280.102, and 280.103. Owners and operators of underground storage tanks containing regulated substances other than petroleum shall not be eligible to participate in the petroleum storage tank fund, but shall be subject to federal financial responsibility regulations.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 8-20-510 as it existed prior to 1995.

8-20.5-208. Reporting of releases - investigation. (1) If a release is detected or suspected, the owner or operator shall immediately take all actions necessary to mitigate or stop the release and shall mitigate fire and safety hazards.

(2) Upon detection of any release of reportable quantities of a regulated substance from an underground storage tank, the owner or operator shall report such release to the director of the division of oil and public safety within twenty-four hours of its detection. However, the local fire authority shall be notified immediately if such release exceeds reportable quantities. If the director of the division of oil and public safety determines that the release of such reportable quantity will affect subsurface soils, groundwater, or surface water, the department may require the owner or operator to take corrective action in accordance with section 8-20.5-209.

(3) If the director of the division of oil and public safety or a designee finds that a release has occurred, and the owner or the operator cannot be identified, or is unwilling to mitigate or stop the release or mitigate fire and safety hazards, the director of the division of oil and public safety or a designee may initiate free product removal and whatever other actions are necessary to mitigate fire and safety hazards.

(4) For the purpose of enforcing this section, if a release poses an imminent and substantial threat to human health and the environment, the director of the division of oil and public safety or a designee is authorized to take such action as is necessary under the circumstances, including but not limited to:

(a) Entering any property, premises, or place where an underground storage tank is located;

(b) Monitoring or testing or requiring the owner or the operator to monitor or test any underground storage tank or any surrounding soils, groundwater, or surface water. A duplicate sample taken for testing shall be provided to any person, at such person's request, who the director of the division of oil and public safety or a designee reasonably believes may be responsible for the release. A duplicate copy of the analytical report pertaining to the samples taken pursuant to this paragraph (b) shall be provided as soon as practicable to any person who the director of the division of oil and public safety or a designee reasonably believes may be responsible for the release. When such tests are performed, the director of the division of oil and public safety shall notify, when possible, any person reasonably believed to be an owner or operator.

(c) Entering any site or premises in which records relevant to the operation of an underground storage tank are maintained and to inspect and copy such records.

(5) If such entry or inspection is denied or not consented to, the director of the division of oil and public safety or a designee shall obtain, from the district or county court for the judicial district or county in which such property, premises, or place is located, a warrant to enter and inspect any such property, premises, or place prior to entry and inspection. The district and county courts of the state of Colorado are authorized to issue such warrants upon proper showing of the need for such entry and inspection.

(6) If requested by the director of the division of oil and public safety or a designee, the owner or the operator of an underground storage tank shall provide any information in such owner's or operator's possession regarding the tank.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 8-20-507 as it existed prior to 1995.

8-20.5-209. Regulated substances releases - corrective actions. (1) If a release has occurred at a site where the owner or the operator cannot be identified, after the director of the division of oil and public safety or a designee has mitigated fire and safety hazards in accordance with section 8-20.5-208 and determined that a release exceeds reportable quantities, the director of the division of oil and public safety may initiate corrective action to mitigate any threat to subsurface soil, groundwater, or surface water and develop a plan for cleanup in accordance with subsection (3) of this section and shall recover costs pursuant to section 8-20.5-103.

(2) If the release has occurred at a site where the owner or the operator can be identified, and after fire and safety hazards have been mitigated in accordance with section 8-20.5-208 and the director of the division of oil and public safety has determined that the release exceeds reportable quantities, then the owner or the operator shall provide the director of the division of oil and public safety with a corrective action plan to clean up subsurface soil, groundwater, and surface water as a result of the release. In addition to the corrective action plan, the owner or operator shall prepare a summary of the costs associated with the preferred corrective action, taking into account economic and technological feasibility, in accordance with the rules promulgated pursuant to section 8-20.5-104 (4) (d) and shall submit the summary to the committee created in said section. The director of the division of oil and public safety shall review and approve or disapprove the plan and, if the plan is disapproved, shall provide the owner or the operator with a statement specifying the deficiencies in the plan. The owner or the operator shall submit a revised plan within twenty working days after receipt of the statement, and the owner or the operator shall be given an opportunity to take necessary and appropriate actions to clean up subsurface soils, groundwater, and surface water. If the owner or the operator is unable or unwilling to take such necessary and appropriate actions, the director of the division of oil and public safety may conduct corrective action to the extent appropriate to protect subsurface soils, groundwater, or surface water as a result of that release. Such action shall be taken after consideration of the risks posed to the public health and shall be determined in light of current economic and technological feasibility.

(3) After the director of the division of oil and public safety mitigates the threat to subsurface soils, groundwater, and surface water as specified in subsections (1) and (2) of this section, and the owner or the operator of the tank from which petroleum has been released is identified, the owner or the operator shall pay the required costs pursuant to the financial responsibility requirements set forth in sections 8-20.5-206, 8-20.5-207, and 8-20.5-303, incurred in the investigation of the release and mitigation of threats to subsurface soils, groundwater, and surface water. The director of the division of oil and public safety may file suit in the district court for the judicial district in which the release occurred to recover such costs. The moneys obtained as a result of any suit brought pursuant to this section shall be credited to the petroleum storage tank fund created in section 8-20.5-103.

(4) The director of the division of oil and public safety may order the owner or the operator of an underground storage tank from which a regulated substance has been released to implement a corrective action plan approved under subsection (2) of this section. Such order shall be served personally or by certified mail, return receipt requested, upon the owner or the operator.

(5) If the director of the division of oil and public safety disapproves or fails to approve the plan within thirty days after the plan's submission, the director shall immediately provide a statement of findings of fact outlining the reasons for such disapproval or failure to approve, including the reasons the proposed plan fails to meet the criteria outlined in this section. The statement shall be provided by formal notice or by certified mail to the owner or the operator within ten days after the director's decision.

(6) The director of the division of oil and public safety may waive the requirement for such a plan if the director determines that reasonable steps have been taken to prevent further releases and that any previously released regulated substance has been cleaned up to the extent appropriate to protect subsurface soils, groundwater, or surface water as a result of that release at that specific location. Such action shall be taken after consideration of the risks posed to the public health and shall be determined in light of current economic and technological feasibility.

(7) Within ten days after notification of disapproval of the plan, the owner or the operator may file a written request with the director of the division of oil and public safety for an informal conference regarding the disapproval. Upon receipt of such a request, the director shall provide the owner or the operator with a written notice of the date, time, and place of the informal conference. The executive director of the department or a designee shall preside at the informal conference, during which the owner or the operator and the director or the director's designee may present information and arguments regarding the issues raised in the statement of findings of fact.

(8) Within twenty days after the conference, the owner or operator may resubmit a modified plan which addresses the deficiencies identified by the department in the original plan. The department shall review the modifications to the plan and, within twenty days, approve or disapprove the resubmitted plan. If, after the conference, the owner, the operator, or the department determines that the issues identified in the statement of findings of fact cannot be reasonably resolved, the owner, the operator, or the department may request that the committee, created in section 8-20.5-104, schedule and hold a hearing within thirty days to resolve the issues identified in the statement of findings of fact.

(9) At any time after the receipt of the statement of findings of fact, the owner, the operator, or the department may request, in writing, a formal hearing before the committee created in section 8-20.5-104. Upon such request, the committee shall meet and review the initial plan and statement of findings of fact.

(10) The committee shall recommend such plan if any current release has been mitigated and if any regulated substance which has been released has been or will be cleaned up to the extent appropriate to protect subsurface soils, groundwater, or surface water as a result of the release at that specific location. The department shall give serious consideration to the recommendation of the committee. Such action shall be taken after consideration of the risks posed to the public and shall be determined in light of current economic and technological feasibility. If the committee finds that a current release has not been mitigated or that any regulated substance which has been released will not be cleaned up to the extent appropriate, the committee shall issue a statement of findings of fact and recommendations to the department for revisions to the plan. Such revisions, if approved by the department, shall be incorporated into the plan by the department, and the revised plan shall then be approved as provided in subsection (2) of this section.

(11) Within thirty days following mitigation and cleanup, the department shall notify the owner or the operator, in writing, that the owner or the operator has complied with the requirements for mitigation and cleanup as outlined in this section.

(12) For the purpose of implementing the provisions of this section, the department or its designee is authorized for justifiable cause:

(a) To enter the property, premises, or place where a release or suspected release from an underground storage tank is located;

(b) To monitor or test or require the owner or the operator to monitor or test an underground storage tank or any surrounding soils, groundwater, or surface water where a suspected release from an underground storage tank has occurred. A duplicate sample taken for testing shall be provided to any owner or operator who the department reasonably believes may be responsible for the violation upon request of such person. A duplicate copy of the analytical report pertaining to the samples taken pursuant to this paragraph (b) shall be provided as soon as practicable to any person the department or its designee reasonably believes may be responsible for the violation. When such tests are performed, the department shall notify, when possible, any person reasonably believed to be an owner or operator.

(13) If such entry or inspection is denied, the department shall obtain, from the district or county court for the judicial district or county in which such property, premises, or place is located, a warrant to enter and inspect any such property, premises, or place prior to entry and inspection. The district and county courts of the state of Colorado are authorized to issue such warrants upon proper showing of the need for such entry and inspection.

(14) If requested by the department or its designee, the owner or operator of an underground storage tank shall provide any information in such owner's or operator's possession regarding the tank.

(15) The department may consider water quality standards adopted by the water quality control commission as guidelines for cleanup but must assure that cleanup requirements are appropriate, in light of economic and technical feasibility and after consideration of the risks to public health, to protect subsurface soils, groundwater, or surface water as a result of a release at a specific location.

(16) The department shall, if necessary, negotiate and enter into memoranda of agreement with and apply for and receive grants from the United States environmental protection agency pursuant to the provisions of this article.

ABOVEGROUND STORAGE TANKS

8-20.5-301. Legislative declaration. The general assembly hereby finds and declares that the rising expense of operating and maintaining aboveground storage tanks, including but not limited to the cost of liability insurance, has resulted in the discontinuance of business by several small gasoline service station operators and imposes an increasing hardship on those service stations still in operation. The general assembly further finds that the viability of aboveground storage tanks is being recognized and that rules and regulations for aboveground storage tanks have been promulgated and endorsed by the western fire chiefs association's uniform fire code committee and the national fire protection association's automotive and service station code committee. The general assembly further finds that aboveground storage tanks for fuel products are feasible and economical and should be permitted under certain narrowly drawn circumstances.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 8-20-701 as it existed prior to 1995.

8-20.5-302. Duties of director of division of oil and public safety. (1) The director of the division of oil and public safety shall make, promulgate, and enforce rules for aboveground storage tanks installed before July 1, 1993, which rules shall be no more stringent than the rules in place on the date of installation, except as mandated by federal spill prevention, control, and countermeasures regulations promulgated by the United States environmental protection agency.

(2) The director of the division of oil and public safety shall make, promulgate, and enforce rules concerning the design, construction, installation, and operation of aboveground storage tanks permitted to be used and installed on or after July 1, 1993, which rules shall be no more stringent, either substantially or procedurally, than the requirements contained in the current edition of the national fire code published by the national fire protection association, as revised by the association from time to time, and in spill prevention control and countermeasures regulations promulgated by the United States environmental protection agency.

(3) Within one hundred twenty days after January 1, 2008, the director of the division of oil and public safety shall promulgate, and the division shall enforce, rules concerning the placement of aboveground storage tanks that contain renewable fuels. Such rules shall be promulgated with the purpose of developing a uniform statewide standard of issuing permits for aboveground storage tanks to promote the use of renewable fuels so that the process of obtaining a permit for an aboveground storage tank that contains renewable fuels may be more efficient and affordable.

8-20.5-303. Financial responsibility for aboveground storage tanks. (1) (a) Moneys in the petroleum storage tank fund, created pursuant to section 8-20.5-103 and referred to in this section as the "fund", may be used by certain owners and operators of aboveground storage tanks. Any owner or operator of an aboveground storage tank with a capacity of at least six hundred sixty gallons and less than forty thousand gallons shall be eligible to participate in the fund.

(b) After payment is made from the fund for remediation expenses, the owner or operator on whose behalf the payment was made shall pay to the fund the remediation amount or ten thousand dollars, whichever is less.

(c) After payment is made from the fund for personal injury or property damage after a court judgment or a settlement agreed to by the attorney general's office, or a combination of both, the owner or operator on whose behalf the payment was made shall pay to the fund the aggregate settlement payment amount or twenty-five thousand dollars, whichever is less.

(d) Moneys in the fund shall not be used for any remediation activity at a location that is within a site identified by the national priorities list, or where a response action by this state has begun pursuant to the federal "Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980".

(e) If an owner or operator cannot meet the financial requirements of this subsection (1), another approved financial assurance mechanism shall be identified for such owner or operator to remain in substantial compliance with this section and to be allowed to continue operation of an aboveground storage tank.

(2) The maximum amount of liability of the fund under this section shall be three million dollars aggregate during a fiscal year for multiple occurrences involving tanks that are the responsibility of an individual owner or operator, but in no event shall the liability of the fund exceed two million dollars per occurrence. For purposes of this section, an "occurrence" means the period of time from identification through remediation of a leak, spill, or release of a petroleum product from an aboveground storage tank. In the event the cost of remediation or third-party claims exceeds the amount available to pay such costs, such costs and claims shall be paid on a pro rata basis as determined by the committee created in section 8-20.5-104. Any balance owed shall be paid as moneys become available in the fund. Any excess costs that are not paid by the fund shall be paid by and are the sole responsibility of the responsible owner or operator.

(3) Moneys in the fund shall be available to pay required cleanup costs and third-party liability payments with no deductibles for the following applicants who are deemed to bear no responsibility for the release:

(a) A current or former property owner who has never owned, operated, leased, or managed aboveground storage tanks at the property where the release occurred, provided such property was acquired on or before June 3, 1992, and in the case of a preexisting release, the property owner had no reason to know that a release had occurred prior to acquiring the property;

(b) When an orphan or abandoned aboveground storage tank is involved and the applicant is a current or former owner, operator, or property owner who has never operated the tank or tanks and had no reason to know that a release had occurred prior to acquiring the property;

(c) A current owner or operator of aboveground storage tanks if, at the time the owner or operator acquired such tanks, such owner or operator had no reason to know that a release had already occurred, if such owner or operator has operated the tanks in accordance with sections 8-20.5-202 and 8-20.5-302;

(d) Any mortgagee or holder of an evidence of debt secured by a deed of trust who, through foreclosure of the mortgage or deed of trust or through receipt of a deed to the property in lieu of foreclosure, acquires property on which an aboveground storage tank is located, and such mortgage or deed of trust is dated on or before January 1, 1993; or

(e) (I) Any mortgagee or holder of an evidence of debt secured by a deed of trust who, through foreclosure of the mortgage or deed of trust or through receipt of a deed to the property in lieu of foreclosure, acquires property on which an aboveground storage tank is located, and such mortgage or deed of trust is dated after January 1, 1993, and the mortgagee or holder of an evidence of debt secured by a deed of trust has obtained a certificate of eligibility regarding the property in accordance with the rules of the director of the division of oil and public safety. The director of the division of oil and public safety shall promulgate rules necessary to implement this program.

(II) Any mortgagee or holder of an evidence of debt as described in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (e) who sells the property on which an aboveground storage tank is located in lieu of remediating such property and transfers the certificate of eligibility to the purchaser. Such purchaser may receive funds pursuant to this subsection (3).

(4) In lieu of seeking reimbursement directly from the fund, an owner, operator, or current property owner who bears no responsibility for the release as set forth in subsection (3) of this section may request that the department perform the cleanup using moneys from the petroleum storage tank fund without further proving eligibility for such use. In addition to any purpose provided for in section 8-20.5-103, moneys in the petroleum storage tank fund may be appropriated by the general assembly to the department for the purpose of providing for the cleanup authorized in this section.

(5) An owner or operator of an aboveground storage tank or a person deemed to bear no responsibility for the release pursuant to subsection (3) of this section shall be eligible to participate in the fund if eligibility requirements established by the petroleum storage tank committee, created pursuant to section 8-20.5-104, are met.

(6) Aboveground storage tanks containing petroleum or other regulated substances that are owned or operated by, or are on property owned or leased by, an Indian tribe or the federal government or an agency or subcontractor performing services on behalf of the federal government shall be subject to federal financial responsibility regulations. Any financial responsibility requirements for damages caused by such tanks are not the responsibility of the fund unless such tanks are owned or operated by a person, other than the federal government or such agency or subcontractor, and located on property that is leased from or otherwise occupied pursuant to a permit or other agreement with the United States or any agency thereof other than the department of defense or the department of energy.

(7) Nothing in this article shall create any liability for the state of Colorado that exceeds the amount available in the fund.

(8) Subject to subsection (6) of this section, owners and operators of aboveground storage tanks that are on fee lands may use the fund to demonstrate compliance with the financial responsibility requirements in federal regulations if the owners and operators have registered such tanks pursuant to section 8-20.5-102.

8-20.5-304. Regulated substances releases - corrective actions. (1) If a release has occurred at a site where the owner or operator cannot be identified, after the director of the division of oil and public safety or a designee has mitigated fire and safety hazards in accordance with section 8-20.5-208 and determined that a release exceeds reportable quantities, the director of the division of oil and public safety may initiate corrective action to mitigate any threat to subsurface soil, groundwater, or surface water and develop a plan for cleanup in accordance with subsection (3) of this section and shall recover costs pursuant to section 8-20.5-103.

(2) If a release has occurred at a site where the owner or operator can be identified, and after fire and safety hazards have been mitigated in accordance with section 8-20.5-208 and the director of the division of oil and public safety has determined that the release exceeds reportable quantities, then the owner or operator shall provide the director of the division of oil and public safety with a corrective action plan to clean up subsurface soil, groundwater, and surface water as a result of the release. In addition to the corrective action plan, the owner or operator shall prepare a summary of the costs associated with the preferred corrective action, taking into account economic and technological feasibility, in accordance with the rules promulgated pursuant to section 8-20.5-104 (4) (d) and shall submit the summary to the committee created in said section. The director of the division of oil and public safety shall review and approve or disapprove the plan and, if the plan is disapproved, the director shall provide the owner or operator with a statement specifying the deficiencies in the plan. Within twenty working days after receiving such statements, the owner or operator shall submit a revised plan and shall be given an opportunity to take necessary and appropriate actions to clean up subsurface soils, groundwater, and surface water. If the owner or operator is unable or unwilling to take such necessary and appropriate actions, the director of the division of oil and public safety may conduct corrective action to the extent appropriate to protect subsurface soils, groundwater, or surface water as a result of that release. Such action shall be taken after consideration of the risks posed to the public health and shall be determined in light of current economic and technological feasibility.

(3) After the director of the division of oil and public safety mitigates the threat to subsurface soils, groundwater, and surface water as specified in subsections (1) and (2) of this section, and the owner or operator of the tank from which petroleum has been released is identified, the owner or operator shall pay the required costs of investigation and mitigation pursuant to the financial responsibility requirements set forth in sections 8-20.5-206, 8-20.5-207, and 8-20.5-303. The director of the division of oil and public safety may file suit in the district court for the judicial district in which the release occurred to recover such costs. The moneys obtained as a result of any suit brought pursuant to this section shall be credited to the petroleum storage tank fund created in section 8-20.5-103.

(4) The director of the division of oil and public safety may order the owner or operator of an aboveground storage tank from which a regulated substance has been released to implement a corrective action plan approved under subsection (2) of this section. Such order shall be served personally or by certified mail, return receipt requested, upon the owner or operator.

(5) (a) If the director of the division of oil and public safety disapproves or fails to approve the plan within thirty days following its submission, the director shall immediately provide a statement of findings of fact outlining the reasons for such disapproval or failure to approve, including the reasons the proposed plan fails to meet the criteria outlined in this section. The statement shall be provided by formal notice or by certified mail to the owner or operator within ten days after the director's decision.

(b) The director of the division of oil and public safety may waive the requirement for such a plan if the director determines that reasonable steps have been taken to prevent further releases and that any previously released regulated substance has been cleaned up to the extent appropriate to protect subsurface soils, groundwater, or surface water as a result of that release at that specific location. Such action shall be taken after consideration of the risks posed to the public health and shall be determined in light of current economic and technological feasibility.

(6) (a) Within ten days after notification of disapproval of the plan, the owner or operator may file a written request with the director of the division of oil and public safety for an informal conference regarding the disapproval. Upon receipt of such a request, the director shall provide the owner or operator with a written notice of the date, time, and place of the informal conference. The executive director of the department or a designee shall preside at the informal conference, during which the owner or operator and the director or the director's designee may present information and arguments regarding the issues raised in the statement of findings of fact.

(b) Within twenty days after the conference, the owner or operator may resubmit a modified plan which addresses the deficiencies identified by the department in the original plan. The department shall review the modifications to the plan and, within twenty days, approve or disapprove the resubmitted plan. If, after the conference, the owner or operator or the department determines that the issues identified in the statement of findings of fact cannot be reasonably resolved, the owner or operator or the department may request that the committee, created in section 8-20.5-104, schedule and hold a hearing within thirty days to resolve the issues identified in the statement of findings of fact.

(7) (a) At any time after receiving the statement of findings of fact, the owner or operator or the department may request, in writing, a formal hearing before the committee created in section 8-20.5-104. Upon such request, the committee shall meet and review the initial plan and statement of findings of fact.

(b) The committee shall recommend such plan if any current release has been mitigated and if any regulated substance which has been released has been or will be cleaned up to the extent appropriate to protect subsurface soils, groundwater, or surface water as a result of the release at that specific location. The department shall give serious consideration to the recommendation of the committee. Such action shall be taken after consideration of the risks posed to the public and shall be determined in light of current economic and technological feasibility. If the committee finds that a current release has not been mitigated or that any regulated substance which has been released will not be cleaned up to the extent appropriate, the committee shall issue a statement of findings of fact and recommendations to the department for revisions to the plan. Such revisions, if approved by the department, shall be incorporated into the plan by the department, and the revised plan shall then be approved as provided in subsection (2) of this section.

(8) Within thirty days following mitigation and cleanup, the department shall notify the owner or operator, in writing, that the owner or operator has complied with the requirements for mitigation and cleanup as outlined in this section.

(9) (a) For the purpose of implementing the provisions of this section, the department or its designee is authorized for justifiable cause:

(I) To enter the property, premises, or place where a release or suspected release from an aboveground storage tank is located;

(II) To monitor or test or require the owner or operator to monitor or test an aboveground storage tank or any surrounding soils, groundwater, or surface water where a suspected release from an aboveground storage tank has occurred. A duplicate sample taken for testing shall be provided to any owner or operator who the department reasonably believes may be responsible for the violation upon request of such person. A duplicate copy of the analytical report pertaining to the samples taken pursuant to this subparagraph (II) shall be provided as soon as practicable to any person the department or its designee reasonably believes may be responsible for the violation. When such tests are performed, the department shall notify, when possible, any person reasonably believed to be an owner or operator.

(b) If such entry or inspection is denied, the department shall obtain, from the district or county court for the judicial district or county in which such property, premises, or place is located, a warrant to enter and inspect any such property, premises, or place prior to entry and inspection. The district and county courts of the state of Colorado are authorized to issue such warrants upon proper showing of the need for such entry and inspection.

(c) If requested by the department or its designee, the owner or operator of an aboveground storage tank shall provide any information in such owner's or operator's possession regarding the tank.

(10) (a) The department may consider water quality standards adopted by the water quality control commission as guidelines for cleanup but shall assure that cleanup requirements are appropriate, in light of economic and technical feasibility and after consideration of the risks to public health, to protect subsurface soils, groundwater, or surface water as a result of a release at a specific location.

(b) The department shall, if necessary, negotiate and enter into memoranda of agreement with and apply for and receive grants from the United States environmental protection agency.

For article, "Work-Related Stress Claims", see 18 Colo. Law. 1529 (1989). For article, "Workers' Compensation Fraud: 'Trashing the System'", see 20 Colo. Law. 1119 (1991).

Annotator's note. Since § 8-40-101 is similar to § 8-40-101 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of title 8, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Act does not violate constitutional guarantees of equal protection. Difference in methods of calculating benefits for partial and total injuries is rationally related to the governmental interest in providing benefits efficiently and fairly, notwithstanding that the classification is not perfect and that inequality may result in individual cases. Duran v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 883 P.2d 477 (Colo. 1994).

Because the workers' compensation act implicates no fundamental rights, the rational basis test provides the appropriate gauge in determining whether a statutory classification comports with equal protection. Young v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 969 P.2d 735 (Colo. App. 1998).

The workmen's compensation act was passed under the police power of the state. Sch. Dist. No. 1 v. Indus. Comm'n, 66 Colo. 580, 185 P. 348 (1919).

The workmen's compensation act deals exclusively with matters growing out of the relationship of employer and employee, and is binding only upon such as elect to come within its provisions. All others are strangers to the act and their usual lawful rights and remedies are unaffected by it. Rocky Mt. Fuel Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 105 Colo. 220, 96 P.2d 413 (1939).

Applied in Riley v. Indus. Comm'n, 628 P.2d 147 (Colo. App. 1981).

II. PURPOSES OF THE ACT.

The purpose of the act is to protect all workmen, save those specifically excluded, and provide an award of compensation in favor of an injured employee against all persons who may be liable therefor. Empire Zinc Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 102 Colo. 26, 77 P.2d 130 (1938); Sechler v. Pastore, 103 Colo. 139, 84 P.2d 61 (1938); Fast Freight v. Walker, 103 Colo. 347, 85 P.2d 720 (1938); Drake v. Hodges, 114 Colo. 10, 161 P.2d 338 (1945); Univ. of Denver v. Memeht, 127 Colo. 385, 257 P.2d 423 (1953); City of Boulder v. Payne, 162 Colo. 345, 426 P.2d 194 (1967).

The purpose of the workmen's compensation act is to protect employees who sustain injuries arising out of their employment. Bellendir v. Kezer, 648 P.2d 645 (Colo. 1982).

The purpose of the act is to speedily and justly compensate employees for injuries incurred in performing their jobs regardless of the fault of the employee or the employer. Pub. Serv. Co. v. United Cable Television of Jeffco, Inc., 816 P.2d 289 (Colo. App. 1991).

The purpose of the Act is to provide the exclusive remedy to a covered employee for injuries sustained while performing services arising out of and in the course of employment and which are proximately caused by injury or occupational disease arising out of and in the course of employment. Ferris v. Local 26, 867 P.2d 38 (Colo. App. 1993).

Purposes of act, as stated in 1991 repeal and reenactment, cited in Duran v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 883 P.2d 477 (Colo. 1994).

The act provides a remedy in areas where remedies do not exist at common law. Chartier v. Winslow Crane Serv. Co., 142 Colo. 294, 350 P.2d 1044 (1960).

Another purpose of the workmen's compensation act is to provide a method whereby claims arising out of industrial accidents may be speedily resolved. Stanley Hotel v. Thomas, 153 Colo. 503, 387 P.2d 27 (1963); Bellendir v. Kezer, 648 P.2d 645 (Colo. 1982).

Primary purpose of the workmen's compensation act is to afford workmen compensation for job-related injuries, regardless of fault. Frohlick Crane Serv., Inc. v. Mack, 182 Colo. 34, 510 P.2d 891 (1973).

Compensation legislation is a system of benefits one of whose independent social objectives is to prevent destitution among dependents of workmen who lose their lives in industrial activity. In re Hampton v. State, 31 Colo. App. 141, 500 P.2d 1186 (1972).

Employee is compensated and employer immunized from common-law claims. The workmen's compensation act grants the employee compensation from the employer, even though the employee may be negligent and even if the employer is not negligent. In return, the employer who is responsible under the workmen's compensation act is granted immunity from common-law claims. Frohlick Crane Serv., Inc. v. Mack, 182 Colo. 34, 510 P.2d 891 (1973).

But workmen's compensation act is not to shield third-party tortfeasors from liability for damages resulting from their negligence. Frohlick Crane Serv., Inc. v. Mack, 182 Colo. 34, 510 P.2d 891 (1973).

Consideration of the mental state of a third party is consistent with no-fault character of workers' compensation act, as it is the fault of the claimant and employer that is generally disregarded. Bralish v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 81 P.3d 1091 (Colo. App. 2003).

Bad-faith handling of a claim by an insurer is similarly not a risk contemplated by the general coverage provisions of the act. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Savio, 706 P.2d 1258 (Colo. 1985); McKelvy v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 983 P.2d 42 (Colo. App. 1998).

Independent insurance adjusting firm, acting on behalf of a self-insured employer, owes a duty of good faith to an injured claimant in investigating and processing a claim despite lack of contractual privity. Johnson v. Scott Wetzel Servs., Inc., 797 P.2d 786 (Colo. App. 1990), aff'd, 821 P.2d 804 (Colo. 1991).

Retaliation violates public policy. Since an employee is granted the specific right to apply for and receive compensation under this Act, an employer's retaliation for the exercise of such right violates public policy and provides the basis for a common-law claim by the employee to recover damages sustained by him as a result of that violation. Lathrop v. Entenmann's, Inc., 770 P.2d 1367 (Colo. App. 1989).

III. CONSTRUCTION OF THE ACT.

Annotator's note. Cases included in the annotations to this section which refer to the industrial commission were decided prior to the 1969 amendment which vested the director of the division of labor with the power, previously exercised by the industrial commission, to enforce and administer the workmen's compensation act.

Act to be liberally construed. The workmen's compensation act is highly remedial and beneficent in purpose, and should be liberally construed so as to accomplish its evident intent and purpose. Indus. Comm'n v. Johnson, 64 Colo. 461, 172 P. 422 (1918); Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 65 Colo. 283, 176 P. 314 (1918); *Karoly v. Indus. Faulk, 158 Colo. 441, 407 P.2d 348 (1965); In re Hampton v. State, 31 Colo. App. 141, 500 P.2d 1186 (1972); James v. Irrigation Motor & Pump Co., 180 Colo. 195, 503 P.2d 1025 (1972); Conley v. Indus. The workmen's compensation laws are to be liberally construed to accomplish the beneficial social and protective purposes of such enactments. Puffer Mercantile Co. v. Arellano, 34 Colo. App. 434, 528 P.2d 966 (1974), rev'd on other grounds, 190 Colo. 138, 546 P.2d 481 (1975); Mountain City Meat Co. v. Oqueda, 919 P.2d 246 (Colo. 1996).

The workmen's compensation act is broadly and liberally construed so as to provide just compensation for workmen and their families for injuries during employment. Finnerman v. McCormick, 499 F.2d 212 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1049, 95 S. Ct. 624, 42 L. Ed.2d 644 (1974).

The act is remedial and beneficent in purpose, and should be liberally construed to accomplish its humanitarian purpose of assisting injured workers and their families. Colo. Counties, Inc. v. Davis, 801 P.2d 10 (Colo. App. 1990).

The courts will construe the workmen's compensation law and interpret the legislative intent as it may appear from a consideration of the purpose and intent of the entire enactment. Univ. of Denver v. Indus. Comm'n, 138 Colo. 505, 335 P.2d 292 (1959).

The workmen's compensation provisions must not be pushed beyond the limits of their purpose, nor its funds diverted to those not clearly entitled thereto. Indus. Comm'n v. Baldwin, 139 Colo. 268, 338 P.2d 103 (1959).

Nonexistent provision may not be read into the act. The provision that the workmen's compensation act shall be liberally construed cannot be extended to clothe the court with power to read into it a provision which does not exist. Maley v. Martin, 111 Colo. 545, 144 P.2d 558 (1943); Maryland Cas. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 116 Colo. 58, 178 P.2d 426 (1947); Snyder v. Indus. Comm'n, 138 Colo. 523, 335 P.2d 543 (1959).

The tort of wrongful termination in violation of public policy does not arise under the workers' compensation laws of Colorado. Rundle v. Frontier-Kemper Constructors, Inc., 170 F. Supp.2d 1075 (D. Colo. 2001).

Where the provisions of the workmen's compensation act do not expressly limit the employee with respect to remedies, a court is not disposed to read or interpret such limitations into this act. Chartier v. Winslow Crane Serv. Co., 142 Colo. 294, 350 P.2d 1044 (1960).

However, consideration of the statute as a whole, together with its clear legislative intent, may persuade a court to impose such a limitation. Buzard v. Super Walls, Inc., 681 P.2d 520 (Colo. 1984).

And hypertechnical refinements in construction should be avoided. In order to carry out the intended purpose of the workmen's compensation act, it is necessary to avoid hypertechnical refinements in the construction of the terms and provisions of the act, especially where there is no prejudice to the employer. City of Boulder v. Payne, 162 Colo. 345, 426 P.2d 194 (1967); Martinez v. Indus. Comm'n, 709 P.2d 49 (Colo. App. 1985).

Mandatory provisions cannot be ignored. The doctrine of liberal construction to be applied to the act does not clothe the industrial commission with power to ignore its mandatory provisions. Stahura v. Indus. Comm'n, 103 Colo. 451, 86 P.2d 1080 (1939).

All portions should be construed together. To give full import to the purposes of the workmen's compensation act, all portions thereof should be read together and harmonized if possible. McBride v. Indus. Comm'n, 97 Colo. 166, 49 P.2d 386 (1935).

In workers' compensation cases, the substantive rights and liabilities of the parties are determined by the statute in effect at the time of a claimant's injury, while procedural changes in the statute become effective during the pendency of a claim. Am. Comp. Ins. Co. v. McBride, 107 P.3d 973 (Colo. App. 2004); Colo. Comp. Ins. Auth. v. Jones, 131 P.3d 1074 (Colo. App. 2005); Brownson-Rausin v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 131 P.3d 1172 (Colo. App. 2005).

Workers' compensation carrier is responsible for pro rata payment of plaintiff's attorney fees and costs in third-party action, where carrier is subrogated against third-party tortfeasor, despite no active contribution by carrier to the prosecution of the claim or its settlement. Colo. Counties, Inc. v. Davis, 801 P.2d 10 (Colo. App. 1990).

Both the Colorado Auto Accident Reparations Act and this act apply when a person is injured in an auto accident during the course and scope of employment. County Workers Comp. Pool v. Folk, 895 P.2d 1083 (Colo. App. 1994).

8-40-102. Legislative declaration. (1) It is the intent of the general assembly that the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado" be interpreted so as to assure the quick and efficient delivery of disability and medical benefits to injured workers at a reasonable cost to employers, without the necessity of any litigation, recognizing that the workers' compensation system in Colorado is based on a mutual renunciation of common law rights and defenses by employers and employees alike.

(2) The general assembly hereby finds that the determination of whether an individual is an employee for purposes of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado" is subject to a great deal of speculation and litigation. It is the intent of the general assembly to provide an easily ascertainable standard for determining whether an individual is an employee. In order to further this objective, the test for determining whether an individual is an employee for the purposes of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado" shall be based on the nine criteria found in section 8-40-202 (2) (b) (II) which shall supersede the common law. The fact that an individual performs services exclusively or primarily for another shall not be conclusive evidence that the individual is an employee.

DEFINITIONS

8-40-201. Definitions - repeal. As used in articles 40 to 47 of this title, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Accident" means an unforeseen event occurring without the will or design of the person whose mere act causes it; an unexpected, unusual, or undesigned occurrence; or the effect of an unknown cause or, the cause, being known, an unprecedented consequence of it.

(2) "Accident", "injury", or "injuries" includes disability or death resulting from accident or occupational disease as defined in subsection (14) of this section.

(2.5) (a) "Adverse action" means that the director, pursuant to part 5 of article 43 of this title or section 8-42-101 (3.6), has retroactively denied payment of fees, recommended a change in treating physician, or excluded a health care provider from the workers' compensation system by revoking the accreditation of any such health care provider under section 8-42-101 (3.6).

(b) (I) This subsection (2.5) is repealed, effective July 1, 2014.

(II) Prior to such repeal, the accreditation process created by section 8-42-101 (3.5) and (3.6) shall be reviewed as provided for in section 24-34-104, C.R.S.

(3) "Board" means the board of directors of Pinnacol Assurance.

(3.4) "Chief executive officer" means the chief executive officer of Pinnacol Assurance.

(3.5) Repealed.

(3.6) "Claimant" means a person who either:

(a) Receives benefits under articles 40 to 47 of this title; or

(b) Has or asserts, in any administrative or judicial forum or in any communication with the director, the division, or an employer, insurer, or self-insured employer, a right to receive such benefits.

(4) "Division" means the division of workers' compensation in the department of labor and employment.

(5) "Director" means the director of the division of workers' compensation.

(7) "Employer" has the meaning set forth in section 8-40-203 and the scope of such term is set forth in section 8-40-302.

(8) "Employment" means any trade, occupation, job, position, or process of manufacture or any method of carrying on any trade, occupation, job, position, or process of manufacture in which any person may be engaged; except that it shall not include participation in a ridesharing arrangement, as defined in section 39-22-509 (1) (a) (II), C.R.S., and participation in such a ridesharing arrangement shall not affect the wages paid to or hours or conditions of employment of an employee; nor shall it include the employee's participation in a voluntary recreational activity or program, regardless of whether the employer promoted, sponsored, or supported the recreational activity or program.

(9) "Examiner" means one of the industrial claim appeals examiners appointed to the industrial claim appeals panel in the industrial claim appeals office.

(10) "Executive director" means the executive director of the department of labor and employment.

(11.5) "Maximum medical improvement" means a point in time when any medically determinable physical or mental impairment as a result of injury has become stable and when no further treatment is reasonably expected to improve the condition. The requirement for future medical maintenance which will not significantly improve the condition or the possibility of improvement or deterioration resulting from the passage of time shall not affect a finding of maximum medical improvement. The possibility of improvement or deterioration resulting from the passage of time alone shall not affect a finding of maximum medical improvement.

(12) "Mediation" means a process through which parties involved in a dispute concerning matters arising under articles 40 to 47 of this title meet with a mediator to discuss such matter or matters, defining and articulating the issues and their positions on such issues, with a goal of resolving such dispute or disputes.

(13) "Mediator" means an individual who is trained to assist disputants in reaching a mutually acceptable resolution of their disputes through the identification and evaluation of alternatives.

(13.5) (a) "Medical treatment guidelines" means a system of evaluation and treatment guidelines for high cost or high frequency categories of occupational injury and disease that will assure appropriate medical care at a reasonable cost.

(b) (I) This subsection (13.5) is repealed, effective July 1, 2014.

(II) Prior to such repeal, the accreditation process created by section 8-42-101 (3.5) and (3.6) shall be reviewed as provided for in section 24-34-104, C.R.S.

(14) "Occupational disease" means a disease which results directly from the employment or the conditions under which work was performed, which can be seen to have followed as a natural incident of the work and as a result of the exposure occasioned by the nature of the employment, and which can be fairly traced to the employment as a proximate cause and which does not come from a hazard to which the worker would have been equally exposed outside of the employment.

(15) "Order" means and includes any decision, finding and award, direction, rule, regulation, or other determination arrived at by the director or an administrative law judge.

(15.5) "Overpayment" means money received by a claimant that exceeds the amount that should have been paid, or which the claimant was not entitled to receive, or which results in duplicate benefits because of offsets that reduce disability or death benefits payable under said articles. For an overpayment to result, it is not necessary that the overpayment exist at the time the claimant received disability or death benefits under said articles.

(16) "Panel" means the industrial claim appeals panel that conducts administrative appellate review pursuant to articles 40 to 47 of this title.

(16.5) (a) "Permanent total disability" means the employee is unable to earn any wages in the same or other employment. Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this subsection (16.5), the burden of proof shall be on the employee to prove that the employee is unable to earn any wages in the same or other employment.

(b) Total loss of or total loss of use of both hands, or both arms, or both feet, or both legs, or both eyes, or any two thereof shall create a rebuttable presumption of permanent total disability. "Total loss of use" shall be a medical determination, based upon objective findings, made by an independent medical examiner who is a level II accredited physician in the appropriate field.

(17) "Place of employment" means every place whether indoors, outdoors, or underground and the premises, workplaces, works, and plants appertaining thereto or used in connection therewith where either temporarily or permanently any industry, trade, or business is carried on; or where any process or operation directly or indirectly relating to any industry, trade, or business is carried on; or where any person is directly or indirectly employed by another for direct or indirect gain or profit.

(18) "State" includes any state or territory of the United States, the District of Columbia, and any province of Canada.

(18.5) "Temporary help contracting firm" means any person who is in the business of employing individuals and, for compensation from a third party, providing those individuals to perform work for the third party, under the supervision of the third party.

(19) (a) "Wages" shall be construed to mean the money rate at which the services rendered are recompensed under the contract of hire in force at the time of the injury, either express or implied.

(b) The term "wages" includes the amount of the employee's cost of continuing the employer's group health insurance plan and, upon termination of the continuation, the employee's cost of conversion to a similar or lesser insurance plan, and gratuities reported to the federal internal revenue service by or for the worker for purposes of filing federal income tax returns and the reasonable value of board, rent, housing, and lodging received from the employer, the reasonable value of which shall be fixed and determined from the facts by the division in each particular case, but does not include any similar advantage or fringe benefit not specifically enumerated in this subsection (19). If, after the injury, the employer continues to pay any advantage or fringe benefit specifically enumerated in this subsection (19), including the cost of health insurance coverage or the cost of the conversion of health insurance coverage, that advantage or benefit shall not be included in the determination of the employee's wages so long as the employer continues to make payment. Medicaid and other indigent health care programs are not health insurance plans for the purposes of this section.

(c) No per diem payment shall be considered wages under this subsection (19) unless it is also considered wages for federal income tax purposes.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "Independent Contractors and the Colorado Workers' Compensation Act — Parts I and II", see 22 Colo. Law. 545 and 1281 (1993). For article, "Anderson v. Brinkoff: Finally, a Meaningful Definition of 'Occupational Disease'", see 23 Colo. Law. 383 (1994). For article, "Update on Colorado Appellate Decisions in Workers' Compensation Law", see 33 Colo. Law. 83 (April 2004).

Annotator's note. (1) Since § 8-40-201 is similar to §§ 8-41-102, 8-41-103, 8-41-108, and 8-46-201 as they existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of title 8, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

(2) Cases included in the annotations to this section which refer to the industrial commission were decided prior to the enactment of 1986 Senate Bill No. 12 which abolished said commission and transferred some of its powers, duties, and functions under the act to the industrial claim appeals office.

II. ACCIDENT AND INJURIES.

Law reviews. For article, "A Significant Change in the Colorado Workmen's Compensation Act: 'Accidents', 'Injuries' and Heart Attack", see 41 Den. L. Ctr. J. 189 (1964). For article, "The Enterprise Liability Theory of Torts", see 47 U. Colo. L. Rev. 153 (1976).

The definition of "accident" under this section is an unexpected or unforeseen event happening suddenly and violently, with or without human fault and producing at the time objective symptoms of an injury. T & T Loveland Chinchilla Ranch v. Bourn, 173 Colo. 267, 477 P.2d 457 (1970).

An "accident" under the workmen's compensation act is an occurrence traceable to a definite time, place, and cause. Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 154 Colo. 240, 392 P.2d 174 (1964); Miceli v. State Comp. Ins. Fund, 157 Colo. 204, 401 P.2d 835 (1965).

Prior to this section, the workmen's compensation statute did not contain any definition of the word "accident". Indus. Comm'n v. Milka, 159 Colo. 114, 410 P.2d 181 (1966).

But an "accident" under the act had been interpreted to mean any unintended or unexpected loss or hurt apart from its cause. The term "accidental injury" was not then confined to a situation where the means or cause was an accident for it also included any injury which was itself an accident. Martin Marietta Corp. v. Faulk, 158 Colo. 441, 407 P.2d 348 (1965).

And this section is not intended to and does not alter the meaning of "accident" as that term came to be accepted by reason of court decisions. Denver-Golder Corp. v. Minikus, 159 Colo. 188, 410 P.2d 636 (1966); Indus. Comm'n v. Milka, 159 Colo. 114, 410 P.2d 181 (1966).

Thus, by this section, the general assembly has done nothing more than to adopt and to place into the act the court's determination of what is an accident. Indus. Comm'n v. Milka, 159 Colo. 114, 410 P.2d 181 (1966).

Since case law not overruled, demonstrative external violence need not be shown. The general assembly has not overruled the "case law"; therefore, it does not have to be shown that some demonstrative external violence was visited upon the body "causing a wounding, breaking, tearing, puncturing or disruption of the continuity of the body of the injured employee or his bodily tissue". Indus. Comm'n v. Milka, 159 Colo. 114, 410 P.2d 181 (1966).

The former definitions of "accident" and "injury" in this section made them inseparably linked to trauma, but this traumatic connection was entirely eliminated in the 1965 amendment. For example, in the 1965 definition of "accident" there are the terms, "an unforeseen event, occurring without the will or design of the person whose mere act causes it" and "an unexpected, unusual, or undesigned occurrence". T & T Loveland Chinchilla Ranch v. Bourn, 173 Colo. 267, 477 P.2d 457 (1970).

"Personal injury" limited. Because "personal injury" is not defined by the workmen's compensation act, it does not include damages which are based mainly on mental suffering and humiliation, and only peripherally on physical suffering and pain. Luna v. City & County of Denver, 537 F. Supp. 798 (D. Colo. 1982).

Courts distinguish between "accident" and "injury". City of Boulder v. Payne, 162 Colo. 345, 426 P.2d 194 (1967).

In that accident is the cause and injury is the effect. It does not follow in every instance that the two occur simultaneously. At least, in many instances, the total or ultimate effect is not immediately apparent. City of Boulder v. Payne, 162 Colo. 345, 426 P.2d 194 (1967); Indus. Comm'n v. Bysom, 166 Colo. 502, 444 P.2d 627 (1968); Crest Fence Co. v. Cec, 175 Colo. 21, 485 P.2d 709 (1971).

And an injury takes place when one, as a reasonable man, should recognize the nature, seriousness, and probable compensable character of his injury. Crest Fence Co. v. Cec, 175 Colo. 21, 485 P.2d 709 (1971).

Therefore, to interpret the act in such a way that a person who reasonably discovers his injury long after the accident and is entitled to compensation is not entitled to his medical expenses is absurd, and a defeat of the purpose of the act. Crest Fence Co. v. Cec, 175 Colo. 21, 485 P.2d 709 (1971).

Series of traumatic events compensable. The fact that an injury results from a series of traumatic events does not prevent that injury from being compensable as proximately caused by accident. Martinez v. Indus. Comm'n, 40 Colo. App. 485, 580 P.2d 36 (1978).

The traditional test for distinguishing between accidental and occupational injuries is whether the injury can be traced to a particular time, place, and cause. Because the employee's ulnar nerve entrapment injury resulted from the conditions of her employment, rather than a specific accident or trauma, the injury is an occupational disease within the meaning of subsection (14). Campbell v. IBM Corp., 867 P.2d 77 (Colo. App. 1993).

If one can prove that the injury was a result of work, then the date of injury is irrelevant for purposes of medical compensation. The injured worker is entitled to medical compensation regardless of date of injury if he or she can prove injury as a result of work. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 989 P.2d 251 (Colo. App. 1999).

A claimant suffering from an occupational disease is entitled to reasonably necessary medical benefits, even if the disease has not yet become disabling. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 989 P.2d 251* (Colo. App. 1999).

Applied in Eisnach v. Indus. Comm'n, 633 P.2d 502 (Colo. App. 1981); High v. Indus. Comm'n, 638 P.2d 818 (Colo. App. 1981); Stephen Equip. Co. v. Baca, 703 P.2d 1332 (Colo. App. 1985); City of Aurora v. Indus. Comm'n, 710 P.2d 1122 (Colo. App. 1985).

III. EMPLOYMENT.

This section is to be construed in relation to § 8-48-101. Betz v. Indus. Comm'n, 109 Colo. 385, 125 P.2d 958 (1942).

Determination of employment relationship depends upon facts in each case. Schultz v. Indus. Comm'n, 34 Colo. App. 122, 523 P.2d 164 (1974).

And determination must properly be made by commission rather than court, even though the facts are largely undisputed, because this matter is not within the court's scope of review. Schultz v. Indus. Comm'n, 34 Colo. App. 122, 523 P.2d 164 (1974).

One may be employee by virtue of the statute and not by common-law definition. An obligation to pay workmen's compensation may, in proper cases, be imposed against an owner where the common-law relationship of employer and employee does not exist, in that one may be an employee by virtue of the statute, for the purpose of workmen's compensation, when in fact he is not an employee by common-law definition. Finnerman v. McCormick, 499 F.2d 212 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1049, 95 S. Ct. 624, 42 L. Ed.2d 644 (1974).

Doubt resolved in claimant's favor. Any reasonable doubt as to whether a compensable accidental injury or death arose out of and in the course of employment must be resolved in favor of the claimant. Conley v. Indus. Comm'n, 43 Colo. App. 10, 601 P.2d 648 (1979).

A company whose business is essentially that of processing, is within the meaning of "process of manufacture or any method of carrying on any such trade or process of manufacture" as used in this section. Betz v. Indus. Comm'n, 109 Colo. 385, 125 P.2d 958 (1942).

Harm or injury sustained by an employee while going to or from his work is not compensable, in the absence of special circumstances, and except in certain unusual circumstances. Berry's Coffee Shop, Inc. v. Palomba, 161 Colo. 369, 423 P.2d 2 (1967); J. C. Carlile Corp. v. Antaki, 162 Colo. 376, 426 P.2d 549 (1967).

But injuries which occur to an employee while going to or from work may be compensable when it appears that at the time of such injuries he is engaged in doing an act, or performing a duty, which he is definitely charged with doing as a part of his contractual service, or under the express or implied direction of his employer. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Keane, 160 Colo. 292, 417 P.2d 8 (1966); Berry's Coffee Shop, Inc. v. Palomba, 161 Colo. 369, 423 P.2d 2 (1967); J. C. Carlile v. Antaki, 162 Colo. 376, 426 P.2d 549 (1967).

And an injury suffered by an employee while performing an act for the mutual ben- efit of the employer and the employee is usually compensable, for when some advantage to the employer results from the employee's conduct, his act cannot be regarded as purely personal and wholly unrelated to the employment. Accordingly, an injury resulting from such an act arises out of, and in the course of, the employment; and this rule is applicable, even though the advantage to the employer is slight. Berry's Coffee Shop, Inc. v. Palomba, 161 Colo. 369, 423 P.2d 2 (1967).

Thus, the test in brief is this: If the work of the employee creates the necessity for travel, he is in the course of his employment, though he is serving at the same time some purpose of his own. Berry's Coffee Shop, Inc. v. Palomba, 161 Colo. 369, 423 P.2d 2 (1967).

The test for whether reimbursed travel is within the course and scope of employment necessitates the following findings of fact: (1) The number of miles traveled; (2) the cost of driving the distance on a daily basis; (3) the extent to which the reimbursement covers actual travel costs; (4) the extent to which other employees travel to reach the job site; and (5) the difficulties of travel that provide a special benefit to the employer or poses an unusual risk to the employee. Sturgeon Elec. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 129 P.3d 1057 (Colo. App. 2005).

Decedent's death arises out of his employment if it arises out of the nature, conditions, obligations or incidents of the employment; in other words, out of the employment looked at in any of its aspects. Conley v. Indus. Comm'n, 43 Colo. App. 10, 601 P.2d 648 (1979).

Claim not barred by off-duty status. The fact that decedent police officer was off duty prior to the onset of the emergency does not bar a claim for compensation. Conley v. Indus. Comm'n, 43 Colo. App. 10, 601 P.2d 648 (1979).

Voluntary participation in recreational event held during nonwork hours and off of employer's premises, with only benefit to employer being improvement of employee morale, held not to constitute compensable situation if injury to employee occurs. Wilson v. Scientific Software-Intercomp, 738 P.2d 400 (Colo. App. 1987).

Even if the employer promoted the event, subsection (8) requires that the claimant's motive for participation be determined and that compensation be denied if participation in the activity was voluntary. Dover Elevator Co. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 961 P.2d 1141 (Colo. App. 1998).

An administrative law judge may consider evidence concerning whether an employer promoted, sponsored, or supported an activity because it is within the employer's power to enlarge the scope of employment. Dover Eleva- tor Co. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 961 P.2d 1141 (Colo. App. 1998).

Causation may be established in the absence of the time and place factors set forth in City and County of Denver v. Lee, 168 Colo. 208, 450 P.2d 352 (1969), if there is a strong showing of the other factors. Dover Elevator Co. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 961 P.2d 1141 (Colo. App. 1998).

The fact that there was no evidence that anyone was punished for not having attended a party did not preclude a determination that attendance at the party was voluntary. Dover Elevator Co. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 961 P.2d 1141 (Colo. App. 1998).

The provision of this section providing that employment does not include participation in a ridesharing arrangement precludes a vicarious liability claim against the employer for injuries sustained by an employee in a car pooling arrangement. Smith v. Pinner, 891 F.2d 784 (10th Cir. 1989).

In the context of workers' compensation, the determination whether an accident occurred within the scope of employment depends on an examination of the totality of the circumstances, and if an employee's travel is at the express or implied request of the employer, or if the travel confers a benefit on the employer beyond the sole fact of the employee's arrival at work, then the travel is within the scope of employment. Capra v. Tucker, 857 P.2d 1346 (Colo. App. 1993).

Where the employer agrees to provide its employee with the means of transportation or to pay the employee's cost of commuting to and from work, the scope of employment inferentially enlarges to include the employee's transportation. Capra v. Tucker, 857 P.2d 1346 (Colo. App. 1993).

Where claimant worked full-time and there was no evidence that he was hired for the completion of single tasks, or on a per task basis, ALJ erred in concluding that he was not an actual employee. The "relative nature of the work" test, if applied, would show that the claimant was an actual employee under this section. Stampados v. Colo. D & S Enters., 833 P.2d 815 (Colo. App. 1992).

The term "employment" is applied in Loffland Brothers Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 714 P.2d 509 (Colo. App. 1985).

IV. OCCUPATIONAL DISEASE.

Former section provided that an occupational disease would not be compensated as an accident. Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 162 Colo. 68, 424 P.2d 382 (1967).

Employment conditions acting on preexisting allergy or weakness in "occupational disease". Where employment conditions act upon a claimant's individual allergy, hypersensitivity, or preexisting weakness so as to disable him, he has a compensable occupational disease, provided other requirements for compensability have been met. Denver v. Hansen, 650 P.2d 1319 (Colo. App. 1982); IML Freight v. Indus. Comm'n, 676 P.2d 1205 (Colo. App. 1983).

As is condition acting on preexisting injury. Where, as a condition of his employment, claimant was required to wear safety shoes, which developed blistering on a foot on which he had previously suffered severe burns, this injury fits within the definition of occupational disease. CF & I Steel Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 650 P.2d 1332 (Colo. App. 1982).

Standard for disease. Disability benefits are not given only in those cases in which the disease is so overwhelming that it physically prevents a worker from attempting to perform his duties. Jefferson County Schs. v. Headrick, 734 P.2d 659 (Colo. App. 1986).

Under the definition of "occupational disease", the statute does not invite a weighing of hazards to which a worker has been exposed in his lifetime in determining whether a particular disease is occupational, it operates to ensure that a disease results from an occupational hazard. Where there is no evidence that occupational exposure to a hazard is a necessary prerequisite to the development of the disease, a claimant suffers from an occupational disease only to the extent that the occupational exposure contributed to the disability. Anderson v. Brinkhoff, 859 P.2d 819 (Colo. 1993) (decided under law in effect prior to 1990 repeal and reenactment).

If any hazard encountered by a worker outside the worker's employment setting was at least an equal contributor to the employee's disease, no compensation can be awarded. Hall v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 757 P.2d 1132 (Colo. App. 1988); Cowin & Co. v. Medina, 860 P.2d 535 (Colo. App. 1992).

Therefore, if two or more causes contribute to a diseased condition, it is necessary to determine the extent to which the nonindustrial cause contributed to that condition. Cowin & Co. v. Medina, 860 P.2d 535 (Colo. App. 1992).

However, similar to the requirement that a tortfeasor assumes the burden of proving the ability to apportion responsibility between two or more causes of a disability, a disabled worker's employer bears the burden of proving the extent to which a nonoccupational hazard has contributed to that worker's disability. The failure to sustain this burden will render inapplicable the statutory exclusion from the general rule of compensation in this section. Cowin & Co. v. Medina, 860 P.2d 535 (Colo. App. 1992).

The fact that an occupational disease becomes acutely symptomatic does not ipso facto transform it into an accidental injury. Campbell v. IBM Corp., 867 P.2d 77 (Colo. App. 1993).

Occupational diseases are subject to a more rigorous test than occupational accidents/injuries before they can be found compensable. If the general assembly intended to subject occupational disease only to the "arising out of" test, there would be no need to include the language concerning hazards to which the worker would have been equally exposed outside of employment. Anderson v. Brinkhoff, 859 P.2d 819 (Colo. 1993) (decided under law in effect prior to 1990 repeal and reenactment).

The four-part test applied to determine whether an occupational disease is compensable amounts to a legislative declaration that it is necessary to limit the scope of occupational diseases to those diseases which result from working conditions which are characteristic of the vocation. It is this proof of causation that ensures that the Workers' Compensation Act will not become a general health insurance act. Anderson v. Brinkhoff, 859 P.2d 819 (Colo. 1993) (decided under law in effect prior to 1990 repeal and reenactment).

Occupational exposure as a contributory factor in disability. When there is no evidence that occupational exposure was a necessary precondition to development of the disease with which the claimant is afflicted, the claimant has sustained an occupational disease only to the extent that the occupational exposure contributed to his overall disability. Masdin v. Gardner-Denver-Copper Indus., Inc., 689 P.2d 714 (Colo. App. 1984).

V. ORDER.

Written authority from the division of labor for the employer to close its file is not equivalent to an order finally adjudicating the claim, especially since there was no request made of claimant to advise whether he agreed that his case was closed. Granite Constr. Co. v. Leonard, 40 Colo. App. 20, 568 P.2d 500 (1977).

Letter of director was not an "order" within the meaning of this section but instead gave rise to a "controversy" which was properly submitted to a hearing officer for resolution. Romans v. Hewitt Elec. Corp., 723 P.2d 161 (Colo. App. 1986).

VI. OVERPAYMENT.

The statutory definition of the term "overpayment" is clear and unambiguous. Simpson v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 219 P.3d 354 (Colo. App. 2009), rev'd on other grounds, 232 P.3d 777 (Colo. 2010).

There are three categories of possible overpayment included in the statutory definition of "overpayment" under subsection (15.5). The first category is for overpayments created when a claimant receives money that exceeds the amount that should have been paid. The second category is for money received that a claimant was not entitled to receive. The third category is for money received that results in duplicate benefits because of offsets that reduce disability or death benefits payable under articles 40 to 47 of this title. Simpson v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 219 P.3d 354 (Colo. App. 2009), rev'd on other grounds, 232 P.3d 777 (Colo. 2010).

The disjunctive "or" in subsection (15.5) plainly demarcates three different categories of overpayments, only one of which involves statutory setoff. The statutory phrase "because of offsets that reduce disability or death benefits payable under said articles" applies only to the third category of overpayments in subsection (15.5). Simpson v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 219 P.3d 354 (Colo. App. 2009), rev'd on other grounds, 232 P.3d 777 (Colo. 2010).

VII. PERMANENT TOTAL DISABILITY.

Classification for purposes of determining eligibility for permanent total disability is constitutional and does not violate equal protection guarantees. Lobb v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 948 P.2d 115 (Colo. App. 1997).

Position offered to claimant in which she would engage in a variety of activities and be compensated at a rate of $10 per hour, constituted "employment" within the meaning of subsection (8), making her ineligible for permanent total disability benefits. Administrative law judge's finding that the offer was a bona fide offer of employment rather than a charitable offer from claimant's former employer was supported by the record and is binding on appeal. Lobb v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 948 P.2d 115 (Colo. App. 1997).

Determination of "permanent total disability" is based on several factors, not just medical impairment. The 1991 amendment limiting determination of permanent partial disability to consideration of medical impairment does not limit determination of permanent total disability in the same manner. Thus, in determining permanent total disability, the ALJ was correct in considering claimant's physical condition, employment history, and educational background. Best-Way Concrete Co. v. Baumgartner, 908 P.2d 1194 (Colo. App. 1995).

In making the determination whether a claimant is permanently and totally disabled, the ALJ may consider human factors such as education, ability, and former employment. Holly Nursing Care Ctr. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 992 P.2d 701 (Colo. App. 1999).

The determination of whether a claimant is permanently and totally disabled is a factual determination and thus, an ALJ's resolution that is supported by substantial evidence is binding on review. Holly Nursing Care Ctr. v. Indus.

Claim Appeals Office, 992 P.2d 701 (Colo. App. 1999).

A claimant who would not be able to access the labor market in the area where the claimant lives, a "reasonable commutable distance from home", is not capable of securing employment, was unable to earn any wages, and therefore was permanently and totally disabled. Brush Greenhouse Partners v. Godinez, 942 P.2d 1278 (Colo. App. 1996), aff'd sub. nom. Weld County Sch. Dist. RE-12 v. Bymer, 955 P.2d 550 (Colo. 1998).

Access to or availability of employment in a claimant's commutable labor market may be considered in determining a claimant's eligibility for permanent total disability benefits. The crux of the inquiry is whether employment exists that is reasonably available to the claimant given his or her circumstances and can only be answered on a case-by-case basis. Weld County Sch. Dist. RE-12 v. Bymer, 955 P.2d 550 (Colo. 1998).

The legislative history of the 1991 amendment to subsection (16.5)(a) indicates that the new definition of permanent total disability was intended to tighten and restrict eligibility for permanent total disability benefits. There is no evidence that the legislature intended to go further by abolishing consideration of a claimant's accessible labor market. Weld County Sch. Dist. RE-12 v. Bymer, 955 P.2d 550 (Colo. 1998).

VIII. PLACE OF EMPLOYMENT.

The place of employment under the workmen's compensation act is not expressly limited to the state. Denver Truck Exch. v. Perryman, 134 Colo. 586, 307 P.2d 805 (1957).

IX. STATE.

Law reviews. For note, "The Conflicts Problem as Applied to Workmen's Compensation in Colorado", see 22 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 77 (1949).

Extraterritorial provisions reciprocal. The very inclusion of "any province of Canada" within the purview of this subdivision argues convincingly that the basic principle of the subdivision is the mutual recognition of extraterritorial provisions by voluntary reciprocal action of the various governing units contemplated by this subdivision; that the extraterritorial principle becomes applicable only to the extent that one state and then another enacts a similar reciprocal law. The fact that two neighboring states, Utah and Wyoming, have enacted simultaneously with this state very similar laws would seem to be persuasive in adopting this view. Frankel Carbon & Ribbon Co. v. Aaron, 113 Colo. 429, 158 P.2d 929 (1945).

Applied in State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Howington, 133 Colo. 583, 298 P.2d 963 (1956).

X. WAGES.

A. Generally.

Question whether subsection (19) is unconstitutional by virtue of preemption by federal legislation was properly a matter within the court of appeals' jurisdiction, and was not a matter subject to review by the administrative law judge. Celebrity Custom Builders v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 916 P.2d 539 (Colo. App. 1995).

Exclusion of fringe benefits of employment from definition of "wages" of employees in agricultural industry violates equal protection guarantees. Higgs v. Western Landscaping & Sprinkler Sys., Inc., 804 P.2d 161 (Colo. 1991).

Barring a claimant who is capable of earning wages in "any" amount from receiving permanent total disability benefits does not offend equal protection guarantees. Christie v. Coors Transp. Co., 919 P.2d 857 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd, 933 P.2d 1330 (Colo. 1997).

The exclusion of per diem payments in the calculation of wages does not result in disparate calculation of wages, but rather, serves to differentiate between payments intended to reimburse the employee for expenses incurred as a result of his employment and those meant to provide economic advantage, and is not a violation of equal protection. Young v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 969 P.2d 735 (Colo. App. 1998).

Inclusion of cost of continuing health insurance in definition of "wages" does not require preemption of subsection (19) under federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA). Celebrity Custom Builders v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 916 P.2d 539 (Colo. App. 1995).

Actual purchase of health insurance not required in order for cost of benefits to be included in calculating claimant's average weekly wage. Avalanche Indus. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 166 P.3d 147 (Colo. App. 2007), aff'd, 198 P.3d 589 (Colo. 2008).

ERISA does not preempt former § 8-47-101 (1) and (2), as effective in May 1989, to the extent those subsections required that the value of ERISA-plan benefits be included in calculating an employee's average weekly wage for workers' compensation purposes. Hewlett-Packard Co. v. Diringier, 42 F. Supp.2d 1038 (D. Colo. 1999).

Purpose of subsection (19) definition of "wages" (now found in subsection (19)(b)) is to calculate the money rate at which services are paid under the contract of hire in force at the time of injury, and to include any advantage or fringe benefit provided to the employee in lieu of wages. Celebrity Custom Builders v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 916 P.2d 539 (Colo. App. 1995).

Non-cash benefits can comprise a substantial amount of a worker's wages. Celebrity Custom Builders v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 916 P.2d 539 (Colo. App. 1995); Young v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 969 P.2d 735 (Colo. App. 1998); Iler v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 207 P.3d 945 (Colo. App. 2009).

Subsection (19) contains no requirement that the employer provide any level of coverage for the employee. Celebrity Custom Builders v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 916 P.2d 539 (Colo. App. 1995).

The term "wages" does not include employer's FICA tax payments for the purpose of calculating a claimant's average weekly wage even though employer's PERA contributions are included as "wages" for the same purpose. Case finds that there are significant differences between such payments which justify such different treatment. Floyd v. AMF Tuboscope, Inc., 817 P.2d 534 (Colo. App. 1990).

The phrase "any wages" in subsection (16.5)(a) cannot encompass the pre-injury wage rate level referred to in subsection (19)(a). McKinney v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 894 P.2d 42 (Colo. App. 1995).

Subsection (16.5)(a) and § 8-43-303 (3) are distinguishable because they affect persons who are not similarly situated to each other. The purpose of subsection (16.5)(a) is to define permanent total disability for purposes of initially determining whether a claimant is eligible for permanent total disability benefits. In contrast, the purpose of § 8-43-303 (3) is to set a standard which employers must meet before a case can be reopened to determine whether an employee who has already been awarded permanent total disability benefits should continue to receive such benefits. Christie v. Coors Transp. Co., 933 P.2d 1330 (Colo. 1997).

"Any wages" means that a claimant is disqualified from permanent disability benefits if he or she is capable of earning wages in any amount. McKinney v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 894 P.2d 42 (Colo. App. 1995); Christie v. Coors Transp. Co., 919 P.2d 857 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd, 933 P.2d 1330 (Colo. 1997).

Employer cannot evade responsibility under Workers' Compensation Act by labeling a portion of compensation as "expense reimbursement" where there is no rational or realistic relationship between the employee's actual expenses and the amount claimed as reimbursement. Sneath v. Express Messenger, 881 P.2d 453 (Colo. App. 1994).

In determining the "money rate at which the services are rendered" pursuant to subsection (19), there must be included the value of the rate of accrual of the employee's leave time. Meeker v. Provenant Health Partners, 929 P.2d 26 (Colo. App. 1996).

Pension contributions are excluded from the determination of claimant's average weekly wage. City of Lamar v. Koehn, 968 P.2d 164 (Colo. App. 1998).

Panel correctly declined to include the value of claimant's vacation and sick leave in determining claimant's average weekly wage since the leave was subject to forfeiture after a specified maximum number of days had accrued and since the value of the claimant's leave time was dependent upon actual usage and would decline if not used. City of Lamar v. Koehn, 968 P.2d 164 (Colo. App. 1998).

Income from an investment or from a personally operated business does not necessarily constitute "wages". Because the general assembly did not intend to prohibit disabled persons from securing income other than wage income, claimant was not disqualified from receiving permanent total disability benefits simply because he received unspecified income from his investment in a bingo parlor and his former land scraper business. Best-Way Concrete Co. v. Baumgartner, 908 P.2d 1194 (Colo. App. 1995).

B. Computation of Average Weekly Wage.

A claimant's average weekly wage is to be determined according to the contract of hire in force at the time of the injury. Drywall Prods. v. Constable, 832 P.2d 957 (Colo. App. 1991).

Expense reimbursement of four cents per mile was not considered wages for federal income tax purposes and therefore could not be considered wages for purposes of computing a claimant's average weekly wage. Ernie Baylog, Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 923 P.2d 361 (Colo. App. 1996).

The cost of medicare insurance benefits is included in an injured claimant's average weekly wage once the continuation of the employers' group health insurance plan is terminated. Schelly v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 961 P.2d 547 (Colo. App. 1997).

Average weekly wage includes both the employer's and employee's contribution to group health insurance premiums. Humane Soc'y of Pikes Peak Region v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 26 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2001), aff'd, 145 P.3d 661 (Colo. 2006).

Claimant is not required to present proof that he or she actually purchased replacement coverage. The statute merely seeks to ensure that the claimant will have funds available to make the purchase. Humane Soc'y of Pikes Peak Region v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 26 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2001); Ray v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 124 P.3d 891 (Colo. App. 2005).

Average weekly wage includes the cost of health insurance only when a claimant has continued the employer's coverage at his or her own cost pursuant to COBRA or § 10-

16-108, and thereafter, when that coverage ends and the claimant has converted to other coverage. An employee's contribution to his or her health care premium during the period of employment does not represent an amount included as wages for the purpose of calculating average weekly wages. Midboe v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 88 P.3d 643 (Colo. App. 2003).

An employee who has been terminated from employment, however, following an injury is not required to purchase a continuing policy and convert to an individual plan before that employee becomes entitled to have the cost of continuing the employer's plan included in the average weekly wage. Subsection (19)(b) does not require proof that the claimant has actually purchased coverage. Humane Soc'y of Pikes Peak Region v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 26 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2001); Ray v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 124 P.3d 891 (Colo. App. 2005).

Subsection (19)(b) states that the cost of converting to a similar or lesser insurance plan is included in the average weekly wage computation. When an employee converts to coverage comparable to or lesser than the employer's plan, the cost to the employee of the converted insurance is added to the employee's average weekly wage. Sears Roebuck & Co. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 140 P.3d 336 (Colo. App. 2006).

The absence of comparable market forces does not preclude a claimant from proving a reasonable sum for room and board. Iler v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 207 P.3d 945 (Colo. App. 2009).

The mandate in subsection (19)(b) to include the cost of room and board does not require direct proof of actual cost or market value of the room and board, and it does not exclude replacement cost as a viable measure. Hence, claimant's testimony, based on claimant's expenses in Colorado, about the replacement value of food and lodging received while employed in Antarctica established a prima facie case and led to the reasonable inference that the room and board provided by the employer had some value. Iler v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 207 P.3d 945 (Colo. App. 2009).

C. Computation.

Increase in benefits was correctly applied retroactively. The case of Henderson v. RSI, Inc., 824 P.2d 91 (Colo. App. 1991), did not establish a new rule of law in finding that the benefits for an occupational disease should be based on the claimant's wages at the time the claimant became disabled rather than on wages at the time of the last injurious exposure. Subsequent Injury Fund v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 899 P.2d 220 (Colo. App. 1994).

8-40-202. Employee. (1) "Employee" means:

(a) (I) (A) Every person in the service of the state, or of any county, city, town, or irrigation, drainage, or school district or any other taxing district therein, or of any public institution or administrative board thereof under any appointment or contract of hire, express or implied; and every elective official of the state, or of any county, city, town, or irrigation, drainage, or school district or any other taxing district therein, or of any public institution or administrative board thereof; and every member of the military forces of the state of Colorado while engaged in active service on behalf of the state under orders from competent authority. Police officers and firefighters who are regularly employed shall be deemed employees within the meaning of this paragraph (a), as shall also sheriffs and deputy sheriffs, regularly employed, and all persons called to serve upon any posse in pursuance of the provisions of section 30-10-516, C.R.S., during the period of their service upon such posse, and all members of volunteer fire departments, including any person receiving a retirement pension under section 31-30-1122, C.R.S., who serves as an active volunteer firefighter of a fire department subsequent to retirement pursuant to section 31-30-1132, C.R.S., or any person ordered by the chief or a designee of the chief's at the scene of an emergency or during the period of an emergency to become a member of that department for the duration of an emergency, and to perform the duties of a firefighter, and only if the person who is so ordered reports any claim within ten days of the cessation of the emergency, volunteer rescue teams or groups, volunteer disaster teams, volunteer ambulance teams or groups, and volunteer search teams in any county, city, town, municipality, or legally organized fire protection district or ambulance district in the state of Colorado, and all members of the civil air patrol, Colorado wing, while said persons are actually performing duties as volunteer firefighters or as members of such volunteer rescue teams or groups, volunteer disaster teams, volunteer ambulance teams or groups, or volunteer search teams or as members of the civil air patrol, Colorado wing, and while engaged in organized drills, practice, or training necessary or proper for the performance of such duties. Members of volunteer police departments, volunteer police reserves, and volunteer police teams or groups in any county, city, town, or municipality, while actually performing duties as volunteer police officers, may be deemed employees within the meaning of this paragraph (a) at the option of the governing body of such county or municipality.

(B) Notwithstanding the provisions of sub-subparagraph (A) of this subparagraph (I), any elected or appointed official of any county, city, town, or irrigation, drainage, or school district or taxing district who receives no compensation for service rendered as such an official, other than reimbursement of actual expenses, may be deemed not to be an employee within the meaning of this paragraph (a) at the option of the governing body of such county, city, town, or district. The option to exclude such officials as employees within the meaning of this paragraph (a) may be exercised as to any category of officials or as to any combination of categories of officials. Any such option may be exercised for any policy year by the filing of a statement with the division not less than forty-five days before the start of the policy year for which the option is to be exercised. If such a statement is in effect as to any category of such uncompensated officials, no official in said category shall be deemed an employee within the meaning of this paragraph (a). The governing body shall notify each official of such action promptly at the time such election to exclude is exercised.

(II) The rate of compensation of such persons accidentally injured, or, if killed, the rate of compensation for their dependents, while serving upon such posse or as volunteer firefighters or as members of such volunteer police departments, volunteer police reserves, or volunteer police teams or groups or as members of such volunteer rescue teams or groups, volunteer disaster teams, volunteer ambulance teams or groups, or volunteer search teams or as members of the civil air patrol, Colorado wing, and of every nonsalaried person in the service of the state, or of any county, city, town, or irrigation, drainage, or school district therein, or of any public institution or administrative board thereof under any appointment or contract of hire, express or implied, including nonsalaried elective officials of the state, and of all members of the military forces of the state of Colorado shall be at the maximum rate provided by articles 40 to 47 of this title; except that this subparagraph (II) shall apply to an official described in sub-subparagraph (B) of subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (a) only if no statement exercising the option to exclude such official as an employee within the meaning of this paragraph (a) is in effect.

(III) Any person who, as part of a rehabilitation program of the social services department of any county or city and county, is placed with a private employer for the purpose of training or learning trades or occupations shall be deemed while so engaged to be an employee of such private employer. Any person who receives a work experience assignment to a position in any department or agency of any county or municipality, in any school district, in the office of any state agency or political subdivision thereof, or in any private for profit or any nonprofit agency pursuant to the provisions of part 7 of article 2 of title 26, C.R.S., shall be deemed while so assigned to be an employee of the respective department, agency, office, political subdivision, private for profit or nonprofit agency, or school district to which said person is assigned or, if so negotiated between the county and the entity to which the person is assigned, of the county arranging the work experience assignment. Any person who receives a work experience assignment to a position in any federal office or agency pursuant to part 7 of article 2 of title 26, C.R.S., shall be deemed while so assigned to be an employee of the county arranging the work experience assignment. The rate of compensation for such persons if accidentally injured or, if killed, for their dependents shall be based upon the wages normally paid in the community in which they reside for the type of work in which they are engaged at the time of such injury or death; except that, if any such person is a minor, compensation to such minor for permanent disability, if any, or death benefits to such minor's dependents shall be paid at the maximum rate of compensation payable under articles 40 to 47 of this title at the time of the determination of such disability or of such death.

(IV) Except as provided in section 8-40-301 (3) and section 8-40-302 (7) (a), any person who may at any time be receiving training under any work or job training or rehabilitation program sponsored by any department, board, commission, or institution of the state of Colorado or of any county, city and county, city, town, school district, or private or parochial school or college and who, as part of any such work or job training or rehabilitation program of any department, board, commission, or institution of the state of Colorado or of any county, city and county, city, town, school district, or private or parochial school or college, is placed with any employer for the purpose of training or learning trades or occupations shall be deemed while so engaged to be an employee of the respective department, board, commission, or institution of the state of Colorado or of the county, city and county, city, town, school district, or private or parochial school or college sponsoring such training or rehabilitation program unless the following conditions are met, in which case the placed person shall be deemed an employee of the employer with whom he or she is placed:

(A) The sponsoring entity and the employer agree that the employer shall cover the placed person under the employer's workers' compensation insurance;

(B) The employer does in fact insure and keep insured its liability for workers' compensation as provided in articles 40 to 47 of this title and does in fact cover the placed person under such insurance; and

(C) With respect to agreements between sponsoring entities and employers entered into after April 1, 1991, the employer has been provided with notice of the provisions of this subparagraph (IV) and of subparagraphs (V) and (VI) of this paragraph (a).

(V) In the event a person placed with an employer is deemed an employee of the employer pursuant to subparagraph (IV) of this paragraph (a), the sponsoring entity shall not be subject to any liability for or on account of the death of or personal injury to the person so placed. In the event such person is deemed an employee of the sponsoring entity pursuant to the said subparagraph (IV), the employer shall not be subject to any liability for or on account of the death of or personal injury to the person and shall not be required to carry workers' compensation insurance or to pay premiums for workers' compensation insurance with respect to the person.

(VI) The rate of compensation for a person placed pursuant to subparagraph (IV) of this paragraph (a) if accidentally injured or, if killed, for dependents of such person shall be based upon the wages normally paid in the community in which such person resides or in the community where said work or job training or rehabilitation program is being conducted for the type of work in which the person is engaged at the time of such injury or death, as determined by the director; except that, if any such person is a minor, compensation for such minor for permanent disability, if any, or death benefits to such minor's dependents shall be paid at the maximum rate of compensation payable under articles 40 to 47 of this title at the time of the determination of such disability or death.

(b) Every person in the service of any person, association of persons, firm, or private corporation, including any public service corporation, personal representative, assignee, trustee, or receiver, under any contract of hire, express or implied, including aliens and also including minors, whether lawfully or unlawfully employed, who for the purpose of articles 40 to 47 of this title are considered the same and have the same power of contracting with respect to their employment as adult employees, but not including any persons who are expressly excluded from articles 40 to 47 of this title or whose employment is but casual and not in the usual course of the trade, business, profession, or occupation of the employer. The following persons shall also be deemed employees and entitled to benefits at the maximum rate provided by said articles, and, in the event of injury or death, their dependents shall likewise be entitled to such maximum benefits, if and when the association, team, group, or organization to which they belong has elected to become subject to articles 40 to 47 of this title and has insured its liability under said articles: All members of privately organized volunteer fire departments, volunteer rescue teams or groups, volunteer disaster teams, volunteer ambulance teams or groups, and volunteer search teams and organizations while performing their respective duties as members of such privately organized volunteer fire departments, volunteer rescue teams or groups, volunteer disaster teams, volunteer ambulance teams or groups, and volunteer search teams and organizations and while engaged in organized drills, practice, or training necessary or proper for the performance of their respective duties.

(2) (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, any individual who performs services for pay for another shall be deemed to be an employee, irrespective of whether the common-law relationship of master and servant exists, unless such individual is free from control and direction in the performance of the service, both under the contract for performance of service and in fact and such individual is customarily engaged in an independent trade, occupation, profession, or business related to the service performed. For purposes of this section, the degree of control exercised by the person for whom the service is performed over the performance of the service or over the individual performing the service shall not be considered if such control is exercised pursuant to the requirements of any state or federal statute or regulation.

(b) (1) To prove that an individual is engaged in an independent trade, occupation, profession, or business and is free from control and direction in the performance of the service, the individual and the person for whom services are performed may show by a preponderance of the evidence that the conditions set forth in paragraph (a) of this subsection (2) have been satisfied. The parties may also prove independence through a written document.

(II) To prove independence it must be shown that the person for whom services are performed does not:

(A) Require the individual to work exclusively for the person for whom services are performed; except that the individual may choose to work exclusively for such person for a finite period of time specified in the document;

(B) Establish a quality standard for the individual; except that the person may provide plans and specifications regarding the work but cannot oversee the actual work or instruct the individual as to how the work will be performed;

(C) Pay a salary or at an hourly rate instead of at a fixed or contract rate;

(D) Terminate the work of the service provider during the contract period unless such service provider violates the terms of the contract or fails to produce a result that meets the specifications of the contract;

(E) Provide more than minimal training for the individual;

(F) Provide tools or benefits to the individual; except that materials and equipment may be supplied;

(G) Dictate the time of performance; except that a completion schedule and a range of negotiated and mutually agreeable work hours may be established;

(H) Pay the service provider personally instead of making checks payable to the trade or business name of such service provider; and

(I) Combine the business operations of the person for whom service is provided in any way with the business operations of the service provider instead of maintaining all such operations separately and distinctly.

(III) A document may satisfy the requirements of this paragraph (b) if such document demonstrates by a preponderance of the evidence the existence of the factors listed in subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (b) as are appropriate to the parties' situation. The existence of any one of these factors is not conclusive evidence that the individual is an employee.

(IV) If the parties use a written document pursuant to this paragraph (b), such document must be signed by both parties and may be the contract for performance of service or a separate document. Such document shall create a rebuttable presumption of an independent contractor relationship between the parties where such document contains a disclosure, in type which is larger than the other provisions in the document or in bold-faced or underlined type, that the independent contractor is not entitled to workers' compensation benefits and that the independent contractor is obligated to pay federal and state income tax on any moneys earned pursuant to the contract relationship. All signatures on any such document must be duly notarized.

(V) If the parties use a written document pursuant to this paragraph (b) and one of the parties is a professional whose license to practice a particular occupation under the laws of the state of Colorado requires such professional to exercise a supervisory function with regard to an entire project such supervisory role shall not affect such professional's status as part of the independent contractor relationship.

(c) Nothing in this section shall be construed to conflict with section 8-40-301 or to relieve any obligations imposed pursuant thereto.

(d) Nothing in this section shall be construed to remove the claimant's burden of proving the existence of an employer-employee relationship for purposes of receiving benefits pursuant to articles 40 to 47 of this title.

(e) (I) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, a written agreement between a nonprofit youth sports organization and a coach, specifying that the coach is an independent contractor and not an employee of the nonprofit youth sports organization and otherwise satisfying the requirements of this paragraph (e), shall be conclusive evidence that the relationship between the nonprofit youth sports organization and the coach is an independent contractor relationship rather than an employment relationship and that the nonprofit youth sports organization is not obligated to secure compensation for the coach in accordance with the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado".

(II) The written agreement shall contain a disclosure, in bold-faced, underlined, or large type, in a conspicuous location, and acknowledged by the parties by signature, initials, or other means demonstrating that the parties have read and understand the disclosure, indicating that the coach:

(A) Is an independent contractor and not an employee of the nonprofit youth sports organization;

(B) Is not entitled to workers' compensation benefits in connection with his or her contract with the nonprofit youth sports organization; and

(C) Is obligated to pay federal and state income tax on any moneys paid pursuant to the contract for coaching services and that the nonprofit youth sports organization will not withhold any amounts from the coach for purposes of satisfying the coach's income tax liability.

(III) A written agreement between a nonprofit youth sports organization and a coach in accordance with this paragraph (e) shall not be conclusive evidence of an independent contractor relationship for purposes of any civil action instituted by a third party.

(IV) As used in this paragraph (e), "nonprofit youth sports organization" means an organization that is exempt from federal taxation under section 501 (c) (3) of the federal “Internal Revenue Code of 1986”, as amended, and is primarily engaged in conducting organized sports programs for persons under twenty-one years of age.

(3) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, “employee” includes a person who participates in a property tax work-off program established pursuant to article 3.7 of title 39, C.R.S.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, “Independent Contractors and the Colorado Workers’ Compensation Act — Parts I and II”, see 22 Colo. Law. 545 and 1281 (1993). For article, “Independent Contractors in Colorado”, see 34 Colo. Law. 53 (Dec. 2005).

Annotator’s note. (1) Since § 8-40-202 is similar to § 8-41-106 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the “Workers’ Compensation Act of Colorado”, articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section. For additional cases, see the annotations under former § 8-41-106 in the 1986 replacement volume.

(2) Cases included in the annotations to this section which refer to the industrial commission were decided prior to the enactment of 1986 Senate Bill No. 12 which abolished said commission and transferred some of its powers, duties, and functions under the act to the industrial claim appeals office.

A governing body of the county or municipality must provide worker’s compensation to a voluntary peace officer. The statutory language granting a county or municipality the option to not provide such coverage was repealed by implication by § 16-2.5-110, which requires the reserve peace officers to be provided with worker’s compensation benefits. City of Florence v. Pepper, 145 P.3d 654 (Colo. 2006).

Proper characterization of the employer-employee relationship depends on the facts of each case and is for the commission to determine. Melnick v. Indus. Comm’n, 656 P.2d 1318 (Colo. App. 1982).

To reap the benefits under the workmen’s compensation act, a person must in fact first be an employee under the statutory definition. Denver Truck Exch. v. Perryman, 134 Colo. 586, 307 P.2d 805 (1957).

The definition of employee is broad and obviously was so intended by the general assembly. Indus. Comm’n v. Valley Chip & Supply Co., 133 Colo. 258, 293 P.2d 972 (1956); Doyle v. Missouri Valley Constructors, Inc., 288 F. Supp. 121 (D. Colo. 1968).

The compensation act emphasizes the objective of protection of employees and in carrying out this objective gives a broad interpretation to the term “employee”. Finnerman v. McCormick, 499 F.2d 212 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1049, 95 S. Ct. 624, 42 L. Ed.2d 644 (1974).

And even though the purpose of the workmen’s compensation act is to protect all workmen, save those specifically excluded. Univ. of Denver v. Nemeth, 127 Colo. 385, 257 P.2d 423 (1953).

The definition of an employee entitled to coverage under this act includes “aliens” without distinguishing between legal and illegal aliens and therefore does not preclude, as a matter of law, an illegal alien from proving an entitlement to benefits. Champion Auto Body v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 950 P.2d 671 (Colo. App. 1997).

General contractor remains statutory employer of subcontractor's employee and is entitled to a corresponding immunity from suit, despite the fact that the subcontractor is an independent contractor of the general contractor. Frank M. Hall & Co. v. Newsom, 125 P.3d 444 (Colo. 2005).

One cannot be his own employee. Indus. Comm'n v. Bracken, 83 Colo. 72, 262 P. 521 (1927).

"Employee" does not include one injured during pre-employment testing. Applicant who was not under contract as an employee at the time of the accident is not an employee. Younger v. City and County of Denver, 796 P.2d 38 (Colo. App. 1990); Younger v. City and County of Denver, 810 P.2d 647 (Colo. 1991).

"Appointment", as used in the definition of employee set forth in subsection (1) (a) requires that the person making the designation be vested with authority and the designation be for the purpose of discharging the duty of some office or trust. A volunteer pitching coach permitted by a head baseball coach to work with the high school baseball team is not an employee subjecting the school district to workers' compensation liability since school district, and not head coach, is authorized to create additional coaching positions and a volunteer pitching coach position is not an office. Mesa County Valley Sch. D. 51 v. Goletz, 821 P.2d 785 (Colo. 1991).

Three requirements are set forth, any two of which when met can qualify an employee, as the term is used in the statutes, as coming under the workmen's compensation act. They are: (1) A contract of employment created in the state; (2) employment in the state under a contract created outside the state; and (3) substantial employment in the state. If any two of these conditions are met it makes no difference that the employee is not a resident of the state or is killed outside the state provided other statutory time limits on out-of-state employment are met. Platt v. Reynolds, 86 Colo. 397, 282 P. 264 (1929); Tripp v. Indus. Comm'n, 89 Colo. 512, 4 P.2d 917 (1931); Denver Truck Exch. v. Perryman, 134 Colo. 586, 307 P.2d 805 (1957).

"Employee" entitled to workers' compensation benefits is a worker who performs a substantial portion of his work in this state and who is either injured in an accident in this state or has a contract in this state. Loffland Bros. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 714 P.2d 509 (Colo. App. 1985).

In determining whether or not a claimant is an employee, the measure of his compen- sation is not a controlling factor. De Beque Producers' Ass'n v. Indus. Comm'n, 83 Colo. 158, 262 P. 1019 (1928).

For in the statutory definition of employee there is no requirement that a salary be paid for the service rendered. Lyttle v. State Comp. Ins. Fund, 137 Colo. 212, 322 P.2d 1049 (1958).

An unpaid student intern must be deemed a "person placed pursuant to" subparagraph (1)(a)(IV) and is thus entitled to an imputed wage under subparagraph (1)(a)(VI) for purposes of calculating medical impairment benefits, notwithstanding the exception in subparagraph (1)(A)(IV), which exception relates only to who shall be deemed the employer, not whether an employee is entitled to an imputed wage. Kinder v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 976 P.2d 295 (Colo. App. 1998).

Whether an injured workman is an employee is a question of fact. New Jersey Fid. & Plate Glass Ins. Co. v. Patterson, 86 Colo. 580, 284 P. 334 (1929); Sch. Dist. No. 60 v. Indus. Comm'n, 43 Colo. App. 38, 601 P.2d 651 (1979).

Determination of type of employee deemed question of law. Where the facts are undisputed, the question of whether an individual is an employee as defined by this section, or a constructive employee to whom work has been contracted out as defined by § 8-48-101 (1), is a question of law, not a question of fact. Univ. of Colo. Med. Center v. Indus. Comm'n, 622 P.2d 596 (Colo. App. 1980).

And the finding on conflicting evidence is conclusive on review. De Beque Producers' Ass'n v. Indus. Comm'n, 83 Colo. 158, 262 P. 1019 (1928); New Jersey Fid. & Plate Glass Ins. Co. v. Patterson, 86 Colo. 580, 284 P. 334 (1929).

Moreover, where various findings are made, the last finding is conclusive. In a workmen's compensation case, although the commission and its referee made three different findings of fact, this did not nullify the rule that the last finding is conclusive. Indus. Comm'n v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 88 Colo. 82, 292 P. 229 (1930).

So also fact findings sufficiently supported by the evidence will not be disturbed on review. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Indus. Comm'n, 95 Colo. 309, 35 P.2d 849 (1934); London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 95 Colo. 306, 35 P.2d 1010 (1934).

And a court exceeds its jurisdiction in a workmen's compensation case if it attempts to pass upon the weight of the evidence introduced before the director. Indus. Comm'n v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 88 Colo. 82, 292 P. 229 (1930).

One may be employee by virtue of the statute and not by common-law definition. An obligation to pay workmen's compensation may, in proper cases, be imposed against an owner where the common-law relationship of employer and employee does not exist, in that one may be an employee by virtue of the statute, for the purpose of workmen's compensation, when in fact he is not an employee by common-law definition. Finnerman v. McCormick, 499 F.2d 212 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1049, 95 S. Ct. 624, 42 L. Ed.2d 644 (1974).

Award of benefits of regular employee controlled by section. Where nurse claiming benefits was a regular employee of the University of Colorado Medical Center, subsection (1)(a)(I) controlled the award of benefits as opposed to § 8-48-101 (1). Univ. of Colo. Medical Center v. Indus. Comm'n, 622 P.2d 596 (Colo. App. 1980).

Award based upon erroneous interpretation of law sustained if award proper absent misinterpretation. Even though a court may determine that the industrial commission erroneously interpreted the law, if the commission's award would have been correct had the law been properly interpreted, that award will be sustained. Univ. of Colo. Med. Center v. Indus. Comm'n, 622 P.2d 596 (Colo. App. 1980).

Applied in Kalmon v. Indus. Comm'n, 41 Colo. App. 259, 583 P.2d 946 (1978); Ellis v. Rocky Mt. Empire Sports, Inc., 43 Colo. App. 166, 602 P.2d 895 (1979); Peterson v. Trailways, Inc., 555 F. Supp. 827 (D. Colo. 1983); AGS Mach. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 670 P.2d 816 (Colo. App. 1983).

II. EMPLOYEE OR INDEPENDENT CONTRACTOR.

Subsection (1)(b) contemplates contractual and quasi-contractual relationships created by estoppel, and should be interpreted broadly to protect workers. Olsen v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 819 P.2d 544 (Colo. App. 1991).

"Contractor" is not necessarily outside of the category of "employee". The term "employee" has both a narrow, specific, and a wider generic meaning. Indus. Comm'n v. Cont'l Inv. Co., 78 Colo. 399, 242 P. 49 (1925).

But factors to be considered in determining whether one performing labor for another is a servant or a contractor are: Does the workman give all or only a part of his time to the work; does the contract contemplate labor on the job, or completion; has the laborer or the employee control of the details; which may employ, control, and discharge assistants; which furnishes the necessary tools and equipment; may either terminate the employment without liability to the others; is compensation measured by time, by piece, or by lump sum? Brush Hay & Milling Co. v. Small, 154 Colo. 11, 388 P.2d 84 (1963).

There are two tests for determining whether a worker is an actual employee or an independent contractor: the "control" test and the "relative nature of the work" test, and if either test is satisfied the worker is an employee.

Stampados v. Colo. D & S Enters., 833 P.2d 815 (Colo. App. 1992).

The definition of an "independent contractor" in § 40-11.5-102 was intended to apply to the Workers' Compensation Act. Frank C. Klein & Co. v. Colo. Comp. Ins. Auth., 859 P.2d 323 (Colo. App. 1993).

A servant is one whose employer has the order and control of work done by him and who directs or may direct the means as well as the end. Arnold v. Lawrence, 72 Colo. 528, 213 P. 129 (1923); Indus. Comm'n v. Bonfils, 78 Colo. 306, 241 P. 735 (1925); Indus. Comm'n v. Valley Chip & Supply Co., 133 Colo. 258, 293 P.2d 972 (1956); Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 319 P.2d 975 (1957).

And it is the power of control, not the fact of control, that is the principal factor in distinguishing a servant from a contractor. Indus. Comm'n v. Bonfils, 78 Colo. 306, 241 P. 735 (1925); Indus. Comm'n v. Moynihan, 94 Colo. 438, 32 P.2d 802 (1934); Indus. Comm'n v. Valley Chip & Supply Co., 133 Colo. 258, 293 P.2d 972 (1956); Faith Realty & Dev. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 170 Colo. 215, 460 P.2d 228 (1969).

The right immediately to discharge involves the right of control. Indus. Comm'n v. Valley Chip & Supply Co., 133 Colo. 258, 293 P.2d 972 (1956).

Thus the most important point in determining the question of contractor or employee is the right to terminate the relation without liability. Indus. Comm'n v. Hammond, 77 Colo. 414, 236 P. 1006 (1925); Indus. Comm'n v. Bonfils, 78 Colo. 306, 241 P. 735 (1925); Indus. Comm'n v. Valley Chip & Supply Co., 133 Colo. 258, 293 P.2d 972 (1956); Brush Hay Milling Co. v. Small, 154 Colo. 11, 388 P.2d 84 (1963); Faith Realty & Dev. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 170 Colo. 215, 460 P.2d 228 (1969).

For the absolute right to terminate the relationship without liability is inconsistent with the concept of independent contractor. Indus. Comm'n v. Valley Chip & Supply Co., 133 Colo. 258, 293 P.2d 972 (1956).

Where compensation is based upon time or piece the workman is usually a servant and where it is based upon a lump sum for the task he is usually a contractor. Brush Hay & Milling Co. v. Small, 154 Colo. 11, 388 P.2d 84 (1963).

A person may be determined to be an independent contractor even if all nine criteria outlined in subsection (2)(b)(II) are not established. Nelson v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 981 P.2d 210 (Colo. App. 1998).

Presumption of independent contractor status recognized in subsection (5) may be overcome by clear and convincing evidence of control over the means and methods of performance that are wholly unrelated to the achievement of the end contracted for. Frank C. Klein &

Co. v. Colo. Comp. Ins. Auth., 859 P.2d 323 (Colo. App. 1993).

Ski patrol worker who negotiated for a ski pass in lieu of salary in exchange for services was not a "volunteer" for purpose of exclusion from coverage under this article. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp. v. Apostolou, 866 P.2d 1384 (Colo. 1994).

If the facts are undisputed as to whether a workman is an employee or a contractor, the question is one of law. Indus. Comm'n v. Bonfils, 78 Colo. 306, 241 P. 735 (1925).

And may be reviewed by the supreme court. Indus. Comm'n v. Bonfils, 78 Colo. 306, 241 P. 735 (1925); Brush Hay & Milling Co. v. Small, 154 Colo. 11, 388 P.2d 84 (1963).

But if the question of whether workman was employee or independent contractor is one of fact, to be determined from conflicting evidence, it is for the commission. Whitney v. Mountain States Motors Co., 106 Colo. 184, 102 P.2d 743 (1940); Brush Hay & Milling Co. v. Small, 154 Colo. 11, 388 P.2d 84 (1963).

Claimant's relationship with newspaper publisher was an employment relationship where the newspaper exercised control over claimant by directing the time and place of newspaper delivery and delivery of newspapers was not a separate enterprise from the business of the newspaper. Contract which characterized claimant as an independent contractor was not controlling. Olsen v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 819 P.2d 544 (Colo. App. 1991).

Acceptance of premiums by insurance fund for employee made fund liable for claim. Actions of the state compensation insurance fund, which accepted workmen's compensation premium payments from employer based on employee status of carpenter constructing employer's private residence and which did not give employer notice that premium payment was accepted subject to appeal of determination that carpenter was employer's employee for workmen's compensation purposes, constituted conduct which would convey impression that the fund intended to cover carpenter's workmen's compensation claim; therefore, the fund was liable for workmen's compensation benefits awarded carpenter. Drake v. Ins. Co. of North Am., 736 P.2d 1244 (Colo. App. 1986).

III. CONTRACT FOR HIRE.

The requirement of contract of hire was written into the workmen's compensation act for two reasons: First, the necessity for a "contract" was felt to insure that an employee did not give up legal rights against an employer without receiving value in return; and second, the contract had to be one "of hire" because, absent the expectation of remuneration at some rate, there was no way to compute benefits. Rocky Mt. Dairy Prods. v. Pease, 161 Colo. 216, 422 P.2d 630 (1966).

And § 8-41-105 and this section speak of "any contract of hire, express or implied", indicating that several "contracts of hire" may exist in a given situation and recovery had upon "any". Rocky Mt. Dairy Prods. v. Pease, 161 Colo. 216, 422 P.2d 630 (1966).

Thus, both an express and implied "contract of hire" could exist between the same parties but covering different employment or covering the same employment but with differing parties. Rocky Mt. Dairy Prods. v. Pease, 161 Colo. 216, 422 P.2d 630 (1966).

When a claim is filed under the workmen's compensation act, the burden of proof is upon the claimant to prove that he was an employee by showing the existence of a contract of hire. Hall v. State Comp. Ins. Fund, 154 Colo. 47, 387 P.2d 899 (1963).

And where the evidence does not disclose any contractual obligation, then the employer-employee relationship does not exist and there is no contract which would support a claim for compensation under the act. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Indus. Comm'n, 135 Colo. 570, 314 P.2d 288 (1957); Hall v. State Comp. Ins. Fund, 154 Colo. 47, 387 P.2d 899 (1963).

Claimant who received a ski pass for use by another person was an employee since the pass is a benefit comprising compensation. The lack of any wages as defined in § 8-40-201 (19) does not mean that no "contract of hire" exists under subsection (1)(b). Aspen Highlands Ski- ing Corp. v. Apostolou, 854 P.2d 1357 (Colo. App. 1992).

A contract of hire may be formed as long as the fundamental elements of contract formation are present even though not every formality attending commercial contractual arrangements is observed. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp. v. Apostolou, 866 P.2d 1384 (Colo. 1994).

Contract of hire found to exist where claimant was part-time ski patrol worker who agreed to work only in exchange for the benefit of daily ski pass in lieu of salary and who worked under the direction of the employer. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp. v. Apostolou, 866 P.2d 1384 (Colo. 1994).

IV. PUBLIC EMPLOYEES.

The statutory definition of "employees" includes employees of the state. Myers v. State, 162 Colo. 435, 428 P.2d 83 (1967).

And if working for a public employer must be a "public employee". Under the statutory classification of employer and employee, before a claimant can fix liability on a public employer, under the workmen's compensation act, for compensation for accidental injuries, he must be within the designation of "public employee". Indus. Comm'n v. State Comp. Ins. Fund, 94 Colo. 194, 29 P.2d 372 (1934).

All workers in service of the state are treated as state "employees", not as employees of separate entities, for purposes of workers' compensation benefits. Rodriguez v. Bd. of Dirs., 917 P.2d 358 (Colo. App. 1996).

Public employees. No intent can be found in the general assembly through the pertinent provisions of the workmen's compensation law to make any distinction in the classification of public employees between those who are engaged in governmental functions and those who are engaged in the proprietary branch of a political subdivision. The basic distinction of the act is between public employees and private employees. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Alishio, 125 Colo. 242, 250 P.2d 1015 (1952).

A governmental entity cannot be a constructive employer pursuant to § 8-48-101 (1). Antal v. Delta County Mosquito Control Dist. No. 1, 644 P.2d 87 (Colo. App. 1982).

Inmates are not employees of state or county. Orr v. Indus. Comm'n, 691 P.2d 1145 (Colo. App. 1984), att'd, 716 P.2d 1106 (Colo. 1986).

City as employer. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Alishio, 125 Colo. 242, 250 P.2d 1015 (1952).

An unsalaried member of a state board or commission is an employee of the state, and within the coverage of the workmen's compensation law, and had the general assembly intended to exclude such persons from coverage, language other than the words actually used would have been employed. Lyttle v. State Comp. Ins. Fund, 137 Colo. 212, 322 P.2d 1049 (1958).

Furthermore, it is evident that the intent of the general assembly was to provide that the employees and appointees of the county, as specified therein, together with all nonsalaried employees, should be paid at the maximum rate of compensation. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Keane, 160 Colo. 292, 417 P.2d 8 (1966).

The status of a juror is not that of an employee serving under this section, by "appointment or contract of hire, express or implied". The legislative branch of the government has not said that a juror is an employee of the county, and it does not lie with the judicial branch to belittle the functions of his great office by so declaring. Bd. of Comm'rs v. Evans, 99 Colo. 83, 60 P.2d 225 (1936).

Employer of student teachers. Section 22-62-105 (2) deems a school district the employer of a student teacher whereas the general provision of subsection (1)(a)(IV) of this section designates the sponsoring institution as the employer of its job trainees. Section 22-62-105 (2) merely shifts workmen's compensation liability for injury to student teachers to a different institution; where applicable, it is a legally enforceable specific exception to the general rule prescribed by subsection (1)(a)(IV). Sch. Dist. No. 60 v. Indus. Comm'n, 43 Colo. App. 38, 601 P.2d 651 (1979).

Claimant was participating as a volunteer fireman, and not merely as a patriotic citizen, at the time of his injury, while participating in a public patriotic celebration. Northwest Conejos Fire Prot. Dist. v. Indus. Comm'n, 39 Colo. App. 367, 566 P.2d 717 (1977).

The rate of compensation for persons accidentally injured while serving as volunteer firefighters shall be at the maximum rate provided by the Workers' Compensation Act. Subsection (1)(a)(II) creates an exception to the usual measure of calculating disability benefits. To the extent that subsection (1)(a)(II) gives injured volunteer firefighters a windfall, such a result has been mandated by the general assembly. Parker Fire Prot. Dist. v. Poage, 843 P.2d 108 (Colo. App. 1992).

Volunteer member of civil air patrol traveling on duty to attend organized training when injured suffers an injury which arises out of and in the course of his employment. Colo. Civil Air Patrol v. Hagans, 662 P.2d 194 (Colo. App. 1983).

National Guard training is not "active service" for purposes of the receipt of workers' compensation benefits. A member of the National Guard may not be considered to be on "active service" and hence qualified for workers' compensation benefits unless he or she has been ordered by the governor to provide full-time service in response to an emergency confronting the state. Sullivan v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 22 P.3d 535 (Colo. App. 2000).

V. PRIVATE EMPLOYEES.

A. In General.

Attorney regularly employed by a corporation is an "employee". An attorney at law who is employed by a corporation regularly, and whose time and services are subject to the call of the employer under the terms of the employment, is an "employee" as that word is used in this section. Indus. Comm'n v. Moynihan, 94 Colo. 438, 32 P.2d 802 (1934).

For in none of the provisions of the act is there language which expressly excludes members of the professions, attorney or other, if otherwise within the statute, from the enjoyment of its protecting purpose. Indus. Comm'n v. Moynihan, 94 Colo. 438, 32 P.2d 802 (1934).

Workmen's compensation acts are being extended even to employees of charitable institutions. Univ. of Denver v. Nemeth, 127 Colo. 385, 257 P.2d 423 (1953).

Student paid by university for particular service is employee subject to act. Where a stipulated monthly amount is paid by a university for a particular service rendered by one who is also a student, it cannot be said that the university is merely "assisting" the student to obtain an education, and that the student, if injured in the course of his employment, cannot have the benefits of the compensation law. Univ. of Denver v. Nemeth, 127 Colo. 385, 257 P.2d 423 (1953).

Student employee status in job training program. To be an "employee" of the school district one must, at the time of injury, be receiving training under a work or job training program sponsored by the school district and one must have been placed by the school district with an employer for the purpose of training or learning trades or occupations. Further, the trainee is deemed an "employee" only "while so engaged" in such programs. Denver Pub. Sch. v. De Avila, 190 Colo. 184, 544 P.2d 627 (1976).

A critical requirement of the statute is that in order for the claimant to become an "employee" it was necessary that she be "placed" with the hospital for the purpose of training. The evidence discloses that at the time of her injury the claimant was not so "placed" where it is explicit that at the time of her injury the claimant was attending classes conducted exclusively by instructors employed by the school district. Under such circumstances, claimant does not come within the definition of "employee" and the school district is not liable for the injury sustained as the result of her mishap. Denver Pub. Sch. v. De Avila, 190 Colo. 184, 544 P.2d 627 (1976).

Discharged employee is thereafter a mere volunteer not subject to the act. The employee having been discharged, he was a mere volunteer, wrongfully engaged in driving the car of his former employer at the time of the accident; neither the doctrine of ratification nor estoppel had the slightest application to the case, even though the employer subsequently received the regular fare for the trip from the claimants, and upon no possible theory could the claimants recover compensation at the hands of the employer. Burke v. Indus. Comm'n, 70 Colo. 394, 201 P. 891 (1921).

B. Casual Employment.

Law reviews. For comment on Heckman v. Warren appearing below, see 24 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 396 (1952).

For subsection (1)(b) exclusion to apply, casualness and course of business must exist. Brogger v. Kezer, 626 P.2d 700 (Colo. App. 1980).

Exclusion inapplicable where home deemed necessary facet of business. The maintenance of a home which serves as a company office and is used for entertaining customers is a necessary facet of the employer's business, and, thus, the exclusion of subsection (1)(b) is not applicable. Brogger v. Kezer, 626 P.2d 700 (Colo. App. 1980).

Casual is an antonym of regular. Lackey v. Indus. Comm'n, 80 Colo. 112, 249 P. 662 (1926); Heckman v. Warren, 124 Colo. 497, 238 P.2d 854 (1951).

Casual employment is that which is occasional, incidental, temporary, emergent or haphazard. An employment, therefore, is casual within the meaning and intent of the workmen's compensation act when it is not regular, periodic or certain in nature. Heckman v. Warren, 124 Colo. 497, 238 P.2d 854 (1951).

But the fact that the employment is casual is not enough to exclude an employee from the count in determining whether employer had four employees. Lackey v. Indus. Comm'n, 80 Colo. 112, 249 P. 662 (1926); Hoshiko v. Indus. Comm'n, 83 Colo. 556, 226 P. 1114 (1928); Comerford v. Carr, 86 Colo. 590, 284 P. 121 (1930); Kamp v. Disney, 110 Colo. 518, 135 P.2d 1019 (1943); Heckman v. Warren, 124 Colo. 497, 238 P.2d 854 (1951); Denver Truck Exch. v. Perryman, 134 Colo. 586, 307 P.2d 805 (1957).

For the employment must also not be in the usual course of trade, business, or occupation of employer. Lackey v. Indus. Comm'n, 80 Colo. 112, 249 P. 662 (1926); Hoshiko v. Indus. Comm'n, 83 Colo. 556, 266 P. 1114 (1928); Comerford v. Carr, 86 Colo. 590, 284 P. 121 (1930); Kamp v. Disney, 110 Colo. 518 135 P.2d 1019 (1943); Heckman v. Warren, 124 Colo. 497, 238 P.2d 854 (1951); Denver Truck Exch.

v. Perryman, 134 Colo. 586, 307 P.2d 805 (1957).

And one is employed in the usual course of trade, business, profession or occupation of his employer when he is engaged in work of the kind required in the business of the employer, and such work is in conformity with the established scheme or system of the business. If it is work of the kind required in the employer's business and in conformity with his established scheme or system of doing business, then it is in the usual course thereof. The term "usual course of business" has reference to the normal operations constituting the regular business of the employer. Heckman v. Warren, 124 Colo. 497, 238 P.2d 854 (1951).

Thus the workmen's compensation act is inapplicable if, at the time of an employee's injuries, his employment was casual "and not in the usual course of trade, business, profession or occupation of his employer". Heckman v. Warren, 124 Colo. 497, 238 P.2d 854 (1951).

But the fact that the servant is not employed for any specified time does not render his employment casual. Indus. Comm'n v. Funk, 68 Colo. 467, 191 P. 125 (1920).

So that casual employment in usual course of employer's business is sufficient. Even where the employment is casual, if at the time of the accident the employee was engaged in the usual course of the employer's business, he still is an employee within the terms of this title. Lackey v. Indus. Comm'n, 80 Colo. 112, 249 P. 662 (1926); Hoshiko v. Indus. Comm'n, 83 Colo. 556, 226 P. 1114 (1928); Royal Indem. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 105 Colo. 25, 94 P.2d 697 (1927).

Employment not casual. Claimant who was employed on an hourly basis to perform part of the work of constructing a small office building on a used car lot was not a casual employee of the operator of the lot, and his employment was in the usual course of the operator's business. Neely-Towner Motor Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 123 Colo. 472, 230 P.2d 993 (1951).

"Usual course of trade or business" does not apply to a single act of building by a farmer in a neighboring town. Lackey v. Indus. Comm'n, 80 Colo. 112, 249 P. 662 (1926).

Emergency employee not active in usual course of business. Heckman v. Warren, 124 Colo. 497, 238 P.2d 854 (1951).

An attorney at law regularly employed by a corporation is not a casual employee and his employment is in the usual course of a company's business. Indus. Comm'n v. Moynihan, 94 Colo. 438, 32 P.2d 802 (1934).

8-40-203. Employer. (1) "Employer" means:

(a) The state, and every county, city, town, and irrigation, drainage, and school district and all other taxing districts therein, and all public institutions and administrative boards thereof without regard to the number of persons in the service of any such public employer. All such public employers shall be at all times subject to the compensation provisions of articles 40 to 47 of this title.

(b) Every person, association of persons, firm, and private corporation, including any public service corporation, personal representative, assignee, trustee, or receiver, who has one or more persons engaged in the same business or employment, except as otherwise expressly provided in articles 40 to 47 of this title, in service under any contract of hire, express or implied.

(c) Repealed.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 8-41-105 as it existed prior to 1990.

Cross references: For the scope of the term "employer", see § 8-40-302.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Public Employers.
- III. Private Employers.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "One Year Review of Corporations, Partnership and Agency", see 37 Dicta 11 (1960). For note, "Rural Poverty and the Law in Southern Colorado", see 47 Den. L. J. 82 (1970).

Annotator's note. Since § 8-40-203 is similar to § 8-41-105 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

The definition of "employer" in this section should be broadly or liberally construed, in order to effectuate the purpose of the legislation. Conover v. Indus. Comm'n, 125 Colo. 388, 244 P.2d 875 (1952).

Consequently, the workmen's compensation act extends the concept of "employer" far beyond the meaning of that term at common law. Doyle v. Missouri Valley Constructors, Inc., 288 F. Supp. 121 (D. Colo. 1968).

But the rule of liberal construction cannot be extended to a case that is removed by the statute itself. Smith v. Indus. Comm'n, 134 Colo. 454, 306 P.2d 254 (1957).

Proper characterization of the employer-employee relationship depends on the facts of each case and is for the commission to determine. Melnick v. Indus. Comm'n, 656 P.2d 1318 (Colo. App. 1982).

An employment contract need not provide for the payment of "wages" in order for one employed under such a contract to qualify as an "employee" under this article. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp. v. Apostolou, 866 P.2d 1384 (Colo. 1994).

Applied in Hefley v. Morales, 197 Colo. 523, 595 P.2d 233 (1979); Ellis v. Rocky Mt. Empire Sports, Inc., 43 Colo. App. 166, 602 P.2d 895 (1979); Stampados v. Colo. D & S Enters., 833 P.2d 815 (Colo. App. 1992).

II. PUBLIC EMPLOYERS.

All state agencies are considered a single "employer" and all persons in the service of the state are its employees. Rodriguez v. Bd. of Dirs., 917 P.2d 358 (Colo. App. 1996).

A city becomes an employer of those persons defined as employees in § 8-41-106. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Alishio, 125 Colo. 242, 250 P.2d 1015 (1952).

III. PRIVATE EMPLOYERS.

Where two or more companies form a joint venture, the joint venture itself is an "association of persons" and an "employer" within the meaning of the workmen's compensation act. Being of that status, a joint venture and its insurance carrier could be made to respond to claims asserted under the act. D. E. Jones Constr. Co. v. Heirs of Jones, 29 Colo. App. 482, 487 P.2d 822 (1971).

And the joint venture and each of its participants are jointly and severally liable for claims asserted by or on behalf of an employee engaged in work being prosecuted by the joint venture. As to a claimant for benefits, there is nothing which makes the liability of any one of such parties primary to, or exclusive of, the liabilities of the others. The insurance coverage of one liable as a participant in the joint venture extends to and follows that participant within the joint venture operations. Consequently, an employee, may assert his claim against the joint venture itself, or any or all members thereof and their respective insurer or insurers must discharge the claim. Indus. Comm'n v. Lopez, 150 Colo. 87, 371 P.2d 269 (1962); D. E. Jones Constr. Co. v. Heirs of Jones, 29 Colo. App. 482, 487 P.2d 822 (1971).

Thus, employer status not divested by engaging in joint venture. Where a joint venture is in furtherance of business in which two cement contractors are engaged, and each is an employer with respect to his own operation, they cannot divest themselves of such status by engaging in a joint venture in the same business in which each is individually engaged, notwithstanding they employ less than four employees on particular job. Indus. Comm'n v. Lopez, 150 Colo. 87, 371 P.2d 269 (1962).

An "association of persons" need not measure up to the requirements of a partnership in order to come within the meaning of "employer" as used in this section. Conover v. Indus. Comm'n, 125 Colo. 388, P.2d 875 (1952).

Employment of employee need not be same as his employer. There is no discernible legislative intent in this section which would require that the employment of the employee be the same as that of the employer. Schultz v. Indus. Comm'n, 34 Colo. App. 122, 523 P.2d 164 (1974).

Parent corporation, sued by employee of its wholly-owned subsidiary, is not an "employer" entitled to immunity from tort liability under the workmen's compensation act. Peterson v. Trailways, Inc., 555 F. Supp. 827 (D. Colo. 1983).

Unincorporated self-employed repairman not "employer". Self-employed sheet metal and heating repairman, using the name "M. Kunz and Sons, Inc.", although he had not completed incorporation, is not an "employer" and not required to carry workmen's compensation insurance for himself. Canda v. Indus. Comm'n, 44 Colo. App. 70, 607 P.2d 403 (1980).

The requirement of contract of hire was written into the workmen's compensation act for two reasons: First, the necessity for a "contract" was felt to insure that an employee did not give up legal rights against an employer without receiving value in return; and second, the contract had to be one "of hire" because, absent the expectation of remuneration at some rate, there was no way to compute benefits. Rocky Mt. Dairy Prods. v. Pease, 161 Colo. 216, 422 P.2d 630 (1966).

And this section and § 8-41-107 speak of "any contract of hire, express or implied", indicating that several "contracts of hire" may exist in a given situation and recovery had upon "any". Rocky Mt. Dairy Prods. v. Pease, 161 Colo. 216, 422 P.2d 630 (1966).

So that both an express and implied "contract of hire" could exist between the same parties but covering different employment or covering the same employment but with differing parties. Rocky Mt. Dairy Prods. v. Pease, 161 Colo. 216, 422 P.2d 630 (1966).

Usual master-servant relationship. If the relationship between the parties is that of the usual master-servant variety, then workmen's compensation liability is determined by analyzing the factual situation in terms of the statutory inclusions and exclusions stated in this section. Schultz v. Indus. Comm'n, 34 Colo. App. 122, 523 P.2d 164 (1974).

A general servant of one party may be loaned by his master for some special purpose so as to become for that service the servant of the party to whom he is loaned and to impose on him the usual liabilities of a master. Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 319 P.2d 975 (1957).

Thus, there may exist at one time the relationship of general employer and a special employer as to one employee. Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 319 P.2d 975 (1957).

Liability of employer determined by "control" or "whose business" test. The liability of a general or special employer is sometimes determined by ascertaining who has control of the borrowed employee and equipment used in rendering the service, and sometimes it is determined by ascertaining in whose business the special employee was engaged. Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 319 P.2d 975 (1957).

The control test is that the relation of master and servant exists whenever one person stands in such a relation to another that he may control the work of the other and direct the manner in which it shall be performed. Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 319 P.2d 975 (1957).

The whose business test holds the owner of the business liable if a servant or employee at the time of a negligent act resulting in damages to others is actually engaged in performing work or labor for the special, rather than the general, employer. Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 319 P.2d 975 (1957).

But each case must be determined in the light of the existing facts and circumstances, and frequently it is necessary that both the control test and whose business test be considered in determining upon whom the liability shall rest where there is a general, as well as a special, employer, and damages are claimed because of the negligence of an employee. Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 319 P.2d 975 (1957).

A real estate brokerage concern which manages properties for others as a part of its business, collecting rent and making improvements and repairs, and which employs men to wash the walls of a building it has in charge, is an employer within the definition of this section. Alson Inv. Co. v. Youngquist, 107 Colo. 1, 108 P.2d 228 (1940).

But the act does not apply to nonresident employers. Hall v. Indus. Comm'n, 77 Colo. 338, 235 P. 1073 (1925).

SCOPE AND APPLICABILITY

8-40-301. Scope of term "employee". (1) "Employee" excludes any person employed by a passenger tramway area operator, as defined in section 25-5-702 (1), C.R.S., or other employer, while participating in recreational activity, who at such time is relieved of and is not performing any duties of employment, regardless of whether such person is utilizing, by discount or otherwise, a pass, ticket, license, permit, or other device as an emolument of employment.

(2) "Employee" excludes any person who is a licensed real estate sales agent or a licensed real estate broker associated with another real estate broker if:

(a) Substantially all of the sales agent's or associated broker's remuneration from real estate brokerage is derived from real estate commissions; and

(b) The services of the sales agent or associated broker are performed under a written contract specifying that the sales agent or associated broker is an independent contractor; and

(c) Such contract provides that the sales agent or associated broker shall not be treated as an employee for federal income tax purposes.

(3) (a) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 8-40-202 (1) (a) (IV), "employee" excludes any person who is confined to a city or county jail or any department of corrections facility as an inmate and who, as a part of such confinement, is working, performing services, or participating in a training or rehabilitation or work release program; except that "employee" includes an inmate of a department of corrections facility or a city, county, or city and county jail who is working, performing services, or participating in a training, rehabilitation, or work release program that has been certified by the federal prison industry enhancement certification program pursuant to the federal "Justice System Improvement Act of 1979", 18 U.S.C. sec. 1761 (c). For the purposes of articles 40 to 47 of this title, an inmate participating in a program certified by the federal prison industry enhancement certification program is an employee of that certified program, which certified program shall carry workers' compensation insurance pursuant to articles 40 to 47 of this title. No inmate participating in a certified program shall be deemed to be an employee of the state, city, county, or city and county that owns, operates, or contracts for the operation of the facility or jail in which the inmate is incarcerated.

(b) The provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (3) do not apply to an inmate who is working for a private employer under a contract of hire wherein the private employer is required to maintain workers' compensation insurance for its employees pursuant to articles 40 to 47 of this title. Such inmate shall be an employee of such private employer for purposes of articles 40 to 47 of this title.

(c) The provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (3) do not apply to an inmate working for a joint venture established pursuant to the provisions of section 17-24-119 or 17-24-121, C.R.S. Such inmate shall be an employee of such joint venture for purposes of articles 40 to 47 of this title.

(d) The provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (3) do not apply to an inmate working for a private person or entity pursuant to the provisions of section 17-24-122, C.R.S. Such inmate shall be an employee of such private person or entity for purposes of articles 40 to 47 of this title.

(4) "Employee" excludes any person who volunteers time or services for a ski area operator, as defined in section 33-44-103 (7), C.R.S., or for a ski area sponsored program or activity, notwithstanding the fact that such person may receive noncash remuneration for such person or such person's designee in conjunction with such person's status as a volunteer. No contract of hire, express or implied, is created between any volunteer pursuant to this section and a ski area operator. Notice shall be given to such volunteer in writing that the volunteering of time or services under this subsection (4) does not constitute employment for purposes of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado" and that such person is not entitled to benefits pursuant to said act.

(5) "Employee" excludes any person who is working as a driver under a lease agreement pursuant to section 40-11.5-102, C.R.S., with a common carrier or contract carrier.

(6) Any person working as a driver with a common carrier or contract carrier as described in this section shall be eligible for and shall be offered workers' compensation insurance coverage by Pinnacle Assurance or similar coverage consistent with the requirements set forth in section 40-11.5-102 (5), C.R.S.

(7) Persons who provide host home services as part of residential services and supports, as described in section 27-10.5-104 (1) (f), C.R.S., for an eligible person, as defined in section 25.5-6-403 (2) (a), C.R.S., pursuant to the "Home- and Community-based Services for Persons with Developmental Disabilities Act", part 4 of article 6 of title 25.5, C.R.S., and pursuant to a contract with a community centered board designated pursuant to section 27-10.5-105, C.R.S., or a contract with a service agency as defined in section 27-10.5-102 (28), C.R.S., shall not be considered employees of the community centered board or the service agency.

(8) For the purposes of articles 40 to 47 of this title, "employee" excludes any person who performs services for more than one employer at a race meet as defined by section 12-60-102 (22), C.R.S., or at a horse track as defined by section 12-60-102 (11), C.R.S.

(9) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, "employee" includes a person who participates in a property tax work-off program established pursuant to article 3.7 of title 39, C.R.S.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 8-41-106 as it existed prior to 1990.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 8-40-301 is similar to § 8-41-106 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Inmates are not employees of state or county. Orr v. Indus. Comm'n, 691 P.2d 1145 (Colo. App. 1984), att'd, 716 P.2d 1106 (Colo. 1986).

Subsection (5) is not ambiguous and includes a driver who is working for an independent contractor under a conforming lease with a contract carrier. FFE Trans. Servs. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 93 P.3d 630 (Colo. App. 2004).

The word "under" in subsection (5) is not ambiguous. FFE Trans. Servs. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 93 P.3d 630 (Colo. App. 2004).

The legislative intent appears clear to exclude independent contractors and their drivers from the class of statutory employees. FFE Trans. Servs. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 93 P.3d 630 (Colo. App. 2004).

Had the general assembly intended to exclude only independent contractors from the provisions of this section, it would not have allowed independent contractors to use assistants pursuant to § 40-11.5-102 (1)(f). FFE Trans. Servs. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 93 P.3d 630 (Colo. App. 2004).

The traditional test set forth in City and County of Denver v. Lee, 450 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1969), for determining when recreational activities fall within the course and scope of employment remain valid under subsection (1) as amended in 1989 in determining whether an employee engaged in a recreational activity is within the coverage of the workers' compensation act. Karlin v. Conrad, 876 P.2d 64 (Colo. App. 1993).

Exclusion provided by subsection (5) is conditional not absolute. It takes effect only when the lease agreement required by § 40-11.5-102 includes complying coverage. USF Distribution Servs., Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 111 P.3d 529 (Colo. App. 2004).

Ski instructor injured while skiing recreationally was not entitled to workers' compensation benefits as injury did not occur in course and scope of employment. Dunavin v. Monarch Recreation Corp., 812 P.2d 719 (Colo. App. 1991).

Evidence that claimant agreed to act as a member of the ski patrol only after negotiating with the supervisor to receive a special benefit is sufficient to support the administrative law judge's finding that, without such consideration, claimant would have refused to render any services as a patrol member and therefore claimant was not a volunteer under the statute. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp. v. Apostolou, 854 P.2d 1357 (Colo. App. 1992).

Ski patrol worker who negotiated for a ski pass in lieu of salary in exchange for services was not a "volunteer" for purpose of exclusion from coverage under this article. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp. v. Apostolou, 866 P.2d 1384 (Colo. 1994).

Under this section, any employee who participates in employer-sponsored recreation due to pressure exerted by employer rather than at employee's own initiative is entitled to benefits for injuries sustained during activity. However, any employee who is injured while voluntarily engaging, upon his own initiative, in recreational activity which does not benefit the employer or fulfill any job duties is not entitled to compensation. Dunavin v. Monarch Recreation Corp., 812 P.2d 719 (Colo. App. 1991).

A leased driver was not limited to workers' compensation benefits for injuries received while performing duties within the lease agreement. The leased driver was not an employee for purposes of workers' compensation because section (5)(b) is an exception to the more general workers' compensation statutes. Scott v. Matlack, Inc., 1 P.3d 185 (Colo. App. 1999), rev'd on other grounds, 39 P.3d 1160 (Colo. 2002).

Leased driver was entitled to benefits at least equivalent to workers' compensation benefits under subsection (6). USF Distribution Servs., Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 111 P.3d 529 (Colo. App. 2004).

The definition of an employee entitled to coverage under this act includes "aliens" without distinguishing between legal and illegal aliens and therefore does not preclude, as a matter of law, an illegal alien from proving an entitlement to benefits. Champion Auto Body v.

Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 950 P.2d 671 (Colo. App. 1997).

8-40-302. Scope of term “employer”.

(1) Repealed.

(2) Articles 40 to 47 of this title are not intended to apply to employees of eleemosynary, charitable, fraternal, religious, or social employers who are elected or appointed to serve in an advisory capacity and receive an annual salary or an amount not in excess of seven hundred fifty dollars and are not otherwise subject to the “Workers’ Compensation Act of Colorado”.

(3) Articles 40 to 47 of this title are not intended to apply to employers of casual farm and ranch labor or employers of persons who do casual maintenance, repair, remodeling, yard, lawn, tree, or shrub planting or trimming, or similar work about the place of business, trade, or profession of the employer if such employers have no other employees subject to said articles 40 to 47, if such employments are casual and are not within the course of the trade, business, or profession of said employers, if the amounts expended for wages paid by the employers to casual persons employed to do maintenance, repair, remodeling, yard, lawn, tree, or shrub planting or trimming, or similar work about the place of business, trade, or profession of the employer do not exceed the sum of two thousand dollars for any calendar year, and if the amounts expended for wages by the employer of casual farm and ranch labor do not exceed the sum of two thousand dollars for any calendar year.

(4) Articles 40 to 47 of this title are not intended to apply to employers of persons who do domestic work or maintenance, repair, remodeling, yard, lawn, tree, or shrub planting or trimming, or similar work about the private home of the employer if such employers have no other employees subject to said articles 40 to 47 and if such employments are not within the course of the trade, business, or profession of said employers. This exemption shall not apply to such employers if the persons who perform the work are regularly employed by such employers on a full-time basis. For purposes of this subsection (4), “full-time” means work performed for forty hours or more a week or on five days or more a week.

(5) (a) Any employer excluded under this section may elect to accept the provisions of articles 40 to 47 of this title by purchasing and keeping in force a policy of workers’ compensation insurance covering said employees.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of articles 40 to 47 of this title, any working general partner or sole proprietor actively engaged in the business may elect to be included by endorsement as an employee of the insured and shall be entitled to elect coverage regardless of whether such working general partner or sole proprietor employs any other person under any contract of hire.

(6) Articles 40 to 47 of this title are intended to apply to officers of agricultural corporations; but effective July 1, 1977, any such agricultural corporation may elect to reject the provisions of articles 40 to 47 of this title for any or all of said officers.

(7) (a) Any employer, as defined in section 8-40-203, who enters into a bona fide cooperative education or student internship program sponsored by an educational institution for the purpose of providing on-the-job training for students shall be deemed an employer of such students for the purposes of workers’ compensation and liability insurance pursuant to articles 40 to 47 of this title.

(b) If the student placed in an on-the-job training program does not receive any pay or remuneration from the employer, the educational institution sponsoring the student in the cooperative education or student internship program shall insure the student through the institution’s workers’ compensation and liability insurance or enter into negotiations with the employer for the purpose of arriving at a reasonable level of compensation to the employer for the employer’s expense of providing workers’ compensation and liability insurance while such student is participating in on-the-job training with said employer. This paragraph (b) shall not apply to a student teacher participating in a program authorized pursuant to article 62 of title 22, C.R.S.

(c) As used in this subsection (7), “cooperative education or student internship program” means a program sponsored by an educational institution in which a student is taught through a coordinated combination of specialized in-the-school instruction provided through an educational institution by qualified teachers and on-the-job training provided through a local business, agency, or organization or any governmental agency in cooperation with the educational institution.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Exempt Employers.
  - A. Casual Labor.
  - B. Farm and Ranch Labor.
  - C. Contracts for Hire.
  - D. Domestic Workers.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Annotator's note. Since § 8-40-302 is similar to § 8-41-105 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

II. EXEMPT EMPLOYERS.

A. Casual Labor.

Even if employee was a casual laborer, the exemption under subsection (4) (now subsection (3)) does not apply because the employee's duty of maintaining the racetrack and its equipment were within the course of the employer's business of operating a racetrack. Butland v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 754 P.2d 422 (Colo. App. 1988).

B. Farm and Ranch Labor.

Exclusion of farm and ranch labor in this section does not constitute a violation of equal protection. Anaya v. Indus. Comm'n, 182 Colo. 244, 512 P.2d 625 (1973).

Farm and ranch labor falls within the field of agriculture which in general refers to any activity incident to the cultivation of land for the growing of crops, the harvesting thereof, and the care and feeding of livestock. It includes tillage, seeding, husbandry, and all things incident to farming in the widest sense of that term. Great W. Mushroom Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 103 Colo. 39, 82 P.2d 751 (1938); Billings Ditch Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 127 Colo. 69, 253 P.2d 1058 (1953); Smith v. Indus. Comm'n, 134 Colo. 454, 306 P.2d 254 (1957).

The whole character of the employment must be looked to in order to determine whether one is a farm laborer. Neither the pending task nor the place where it is being performed is the test. Billings Ditch Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 127 Colo. 69, 253 P.2d 1058 (1953).

Construction of exemption clause. The workmen's compensation law is to be construed liberally and in every reasonable manner to accomplish the evident intent and purpose of the act; but in applying this rule, the court must not forget the exemption clause which frees those who employ farm and ranch labor from the provisions of the act, unless they voluntarily elect to come under it. The court must, therefore, be equally cautious to see to it that this exemption be not so restricted, limited and constricted in the interpretation of its terms and provisions as to destroy its effect. Billings Ditch Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 127 Colo. 69, 253 P.2d 1058 (1953).

Not modified by § 8-48-101. The contracting-out provision of § 8-48-101 does not modify the exemption for farm and ranch labor of this section. Hefley v. Morales, 197 Colo. 523, 595 P.2d 233 (1979).

While the employer of farm or ranch labor may elect to accept coverage under the workmen's compensation act by filing a written statement to the effect that he accepts the provisions of the act, the filing of an unsigned printed card by someone other than the employer; and without his knowledge or direction, is not sufficient to charge such employer with liability under the act. Smith v. Indus. Comm'n, 134 Colo. 454, 306 P.2d 254 (1957).

The burden of proof is on a claimant to establish by competent evidence that the employer himself, or some person by him duly authorized, filed a written statement accepting the provisions of the act. Smith v. Indus. Comm'n, 134 Colo. 454, 306 P.2d 254 (1957).

Worker on threshing machine may not be "farm labor." Where a farmer traveled about the country with his machine doing threshing for others, for compensation, it is held under the facts disclosed, that one who was employed by him in such work was not a farm laborer within the meaning of this section, and was entitled to compensation for an accidental injury. Hoshiko v. Indus. Comm'n, 83 Colo. 556, 266 P. 1114 (1928).

Employee sorting potatoes for potato grower engaged in farm labor. Employee, who was injured while sorting potatoes for potato grower in cellars maintained by grower where only his potatoes were sorted and stored, was engaged in farm labor and, thus, not entitled to workmen's compensation. Anaya v. Indus. Comm'n, 182 Colo. 244, 512 P.2d 625 (1973).

Employee held to be engaged in farm labor. Where employee left a hoist job at his own request, and a man was employed to succeed him on that job, and employee anticipated early enlistment in the Army, it was held that this was not a case of conflicting evidence, that the employee was engaged in farm labor, and that he had not been just temporarily transferred from his regular employment to work on the farm, so that he was a farm laborer within the meaning of the statute. Maley v. Martin, 111 Colo. 545, 144 P.2d 558 (1943).

C. Contracts for Hire.

A contract for hire may be formed as long as the fundamental elements of contract formation are present even though not every formality attending commercial contractual arrangements is observed. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp. v. Apostolou, 866 P.2d 1384 (Colo. 1994).

Contract of hire found to exist where claimant was part-time ski patrol worker who agreed to work only in exchange for the benefit of daily ski pass in lieu of salary and who worked under the direction of the employer. Aspen Highlands Skiing Corp. v. Apostolou, 866 P.2d 1384 (Colo. 1994).

D. Domestic Workers.

Subsection (4) is not violative of equal protection. In requiring that employers of domestic workers who work 40 or more hours per week or five or more days per week provide workers' compensation and exempting employers of domestic workers who work fewer than such hours or days, the general assembly had a rational basis for treating employers of casual labor differently than employers who hire regular, full-time employees. Naiden v. Epps, 867 P.2d 215 (Colo. App. 1993).

The Workers' Compensation Act was intended to apply to claimant who was hired to perform domestic services on a full-time basis, when employer compensated dual employer for claimant's services, and dual employer maintained workers' compensation coverage on claimant's behalf. Evans v. Webster, 832 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991).

The exceptions under this section and § 8-41-402 are not intended to abrogate the borrowed servant doctrine in the case of work performed at a private home, except in the limited situations in which the domestic employment is not on a full-time basis. Evans v. Webster, 832 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991).

Domestic work, as used in subsection (4), includes child care. This is consistent with the intent of this section to exempt from the workers' compensation requirements private employers who employ persons to perform domestic work within their homes because such employers cannot pass the cost of workers' compensation coverage to consumers. Connor v. Zelaski, 839 P.2d 501 (Colo. App. 1992).

ABROGATION OF DEFENSE

8-41-101. Assumption of risk - negligence of employee or fellow servant. (1) In an action to recover damages for a personal injury sustained by an employee while engaged in the line of duty, or for death resulting from personal injuries so sustained, in which recovery is sought upon the ground of want of ordinary care of the employer, or of the officer, agent, or servant of the employer, it shall not be a defense:

(a) That the employee, either expressly or impliedly, assumed the risk of the hazard complained of as due to the employer's negligence;

(b) That the injury or death was caused, in whole or in part, by the want of ordinary care of a fellow servant;

(c) That the injury or death was caused, in whole or in part, by the want of ordinary care of the injured employee where such want of care was not willful.

sitional Risk Doctrine — Compensability of 'Neutral Force' Injuries", see 17 Colo. Law. 2375 (1988).

Annotator's note. Since § 8-41-101 is similar to § 8-42-101 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Constitutionality. This section's abrogation of a claimant's common-law rights does not violate constitutional protections of due process and equal protection and the right of access to the courts. Kandt v. Evans, 645 P.2d 1300 (Colo. 1982).

And although doctrine of assumption of risk has been abolished, the workman still assumes risks. While since the adoption of the workmen's compensation act the doctrine of assumption of risk created by the master's negligence has disappeared, the workman still assumes, so far as a suit for damages is concerned, the risks not created by the master's negligence. Colo. Milling & Elevator Co. v. Bright, 76 Colo. 338, 231 P. 1111 (1924).

Claim of intentional tort does not avoid applicability of act. Eason v. Frontier Air Lines, 636 F.2d 293 (10th Cir. 1981).

This section is applicable only in action against employer for negligence resulting in personal injury or death and relates to the abrogation of enumerated common law defenses, and none of these circumstances is relevant to case in which claimant is attempting to pierce the corporate veil in a workers' compensation proceeding. Matter of Death of Smithour, 778 P.2d 302 (Colo. App. 1989).

Proper instruction. In personal injury case, an instruction that, if the defendant was negligent and its negligence was the proximate cause of the injury, there was no assumption of risk, is proper. Colo. Milling & Elevator Co. v. Bright, 76 Colo. 338, 231 P. 1111 (1924).

8-41-102. Liability of employer complying. An employer who has complied with the provisions of articles 40 to 47 of this title, including the provisions relating to insurance, shall not be subject to the provisions of section 8-41-101; nor shall such employer or the insurance carrier, if any, insuring the employer's liability under said articles be subject to any other liability for the death of or personal injury to any employee, except as provided in said articles; and all causes of action, actions at law, suits in equity, proceedings, and statutory and common law rights and remedies for and on account of such death of or personal injury to any such employee and accruing to any person are abolished except as provided in said articles.

Annotator's note. Since § 8-41-102 is similar to § 8-42-102 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section abolishes all common law rights and remedies in an employee action against employer for injury except as provided in the act. Ward v. Denver & R. G. W. R., 119 F. Supp. 112 (D. Colo. 1954); Thomas v. Farnsworth Chambers Co., 286 F.2d 270 (10th Cir. 1960), rev'g 183 F. Supp. 764 (D. Colo. 1960); Finn v. Indus. Comm'n, 165 Colo. 106 437 P.2d 542 (1968); Continental Sales Corp. v. Stookesbury, 170 Colo. 16, 459 P.2d 566 (1969); Rodriguez v. Nurseries, Inc., 815 P.2d 1006 (Colo. App. 1991).

When an employer has brought itself within the ambit of the workmen's compensation act, it is not subject to a common law action for damages, and the employee is limited to the remedies specified in the act. Alexander v. Morrison-Knudsen Co., 166 Colo. 118, 444 P.2d 397 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1063, 89 S. Ct. 715, 21 L. Ed.2d 706 (1969); Hilzer v. MacDonald, 169 Colo. 230, 454 P.2d 928 (1969).

The common law rule that a worker can simultaneously be the employee of two persons applies to cases arising under the workers' compensation act. The rule allows an employee to be simultaneously in the general employment of one employer and in the special employment of another, provided the employee understands that he or she is submitting to the control of the special employer. In the dual employment situation, the employee's only remedy for an injury sustained while in the course of employment with the borrowing employer is through worker's compensation. A separate tort action against the special employer is barred. Evans v. Webster, 832 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991).

Hence, this section applies only to employers and employees covered by the workmen's compensation act, an employee being any person under any contract of hire, express or implied. Continental Sales Corp. v. Stookesberry, 170 Colo. 16, 459 P.2d 566 (1969).

The Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado provides exclusive remedies for compensation of an employee by an employer for work-related injury. Triad Painting Co. v. Blair, 812 P.2d 638 (Colo. 1991); Bailey v. C.P. Const., Inc., 837 P.2d 277 (Colo. App. 1992).

Therefore, an employer who has complied with the insurance provisions of the Act is immune from any common law liability for work-related injuries. Bailey v. C.P. Const., Inc., 837 P.2d 277 (Colo. App. 1992).

Officer who rejected workers' compensation coverage may pursue remedies in common law, but recovery is limited to the cap found in § 8-41-401 of the Act. Kelly v. Mile Hi Single Ply, Inc., 890 P.2d 1161 (Colo. 1995).

Comparison to Montana statutes. Sections 92-203 and 92-204, R.C.M. 1947, of the Montana workmen's compensation act are nearly identical in thrust and seemingly as all-encompassing as this section. Pust v. Union Supply Co., 38 Colo. App. 435, 561 P.2d 355 (1976), rev'd sub nom. Holly Sugar Corp. v. Union Supply Co., 194 Colo. 316, 572 P.2d 148 (1977) (third-party indemnification issue), and aff'd, 196 Colo. 162, 583 P.2d 276 (1978).

Intentional wrongs are covered. Intentional wrongs arising out of the course of employment are covered under Colorado's compensation scheme. Kandt v. Evans, 645 P.2d 1300 (Colo. 1982).

An employer may be held liable to an employee for common law damage claims for intentional torts committed by the employer or the employer's alter ego if the employer deliberately intended to cause the injury and acted directly rather than constructively through an agent. Schwindt v. Hershey Food Corp., 81 P.3d 1144 (Colo. App. 2003).

Exclusivity provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act bar claim against employer for gross negligence but not intentional torts. Schwindt v. Hershey Food Corp., 81 P.3d 1144 (Colo. App. 2003).

Cause of action based on a contractual right of indemnity is independent of the exclusive jurisdiction provisions of the act. Borroel v. Lakeshore, Inc., 618 F. Supp. 354 (D. Colo. 1985).

Recovery under the act is meant to be exclusive remedy for workers covered by its provisions. Kelly v. Mile Hi Single Ply, Inc., 890 P.2d 1161 (Colo. 1995).

Exclusivity provisions of Workers' Compensation Act do not bar action for mental suffering resulting from a breach of employment contract. Allabashi v. Lincoln Nat'l Sales Corp., 824 P.2d 1 (Colo. App. 1991).

Workers' Compensation Act constitutes the exclusive remedy available to employee if employee asserts claim of intentional tort committed by employer's agent. Digliani v. City of Fort Collins, 873 P.2d 4 (Colo. App. 1993).

Employees may not circumvent exclusive remedy provisions by framing their claims as breach of contract, breach of implied contract, or promissory estoppel. Digliani v. City of Fort Collins, 873 P.2d 4 (Colo. App. 1993); McKelvy v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 983 P.2d 42 (Colo. App. 1998).

"Personal injury" in this section and "personal injuries" in § 8-41-104 refer to the job-related physical or mental injuries of an employee, and, consequently, the Workers' Compensation Act's exclusivity provision bars action for or on account of such injuries of an employee. Serna v. Kingston Enters., 72 P.3d 376 (Colo. App. 2002).

Exclusive remedy provisions of Workers' Compensation Act barred city employees' common law claims against city for exposure to toxic chemicals at city facility. Employer who complied with the provisions of the act was not subject to liability under common law rights and remedies for death of or personal injury to any employee. Digliani v. City of Fort Collins, 873 P.2d 4 (Colo. App. 1993).

Economic liability does not qualify as a compensable "personal injury" under the Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado, therefore, indemnity action is not barred under the act's exclusivity provision. Serna v. Kingston Enters., 72 P.3d 376 (Colo. App. 2002).

An employee's wife's rights are strictly derivative under the act and are controlled by the all-inclusive election of the section. Alexander

v. Morrison-Knudsen Co., 166 Colo. 118, 444 P.2d 397 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1063, 89 S. Ct. 715, 21 L. Ed.2d 706 (1969).

An employer who is subject to the provisions of the act cannot be made a third-party defendant in an action wherein one of its employees is suing a stranger to the employer-employee relationship for injuries sustained while engaged in the course of his employment. Ward v. Denver & R. G. W. R. R., 119 F. Supp. 112 (D. Colo. 1954); Hilzer v. MacDonald, 169 Colo. 230, 454 P.2d 928 (1969); Pub. Serv. Co. v. District Court, 638 P.2d 772 (Colo. 1981).

Therefore, this section amounts to a legislative grant of immunity from common law liability in return for vicarious statutory liability and the extent of the legislative intent is of course to be discerned from the particular language used in the enactments. Thomas v. Farnsworth Chambers Co., 286 F.2d 270 (10th Cir.), rev'g 183 F. Supp. 764 (D. Colo. 1960).

Workers' compensation carrier is granted the same immunity from suit by the injured employee as the employer has. Therefore, no third-party action could be brought against a carrier for negligently conducting safety inspections undertaken pursuant to its capacity as carrier. McHarque v. Stokes Div. of Pennwalt Corp., 649 F. Supp. 1388 (D. Colo. 1986).

Employer not liable for contribution. Because the workmen's compensation act immunizes an employer from tort liability to a covered employee, the employer is not "jointly liable in tort" and therefore contribution is barred. Hammond v. Kolberg Mfg. Corp., 542 F. Supp. 662 (D. Colo. 1982).

Section bars only actions founded on compensable injuries. The bar of workmen's compensation extends only to actions founded upon injuries compensable under the act. Bennett v. Furr's Cafeterias, Inc., 549 F. Supp. 887 (D. Colo. 1982).

An employer who is immune from common-law liability for an injury cannot become "jointly or severally liable in tort" so as to trigger a right of contribution under § 13-50.5-102. Greer v. Intercole Automation, Inc., 553 F. Supp. 275 (D. Colo. 1982).

Act does not apply to injuries sustained when claimant has ceased his employment relationship. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Savio, 706 P.2d 1258 (Colo. 1985).

Factual question existed as to whether sexual assault on female employee by employer "arose out of" employment, making injury compensable and employer accordingly immune from suit. Stamper v. Hiteshew, 797 P.2d 784 (Colo. App. 1990).

As a matter of policy, sexual harassment is not a risk inherently connected to the employment relationship. Except in the most unusual cases, acts of harassment are highly personal and fall into the category of inherently private assaults that do not arise from employment. Therefore, sexual harassment claims are not barred by the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act. Horodyskyj v. Karanian, 32 P.3d 470 (Colo. 2001).

For employer to be absolved of liability for third-party indemnification claim, the employee's right to compensation under this act must first exist. Garrett v. Miller, 44 Colo. App. 440, 619 P.2d 780 (1980).

Indirect subsection under rules of indemnity. The workers' compensation exclusive remedy provision does not permit an employer to be indirectly subjected under rules of indemnity to liability to which it could not be directly subjected. Tex-Ark Joist Co. v. Derr and Gruenewald Const., 719 P.2d 384 (Colo. App. 1986), aff'd, 749 P.2d 431 (Colo. 1988).

The fact that an award may deprive a claimant of a common law action does not make such a statute unconstitutional because a different remedy has been provided the employee by the general assembly which is within its power. Finn v. Indus. Comm'n, 165 Colo. 106, 437 P.2d 542 (1968), O'Quinn v. Walt Disney Prods., Inc., 177 Colo. 190, 493 P.2d 344 (1972).

When an employee accepts the terms of the act his common-law action against his employer does not constitute an election of remedies; for his remedy against his employer is under the act, and therefore he cannot make the choice which the doctrine of election of remedies contemplates. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Foulds, 167 Colo. 123, 445 P.2d 716 (1968).

And although a workman will be required to forego a negligence action against a general contractor or real property owner, he will be assured that regardless of fault, the more solvent general contractor or real property owner stands behind and secures the workmen's compensation liability of the workman's immediate employer. O'Quinn v. Walt Disney Prods., Inc. 177 Colo. 190, 493 P.2d 344 (1972).

An exculpatory clause like this section shall be construed to destroy the common-law right of action of an injured and compensated employee of a subcontractor against a negligent general contractor. Thomas v. Farnsworth Chambers Co., 286 F.2d 270 (10th Cir.), rev'g 183 F. Supp. 764 (D. Colo. 1960); Whiting v. Farnsworth Chambers Co., 293 F.2d 45 (10th Cir. 1961).

For where the subcontractor has secured compensation for his employees, a general contractor is under no statutory liability, and is subject to common-law liability. Thomas v. Farnsworth Chambers Co., 286 F. 2d 270 (10th Cir.), rev'g 183 F. Supp. 764 (D. Colo. 1960).

A general contractor may be liable as a third party tortfeasor to these injured and compensated employees of a subcontractor. Thomas v. Farnsworth Chambers Co., 286 F.2d 270 (10th Cir.), rev'g 183 F. Supp. 764 (D. Colo. 1960).

Furthermore, under this section and § 8-48-102, a landowner is not immune from common-law liability where an employee of a contractor working on its land is injured by the negligence of a servant of the landowner and where the contractor is himself an employer, as defined in the workmen's compensation act, and carries compensation insurance covering such employee. Great W. Sugar Co. v. Erbes, 148 Colo. 566, 367 P.2d 329 (1961).

There are nine criteria relevant to determining whether a special employment relationship exists. They are: (1) Whether the borrowing employer has the right to control the employee's conduct; (2) whether the employee is performing the borrowing employer's work; (3) whether there was an agreement between the original and borrowing employer; (4) whether the employee has acquiesced in the arrangement; (5) whether the borrowing employer had the right to terminate the employee; (6) whether the borrowing employer furnished the tools and place for performance; (7) whether the new employment was to be for a considerable length of time; (8) whether the borrowing employer had the obligation to pay the employee; and (9) whether the original employer terminated its relationship with the employee. Evans v. Webster, 832 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991); Morphew v. Ridge Crane Serv., Inc., 902 P.2d 848 (Colo. App. 1995).

Of the nine criteria, three are decisive: Whether the employee has acquiesced in the arrangement; whether the borrowing employer has the right to control the employee's conduct; and whether the borrowing employer had the right to terminate the employee. Evans v. Webster, 932 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991).

There are additional criteria in the context of leased heavy equipment: (1) Whether the general employer could properly have substituted another servant at any time; (2) whether the duration of the work was short; (3) whether the machine operator had the skill of a specialist; (4) whether the general employer had rented a valuable machine and the employee to operate it; and (5) whether the general employer furnished fuel and maintenance. Morphew v. Ridge Crane Serv., Inc., 902 P.2d 848 (Colo. App. 1995).

A tort suit against a special employer is barred by the Workers' Compensation Act when an employee consents to work for the special employer pursuant to a contract of hire within the Workers' Compensation Act and the employee is an employee of both the general and special employer. Evans v. Webster, 832 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991).

A separate tort action against a special employer is barred in dual employment situation and the employee's only remedy for an injury sustained while in the course of employment with the borrowing employer is through workers' compensation. Evans v. Webster, 832 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991).

"Loaned employee" may maintain negligence action. A "loaned employee" and an "employee" under workmen's compensation are not the same, and no provision prohibits or limits a "loaned employee" from maintaining a negligence action against the borrowing employer. Continental Sales Corp. v. Stookesberry, 170 Colo. 16, 459 P.2d 566 (1969).

An employer is not liable for his supervisor's act which has no real connection with his employer's business and is purely personal. Packaging Corp. of Am. v. Roberts, 169 Colo. 316, 455 P.2d 652 (1969).

Unavailable remedy. An employee cannot rely upon the provisions of §§ 8-2-201 through 8-2-205 as providing an available remedy excepted from abolition by the workmen's compensation act in this section, even though those sections were mistakenly placed within the scope of this section by the 1973 revisor. Ryan v. Centennial Race Track, Inc., 196 Colo. 30, 580 P.2d 794 (1978). (See Editor's note preceding § 8-2-201.)

Parent corporation, sued by employee of its wholly-owned subsidiary, is not an "employer" entitled to immunity from tort liability under the workmen's compensation act. Peterson v. Trailways, Inc., 555 F. Supp. 827 (D. Colo. 1983); Gaber v. Franchise Servs., Inc., 680 P.2d 1345 (Colo. App. 1984).

"Dual capacity" doctrine. Even if doctrine were applied, a city is not liable to its employee under such doctrine where the city, although the partial manufacturer of the truck that injured the employee, is not principally engaged in the manufacture of such trucks. Shaw v. City of Colo. Springs, 683 P.2d 385 (Colo. App. 1984).

Claimant's tort suit against the employer was barred by the Workers' Compensation Act as a matter of law where claimant had consented to work for the employer pursuant to a contract of hire within the meaning of the Act and claimant was an employee of both dual employer and employer. Evans v. Webster, 832 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991).

Plaintiffs alleged at most a claim for gross negligence, and the exclusivity provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act, therefore, bar their action. Although plaintiffs alleged that employer acted in willful, wanton, and reckless disregard for the health and safety of employee and others, they did not allege that employer intended to cause the injury. Schwindt v. Hershey Food Corp., 81 P.3d 1144 (Colo. App. 2003).

A claim against an employer's workmen's compensation insurer for tortious conduct in connection with the handling of a claim for compensation is not precluded by the Work- men's Compensation Act, where the conduct complained of occurred after the compensable injury, and the damages claimed were not sustained within the scope of the employment relationship. Savio v. Travelers Ins. Co., 678 P.2d 549 (Colo. App. 1983).

Against a tort claim of bad faith, the standard for measuring the conduct of an insurer includes two elements: Unreasonable conduct, and knowledge that the conduct is unreasonable, or a reckless disregard for the fact the conduct is unreasonable. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Savio, 706 P.2d 1258 (Colo. 1985).

Tort suit against borrowed employee barred where special employer had the exclusive right to control the work of the borrowed employee operator pursuant to the lease agreement, at the time of the accident the borrowed employee operator was performing work for the special employer, the special employer was controlling the work, and the borrowed employee operator acquiesced to this special employment relationship. Morphew v. Ridge Crane Serv., Inc., 902 P.2d 848 (Colo. App. 1995).

Trial court erred in dismissing plaintiff's summary judgment claims alleging violations of the anti-discrimination act and outrageous conduct on grounds that this act provides exclusive remedy against employer where genuine factual controversy existed regarding job-relatedness of sexual harassment claims. Ferris v. Local 26, 867 P.2d 38 (Colo. App. 1993).

Summary judgment was properly entered based on exclusivity provision where state employee who suffered a workplace injury received workers' compensation benefits, and thereafter filed personal injury action against the state agency. Rodriguez v. Bd. of Dirs., 917 P.2d 358 (Colo. App. 1996).

Summary judgment precluded. ALJ erred in granting summary judgment where there existed an unresolved conflict between the medical report issued by the employer's physician advisor and the IME reports obtained by the injured employee. Fera v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 169 P.3d 231 (Colo. App. 2007).

Employee suffered workplace injury for which workers' compensation is the exclusive remedy and since employee had received workers' compensation benefits from the state, he was statutorily barred by this section from subjecting the state to further potential liability arising from that injury. Rodriguez v. Bd. of Dirs., 917 P.2d 358 (Colo. App. 1996).

A provision of the High Voltage Power Lines Safety Act (§ 9-2.5-101 et seq.) providing that a person or entity which violates the Act "may be liable for all damages" does not permit an employee covered by workers' compensation to seek additional remedies against the covered employer under the Act. Rodriguez v. Nurseries, Inc., 815 P.2d 1006 (Colo. App. 1991).

The rights of the spouse of an employee under the Workers' Compensation Act are strictly derivative from those of the employee and thus a wife may not maintain a tort action against her husband's employer for loss of consortium. Rodriguez v. Nurseries, Inc., 815 P.2d 1006 (Colo. App. 1991).

Employee's claim for wrongful death of her child was not derivative of an injury to the employee and could be brought against the employer. Where employee's child was born prematurely and died because the employer coerced the employee into working too many hours during her pregnancy, the claim was derived from an injury to a third party, the employee's child. Keefe v. Pizza Hut of Am., Inc., 868 P.2d 1092 (Colo. App. 1993), aff'd, 900 P.2d 97 (Colo. 1995).

Wrongful death action brought by employee's nondependent parents, based on the death of the employee which occurred in the course of the scope of the employee's employment, is strictly derivative and barred by the exclusivity provisions of this section, even though the parents suffer their own distinct injuries. Thus, summary judgment was appropriate and parents could not maintain an action under either the federal Fair Labor Standards Act or the Colorado Youth Employment Opportunity Act. Henderson v. Bear, 968 P.2d 144 (Colo. App. 1998).

Co-employees are immune from common law actions brought by an officer who has rejected coverage under the Act. Kelly v. Mile Hi Single Ply, Inc., 890 P.2d 1161 (Colo. 1995).

If the employer has entered into an express indemnity agreement with a third party, the employer waives immunity under the Workers' Compensation Act and may be required to indemnify the third party for damages paid to the injured worker by the third party. Pub. Serv. Co. v. United Cable Television of Jeffco, Inc., 816 P.2d 289 (Colo. App. 1991).

Courts will enforce express indemnity agreements against an employer who would otherwise be immune under the Workers' Compensation Act based on the employer's freedom of contract rights and the employer's right to waive statutory protections. Pub. Serv. Co. v. United Cable Television of Jeffco, Inc., 816 P.2d 289 (Colo. App. 1991).

Claims for medical monitoring fall under the "personal injury" umbrella for purposes of the Workers' Compensation Act. Employee's claims for exposure to unsafe levels of radioactive and other hazardous substances were barred by exclusivity provisions of this Act. Bldg. and Const. Dept. v. Rockwell Intern., 7 F.3d 1487 (10th Cir. 1993).

A motion to dismiss based on the exclusivity provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act does not go to the subject matter jurisdiction of the court, therefore, an evidentiary hearing is neither required nor appropriate. The trial court did not err in ruling on employer's motion without such a hearing. Schwindt v. Hershey Food Corp., 81 P.3d 1144 (Colo. App. 2003).

Engaging in an act that violates the federal pay statutes does not require the withdrawal of the immunity provided by this section. Bailey v. C.P. Const., Inc., 837 P.2d 277 (Colo. App. 1992).

8-41-103. Availability of common-law defenses. If an employer has complied with the provisions of articles 40 to 47 of this title, including the provisions thereof relating to insurance, and an action is brought against such employer or such employer's insurance carrier to recover damages for personal injuries or death sustained by an employee who has elected not to come under said articles, such employer and such employer's insurance carrier shall have all the defenses to the action which they would have had if said articles and part 2 of article 2 of this title had not been enacted.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 8-42-103 as it existed prior to 1990.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Derogation of the Common Law Rule of Contributory Negligence", see 7 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 161 (1935). For article, "One Year Review of Torts", see 35 Dicta 53 (1958).

Annotator's note. Since § 8-41-103 is similar to § 8-42-103 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Workmen's compensation act does not bar a claimant from bringing a tort action in state court for damages arising from bad faith in the processing of his request for rehabilitation. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Savio, 706 P.2d 1258 (Colo. 1985); Brodeur v. Am. Home Assurance Co., 169 P.3d 139 (Colo. 2007).

In a case involving a claim by an employee against a compensation insurance carrier for the tort of bad faith, conduct constituting bad faith can occur in the unreasonable refusal to investigate a claim and to gather facts. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Savio, 706 P.2d 1258 (Colo. 1985).

The duty of good faith derives from the relationship, arising from the underlying insurance or compensation obligation between an insured claimant and the provider of benefits, and precedes official intervention and permeates all of the dealings between the parties. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Savio, 706 P.2d 1258 (Colo. 1985).

The duty of an insurer under the act to provide benefits and compensation is factually and analytically distinct from its duty to deal in good faith with claimants, even though such duties necessarily involve a common underlying physical injury. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Savio, 706 P.2d 1258 (Colo. 1985).

An employee covered by compensation insurance required by the act stands in the same position as an insured in a private insurance contract. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Savio, 706 P.2d 1258 (Colo. 1985).

An order by an official body securing benefits for a claimant does not and cannot remedy separate injuries caused by prior bad faith acts by the provider of benefits resulting in delay or denial of benefits. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Savio, 706 P.2d 1258 (Colo. 1985).

There is no overlap of jurisdiction between rulings of workers compensation agencies on statutory issues committed to them and rulings of courts of law on the tort of bad faith. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Savio, 706 P.2d 1258 (Colo. 1985).

Co-employee cannot be held liable for injury to co-worker who has elected to reject workers' compensation coverage. The availability of common law defenses to employers does not extend to employees and thereby make them subject to suit. Kelly v. Mile Hi Single Ply, Inc., 873 P.2d 13 (Colo. App. 1993).

In reconciling § 8-41-401 (3) and this section, court upheld trial court's reasoning that corporate officer who has elected to reject coverage may bring tort action only against employer. Whether or not a corporate officer has elected to reject such coverage, employees covered by Workers' Compensation Act are still limited to their rights and remedies under the Act. Kelly v. Mile Hi Single Ply, Inc., 873 P.2d 13 (Colo. App. 1993).

8-41-104. Acceptance as surrender of other remedies. An election under the provisions of section 8-40-302 (5) and in compliance with the provisions of articles 40 to 47 of this title, including the provisions for insurance, shall be construed to be a surrender by the employer, such employer's insurance carrier, and the employee of their rights to any method, form, or amount of compensation or determination thereof or to any cause of action, action at law, suit in equity, or statutory or common-law right, remedy, or proceeding for or on account of such personal injuries or death of such employee other than as provided in said articles, and shall be an acceptance of all the provisions of said articles, and shall bind the employee personally, and, for compensation for such employee's death, the employee's personal representatives, surviving spouse, and next of kin, as well as the employer, such employer's insurance carrier, and those conducting their business during bankruptcy or insolvency.

Annotator's note. Since § 8-41-104 is similar to § 8-43-104 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section applies only to remedies against the immediate employer. Chartier v. Winslow Crane Serv. Co., 142 Colo. 294, 350 P.2d 1044 (1960).

So that this section does not operate to relieve a third person. Chartier v. Winslow Crane Serv. Co., 142 Colo. 294, 350 P.2d 1044 (1960).

Under this section a covered employee simply has no option to sue his employer at common law for damages in the absence of specific acts of noncompliance with the act or misconduct on the part of his employer. Varsity Amusement Co. v. Butters, 155 Colo. 330, 394 P.2d 603 (1964).

Thus, a covered employee is not precluded under the theory of election of remedies from pursuing his claim under the act after a pre-trial agreement on liability because an election of remedies implies that a party has a choice of remedies at the time he files his suit, a choice which a covered employee does not have. Varsity Amusement Co. v. Butters, 155 Colo. 330, 394 P.2d 603 (1964).

However, where employer fails to comply with act, employee may proceed under the act or at law. Where an employer fails to comply with the insurance features of the workmen's compensation act, an injured employee has the right, at his option, to proceed under the provisions of the act or by a common-law action for negligence. Indus. Comm'n v. Schaefer Realty Co., 98 Colo. 445, 56 P.2d 51 (1936); Sharmar Nursing Home v. Indus. Comm'n, 160 Colo. 197, 416 P.2d 161 (1966).

But by electing to pursue his remedy at law for damages, an injured employee forfeits his right thereafter to resort to the remedy offered by the workmen's compensation act. Indus. Comm'n v. Schaefer Realty Co., 98 Colo. 445, 56 P.2d 51 (1936).

When an employer-employee relationship exists under the act, the immunity from common-law suits should be broadly construed. Colo. Comp. Ins. Auth. v. Baker, 955 P.2d 86 (Colo. App. 1998).

"Personal injury" limited. Because "personal injury" is not defined by the workmen's compensation act, it does not include damages which are based mainly on mental suffering and humiliation, and only peripherally on physical suffering and pain. Luna v. City & County of Denver, 537 F. Supp. 798 (D. Colo. 1982).

"Personal injury" in § 8-41-102 and "personal injuries" in this section refer to the job-related physical or mental injuries of an employee, and, consequently, the Workers' Compensation Act's exclusivity provision bars action for or on account of such injuries of an employee. Serna v. Kingston Enters., 72 P.3d 376 (Colo. App. 2002).

Economic liability does not qualify as a compensable "personal injury" under the Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado, therefore, indemnity action is not barred under the act's exclusivity provision. Serna v. Kingston Enters., 72 P.3d 376 (Colo. App. 2002).

Intentional torts are covered under this act, and compensation awards may be made for injuries suffered from intentional acts of coemployees. Ellis v. Rocky Mt. Empire Sports, Inc., 43 Colo. App. 166, 602 P.2d 895 (1979).

Intentional wrongs arising out of the course of employment are covered under Colorado's compensation scheme. Kandt v. Evans, 645 P.2d 1300 (Colo. 1982).

Intentional infliction of emotional distress. A claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress is not barred by the workmen's compensation act. Luna v. City & County of Denver, 537 F. Supp. 798 (D. Colo. 1982); Spulak v. K Mart Corp., 664 F. Supp. 1395 (D. Colo. 1985); Kirk v. Smith, 674 F. Supp. 803 (D. Colo. 1987).

Where the entire complaint is based on infliction of emotional distress, the plaintiff may be ineligible to receive compensation for the present claim under the workmen's compensation act, and therefore may properly bring an action in tort. Vigil v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 555 F. Supp. 1049 (D. Colo. 1983); Kirk v. Smith, 674 F. Supp. 803 (D. Colo. 1987).

If an injury comes within the coverage of the act, an action for damages is barred even though a particular element of damages is not compensated for. Colo. Comp. Ins. Auth. v. Baker, 955 P.2d 86 (Colo. App. 1998); McKelvy v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 983 P.2d 42 (Colo. App. 1998).

A subsequent civil action to pursue equitable claims for unjust enrichment, money had and received, restitution, and money paid by mistake, is prohibited where the claims, in effect, reopen an administrative proceeding that has previously been closed and where there was no separate injury or tort for which a civil recovery could be sought. Colo. Comp. Ins. Auth. v. Baker, 955 P.2d 86 (Colo. App. 1998).

Exclusive remedy for negligence and intentional torts. An employee's exclusive remedy for his negligence and intentional tort claims is as provided for under the workmen's compensation act. Ellis v. Rocky Mt. Empire Sports, Inc., 43 Colo. App. 166, 602 P.2d 895 (1979).

Exclusivity provisions of Workers' Compensation Act bar discharged employee's claim against former employer for outrageous conduct in termination process. Weissman v. Crawford Rehab. Servs., 914 P.2d 380 (Colo. App. 1995).

Wrongful death action brought by employee's nondependent parents, based on the death of the employee which occurred in the course of the scope of the employee's employment, is strictly derivative and barred by the exclusivity provisions of this section, even though the parents suffer their own distinct injuries. Thus, summary judgement was appropriate and parents could not maintain an action under either the federal Fair Labor Standards Act or the Colorado Youth Employment Opportunity Act. Henderson v. Bear, 968 P.2d 144 (Colo. App. 1998).

Doctor hired by a company to treat its employees is not a co-employee exempted from suit by this section for injuries caused in treatment, but may be sued in a malpractice action under § 8-52-108. Wright v. District Court, 661 P.2d 1167 (Colo. 1983).

A plaintiff's co-employee is not immune from a tort claim for damages by virtue of this section if the co-employee's tortious conduct did not arise "out of" and "in the course of" the tortfeasor's employment. Popovich v. Irlando, 811 P.2d 379 (Colo. 1991).

A co-employee who causes injury to a worker is not immune from a plaintiff's tort claim for damages when the co-employee's conduct derives from matters personal to the employee or from a neutral source unrelated to the employee's employment. Popovich v. Irlando, 811 P.2d 379 (Colo. 1991).

pensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

8-41-202. Rejection of coverage by corporate officers and others. (1) Notwithstanding any provisions of articles 40 to 47 of this title to the contrary, a corporate officer of a corporation or a member of a limited liability company may elect to reject the provisions of articles 40 to 47 of this title. If so elected, said corporate officer or member shall provide written notice on a form approved by the division through a rule promulgated by the director of such election to the worker's compensation insurer of the employing corporation or company, if any, by certified mail. If there is no workers' compensation insurance company, the notice shall be provided to the division by certified mail. Such notice shall become effective the day following receipt of said notice by the insurer or the division.

(2) A corporate officer's or member's election to reject the provisions of articles 40 to 47 of this title shall continue in effect so long as the corporation's or company's insurance policy is in effect or until said officer or member, by written notice to the insurer, revokes the election to reject said provisions.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be construed to limit the responsibility of corporations or limited liability companies to provide coverage for their employees as required under articles 40 to 47 of this title. An election to reject coverage pursuant to this section may not be made a condition of employment.

(4) For the purposes of this section:

(a) "Corporate officer" means the chairperson of the board, president, vice-president, secretary, or treasurer who is an owner of at least ten percent of the stock of the corporation and who controls, supervises, or manages the business affairs of the corporation, as attested to by the secretary of the corporation at the time of the election.

(b) "Member" means an owner of at least ten percent of the membership interest of the limited liability company at all times and who controls, supervises, or manages the business affairs of the limited liability company.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 8-41-106.5 as it existed prior to 1990.

8-41-203. Negligence of stranger - remedies - subrogation - actions - compromise. (1) (a) If any employee entitled to compensation under articles 40 to 47 of this title is injured or killed by the negligence or wrong of another not in the same employ, such injured employee or, in case of death, such employee's dependents, may take compensation under said articles and may also pursue a remedy against the other person to recover any damages in excess of the compensation available under said articles.

(b) The payment of compensation pursuant to articles 40 to 47 of this title shall operate as and be an assignment of the cause of action against such other person to Pinnacol Assurance, the medical disaster insurance fund, the major medical insurance fund, or the subsequent injury fund, if compensation is payable from said funds, and otherwise to the person, association, corporation, or insurance carrier liable for the payment of such compensation. Said insurance carrier shall not be entitled to recover any sum in excess of the amount of compensation for which said carrier is liable under said articles to the injured employee, but to that extent said carrier shall be subrogated to the rights of the injured employee against said third party causing the injury. If the injured employee proceeds against such other person, then Pinnacol Assurance, the medical disaster insurance fund, the major medical insurance fund, the subsequent injury fund, or such other person, association, corporation, or insurance carrier, as the case may be, shall contribute only the deficiency, if any, between the amount of the recovery against such other person actually collected and the compensation provided by said articles in such case.

(c) The right of subrogation provided by this section shall apply to and include all compensation and all medical, hospital, dental, funeral, and other benefits and expenses to which the employee or, if the employee is deceased, the employee's dependents are entitled under the provisions of said articles, including parts 2 and 3 of article 46 of this title, or for which the employee's employer or insurance carrier is liable or has assumed liability.

(d) The assigned and subrogated cause of action provided by this section, together with the right to recover future benefits:

(I) Shall extend to all moneys collected from the third party causing the injury for all:

(A) Economic damages; and

(B) Physical impairment and disfigurement damages; except that, to the extent the trier of fact makes a separate award for disfigurement damages, the right of the beneficiary of the assigned interest to recover from such disfigurement damages shall be limited to the amount the beneficiary of the assigned interest paid, or is obligated to pay, in disfigurement damages pursuant to articles 40 to 47 of this title; and

(II) Shall not extend to moneys collected for noneconomic damages awarded for pain and suffering, inconvenience, emotional stress, or impairment of quality of life.

(e) (I) Except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (e), the amount of the assigned and subrogated cause of action shall be reduced by an amount equal to the reasonable attorney fees and costs paid by the injured employee or, if the employee is deceased, the employee's dependents, in pursuing the recovery of the assigned and subrogated cause of action and the collection of such recovery.

(II) If the beneficiary of the assigned and subrogated cause of action elects to independently pursue such assigned cause of action, any recovery by such beneficiary shall not be reduced by any attorney fees and costs incurred by the employee. If the beneficiary of the assigned and subrogated cause of action elects to intervene within ninety days after receiving the notice required by paragraph (c) of subsection (4) of this section, any recovery by such beneficiary shall not be reduced by any attorney fees and costs incurred by the employee. If such beneficiary elects to intervene after the expiration of such ninety-day period, the court may reduce the beneficiary's recovery by a reasonable amount for any attorney fees and costs incurred by the employee after the end of such ninety-day period and before receiving notice that the beneficiary intends to intervene.

(f) Nothing in this section shall be construed as limiting in any way the right of the injured employee to take compensation under articles 40 to 47 of this title and also proceed against the third party causing the injury to recover any damages in excess of the subrogation rights described in this section.

(2) Such a cause of action assigned to Pinnacol Assurance may be prosecuted or compromised by it. A compromise of any such cause of action by the employee or, if the employee is deceased, the employee's dependents at an amount less than the compensation provided for by articles 40 to 47 of this title shall be made only with the written approval of the chief executive officer of Pinnacol Assurance, if the deficiency of compensation would be payable from the Pinnacol Assurance fund, and otherwise with the written approval of the person, association, corporation, or insurance carrier liable to pay the same. Such written approval shall not be unreasonably withheld. Failure to obtain such written approval shall entitle the party responsible for paying workers' compensation benefits to be reimbursed for all benefits paid from, and offset any future liability under articles 40 to 47 of this title against, the entire proceeds recovered without any credit for reasonable attorney fees and costs as provided in paragraph (e) of subsection (1) of this section. If such approval is not obtained, the employee or, if the employee is deceased, the employee's dependents shall not be liable for any plaintiff's attorney fees for the third-party recovery on that portion of any recovery equal to the assigned and subrogated interest and are not subject to any action for refusal to pay such plaintiff's attorney fees resulting from the third-party case.

(3) If an employee is killed by the negligence or wrong of another not in the same employ and the dependents of such employee who are entitled to compensation under articles 40 to 47 of this title are minors, the decision to pursue or compromise any claim against a third party shall be made by such minor or shall be made on the minor's behalf by a parent of such minor or by the minor's next friend or duly appointed guardian, as the director of the division of workers' compensation may determine by rule in each case. Once such decision is made, the person who made the decision shall also bear the responsibility to provide all notices required by this section.

(4) (a) (I) If the employee or, if the employee is deceased, the employee's dependents make a demand upon or a request of a person or entity not in the same employ as the employee to seek recovery for damages arising from actions of such other person or entity, the employee or dependents shall also give written notice, within ten days, to the division of workers' compensation and to all parties who may be responsible for paying benefits to the employee or dependents under articles 40 to 47 of this title.

(II) If the party responsible for paying workers' compensation benefits under articles 40 to 47 of this title to the employee or, if the employee is deceased, the employee's dependents, makes a demand upon or a request of a person or entity not in the same employ as the employee to seek recovery for damages arising from actions of the other person or entity, the party responsible for paying the workers' compensation benefits shall also give written notice, within ten days, to the division of workers' compensation and to the employee or, if the employee is deceased, to the employee's dependents.

(III) The notice requirements of this paragraph (a) shall not apply to demands or requests seeking the recovery of medical payments only, and not seeking the recovery of any other type of damage or loss.

(b) The notice required by this subsection (4) shall contain the following:

(I) A description of the claim;

(II) The names and addresses of any and all other persons believed to be negligent;

(III) The name and address of any attorney representing the employee or dependents;

(IV) The name and address of any attorney representing other persons believed to be negligent; and

(V) The name, address, and telephone number of the insurance company or third-party administrator.

(c) (I) Except as provided in subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (c), at least twenty days before commencing a lawsuit or arbitration proceeding to recover damages arising from actions of another person or entity, the party initiating such lawsuit or arbitration shall give written notice to all parties who may be responsible for paying benefits to the employee or dependents under articles 40 to 47 of this title and to the employee or, if the employee is deceased, the employee's dependents. Such notice shall contain all of the information set out in paragraph (b) of this subsection (4) and shall be accompanied by a draft copy of the complaint.

(II) If any applicable statutory limitation period would expire before such twenty days have passed, the party initiating such lawsuit or arbitration may file or serve the complaint, or otherwise act to toll the running of such limitation period, before such twenty days have passed. The party initiating the lawsuit or arbitration shall provide the notice required by subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (c) within twenty days after commencing such action.

(d) If the employee or dependents fail to provide the written notice required pursuant to subparagraph (I) of paragraph (a) of this subsection (4):

(I) The party responsible for paying workers' compensation benefits shall be entitled to reimbursement from all moneys collected from the third party for all economic damages and for all physical impairment and disfigurement damages, without any credit for reasonable attorney fees as provided in paragraph (e) of subsection (1) of this section. If the trier of fact makes a separate award for disfigurement damages, reimbursement from such disfigurement damage award shall be limited to the amount the party paying workers' compensation benefits paid, or is obligated to pay, in disfigurement damages pursuant to articles 40 to 47 of this title. Such rights shall not extend to moneys collected for noneconomic damages awarded for pain and suffering, inconvenience, emotional stress, or impairment of quality of life.

(II) The employee or dependents shall not be liable for any plaintiff's attorney fees for the third-party recovery on that portion of any recovery equal to the assigned and subrogated interest and are not subject to any action for refusal to pay such plaintiff's attorney fees resulting from the third-party case.

(e). If the party responsible for paying workers' compensation benefits under articles 40 to 47 of this title fails to provide the written notice required pursuant to subparagraph (II) of paragraph (a) of this subsection (4), the amount of the claim shall be reduced by fifty dollars for each day such notice was not given to the employee or, if the employee is deceased, the employee's dependents, in an amount not to exceed twenty percent of the amount of the total assigned interest at the time such notice should have been given. The failure to provide such notice shall be a reassignment of a portion of the claim to the employee or, if the employee is deceased, the employee's dependents, in an amount equal to the penalty.

Annotator's note. Since § 8-41-203 is similar to § 8-52-108 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section recognizes common-law rights against tortfeasors who cause compensable injuries. Indus. Comm'n v. Standard Ins. Co., 149 Colo. 587, 370 P.2d 156 (1962).

If an employee fails to procure the insurer's consent in accordance with subsection (2), the employee forfeits his right to receive future benefits. Matter of Death of Peterkin, 729 P.2d 977 (Colo. 1986); Sullivan v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 796 P.2d 31 (Colo. App. 1990); Eckhardt v. Vill. Inn (Vicorp), 826 P.2d 855 (Colo. 1992).

Purpose of notice is to give insurance carrier an opportunity to assess its rights in a case which may result in an improvident settlement by an injured employee. Thus, where no notice is given, there is no duty to act reasonably because the carrier is unaware that it should act at all. Eckhardt v. Vill. Inn (Vicorp), 826 P.2d 855 (Colo. 1992).

An insurance carrier which has been properly notified about a suit brought in good faith by an injured employee has an obligation to act reasonably when the injured employee requests approval of a settlement in such a suit. Eckhardt v. Vill. Inn (Vicorp), 826 P.2d 855 (Colo. 1992).

Obligation to act reasonably requires insurance carrier to make a good faith appraisal of the suit and any proposed settlement and act accordingly. Eckhardt v. Vill. Inn (Vicorp), 826 P.2d 855 (Colo. 1992).

An insurance carrier must fairly and reasonably evaluate the suit before refusing approval of a settlement. Once it has been apprised that a good-faith suit by an injured employee has deteriorated, the carrier cannot simply seize that opportunity to avoid payment of future compensation by withholding consent to settlement. Eckhardt v. Vill. Inn (Vicorp), 826 P.2d 855 (Colo. 1992).

In determining whether an insurance carrier's refusal is reasonable, the court will look to the insurance carrier's actions taken in light of all circumstances. Eckhardt v. Vill. Inn (Vicorp), 826 P.2d 855 (Colo. 1992).

Workers' compensation carrier is granted the same immunity from suit by the injured employee as the employer has. Therefore, no third-party action could be brought against a carrier for negligently conducting safety inspections undertaken pursuant to its capacity as carrier. McHargue v. Stokes Div. of Pennwalt Corp., 649 F. Supp. 1388 (D. Colo. 1986).

An insurer's general knowledge of, and consent to, third-party negotiations does not constitute participation in, or encouragement of, a specific settlement agreement. Sullivan v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 796 P.2d 31 (Colo. App. 1990).

But the workmen's compensation act is a bar to a suit by an employee against a co-employee for injuries sustained when both are acting within the course of their employment. Nelson v. Harding, 29 Colo. App. 76, 480 P.2d 851 (1970); Sieck v. Trueblood, 29 Colo. App. 432, 485 P.2d 134 (1971).

Co-employee immunity for intentional wrongs is strictly limited to injuries sustained where both the tortfeasor and the victim are acting in the course of their employment. Kandt v. Evans, 645 P.2d 1300 (Colo. 1982).

Section does not abridge remedy against third person. The law does not attempt in any way to abridge the remedies which an employee of one person may have at law against a third person for a tort which such third person commits against him. Kirkham v. Hickerson Bros. Truck Co., 29 Colo. App. 303, 485 P.2d 513 (1971).

And only limitation is that third person shall not be "in the same employ". Under this section, the injured person may elect to proceed against a third person and the only limitation is that the third person shall not be "in the same employ". Chartier v. Winslow Crane Serv. Co., 142 Colo. 294, 350 P.2d 1044 (1960).

Otherwise, remedy is limited to workmen's compensation. Where the employer is the primary, if not sole, beneficiary of the fellow employee's action, the fellow employee is acting within the scope of his employment at the time of the accident, and the provisions of this section, allowing an injured employee to elect whether to pursue a cause of action against a third-party tortfeasor, are not applicable. The employee's remedy is limited to recovery under the workmen's compensation act. Sieck v. Trueblood, 29 Colo. App. 432, 485 P.2d 134 (1971).

Thus, where a fellow employee and an outsider are both at fault in causing injury to a worker who elects the benefits of workmen's compensation, such election in practical effect nullifies the fault as between the fellow employee and the injured worker but does not vitiate the fault as between the outsider and the injured worker. Hamblen v. Santa Fe Trail Transp. Co., 101 F. Supp. 799 (D. Colo. 1951).

Employee cannot join fellow employee in action against third party. An employee has no cause of action against a fellow employee for injuries sustained in the course of employment as the result of the latter's negligence where such employees and their employer are subject to the workmen's compensation act. And a plaintiff is precluded from joining his fellow employee as a defendant, as well as from proceeding against him independently for any damages suffered by plaintiff as a result of an accident arising out of the employment. Hamblen v. Santa Fe Trail Transp. Co., 101 F. Supp. 799 (D. Colo. 1951).

The term "third person" applies to anyone not immune to suit under the compensation act and incurring a common-law liability for injury to a workman. Indus. Comm'n v. Standard Ins. Co., 149 Colo. 587, 370 P.2d 156 (1962); Cont'l Sales Corp. v. Stookesberry, 170 Colo. 16, 459 P.2d 566 (1969).

Uninsured motorist carrier's liability to insured contractual. Although it is based upon the contingency of a third party's tort liability, the uninsured motorist carrier's liability to an insured is contractual, and the state compensation insurance fund does not become a third-party beneficiary under the insurance contract. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Gulf Ins. Co., 628 P.2d 182 (Colo. App. 1981); State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Commercial Union Ins. Co., 631 P.2d 1168 (Colo. App. 1981).

Uninsured motorist carrier is not third-party tortfeasor within the purview of this section. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Commercial Union Ins. Co., 631 P.2d 1168 (Colo. App. 1981).

Subcontractor may be sued by an employee of a general contractor. Frohlick Crane Serv., Inc. v. Mack, 182 Colo. 34, 510 P.2d 891 (1973).

Employee of subcontractor may maintain common-law action against general contractor. An employee of a subcontractor who has elected to receive workmen's compensation benefits from his insured subcontractor may maintain a common-law negligence action against the general contractor for the injuries received in the course of his employment. Thomas v. Farnsworth Chambers Co., 286 F.2d 270 (10th Cir.), rev'g 183 F. Supp. 764 (D. Colo. 1960); Whiting v. Farnsworth & Chambers Co., 293 F.2d 45 (10th Cir. 1961).

Because a general contractor may be liable as a third-party tortfeasor to these injured and compensated employees of a subcontractor. Thomas v. Farnsworth Chambers Co., 286 F.2d 270 (10th Cir.), rev'g 183 F. Supp. 764 (D. Colo. 1960); Whiting v. Farnsworth & Chambers Co., 293 F.2d 45 (10th Cir. 1961).

And "loaned employee" may maintain negligence action against borrowing employer. A "loaned employee" and an "employee" under workmen's compensation are not the same, and no provision prohibits or limits a "loaned employee" from maintaining a negligence action against the borrowing employer. Cont'l Sales Corp. v. Stookesberry, 170 Colo. 16, 459 P.2d 566 (1969).

For workmen's compensation does not immunize borrowing employer. The defendant, even though it might have had workmen's compensation insurance coverage, is a "third party" and therefore subject to this common law action for negligence. The workmen's compensation act does not immunize the borrowing employer because the loaning employer is solely responsible for workmen's compensation coverage, unless it is shown that the loaning constitutes a new contract of hire between the employee and the borrowing employer. Cont'l Sales Corp. v. Stookesberry, 170 Colo. 16, 459 P.2d 566 (1969).

Also, a physician incurring liability to an employee for negligent treatment of an injury is a "third person" under this section. Indus. Comm'n v. Standard Ins. Co., 149 Colo. 587, 370 P.2d 156 (1962).

So that a disability is compensable which results from the negligent treatment by a physician furnished as required by the employer. Indus. Comm'n v. Standard Ins. Co., 149 Colo. 587, 370 P.2d 156 (1962).

Doctor hired by a company to treat its employees is not a coemployee exempted from suit by § 8-43-104 for injuries caused in treatment, but may be sued in a malpractice action under this section. Wright v. District Court, 661 P.2d 1167 (Colo. 1983).

Clearly this section is not designed to relieve a third party from the consequences of injuries to another negligently inflicted. Riss & Co. v. Anderson, 108 Colo. 78, 114 P.2d 278 (1941); Kirkham v. Hickerson Bros. Truck Co., 29 Colo. App. 303, 485 P.2d 513 (1971).

Workmen's compensation act is not to shield third-party tortfeasors from liability for damages resulting from their negligence. Frohlick Crane Serv., Inc. v. Mack, 182 Colo. 34, 510 P.2d 891 (1973).

Termination of death benefits held proper. The propriety of termination of death benefits where the dependents of deceased elect to take compensation under articles 40 to 54 but nevertheless pursue their remedy against a third-party tortfeasor is implicit in this section. Berry Constr., Inc. v. Indus. Comm'n, 39 Colo. App. 251, 567 P.2d 806 (1977).

Substantial evidence of causation is not restricted to credible medical testimony. Savio House v. Dennis, 665 P.2d 141 (Colo. App. 1983).

Person responsible for enforcing this section is director of division of labor. General powers given to director of division of labor place him in a fiduciary role to funds such as the subsequent injury fund which are not legal entities, and therefore the director is the proper party to represent the fund and to protect its interests in workmen's compensation proceedings. Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. Baca, 682 P.2d 11 (Colo. 1984).

All workers in service of the state are treated as state "employees", not as employees of separate entities, for purposes of workers' compensation benefits. Rodriguez v. Bd. of Dirs., 917 P.2d 358 (Colo. App. 1996).

The clear and unambiguous language of subsection (1) allows the workers' compensation carrier to seek reimbursement of its partial permanent disability payments from the third party tortfeasor. Business Ins. Co. v. BFI Waste Sys., 23 P.3d 1261 (Colo. App. 2001).

Applied in Ogden v. McChesney, 41 Colo. App. 191, 584 P.2d 636 (1978); State Comp. Ins. Fund v. City of Colo. Springs, 43 Colo. App. 112, 602 P.2d 881 (1979).

II. ELECTION.

The provision of this section for election in advance of suit is for the benefit of the state in the administration of the state compensation insurance fund, and not for the benefit of the third person. King v. O.P. Baur Confectionery Co., 100 Colo. 528, 68 P.2d 909 (1937).

Signing of wage history does not constitute an election. The signing of a wage history by employee cannot be construed as constituting the filing of a claim for compensation nor be considered the written election contemplated by this section itself. King v. O.P. Baur Confectionery Co., 100 Colo. 528, 68 P.2d 909 (1937).

Neither does the mere acceptance of medical, surgical, or hospital aid by the employee constitute an election to take compensation. King v. O.P. Baur Confectionery Co., 100 Colo. 528, 68 P.2d 909 (1937).

For right of election contemplates opportunity for deliberation followed by affirmative act. The right of election insured to an injured employee who may have a cause of action in tort against a third party undoubtedly contemplates the opportunity for deliberation followed by some affirmative action on his part before he can be said to have elected to take compensation. King v. O.P. Baur Confectionery Co., 100 Colo. 528, 68 P.2d 909 (1937).

Filing of claim and consequent notice to employer constituted election to seek compensation. Lantern Inn v. Indus. Comm'n, 624 P.2d 929 (Colo. App. 1981).

No election of remedies. Although decedent's wife had no legal cause of action against the subcontractor in whose employ the deceased was at the time of injury, the bringing of an action under such circumstances did not constitute an election of remedies, and claimant is not estopped by reason thereof from recovering compensation. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. v. Clifton, 117 Colo. 547, 190 P.2d 909 (1948).

Action by employee against third party is not precluded by receipt of payments. Where no award of compensation has been made, an action by the injured employee against a third party is not precluded by the receipt of payments from the employer or the insurance carrier. King v. O.P. Baur Confectionery Co., 100 Colo. 528, 68 P.2d 909 (1937); Riss & Co. v. Anderson, 108 Colo. 78, 114 P.2d 278 (1941); Riss & Co. v. Galloway, 108 Colo. 93, 114 P.2d 550 (1941); Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 145 Colo. 369, 359 P.2d 4 (1961).

Likewise, action against third person does not bar workmen's compensation claim. In accepting compensation from his employer for injuries received in the course of his employment, and thereafter commencing an action against third persons alleged to be responsible for his injuries and settling his claim against such persons without consent of the compensation insurance carrier does not bar a claimant from pursuing his claim for workmen's compensation. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 145 Colo. 369, 359 P.2d 4 (1961); State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Foulds, 167 Colo. 123, 445 P.2d 716 (1968); Central Elec. Supply Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 698 P.2d 830 (Colo. App. 1984).

An employee who suffers a compensable injury at the hands of a third party may pursue his remedies against the third person even though the employee has filed a claim under the workers' compensation act. Matter of Death of Peterkin, 729 P.2d 977 (Colo. 1986).

If the third-party suit is successful, the employer's insurance carrier may suspend all future benefits to the employee if the amount of the third-party recovery that is actually collected equals or exceeds the compensation award. Matter of Death of Peterkin, 729 P.2d 977 (Colo. 1986).

An injured employee does not lose or waive his right of action against a third party by exercising his rights under a workmen's compensation act. Krueger v. Merriman Elec., 29 Colo. App. 492, 488 P.2d 228 (1971).

For this section only limits an employee's right to retain so much of the recovery as may exceed the compensation paid to him or for which his employer or the employer's insurance carrier is liable. Since the statute by its terms limits the carrier's recovery to the amount of compensation for which it is liable, if the carrier sues alone the recoverable damages are limited to that compensation. Thus, if the employee by electing to accept compensation has lost all rights in the cause of action, then the third-party tortfeasor would be relieved of liability beyond the amount of compensation paid; it is clear that this is not the purpose of the statute. Riss & Co. v. Anderson, 108 Colo. 78, 114 P.2d 278 (1941); Wilson v. Smith, 110 Colo. 68, 130 P.2d 1053 (1942); Drake v. Hodges, 114 Colo. 10, 161 P.2d 338 (1945); Kirkham v. Hickerson Bros. Truck

Co., 29 Colo. App. 303, 485 P.2d 513 (1971); Krueger v. Merriman Elec., 29 Colo. App. 492, 488 P.2d 228 (1971).

Where the provisions of the workmen's compensation act do not expressly limit the employee with respect to other remedies, the supreme court is not disposed to read or interpret such limitations into the workmen's compensation statutes. Cont'l Sales Corp. v. Stookesberry, 170 Colo. 16, 459 P.2d 566 (1969).

Employee may bring action for property damage, pain and suffering, and lost wages. The compensation provided for by the statute does not include payment for property damage, for pain and suffering, nor for all loss of future wages and the like. The right to bring an action against a third-party tortfeasor who is not a co-employee for these damages remains in the employee. Pursuant to the statute, he must repay the carrier out of his recovery for the compensation paid by it, but all amounts in excess thereof belong to him. Kirkham v. Hickerson Bros. Truck Co., 29 Colo. App. 303, 485 P.2d 513 (1971).

Filing of written election with director held not to bar action against defendant. In an action for damages for personal injuries resulting from a collision of plaintiff's automobile with a railway train owned and operated by defendant company, it was held that where plaintiff filed a written election to avail himself of the benefits of the workmen's compensation act, plaintiff was not "forever barred from asserting his alleged cause of action against this defendant". Donley v. Denver & Salt Lake R.R., 111 Colo. 358, 141 P.2d 899 (1943).

No question of estoppel between employee and third party. Whatever may be the situation as between the employee and his employer and the insurance carrier, no question of estoppel arises as between the employee and the third party defendant. King v. O.P. Baur Confectionery Co., 100 Colo. 528, 68 P.2d 909 (1937).

Amount received under benefit plan should not be considered in employee's action against third party. The amount received by an employee under a so-called benefit plan, considered as self-insurance under this act, should not be considered in mitigation of damages in an action by employee against third party. Riss & Co. v. Anderson, 108 Colo. 78, 114 P.2d 278 (1941).

III. ASSIGNMENT AND SUBROGATION.

Law reviews. For article, "A Primer on Workers' Compensation Subrogation", see 21 Colo. Law. 1931 (1992).

The legislative intent underlying this section is to preclude double recoveries; thus, if the claimant cannot enforce a judgment or settlement agreement in his favor, there is no double recovery in the first instance. Rocky Mountain Gen. v. Simon, 827 P.2d 629 (Colo. App. 1992).

Purpose of this provision is to adjust rights between the insurer and the employee by requiring that the insurer be reimbursed out of the employee's recovery against the third-party tortfeasor for worker's compensation benefits paid by the insurer, leaving the employee with the excess. Cont'l Cas. Co. v. Gate City Steel, 650 P.2d 1336 (Colo. App. 1982); Rocky Mountain Gen. v. Simon, 827 P.2d 629 (Colo. App. 1992); Jordan v. Fonken & Stevens, P.C., 914 P.2d 394 (Colo. App. 1995); Andrews v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 952 P.2d 853 (Colo. App. 1997).

The subrogation provisions of this section have the effect of preventing an injured employee from receiving a duplicate recovery since the governmental interest in preventing double recovery is significant and is generally held to override a literal or technical interpretation of statutes or insurance policies. Rocky Mountain Gen. v. Simon, 827 P.2d 629 (Colo. App. 1992).

Interpreting this section to restrict an employer's or carrier's subrogation interest to proceeds paid to worker individually would create an incentive for employees to circumvent this section by simply agreeing with tortfeasors that settlement proceeds would be paid to an individual or legal entity other than the employee, would defeat the public policy against double recoveries, and would render the subrogation provisions meaningless. Rocky Mountain Gen. v. Simon, 827 P.2d 629 (Colo. App. 1992).

Being the more specific statute, the plain terms of this section control over § 5-12-102 and, therefore, insurer is limited under subrogation agreement for workers' compensation to recover only the amount which it paid to the injured employee and cannot collect any interest on amount. Husson v. Meeker, 812 P.2d 731 (Colo. App. 1991).

The phrase "actually collected" under this section refers to monetary proceeds actually received, and therefore, insurance carrier could not claim credit for future annuity payments from third-party tortfeasor not yet paid into claimant's trust. Rocky Mountain Gen. v. Simon, 827 P.2d 629 (Colo. App. 1992).

"Assignment" of the "cause of action" under subsection (1) is only a partial one. It extends only to that part of the claim for economic damages that the carrier has paid; the carrier has no interest in any part of the claim for non-economic damages, nor in that proportion of the claimant's economic damages that the carrier has not paid. Sneath v. Express Messenger Serv., 931 P.2d 565 (Colo. App. 1996); Chavez v. Kelley Trucking, Inc., __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

Insurance carrier's subrogation rights are limited to the amount of compensation benefits for which said carrier is liable, rather than to the amount of the entire net recovery an employee collects when the employee elects to pursue a remedy against a third party. Thus, the insurer is only subrogated to the claimant's rights to recover economic damages. Colo. Comp. Ins. Auth. v. Jorgensen, 992 P.2d 1156 (Colo. 2000).

Claimant was not required to obtain workers' compensation insurer's approval before settling his claim against the employer for noneconomic damages. Chavez v. Kelley Trucking, Inc., __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

Subrogation would be meaningless if the limit of liability fluctuated with every recovery. Weaver-Beatty Motor Co. v. Billen, 36 Colo. App. 442, 541 P.2d 120 (1975).

Insurer's right to recovery limited to damages obtainable through subrogation. Since insured's recovery was limited by insured's comparative negligence, insurer's recovery should also be limited and insurer is not therefore entitled to offset of its reduction through reimbursement by insured. Martinez v. St. Joseph Hospital & Nursing Home, 878 P.2d 13 (Colo. App. 1993).

Subrogation has no effect on limits of liability. The right of subrogation granted to the state fund under this section is a separate and distinct right which has no effect on the limits of liability under § 8-49-101 established by the general assembly. Weaver-Beatty Motor Co. v. Billen, 36 Colo. App. 442, 541 P.2d 120 (1975).

This section does not create a new cause of action but merely permits the assignment of claimant's original claim. Such claims are not original claims either for or against the state, but the private claims of individuals assigned to the compensation fund for subrogation purposes. Jackson v. Bates, 133 Colo. 248, 293 P.2d 962 (1956).

Distinction between assignment and subrogation. Assignment and subrogation are not one and the same. Assignment is distinguished from subrogation in that subrogation is an act of the law predicated on payment of the debt or claim, and operates only to secure contribution and indemnity, whereas assignment is an act of the parties depending generally on intention, and contemplates a continuation of and transfers the whole claim or debt. Kirkham v. Hickerson Bros. Truck Co., 29 Colo. App. 303, 485 P.2d 513 (1971).

In the absence of specific statutory authorization, there is no right to subrogation. Pisicchio v. Dir. of Div. of Labor & Emp., 29 Colo. App. 538, 487 P.2d 382 (1971).

This section creates no immediate and outright assignment of any part of an injured employee's cause of action against a negligent tortfeasor. The statute instead creates several interrelated alternatives from which an injured employee and the employer's workers' compensation insurer may choose. These include the insurer being subrogated to the employee's right to bring suit against the negligent tortfeasor, to the extent of workers' compensation benefits paid. Harms v. Williamson, 956 P. 2d 649 (Colo. App. 1998).

No matter which alternative is chosen, the insurer is not required to file a notice of claim separate from and in addition to a sufficient notice of claim filed by the injured employee. Harms v. Williamson, 956 P. 2d 649 (Colo. App. 1998).

The event which operates as a matter of law to assign the claim against the tortfeasors is the awarding of compensation. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 145 Colo. 369, 359 P.2d 4 (1961); Central Elec. Supply Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 698 P.2d 830 (Colo. App. 1984).

Act of statistician held not to be an "awarding of compensation." The act of a statistician in approving the admission of liability, which was accompanied by the wage history signed by the plaintiff, held not to amount to an "awarding of compensation" as contemplated by this section. King v. O.P. Baur Confectionery Co., 100 Colo. 528, 68 P.2d 909 (1937).

This section expressly limits the rights of an insurance carrier to those of a subrogee and indemnifies it only to the extent of the compensation for which it is liable as defined in the act. Kirkham v. Hickerson Bros. Truck Co., 29 Colo. App. 303, 485 P.2d 513 (1971).

In order to protect subrogee, employee may not settle claim without consent of carrier. The employee is prohibited by the statute from settling his claim against the third party for less than the compensation due without the consent of the carrier. No other limitations are imposed on the employee by the statute, and this being so, the courts cannot insert them. Kirkham v. Hickerson Bros. Truck Co., 29 Colo. App. 303, 485 P.2d 513 (1971).

But where no award has been made, the "effective force" required to give rise to subrogation rights, and the right of the carrier to give its consent to a settlement, is absent. Under these circumstances the carrier must be content with the provision of the statute which gives him full credit for the amount received by the claimant in the settlement of the civil action. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 145 Colo. 369, 359 P.2d 4 (1961).

Carrier, however, may settle without consent of employee. The insurance carrier's rights in the action are limited to its share of the recovery as set forth in the act. If it desires to settle as to its rights it may do so with or without the consent of the employee. Kirkham v. Hickerson Bros. Truck Co., 29 Colo. App. 303, 485 P. 2d 513 (1971).

But the insurance carrier may not compel the employee to abandon or compromise his cause of action. Kirkham v. Hickerson Bros. Truck Co., 29 Colo. App. 303, 485 P.2d 513 (1971).

For the only limitations on the employee's right of action are those imposed by the act itself. By forcing him to accept an unsatisfactory settlement, he was subjected to an unwarranted limitation on his right to prosecute his action against the alleged tortfeasor. This would defeat the primary purpose of this section of the act which is to provide the mechanics that will achieve the result of the third party paying what he would normally pay if no compensation question were involved; the employer and carrier "coming out even" by being reimbursed for their compensation expenditure; and the employee getting any excess of the damage recovery over compensation. Kirkham v. Hickerson Bros. Truck Co., 29 Colo. App. 303, 485 P.2d 513 (1971).

Rights acquired by subrogation are assignable. The assignment of subrogation rights by an insurance company to the injured party is valid and simply avoids circuitous procedure. There is nothing in the statute which prohibits the director from following procedures available to private insurers in this regard. Krueger v. Merriman Elec., Colo., 29 Colo. App. 429, 488 P.2d 228 (1971).

Prior to 1959, insurer's right to subrogation did not extend to benefits such as hospital, medical, and surgical expenses. Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 319 P.2d 975 (1957); Publix Cab Co. v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 139 Colo. 205, 338 P.2d 702, 78 A.L.R.2d 198 (1959).

But now the employer and insurer are entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the employee in his malpractice action against the negligent physician. However, the employee can recover from the doctor only such damages as flow from the doctor's negligence. Indus. Comm'n v. Standard Ins. Co., 149 Colo. 587, 370 P.2d 156 (1962).

And accordingly, the insurer is subrogated only to the extent of the compensation he is required to pay for aggravation of an original injury by the doctor. Indus. Comm'n v. Standard Ins. Co., 149 Colo. 587, 370 P.2d 156 (1962).

The general assembly, prior to the amendment of this section in 2003, did not intend to include physical impairment or disfigurement damages recovered by an employee within the general category of economic damages subject to the insurer's right of subrogation. Colo. Comp. Ins. Auth. v. Jones, 131 P.3d 1074 (Colo. App. 2005).

When insurer entitled to reimbursement from employee without proof of negligence. Where an employee receives worker's compensation benefits and then recovers from a third-party tortfeasor pursuant to a settlement agreement which resolves all claims between the two parties, the insurer is entitled to its reimbursement from the employee without proof of the third party's negligence. Continental Cas. Co. v. Gate City Steel, 650 P.2d 1336 (Colo. App. 1982).

And when insurer entitled to reimbursement directly from tortfeasor. Where the third-party tortfeasor pays the employee pursuant to a general settlement of all claims between them, with notice of the insurer's subrogation rights, and agrees to indemnify the employee for any amounts he is required to pay the insurer in satisfaction of the insurer's reimbursement and subrogation rights, the third-party tortfeasor, rather than the employee, may be held directly liable for reimbursement to the insurer without proof of negligence. Continental Cas. Co. v. Gate City Steel, 650 P.2d 1336 (Colo. App. 1982).

If a claimant recovers from the tortfeasor, the claimant must reimburse the insurer for any benefits paid, and then the insurer may also offset any portion of the recovery not used to reimburse the insurer for past benefit payments against any future benefits the insurer may have to pay. Thus, the claimant receives interim workers' compensation benefits, recovers from the tortfeasor, reimburses the insurer for the interim benefits, credits the insurer for potential future benefits, and keeps the remainder as excess. Jorgensen v. Colo. Comp. Ins. Auth., 967 P.2d 172 (Colo. App. 1998), aff'd on other grounds, 992 P.2d 1156 (Colo. 2000).

Limit on reimbursement of employer's insurance carrier after recovery from third party. An injured employee who recovers damages from a third-party tortfeasor must reimburse his employer's workmen's compensation insurance carrier for benefits paid to him, but any damages recovered in excess of the compensation paid by the carrier belong to the employee. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Commercial Union Ins. Co., 631 P.2d 1168 (Colo. App. 1981).

Amount of subrogation may not be reduced to pay attorney fees. Where there is no written consent from the party liable for compensation payments, the successful claimant in the third-party suit may not reduce the amount of the subrogation required by subsection (1) by unilaterally entering into a compromise agreement the ultimate result of which is to pay a portion of the recovery to counsel as attorney fees incurred in the third-party action. In re Peterkin, 698 P.2d 1353 (Colo. App. 1985), aff'd, 729 P.2d 977 (Colo. 1986).

Claimant permitted to reduce insurance carrier's subrogation credit by the amount of attorney fees and costs incurred in settling the third-party action where there was no deficiency between the settlement and the amount of compensation for which the insurer was liable.

When there is no such deficiency the reduction cannot be disallowed based on insurer's argument that it did not give written approval for the settlement. Further, to disallow the reduction would result in the insurer's unjust enrichment. Kennedy v. Indus. Comm'n, 735 P.2d 891 (Colo. App. 1986).

Workers' compensation insurer was not entitled to take subrogation credit, against additional compensation benefits to be paid claimant for her permanent disability, for amount of gross settlement with tortfeasor which represented claimant's attorney fees and expenses. Drake v. Ins. Co. of North Am., 736 P.2d 1244 (Colo. App. 1986).

Where an injured employee's tort claim against a third party is settled for an amount greater than the insurer's subrogation claim for workers' compensation benefits, and the insurer has not actively participated in the tort litigation, a court may order the insurer to pay a reasonable share of the attorney fees and court costs incurred by the employee in the tort litigation. County Workers Comp. Pool v. Davis, 817 P.2d 521 (Colo. 1991).

Insurer may not be subrogated to liability arising from accident subsequent to industrial accident. There is no authority to award subrogation to an insurance company where tortfeasor liability arises from an accident subsequent to and unconnected with the industrial accident for which workmen's compensation was sought and where the latter, nonindustrial accident aggravated the disability caused by the original industrial accident. Pisicchio v. Dir. of Div. of Labor & Emp., 29 Colo. App. 538, 487 P.2d 382 (1971).

Insurer may not credit claimant's settlement against worker's compensation claim for damages covered by personal injury protection (PIP) benefits. Tate v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 815 P.2d 15 (Colo. 1991).

No subrogation rights over a claimant's third-party settlement acquired by a worker's compensation insurer where insurer had paid no benefits to claimant at the time of third-party settlement, and the insurer has no control over claimant's third-party settlement. Brickell v. Business Machs., Inc., 817 P.2d 536 (Colo. App. 1990).

Workers' compensation carrier is barred from asserting subrogation claim against tortfeasor when injured employee is eligible for PIP benefits. County Workers Comp. Pool v. Folk, 895 P.2d 1083 (Colo. App. 1994).

Employee may be joined in employer's action against third party. In an action for damages by an employer or insurance carrier against a third party under this section, the employee may be joined as a proper, although not a necessary, party plaintiff. Wilson v. Smith, 110 Colo. 68, 130 P.2d 1053 (1942); Kirkham v. Hickerson Bros. Truck Co., 29 Colo. App. 303, 485 P.2d 513 (1971); Moore v. Fischer, 31 Colo. App. 425, 505, P.2d 383 (1972).

In the event of a recovery from a third party defendant for a wrong alleged, from the sum awarded the amount of compensation for which the state fund is liable under the act shall be returned to the fund and the balance, if any, goes to a statutory assignee. Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 319 P.2d 975 (1957).

The employer or carrier is entitled to subrogation credit for the amount of the monetary recovery when a third-party action results in a monetary recovery for work-related injuries, irrespective of whether the money is paid to the claimant directly or to an individual or legal entity designated to receive the proceeds. Rocky Mountain Gen. v. Simon, 827 P.2d 629 (Colo. App. 1992).

Insurer can only settle an action against a third party in the amount of compensation already paid to the claimant. Thus, by settling, the insurer does not waive its statutory right to offset claimant's third-party recovery against the insurer's payment of future compensation benefits. Metcalfe v. Bruning Div. of AMI, 868 P.2d 1145 (Colo. App. 1993); Jordan v. Fonken & Stevens, P.C., 914 P.2d 394 (Colo. App. 1995); Andrews v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 952 P.2d 853 (Colo. App. 1997).

This section specifically provides that the subsequent injury fund has subrogation rights with respect to third-party settlement proceeds. Metcalfe v. Bruning Div. of AMI, 868 P.2d 1145 (Colo. App. 1993).

An insurance carrier becomes subrogated to the rights of the injured employee against any third-party tortfeasor to the extent of benefits paid. This right extends to the settlement proceeds of a compromised claim. However, if the settlement is to be paid to the spouse of the injured employee for lack of consortium, such subrogation claim depends on whether the settlement agreement was fair and entered not in good faith and not designed to defeat such subrogation claim. Rains v. Kolberg Mfg. Corp., 897 P.2d 845 (Colo. App. 1994).

Claimant cannot unilaterally characterize recovery as being only for pain and suffering and thus defeat the insurance carrier's subrogation rights. Regardless of the label applied to the recovery, the carrier is entitled to exercise its subrogation rights against the amount of recovery actually collected. Kennedy v. Indus. Comm'n, 735 P.2d 891 (Colo. App. 1986).

Subrogee's statutory subrogation lien applies to and may be satisfied from the total settlement amount recovered, which was undifferentiated between two accidents, even though the assignment agreement made no express reference to the second accident. United Fire & Cas. Co. v. Armantrout, 904 P.2d 1375 (Colo. App. 1995).

District court has jurisdiction to apportion a settlement reached in a tort case when a worker's compensation case underlies the tort case, because the court is only determining the portion of the settlement that represents the non-economic losses. While that apportionment will indirectly affect the workers' compensation case by limiting the amount of proceeds subject to the subrogation interest, it is a proper exercise of the court's authority. Jorgensen v. Colo. Comp. Ins. Auth., 967 P.2d 172 (Colo. App. 1998), aff'd, 992 P.2d 1156 (Colo. 2000).

Since the carrier's subrogation right attaches only to the claimant's economic loss, the court shall determine actual amount of claimant's economic and non-economic damages and apportion settlement proceeds accordingly. Failure to apportion settlement proceeds is reversible error even when the settlement is substantially lower than the actual damages. Reliance Ins. Co. v. Blackford, 100 P.3d 578 (Colo. App. 2004); Colo. Comp. Ins. Auth. v. Jones, 131 P.3d 1074 (Colo. App. 2005).

Uninsured/underinsured motorist (UM/UIM) insurer not a third-party tortfeasor within purview of section and does not step into shoes of tortfeasor; therefore, a worker's compensation insurer does not have subrogation rights against UM/UIM insurance benefits paid to injured worker. Colo. Ins. Guar. Ass'n v. Menor, 166 P.3d 205 (Colo. App. 2007).

While Colorado insurance guaranty association (CIGA), acting as worker's compensation insurer, does not have subrogation rights against UM/UIM insurance benefits under this section, CIGA has claim for relief for nonduplication of recovery under its enabling statute. Colo. Ins. Guar. Ass'n v. Menor, 166 P.3d 205 (Colo. App. 2007).

8-41-204. Injury outside of state - benefits in accordance with state law. If an employee who has been hired or is regularly employed in this state receives personal injuries in an accident or an occupational disease arising out of and in the course of such employment outside of this state, the employee, or such employee's dependents in case of death, shall be entitled to compensation according to the law of this state. This provision shall apply only to those injuries received by the employee within six months after leaving this state, unless, prior to the expiration of such six-month period, the employer has filed with the division notice that the employer has elected to extend such coverage for a greater period of time.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For note, "The Conflicts Problem as Applied to Workmen's Compensation in Colorado", see 22 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 77 (1949).

Annotator's note. Since § 8-41-204 is similar to § 8-46-204 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Worker's Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section gives an employee outside of this state the right to remain protected by the Colorado insurance coverage, subject, however, to the second condition in § 8-46-202, and if that condition does not exist, the whole act becomes inoperative. Frankel Carbon & Ribbon Co. v. Aaron, 113 Colo. 429, 158 P.2d 929 (1945).

Section extends protection of compensation act. The requirements of § 8-46-202 cannot be fulfilled in a short period of time and afford no protection to an employee who must be sent out of the state on little if any advance notice. This section was intended to bridge the gap between and extend the protection of the compensation act to employees injured while employed out of the state within the six-month period. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Howington, 133 Colo. 583, 298 P.2d 963 (1956).

And the six-month limitation period commences to run from the date of departure following the most recent assignment to the state. Employers' Liab. Assurance Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 147 Colo. 309, 363 P.2d 646 (1961).

An employee who is hired in Colorado and receives personal injuries outside of the state in an accident arising out of the employment is entitled to compensation only if the employee received the injuries within six months after leaving the state. Where employee was hired or employed in Colorado but was never physically present in Colorado, the employee is not entitled to compensation. Hathaway Lighting, Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 143 P.3d 1187 (Colo. App. 2006).

There are three requirements, any two of which when met can qualify an employee or his dependents for compensation under this section where the injury or death occurs outside of the state. The requirements are: A contract of employment created in the state, employment in the state under a contract created outside the state, and substantial employment in the state. If any two of these conditions are met, it makes no difference that the employee is not a resident of the state or is killed outside the state provided other statutory time limits on out-of-state employment are met. RCS Lumber Co. v. Worthy, 149 Colo. 537, 369 P.2d 985 (1962).

And claimants have the burden of proving a Colorado employment contract. RCS Lumber Co. v. Worthy, 149 Colo. 537, 369 P.2d 985 (1962).

The place of employment under this section is not expressly limited to the state. Denver Truck Exch. v. Perryman, 134 Colo. 586, 307 P.2d 805 (1957).

Panel did not err in concluding that Colorado had jurisdiction over workers' compensation claim where contract for hire took place in Colorado for a job in Wyoming even though the claimant could reject the offer and the employer could reject the claimant when he arrived at the job site. By the time the claimant had agreed to report and departed from his home for the job site, the fundamental elements of the contract were present. Moorhead Mach. & Boiler v. Del Valle, 934 P.2d 861 (Colo. App. 1996).

8-41-205. Waiver of compensation by employee - approval required - exception. No waiver of compensation or medical benefits by an employee for aggravation of any preexisting condition or disease shall be allowed under articles 40 to 47 of this title. This section, however, shall not invalidate any such waiver so filed and approved prior to March 1, 1977, under the provisions of the "Colorado Occupational Disease Disability Act", which was repealed effective September 1, 1975.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 8-41-205 is similar to § 8-51-113 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, a relevant case construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this section.

Employer's liability fixed on date of last injurious exposure. When an employee is disabled as a result of an occupational disease and so advises his employer, but continues in the same employment, the extent of the employer's liability under the workmen's compensation act or the occupational disease disability act (now repealed) is to be determined by reference to the statutory scheme in effect on the date of the last injurious exposure to the hazards of the disease. Martinez v. Indus. Comm'n, 40 Colo. App. 485, 580 P.2d 36 (1978).

8-41-206. Disability beginning five years after injury. Any disability beginning more than five years after the date of injury shall be conclusively presumed not to be due to the injury, except in cases of disability or death resulting from exposure to radioactive materials, substances, or machines or to fissionable materials, or any type of malignancy caused thereby, or from poisoning by uranium or its compounds, or from asbestosis, silicosis, or anthracosis.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 8-52-106 as it existed prior to 1990.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 8-41-206 is similar to § 8-52-106 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Compensation under this section predicated on proved accident, as cause, and proved disability, as result, within five years. London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Sauer, 92 Colo. 565, 22 P.2d 624 (1933).

But once the causal connection is established, a disability may be shown, whether it is actually disclosed early or late. London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Sauer, 92 Colo. 565, 22 P.2d 624 (1933).

Thus, this section is not one of limitations. It creates an arbitrary rule of evidence, which inhibits a finding of any causal connection between an injury and an accident when the disability has its beginning five years after date of the accident. Indus. Comm'n v. Weaver, 81 Colo. 191, 254 P. 444 (1927); City of Boulder v. Payne, 162 Colo. 345, 426 P.2d 194 (1967).

Which does not bar an action for a recurring disability more than five years after accident. Indus. Comm'n v. Weaver, 81 Colo. 191, 254 P. 444 (1927).

For a recurring disability is a different thing from a "disability beginning more than five years from the date of the accident". Indus. Comm'n v. Weaver, 81 Colo. 191, 254 P. 444 (1927).

Furthermore, the earliest disability for which compensation awarded or paid arrests running of any statute of limitations. London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Sauer, 92 Colo. 565, 22 P. 2d 624 (1933).

"Disability" as used in this section means disability to work. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 97 Colo. 102, 46 P.2d 752 (1935).

And "beginning" signifies commencement; the entrance into existence; the initial state of anything. Indus. Comm'n v. Weaver, 81 Colo. 191, 254 P. 444 (1927).

Disability under this statute does not commence only when the injured worker is unable to work. The commencement of disability may also be established by evidence which demonstrates that a claimant is able to return to work only in a restricted capacity. Ricks v. Indust. Claim Appeals Office, 809 P.2d 1118 (Colo. App. 1991).

Employee failing to make claim within prescribed period is guilty of laches. Where an employee, without reasonable excuse, neglects to make claim for alleged disability resulting from accidental injuries within the time fixed by this section, he is guilty of laches, and judgment awarding his compensation will be reversed. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v Indus. Comm'n, 97 Colo. 102, 46 P.2d 752 (1935).

When no onset of disability was established, this section does not apply; thus, findings of maximum medical improvement and lack of permanent impairment were premature, and the claimant was not precluded from seeking medical benefits. Leming v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 62 P.3d 1015 (Colo. App. 2002).

8-41-207. Death after two years. In case death occurs more than two years after the date of receiving any injury, such death shall be prima facie presumed not to be due to such injury; such presumption shall not apply in cases of silicosis, asbestosis, anthracosis, or disability or death resulting from exposure to radioactive materials, substances, or machines or to fissionable materials, or any type of malignancy caused thereby, or from poisoning by uranium or its compounds. In all other cases, such presumption may be rebutted by competent evidence.

8-41-208. Coverage for job-related exposure to or contraction of hepatitis C. (1) The exposure to or contraction of hepatitis C by a firefighter, emergency services provider, or peace officer, as described in section 16-2.5-101, C.R.S., shall be presumed to be within the course and scope of employment if the following conditions are satisfied:

(a) A baseline test shall be provided by the employer, or if insured, by the insurer, to be performed within five days after the employee reports the on-the-job exposure. The employee must report the exposure within two days after the employee knew or reasonably should have known of the exposure;

(b) The baseline test establishes that the employee was not infected with hepatitis C at the time of the on-the-job exposure;

(c) The employee complies with reasonable and necessary medical procedures set forth in section 8-42-101 (1) (c);

(d) The employee is determined to have hepatitis C within twenty-four months after the on-the-job exposure to the known or possible source.

(2) The exposure to or contraction of hepatitis C by a firefighter, emergency services provider, or peace officer, as described in section 16-2.5-101, C.R.S., shall not be deemed to be within the course and scope of employment if an employer or insurer shows by a preponderance of the evidence that such exposure or contraction did not occur on the job.

8-41-209. Coverage for occupational diseases contracted by firefighters. (1) Death, disability, or impairment of health of a firefighter of any political subdivision who has completed five or more years of employment as a firefighter, caused by cancer of the brain, skin, digestive system, hematological system, or genitourinary system and resulting from his or her employment as a firefighter, shall be considered an occupational disease.

(2) Any condition or impairment of health described in subsection (1) of this section:

(a) Shall be presumed to result from a firefighter's employment if, at the time of becoming a firefighter or thereafter, the firefighter underwent a physical examination that failed to reveal substantial evidence of such condition or impairment of health that preexisted his or her employment as a firefighter; and

(b) Shall not be deemed to result from the firefighter's employment if the firefighter's employer or insurer shows by a preponderance of the medical evidence that such condition or impairment did not occur on the job.

LIABILITY

8-41-301. Conditions of recovery. (1) The right to the compensation provided for in articles 40 to 47 of this title, in lieu of any other liability to any person for any personal injury or death resulting therefrom, shall obtain in all cases where the following conditions occur:

(a) Where, at the time of the injury, both employer and employee are subject to the provisions of said articles and where the employer has complied with the provisions thereof regarding insurance;

(b) Where, at the time of the injury, the employee is performing service arising out of and in the course of the employee's employment;

(c) Where the injury or death is proximately caused by an injury or occupational disease arising out of and in the course of the employee's employment and is not intentionally self-inflicted.

(2) (a) A claim of mental impairment must be proven by evidence supported by the testimony of a licensed physician or psychologist. For purposes of this subsection (2), "mental impairment" means a recognized, permanent disability arising from an accidental injury arising out of and in the course of employment when the accidental injury involves no physical injury and consists of a psychologically traumatic event that is generally outside of a worker's usual experience and would evoke significant symptoms of distress in a worker in similar circumstances. A mental impairment shall not be considered to arise out of and in the course of employment if it results from a disciplinary action, work evaluation, job transfer, lay-off, demotion, promotion, termination, retirement, or similar action taken in good faith by the employer. The mental impairment that is the basis of the claim shall have arisen primarily from the claimant's then occupation and place of employment in order to be compensable.

(a.5) For purposes of this subsection (2), "mental impairment" also includes a disability arising from an accidental physical injury that leads to a recognized permanent psychological disability.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of articles 40 to 47 of this title, where a claim is by reason of mental impairment, the claimant shall be limited to twelve weeks of medical impairment benefits, which shall be in an amount not less than one hundred fifty dollars per week and not more than fifty percent of the state average weekly wage, inclusive of any temporary disability benefits; except that this limitation shall not apply to any victim of a crime of violence, without regard to the intent of the perpetrator of the crime, nor to the victim of a physical injury or occupational disease that causes neurological brain damage; and nothing in this section shall limit the determination of the percentage of impairment pursuant to section 8-42-107 (8) for the purposes of establishing the applicable cap on benefits pursuant to section 8-42-107.5.

(c) The claim of mental impairment cannot be based, in whole or in part, upon facts and circumstances that are common to all fields of employment.

(d) The mental impairment which is the basis of the claim must be, in and of itself, either sufficient to render the employee temporarily or permanently disabled from pursuing the occupation from which the claim arose or to require medical or psychological treatment.

Annotator's note. (1) Since § 8-41-301 is similar to § 8-52-102 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

(2) Cases included in the annotations to this section which refer to the industrial commission were decided prior to the 1969 amendment which vested the director of the division of labor with the power previously exercised by the industrial commission to enforce the workmen's compensation laws or were decided prior to the enactment of 1986 Senate Bill No. 12 which abolished said commission.

Subsection (2) does not violate equal protection because requiring verification of the mental component of a stress claim by a physician or psychologist is rationally related to the purpose of this section, which is to establish the proof requirements for compensability of a stress-related claim in order to avoid frivolous and fraudulent claims. Tomsha v. City of Colo. Springs, 856 P.2d 13 (Colo. App. 1992).

There is a rational basis for requiring physical injury or occurrence of a crime of violence during the course of employment as an additional proof of work-related causation. Colo. AFL-CIO v. Donlon, 914 P.2d 396 (Colo. App. 1995).

Purpose of the workmen's compensation act is to provide monetary relief to employees who, while performing services for the employer, suffer disability or death as a result of an accident or injury arising out of and in the course of their employment. This is a legitimate state purpose. Claimants In re Kohler v. Indus. Comm'n, 671 P.2d 1002 (Colo. App. 1983).

The legislative purpose in enacting subsection (2)(a) was to establish the requirements for compensability of a stress-related claim, and it was designed to prevent frivolous claims. Loveland Police Dept. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 141 P.3d 943 (Colo. App. 2006).

Any relief for alleged breach of contract for employer's failure to pay disability and medical benefits on a timely basis and to provide adequate medical treatment must be obtained exclusively through the workers' compensation scheme. Employee may not avoid the Workers' Compensation Act's exclusivity provisions merely by framing his claim as one for breach of contract. The damages employee sought are the very benefits provided by the act. McKelvy v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 983 P.2d 42 (Colo. App. 1998).

If an injury comes within the coverage of the act, a common law action is barred even though a particular element of damages may not be provided as compensation. McKelvy v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 983 P.2d 42 (Colo. App. 1998).

Trial court correctly determined it lacked jurisdiction over breach of contract claim since the act provides a comprehensive and exclusive remedy for that claim. McKelvy v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 983 P.2d 42 (Colo. App. 1998).

Statutes of this character are to be liberally construed to the end that their beneficent purpose may be accomplished. Indus. Comm'n v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 64 Colo. 480, 174 P. 589 (1918); Univ. of Denver v. Nemeth, 127 Colo. 385, 257 P.2d 423 (1953).

The workmen's compensation statute must be liberally construed to effectuate its humanitarian purpose of assisting injured workers. Deterts v. Times Publ'g Co., 38 Colo. App. 48, 552 P.2d 1033 (1976).

The workmen's compensation act is to be broadly and liberally construed to achieve its salutary purposes. Stewart v. United States, 716 F.2d 755 (10th Cir. 1982), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1018, 105 S. Ct. 432, 83 L. Ed.2d 359 (1984).

However, rule of liberal construction does not lessen degree of proof. A claimant in a worker's compensation case has the burden of proving entitlement to benefits by a preponderance of the evidence and the court of appeals' statement that "any reasonable doubt as to whether a compensable injury arises out of and in the course of employment must be resolved in favor of a claimant" is an incorrect statement of the burden of proof because it creates a virtual presumption of compensability. City of Boulder v. Streeb, 706 P.2d 786 (Colo. 1985).

But the intent is to make the industry responsible for industrial accidents only, and not those resulting from hazards common to all. Indus. Comm'n v. Anderson, 69 Colo. 147, 169

P. 135 (1917); Cason v. Am. Brake Shoe & Foundry Co., 32 F. Supp. 680 (D. Colo. 1940).

Meaning of "accidents". In workmen's compensation acts, injuries are designated "accidents" to distinguish them from intentional injuries and injuries caused by disease. To constitute an accidental injury, it is not necessary that there should be anything extraordinary occurring in or about the work itself, such as slipping, or falling, or being hit. Central Sur. & Ins. Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 84 Colo. 481, 271 P. 617 (1928); Keating v. Indus. Comm'n, 105 Colo. 155, 95 P.2d 821 (1939); Gates v. Central City Opera House Ass'n, 107 Colo. 93, 108 P.2d 880 (1940); Indus. Comm'n v. La Foret Camps, 125 Colo. 503, 245 P.2d 459 (1952); Indus. Comm'n v. Corwin Hosp., 126 Colo. 358, 250 P.2d 135 (1952); J. W. Metz Lumber Co. v. Taylor, 134 Colo. 249, 302 P.2d 521 (1956); Wesco Elec. Co. v. Shook, 143 Colo. 382, 353 P.2d 743 (1960).

1975 amendment broadened scope of compensable injuries. The 1975 amendment, replacing the word "accident" wherever it occurred with "injury" and explicitly including a reference to occupational diseases, had the effect of broadening the scope of compensable injuries under the workmen's compensation act. Kandt v. Evans, 645 P.2d 1300 (Colo. App. 1982); CF & I Steel Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 650 P.2d 1332 (Colo. App. 1982).

Injury compensable whether "accident" or "occupational disease". A claimant is entitled to compensation if he sustains an injury under the conditions set forth in this section, and it is immaterial whether the injury was an accident as defined in § 8-41-108 (1) or an occupational disease as defined in § 8-41-108 (3). CF & I Steel Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 650 P.2d 1332 (Colo. App. 1982).

An accident found to occur at a "definite time", "unexpected" and "unintended", is an accidental injury under the compensation act. Indus. Comm'n v. Corwin Hosp., 126 Colo. 358, 250 P.2d 135 (1952); J.W. Metz Lumber Co. v. Taylor, 134 Colo. 249, 302 P.2d 521 (1956); Martin Marietta Corp. v. Faulk, 158 Colo. 441, 407 P.2d 348 (1965).

Under the workmen's compensation law by the term "injury" is meant, not only an injury the means or cause of which is an accident, but also an injury which is itself an accident. Carroll v. Indus. Comm'n, 69 Colo. 473, 195 P. 1097 (1921); Indus. Comm'n v. La Foret Camps, 125 Colo. 503, 245 P.2d 459 (1952); J.W. Metz Lumber Co. v. Taylor, 134 Colo. 249, 302 P.2d 521 (1956); Wesco Elec. Co. v. Shook, 143 Colo. 382, 353 P.2d 743 (1960).

Injuries held accidents. Indus. Comm'n v. Swanson, 93 Colo. 354, 26 P.2d 107 (1933); Indus. Comm'n v. Ule, 97 Colo. 253, 48 P.2d 803 (1935); Gates v. Central City Opera House Ass'n, 107 Colo. 93, 108 P.2d 880 (1940);

Indus. Comm'n v. Hayden Coal Co., 113 Colo. 62, 155 P.2d 158 (1944); Indus. Comm'n v. La Foret Camps, 125 Colo. 503, 245 P.2d 459 (1952); Indus. Comm'n v. Corwin Hosp., 126 Colo. 358, 250 P.2d 135 (1952); J. W. Metz Lumber Co. v. Taylor, 134 Colo. 249, 302 P.2d 521 (1956); City & County of Denver v. Pollard, 160 Colo. 306, 417 P.2d 231 (1966).

But the loss of voice of an employee resulting from emotional stress and strain because of differences with his supervisor is not an accident arising out of and in the course of employment within the meaning of the workmen's compensation act. Classen v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co., 153 Colo. 570, 387 P.2d 264 (1963).

Subsection (2) applies not only to a single traumatic event, but also to multiple traumatic events. Therefore, it applies to a series of stressful incidents. McCallum v. Dana's Housekeeping, 940 P.2d 1022 (Colo. App. 1996).

Accident must be traceable to a definite time, place, and cause. An accident under the various workmen's compensation acts, must be traceable to a definite time, place, and cause; the occurrence constituting an accident must be unexpected. Prouse v. Indus. Comm'n, 69 Colo. 382, 194 P. 625 (1920); Peer v. Indus. Comm'n, 94 Colo. 227, 29 P.2d 636 (1934); Martin Marietta Corp. v. Faulk, 158 Colo. 441, 407 P.2d 348 (1965).

Lack of causal connection may be asserted at any time. In a dispute over medical benefits that arises after the filing of a general admission of liability, an employer generally can assert, based on subsequent medical reports, that the claimant did not establish the threshold requirement of a direct causal relationship between the on-the-job injury and the need for medical treatment. Snyder v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 942 P.2d 1337 (Colo. App. 1997).

However, the time of the accident is only required to be reasonably definite to support an award. Gates v. Central City Opera House Ass'n, 107 Colo. 93, 108 P.2d 880 (1940); Great Am. Indem. Co. v. State Comp. Ins. Fund, 108 Colo. 323, 116 P.2d 919 (1941).

On the other hand, an "occupational disease" is acquired in the usual and ordinary course of employment and is recognized from common experience to be incidental thereto. City & County of Denver v. Moore, 31 Colo. App. 310, 504 P.2d 367 (1972).

Evidence not bringing injury within definition of "occupational disease". Great Am. Indem. Co. v. State Comp. Ins. Fund, 108 Colo. 323, 116 P.2d 919 (1941); City & County of Denver v. Moore, 31 Colo. App. 310, 504 P.2d 367 (1972).

Written testimony from a physician or psychologist is sufficient, subject to the ability of any party on request to cross-examine at a hearing or a deposition the professional who authored the written material that the claimant presents. Colo. Dept. of Labor & Employment v. Esser, 30 P.3d 189 (Colo. 2001).

The second clause of the "mental impairment" definition in subsection (2)(a) requires the injury to consist of a "psychologically traumatic event that is generally outside of a worker's usual experience and would evoke significant symptoms of distress in a worker in similar circumstances". Expert testimony is necessary to prove that the event was psychologically traumatic. Whether the event was generally outside of a worker's usual experience and would evoke significant symptoms of distress in a worker in similar circumstances may be proved by lay evidence, expert evidence, or both. Davison v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 84 P.3d 1023 (Colo. 2004); Loveland Police Dept. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 141 P.3d 943 (Colo. App. 2006).

Expert is not required to use the term "psychologically traumatic event"; rather there must be a presentation of sufficient facts such that the ALJ can find there existed a psychologically traumatic event or events. Loveland Police Dept. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 141 P.3d 943 (Colo. App. 2006).

Sufficient evidence must show that the "psychologically traumatic event" was unique and outside of a worker's usual experience. Claimants, however, need not show the psychologically traumatic event would cause identical significant symptoms of distress in similarly situated workers. Loveland Police Dept. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 141 P.3d 943 (Colo. App. 2006).

"Medical impairment benefits" in subsection (2)(b) means awards for medical impairment benefits, which by definition in § 8-42-107 (1)(a) and (8)(a), are payable for permanent disability. City of Thornton v. Replogle, 873 P.2d 30 (Colo. App. 1993).

Subsection (2)(b) was construed to mean that award for medical impairment benefits is limited but that award for temporary disability benefits is not, and judge may reduce potential award of medical impairment benefits by amounts that claimant may have received as temporary disability benefits. City of Thornton v. Replogle, 873 P.2d 30 (Colo. App. 1993).

However, combined amount of temporary disability benefits and permanent partial disability benefits is limited by § 8-42-107.5. City of Thornton v. Replogle, 873 P.2d 30 (Colo. App. 1993).

Twelve-week limitation on receipt of medical impairment workers' compensation benefits for mental impairment claim does not apply to temporary disability benefits. Rendon v. United Airlines, 881 P.2d 482 (Colo. App. 1994).

Twelve-week limitation on medical impairment benefits in subsection (2)(b) does not apply to death benefits. Death benefits are distinct from wage loss and disability benefits, and the limitation on medical impairment disability benefits applies to those cases in which disability benefits are payable to an eligible claimant, not to cases in which a claimant seeks death benefits. Loveland Police Dept. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 141 P.3d 943 (Colo. App. 2006).

Twelve-week limitation on mental impairment benefits is not reduced by TTD benefits for physical injury. Subsection (2)(b), with its offset requirement, is clearly limited in scope to benefits paid as the result of mental impairment only. Sears Distribution Ctr. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 104 P.3d 313 (Colo. App. 2004).

A crime of violence did not occur when a police officer was bitten while trying to restrain a man suffering from a seizure disorder, since the seizure prevented the man from acting with conscious awareness of what he was doing. Thus, police officer was barred from receiving medical impairment benefits in excess of the limitation of 12 weeks under the exception for victims of crimes of violence in subsection (2)(c). Bralish v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 81 P.3d 1091 (Colo. App. 2003).

Compensation can be awarded for personal injuries only. London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 80 Colo. 162, 249 P. 642 (1926).

A wooden leg is not a part of a man's person. A wooden leg is a man's property, not part of his person, and no compensation can be awarded for its injury. London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 80 Colo. 162, 249 P. 642 (1926).

There are separate and distinct limitations placed on temporary and permanent disability benefits for mental impairment. Permanent disability benefits are limited to 12 weeks while temporary disability benefits are limited by maximum medical improvement. City of Thornton v. Replogle, 888 P.2d 782 (Colo. 1995).

Fear and anxiety not compensable. Fear and anxiety caused by the prospect of an operation to correct a compensable injury are not compensable. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 116 Colo. 98, 179 P.2d 973 (1947).

And negligence of employee contributing to the injury does not bar him from relief. Ocean Accident & Guar. Corp. v. Pallaro, 66 Colo. 190, 180 P. 95 (1919).

In addition, a preexisting disease will not render noncompensable an injury received under conditions which would otherwise make it compensable. Allen v. Gettler, 94 Colo. 528, 30 P.2d 1117 (1934); Indus. Comm'n v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co., 128 Colo. 411, 262 P.2d 926 (1953); J.W. Metz Lumber Co. v. Taylor, 134 Colo. 249, 302 P.2d 521 (1956); Vanadium Corp. of Am. v. Sargent, 134 Colo. 555, 307 P.2d 454 (1957); Indus. Comm'n v. Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp., 135 Colo. 307, 310 P.2d 717 (1957); Indus. Comm'n v. Newton Lumber & Mfg. Co., 135 Colo. 594, 314 P.2d 297 (1957); Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 152 Colo. 25, 380 P.2d 28 (1963); State v. Richards, 158 Colo. 155, 405 P.2d 675 (1965); Martin Marietta Corp. v. Faulk, 158 Colo. 441, 407 P.2d 348 (1965); Gen. Cable Co. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 878 P.2d 118 (Colo. App. 1994).

For compensation is not dependent on the state of an employee's health or his freedom from constitutional weakness or latent tendency. Peter Kiewit Sons' Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 124 Colo. 217, 236 P.2d 296 (1951); State v. Richards, 158 Colo. 155, 405 P.2d 675 (1965).

The right to compensation for an injury springs into being where the necessary employer-employee relationship exists, and both the service being performed and the injury sustained arise out of and in the course of employment. Johnson v. Indus. Comm'n, 137 Colo. 591, 328 P.2d 384 (1958).

For the liability of an employer under the workmen's compensation act is predicated on relationship. Froid v. Knowles, 95 Colo. 223, 36 P.2d 156 (1934).

Thus, one not an employer or employee does not share in its burdens or benefits. Froid v. Knowles, 95 Colo. 223, 36 P.2d 156 (1934).

But ignorance of employee as to who was his employer will not of itself prevent compensation. Bukowich v. Ford Motor Co., 99 Colo. 56, 59 P.2d 470 (1936).

But where state compensation insurance fund insurance policy does not afford coverage to law firm for employee performing construction work at the direction of employer, state fund is properly dismissed as a party in the case. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Dean, 689 P.2d 1146 (Colo. App. 1984).

To justify recovery under the workmen's compensation law the one essential element is that a substantial portion of the work must be done in this state, but with this must be combined either an accident in Colorado or a contract in Colorado. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 99 Colo. 280, 61 P.2d 1033 (1936).

The clause "inclusive of any temporary disability benefits" in subsection (2)(b) does not limit temporary disability benefits for mental impairment to twelve weeks. City of Thornton v. Replogle, 888 P.2d 782 (Colo. 1995).

The law of the place of contract controls the rights and liabilities both of the employer and employee. Indus. Comm'n v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 64 Colo. 480, 174 P. 589 (1918).

Thus, when contract is made in this state recovery may be had under this act for accidental death in another state. Indus. Comm'n v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 64 Colo. 480, 174 P. 589 (1918); Hall v. Indus. Comm'n, 77 Colo. 338, 235 P. 1073 (1925); Home Ins. Co. v. Hepp, 91 Colo. 495, 15 P. 2d 1082 (1932).

For the workmen's compensation act has extraterritorial effect. Hall v. Indus. Comm'n, 77 Colo. 338, 235 P. 1073 (1925).

And there is no reason for distinction as to the place of performance of the principal portion of the services. Home Ins. Co. v. Hepp, 91 Colo. 495, 15 P.2d 1082 (1932).

So that employee who is unsuccessful in claim for compensation in other state may proceed under this act. Where an injured employee claims, and was awarded compensation by the industrial commission and thereafter elected to make claim for compensation for his injuries under the industrial act of another state and asked that payments under the Colorado award be discontinued, which request was granted, the commission did not thereby lose jurisdiction, and the employee, having been unsuccessful in his application for compensation in the other state, may proceed under the Colorado act. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 99 Colo. 280, 61 P.2d 1033 (1936).

Where employee is paid for injury he has no independent action against employer for alleged malpractice of its physician. Hennig v. Crested Butte Anthracite Mining Co., 92 Colo. 459, 21 P.2d 1115 (1933).

Statement of director not a finding of disability caused by accident. Di Gregorio v. Monroe Coal Co., 98 Colo. 267, 55 P.2d 715 (1936).

A sexual assault involving pinching is a physical injury within the meaning of this section, and therefore claim did not fall within the mental impairment provision's requirement of testimony by a licensed physician or psychologist. Oberle v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 919 P.2d 918 (Colo. App. 1996).

Applied in Greer v. Intercole Automation, Inc., 553 F. Supp. 275 (D. Colo. 1982).

The purpose of the workmen's compensation act is to afford protection to employees injured from causes arising out of and during the course of their employment. Vanadium Corp. of Am. v. Sargent, 134 Colo. 555, 307 P.2d 454 (1957); Archer v. Farmer Bros. Co., 70 P.3d 495 (Colo. App. 2002), aff'd on other grounds, 90 P.3d 228 (Colo. 2004).

And whether employee is acting within scope of employment is determined from surrounding circumstances. Taylor v. Saunders, 71 Colo. 160, 204 P. 608 (1922); New Jersey Fid. & Plate Glass Ins. Co. v. Patterson, 86 Colo. 580, 284 P. 334 (1929); Chaney v. Indus. Comm'n, 120 Colo. 111, 207 P.2d 816 (1949); Archer v. Farmer Bros. Co., 70 P.3d 495 (Colo. App. 2002), aff'd on other grounds, 90 P.3d 228 (Colo. 2004).

Colorado courts have repeatedly emphasized that the determination of whether the injuries arose out of and in the course of an employment relationship is largely dependent upon the facts surrounding the injury in question. Bennett v. Furr's Cafeterias, Inc., 549 F. Supp. 887 (D. Colo. 1982).

For this section requires an employee to be doing the duty which he is employed to perform. Indus. Comm'n v. Nissen, 84 Colo. 19, 267 P. 791 (1928).

However, activity not required to be strict obligation of employment or confer specific benefit on the employer. An activity arises out of and in the course of employment when it is sufficiently interrelated to the conditions and circumstances under which the employee usually performs his job functions that the activity may reasonably be characterized as an incident of employment. City of Boulder v. Streeb, 706 P.2d 786 (Colo. 1985); Matter of Death of McLaughlin, 728 P.2d 337 (Colo. App. 1986); Banks v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 794 P.2d 1062 (Colo. App. 1990); Panera Bread, LLC v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 141 P.3d 970 (Colo. App. 2006).

So that the right to compensation for an injury exists when both the service being performed and the injury sustained shall arise out of and in the course of the employment. Indus. Comm'n v. Anderson, 69 Colo. 147, 169 P. 135 (1917); Indus. Comm'n v. Rocky Mt. Fuel Co., 107 Colo. 226, 110 P.2d 654 (1941); Alexander Film Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 136 Colo. 486, 319 P.2d 1074 (1957); Johnson v. Indus. Comm'n, 137 Colo. 591, 328 P.2d 384 (1958); Divelbiss v. Indus. Comm'n, 140 Colo. 452, 344 P.2d 1084

(1959); State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Walter, 143 Colo. 549, 354 P.2d 591 (1960); Silver Eng'r Works, Inc. v. Simmons, 180 Colo. 309, 505 P.2d 966 (1973).

Totality of the circumstances must be examined in each case to see whether there is a sufficient nexus between the employment and the injury so that it may be said that the accident occurred within the scope of employment. City & County of Denver Sch. Dist. No. 1 v. Indus. Comm'n, 196 Colo. 131, 581 P.2d 1162 (1978); Stewart v. United States, 716 F.2d 755 (10th Cir. 1982), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1018, 105 S. Ct. 432, 83 L. Ed.2d 359 (1984); Perry v. Crawford & Co., 677 P.2d 416 (Colo. App. 1983); Triad Painting Co. v. Blair, 812 P.2d 638 (Colo. 1991); Loveland Police Dept. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 141 P.3d 943 (Colo. App. 2006).

Totality of circumstances in each case must be considered in determining whether injury arose out of and in the course of employment. Younger v. City & County of Denver, 810 P.2d 647 (Colo. 1991).

A claim for compensation for mental impairment resulting from harassment by a co-worker may be compensable, even if the dispute does not center upon work-related issues, if the work brought the employees together and created the relation and conditions resulting in the dispute. Moorhead Mach. & Boiler v. Del Valle, 934 P.2d 861 (Colo. App. 1996).

In order to be compensable under the Workers' Compensation Act, an injury incurred by an employee must arise out of and in the course of the employee's employment. Price v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 919 P.2d 207 (Colo. 1996).

In workers' compensation law, the terms "in the course of" and "arising out of" are not synonymous. Popovich v. Irlando, 811 P.2d 379 (Colo. 1991); Panera Bread, LLC v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 141 P.3d 970 (Colo. App. 2006).

An activity arises out of and in the course of employment when it is sufficiently interrelated to the conditions and circumstances under which the employee generally performs his job functions that the activity may reasonably be characterized as an incident of employment, although the activity itself is not a strict employment requirement and does not confer an express benefit on the employer. Price v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 919 P.2d 207 (Colo. 1996).

Meaning of term "arise out of". To "arise out of" the employment, unmistakably means that the cause of the accident was at all times "in" the employment. It could not come out of it, unless it was first in it. Rocky Mt. Fuel Co. v. Kruzic, 94 Colo. 398, 30 P.2d 868 (1934).

The expression "arising out of" refers to the origin or cause of the injury. Deterts v. Times Publ'g Co., 38 Colo. App. 48, 552 P.2d 1033 (1976); Kirk v. Smith, 674 F. Supp. 803 (D. Colo. 1987); Price v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 908 P.2d 136 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd, 919 P.2d 207 (Colo. 1996); City of Northglenn v. Eltrich, 908 P.2d 139 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd sub. nom. Price v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 919 P.2d 207 (Colo. 1996).

"Positional-risk" or "but for" test applies to determine whether injury "arises out of" employment when injury does not have inherent connection with employment. Stamper v. Hiteshew, 797 P.2d 784 (Colo. App. 1990).

Factual question existed as to whether sexual assault on female employee by employer "arose out of" employment, making injury compensable and employer accordingly immune from suit. Stamper v. Hiteshew, 797 P.2d 784 (Colo. App. 1990).

Except in the most unusual cases, acts of harassment are highly personal and fall into the category of inherently private assaults that do not arise from employment. As a matter of policy, sexual harassment is not a risk inherently connected to the employment relationship. Therefore, sexual harassment claims are not barred by the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act. Horodyskyj v. Karanian, 32 P.3d 470 (Colo. 2001).

"Arises out of and in the course of an employee's employment" means that there must be a nexus between a claimant's injury and his conditions of employment. There is no requirement that the conditions of employment be the direct cause of the event that caused the injury. Ramsdell v. Horn, 781 P.2d 150 (Colo. App. 1989).

An injury may be connected with the employment and therefore may arise out of that employment if the employee's work places him in a position in which he ultimately sustains that injury, even though the direct cause of that injury is not employment-related. To be considered an employment hazard for this purpose, the employment condition must not be a ubiquitous one; it must be a special hazard not generally encountered. There is general agreement that an employee who works at a height above ground is subjected to a special hazard. Ramsdell v. Horn, 781 P.2d 150 (Colo. App. 1989).

Test is whether acts of employee at time of injury were solely for his own benefit, not whether the benefits to the employer are incidental or primary; if the acts were for his sole benefit, then his injury does not arise out of his employment. Brogger v. Kezer, 626 P.2d 700 (Colo. App. 1980); Kater v. Indus. Comm'n, 728 P.2d 746 (Colo. App. 1986).

Thus, accident "arises out of" employment where there is a causal connection between work conditions and injury. Gates Rubber Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 112 Colo. 480, 150 P.2d 301 (1944); J. W. Metz Lumber Co. v. Taylor, 134

Colo. 249, 302 P.2d 521 (1956); Indus. Comm'n v. London & Lancashire Indem. Co., 135 Colo. 372, 311 P.2d 705 (1957); Indus. Comm'n v. Havens, 136 Colo. 111, 314 P.2d 698 (1957); Claimants in re Death of Bennett v. Durango Furn. Mart, 136 Colo. 529, 319 P.2d 494 (1957); Miller v. Denver Post, Inc., 137 Colo. 61, 322 P.2d 661 (1958); Indus. Comm'n v. Johnson Pontiac, Inc., 140 Colo. 160, 344 P.2d 186 (1959); Wesco Elec. Co. v. Shook, 143 Colo. 382, 353 P.2d 743 (1960); State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Walter, 143 Colo. 549, 354 P.2d 591 (1960); Martin Marietta Corp. v. Faulk, 158 Colo. 441, 407 P.2d 348 (1965); Younger v. City & County of Denver, 810 P.2d 647 (Colo. 1991); Triad Painting Co. v. Blair, 812 P.2d 638 (Colo. 1991).

An injury arises out of employment when it has its origin in an employee's work-related functions and is sufficiently related thereto as to be considered part of the employee's service to the employer in connection with the contract of employment. Popovich v. Irlando, 811 P.2d 379 (Colo. 1991); Triad Painting Co. v. Blair, 812 P.2d 638 (Colo. 1991); Madden v. Mountain West Fabricators, 977 P.2d 861 (Colo. 1999); Panera Bread, LLC v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 141 P.3d 970 (Colo. App. 2006).

Incident leading to claimant's injury arose out of claimant's employment as a matter of law where the entire incident occurred on the employer's premises, the parties were brought into contact through their employment, and the only alleged source of the animosity giving rise to the incident was events occurring as a result of the claimant's employment. Ventura v. Albertson's, Inc., 856 P.2d 35 (Colo. App. 1992).

If travel is a substantial part of the employee's service to the employer, then it is sufficient by itself to demonstrate a causal connection between the employee's scope of employment and the injury. Staff Adm'rs, Inc. v. Reynolds, 977 P.2d 866 (Colo. 1999).

Driving to work does not generally qualify as service "arising out of and in the course of" employment. Whether travel qualifies as such service depends upon the context of the employment. The court should consider the following variables when determining whether travel qualifies as such service: (1) Whether the travel occurred during working hours; (2) whether the travel occurred on or off the employer's premises; (3) whether the travel was contemplated by the employment contact; and (4) whether the obligations of conditions of employment created a "zone of special danger" out of which the injury arose. Madden v. Mountain West Fabricators, 977 P.2d 861 (Colo. 1999).

Injuries sustained in car accident which resulted from claimant's epileptic seizure are compensable because claimant's employment subjected her to the additional risk of vehicular travel and she was driving with the knowledge and permission of both her doctor and employer. Nat'l Health Labs. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 844 P.2d 1259 (Colo. App. 1992).

Injuries which result from discharge do not arise until after the employment relationship is terminated. Thus, they do not arise out of or in the course of employment and therefore are not barred by the act. Smith v. Colo. Interstate Gas Co., 777 F. Supp. 854 (D. Colo. 1991); Golightly - Howell v. OCAW Intern. Union, 806 F. Supp. 921 (D. Colo. 1992) (decided under former § 8-52-102 prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the Workers' Compensation Act).

On the other hand, the term "in the course of" relates more particularly to the time, place, and circumstances under which the injury occurred. Indus. Comm'n v. London & Lancashire Indem. Co., 135 Colo. 372, 311 P.2d 705 (1957); Deterts v. Times Publ'g Co., 38 Colo. App. 48, 552 P.2d 1033 (1976); Triad Painting Co. v. Blair, 812 P.2d 638 (Colo. 1991).

The term "in the course of" refers to the time, place, and activity at the time of the injury. Kirk v. Smith, 674 F. Supp. 803 (D. Colo. 1987).

For an injury to be found as occurring within the "course of employment", it must be established that the injury occurred both within the time and place limits of the employment relationship and during an activity that had some connection with the employee's job-related functions. Popovich v. Irlando, 811 P.2d 379 (Colo. 1991); Panera Bread, LLC v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 141 P.3d 970 (Colo. App. 2006).

The "course of employment" requirement is satisfied when it is shown that the injury occurred within the time and place limits of the employment relation and during an activity that had some connection with the employee's job-related functions. An injury "arises out of" employment when it has its origin in an employee's work-related functions and is sufficiently related thereto as to be considered part of the employee's service to the employer in connection with the contract of employment. Popovich v. Irlando, 811 P.2d 379 (Colo. 1991); Wild West Radio, Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 905 P.2d 6 (Colo. 1995).

The course of employment requirement is satisfied when it is shown that the injury occurred within the time and place limits of the employment relation and during an activity that had some connection with the employee's job-related functions. Popovich v. Irlando, 811 P.2d 379 (Colo. 1991); Triad Painting Co. v. Blair, 812 P.2d 638 (Colo. 1991).

Although employer was aware of employee's propensity to seizures, that does not per se establish that the injuries he suffered as a result of a seizure occurring at work arose from the employment. Gates Rubber Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 705 P.2d 6 (Colo. App. 1985).

A regulation cannot make that which is clearly not incident to employment fall within the course of employment. Rogers v. Indus. Comm'n, 40 Colo. App. 313, 574 P.2d 116 (1978).

Consequently, "arising out of" and "in the course of" are not synonymous, so that a claimant must meet both requirements where, as under the workmen's compensation act, the conditions are conjunctive. Indus. Comm'n v. London & Lancashire Indem. Co., 135 Colo. 372, 311 P.2d 705 (1957); Younger v. City and County of Denver, 810 P.2d 647 (Colo. 1991).

The terms "arising out of" and "in the course of" are not interchangeable. An injury "arises out of" employment when it both has its origin in an employee's work-related functions and is sufficiently related to those functions such that it can be said to be part of the employee's service to the employer in connection with the contract of employment. Popovich v. Irlando, 811 P.2d 379 (Colo. 1991).

Employer's personal delivery of paycheck and termination notice to employee at home, while employee was on sick leave and not performing services, "arose out of" but was not "in the course of" employment. Archer v. Farmer Bros. Co., 70 P.3d 495 (Colo. App. 2002), aff'd on other grounds, 90 P.3d 228 (Colo. 2004).

The term "course of employment" refers to the time, place, and circumstances under which the injury occurred while an injury "arises out of employment" when the injury has its origin in work-related functions. L.E.L. Const. v. Goode, 849 P.2d 876 (Colo. App. 1992).

To come within the classification of "course of conduct", it must be shown that such conduct is such a continuous practice as to constitute a regular course of conduct. An occasional instance does not establish such a custom, because the proof of such a custom must be clear and convincing as to duration. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 127 Colo. 225, 255 P.2d 961 (1953).

Whether horseplay is a deviation from employment is determined by a four-part test: (1) The extent and seriousness of the deviation; (2) the completeness of the deviation; (3) the extent to which the practice of horseplay had become an accepted part of the employment; and (4) the extent to which the nature of the employment may be expected to include some horseplay. Lori's Fam. Din., Inc. v. Indus. Claims Appeals Office, 907 P.2d 715 (Colo. App. 1995).

It is unnecessary to prove all four parts of the test to determine deviation; rather the four-part test serves merely as an objective method of analysis. The third and fourth parts of the test may be viewed merely as specific methods of proving that a claimant's actions became part of the employment. Panera Bread, LLC v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 141 P.3d 970 (Colo. App. 2006).

Compensability is not precluded for an isolated incident of horseplay if the incident does not constitute a substantial deviation from the general course of employment. Panera Bread, LLC v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 141 P.3d 970 (Colo. App. 2006).

If at the time of the injury the employee was doing what he expressly or impliedly was directed by his superiors to do, and the latter were vested with the authority to give him directions, then he was acting within the course of his employment. Walsh v. Indus. Comm'n, 34 Colo. App. 371, 527 P.2d 1180 (1974).

Application of positional-risk test proper to determine whether employee, in course of employment, was reasonably required to be at a particular place at a particular time and met with a neutral force which is neither personal to the injured employee nor distinctly associated with the employment. Younger v. City & County of Denver, 810 P.2d 647 (Colo. 1991).

Employer directions to employees for purposes of determining compensability. Such directions fall into one of two categories: (1) Those which limit the sphere of the employment relationship; or (2) those which simply regulate the employee's conduct while he is engaged in such employment. A general directive disclosing no intent to cause employment cessation for violation of the directive, without any other evidence of the purpose or effect of the direction upon claimant's general employment responsibilities, is insufficient to allow the conclusion that the direction limited the sphere of claimant's employment. Ramsdell v. Horn, 781 P.2d 150 (Colo. App. 1989).

Injury while performing acts for mutual benefit of employer and employee. An injury suffered by an employee while performing acts for the mutual benefit of the employer and the employee is usually compensable. Deterts v. Times Publ'g Co., 38 Colo. App. 48, 552 P.2d 1033 (1976).

When some advantage to an employer results from the employee's conduct, his act cannot be regarded as purely personal and wholly unrelated to employment. Deterts v. Times Publ'g Co., 38 Colo. App. 48, 552 P.2d 1033 (1976).

Emergency or rescue activity is within course of employment if the employer has an interest in the rescue. Tri-State Commodities, Inc. v. Stewart, 689 P.2d 712 (Colo. App. 1984).

But the employee need not necessarily be engaged in the actual performance of work at the moment of injury in order to be entitled to compensation. It is enough if he is upon his employer's premises occupying himself consistently with his contract of hire in some manner pertaining to or incidental to his employment. Univ. of Denver v. Nemeth, 127 Colo. 385, 257

P.2d 423 (1953); Divelbiss v. Indus. Comm'n, 140 Colo. 452, 344 P.2d 1084 (1959); Packaging Corp. of Am. v. Roberts, 169 Colo. 316, 455 P.2d 652 (1969).

The mere fact that the injury befell the claimant at the moment when he was not performing labor for his employer does not necessarily prove that the accident did not arise out of or in the course of the employment. Deterts v. Times Publ'g Co., 38 Colo. App. 48, 552 P.2d 1033 (1976).

Injuries which occur off the work premises while employee is on a paid break raise the issues whether the employer retained control during the break period and whether the activity giving rise to the injuries constituted a deviation from employment so substantial as to remove it from the employment relationship. Roache v. Indus. Comm'n, 729 P.2d 991 (Colo. 1986).

Factors to be considered are duration of break, whether employment contract provides for break, whether break is a paid interval, whether off-premises location is close to employment site, whether employer permits off-premises breaks, and whether there are limitations on where employees go during break. Roache v. Indus. Comm'n, 729 P.2d 991 (Colo. 1986).

Where employee injured at convenience store, one block from work site, during a paid break, injuries arose out of and in the course of employment where employees were expressly permitted to go to such store because there were no vending machines or cafeteria on the employment premises. Roache v. Indus. Comm'n, 729 P.2d 991 (Colo. 1986).

Mere presence of company vehicle in driveway of employee's relative's home did not bring injury within the "course of employment" for purposes of this section. Archer v. Farmer Bros. Co., 70 P.3d 495 (Colo. App. 2002), aff'd on other grounds, 90 P.3d 228 (Colo. 2004).

In order to determine whether an injury suffered by an employee while engaging in an exercise program is compensable under the Workers' Compensation Act, a court should look at the following factors: (1) Whether the injury occurred during working hours; (2) whether the injury occurred on the employer's premises; (3) whether the employer initiated the employee's exercise program; (4) whether the employer exerted any control or direction over the employee's exercise program; and (5) whether the employer stood to benefit from the employee's exercise program. Price v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 919 P.2d 207 (Colo. 1996).

A second injury sustained by a claimant during a trip to obtain medical care or rehabilitation for a compensable injury is compensable. Because an employer is required to provide medical treatment and an injured employee is required to submit to it, a trip to the doctor's office becomes an implied part of the employment contract. Excel v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 860 P.2d 1393 (Colo. App. 1993); Turner v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 111 P.3d 534 (Colo. App. 2004).

The "quasi-course of employment doctrine" has been utilized to extend liability to subsequent injuries incurred in certain activities that take place outside the time and space limits of normal employment and would not be considered employment activities for usual purposes. Liability is extended because these activities would not have been undertaken but for the compensable injury and are an implied part of the employment contract. Schrieber v. Brown & Root, Inc., 888 P.2d 274 (Colo. App. 1993).

There was no error in the panel's conclusion that as a matter of law claimant was not entitled to benefits under the "quasi-course of employment doctrine" for injuries sustained during a trip to an unauthorized treatment provider since, although the trip may have been reasonable, it was not an implied condition or expectation of the claimant's employment. Schrieber v. Brown & Root, Inc., 888 P.2d 274 (Colo. App. 1993).

If the injury arises from something incident to the employment. Univ. of Denver v. Nemeth, 127 Colo. 385, 257 P.2d 423 (1953); State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Coleman, 155 Colo. 82, 392 P.2d 598 (1964).

Thus, injury comes within course of employment where, but for hazard of occupation, injury would not have happened. Indus. Comm'n v. Irvine, 72 Colo. 573, 212 P. 829 (1923); Ellerman v. Indus. Comm'n, 73 Colo. 20, 213 P. 120 (1923); Indus. Comm'n v. Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp., 135 Colo. 307, 310 P.2d 717 (1957); Alexander Film Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 136 Colo. 486, 319 P.2d 1074 (1957).

Even if risk or hazard is external to the employment. Indus. Comm'n v. London & Lancashire Indem. Co., 135 Colo. 372, 311 P.2d 705 (1957).

But where an employee is injured during a period of departure from his employment activities, he is not within the coverage and protection of the act. Gen. Plant Prot. Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 146 Colo. 191, 361 P.2d 138 (1961); Employers' Liab. Assurance Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 147 Colo. 309, 363 P.2d 646 (1961).

And where workman disobeys a rule or order limiting the sphere of employment, he cannot recover compensation. Indus. Comm'n v. Funk, 68 Colo. 467, 191 P. 125 (1920); Fouquet v. State Comp. Ins. Fund, 144 Colo. 240, 355 P.2d 943 (1960).

But may recover if the rule deals only with his conduct within the sphere of his employment. Indus. Comm'n v. Funk, 68 Colo. 467, 191 P. 125 (1920); Pacific Employers' Ins. Co.

v. Kirkpatrick, 111 Colo. 470, 143 P.2d 267 (1943).

And an employee does not step from the course of his employment when he allows one not an employee to drive a truck on a mission for the employer but is at the time in the course of his employment. Western Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Swort, 134 Colo. 421, 306 P.2d 661 (1957).

Furthermore, an employee is not entitled to compensation for a later accident due to an efficient intervening cause not arising out of and in course of employment. Post Printing & Publ'g Co. v. Erickson, 94 Colo. 382, 30 P.2d 327 (1934).

But if subsequent accident is attributed to the prior accident, it is compensable. Any subsequent natural development of an industrial injury, uninfluenced by an independent intervening cause, resulting in additional disability of an employee, should be attributed to the original accident and compensation awarded therefor. Post Printing & Publ'g Co. v. Erickson, 94 Colo. 382, 30 P.2d 327 (1934); Standard Metals Corp. v. Ball, 172 Colo. 510, 474 P.2d 622 (1970).

Injuries incurred in act of discharge. The act of discharging an employee is an integral part of the employment relationship, making injuries arising out of discharge casually connected to that employment. Alpine Roofing Co. v. Dalton, 36 Colo. App. 315, 539 P.2d 487 (1975).

Injuries within reasonable time of termination. Injuries incurred by an employee while leaving the premises, collecting pay, or getting his clothes or tools within a reasonable time after termination of the employment are within the course of employment, since they are normal incidents of the employment relation. Alpine Roofing Co. v. Dalton, 36 Colo. App. 315, 539 P.2d 487 (1975).

Claimant's injuries arose in the course of his employment where he had been discharged several minutes prior to an assault. Alpine Roofing Co. v. Dalton, 36 Colo. App. 315, 539 P.2d 487 (1975).

Acts of self-ministration held within scope of employment. Acts of self ministration, such as eating, obtaining lodging, and going to and from those places have been held incidental to and within the scope of employment of an employee required to be away from home on behalf of his employer. Archer Freight Lines v. Horn Transp., Inc., 32 Colo. App. 412, 514 P.2d 330 (1973).

Acts reasonably necessary for the employee's health are within the course of employment. Acts of ministration by a servant to himself, such as quenching his thirst, relieving his hunger, and protecting himself from excessive cold, performance of which while at work are reasonably necessary to his health and comfort, are incidents to his employment and acts of service therein within the workmen's compensation acts, though they are only indirectly conducive to the purpose of the employment. Consequently, no break in the employment is caused by the mere fact that the workman is ministering to his personal comforts or necessities, as by warming himself, or seeking shelter, or by leaving his work to relieve nature, or to procure a drink, refreshments, food, or fresh air, or to rest in the shade. Ocean Accident & Guar. Corp. v. Pallaro, 66 Colo. 190, 180 P. 95 (1919); Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 76 Colo. 84, 230 P. 394 (1924); Warner Constr. Co. v. Watkins, 107 Colo. 88, 108 P.2d 883 (1940); Indus. Comm'n v. Golden Cycle Corp., 126 Colo. 68, 246 P.2d 902 (1952); Univ. of Denver v. Nemeth, 127 Colo. 385, 257 P.2d 423 (1953); Divelbiss v. Indus. Comm'n, 140 Colo. 452, 344 P.2d 1084 (1959); Game & Fish Dept. v. Pardoe, 147 Colo. 363, 363 P.2d 1067 (1961); Silver Eng'r Works, Inc. v. Simmons, 30 Colo. App. 396, 495 P.2d 246 (1972). See Pub. Serv. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 80 Colo. 206, 249 P. 1094 (1926).

Therefore, an injury while eating lunch on the premises of an employer is compensable. Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 76 Colo. 84, 230 P. 394 (1924); Warner Constr. Co. v. Watkins, 107 Colo. 88, 108 P.2d 883 (1940); Indus. Comm'n v. Golden Cycle Corp., 126 Colo. 68, 246 P.2d 902 (1952); Divelbiss v. Indus. Comm'n, 140 Colo. 452, 344 P.2d 1084 (1959).

Because courts generally have been liberal in protecting workers during the noon hour if the injury occurs while the worker is doing what a person may reasonably do within a time during which the person is employed and at a place where he may reasonably be at that time. Indus. Comm'n v. Golden Cycle Corp., 126 Colo. 68, 246 P.2d 902 (1952).

Trips to and from a meal. Injuries sustained by teacher who leaves his place of employment to go to a restaurant to eat during his lunch hour are compensable under workmen's compensation act where the teacher was required to return to school that afternoon and there was no option of eating in the school cafeteria. City & County of Denver Sch. Dist. No. 1 v. Indus. Comm'n, 196 Colo. 131, 581 P.2d 1162 (1978).

But there must be a sufficient nexus between employment and injury. Off-premises lunchtime travel generally falls within the to and from work rule and is not compensable. For an injury occurring during such travel to fall within the scope of employment, there must be a sufficient nexus between the employment and the injury. Perry v. Crawford & Co., 677 P.2d 416 (Colo. App. 1983).

1982); Ventura v. Albertson's, Inc., 856 P.2d 35 (Colo. App. 1992).

Where employee was at a place where he might reasonably be at a time when he was employed doing what he might reasonably do, employee's injuries held to have occurred in the course of his employment. Portofino Apts. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 789 P.2d 1117 (Colo. App. 1990).

If the work of an employee creates the necessity for travel, he is in the course of his employment when on the road, although he may at the same time be serving some purpose of his own, and if he is injured during such a trip he, or his dependents, are entitled to compensation. O.P. Skaggs Co. v. Nixon, 101 Colo. 203, 72 P.2d 1102 (1937); Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 110 Colo. 422, 135 P.2d 140 (1943); Alexander Film Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 136 Colo. 486, 319 P.2d 1074 (1957); Lyttle v. State Comp. Ins. Fund, 137 Colo. 212, 322 P.2d 1049 (1958); Employers' Liab. Assurance Corp. v. Indus. Claimants in re Death of Cribbs, 165 Colo. 526, 440 P.2d 785 (1968); Pat's Power Tongs, Inc. v. Miller, 172 Colo. 541, 474 P.2d 613 (1970); Tatum-Reese Dev. Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 30 Colo. App. 149, 490 P.2d 94 (1971); Silver Eng'r Works, Inc. v. Simmons, 30 Colo. App. 396, 495 P.2d 246 (1972); Silver Eng'g Works, Inc. v. Simmons, 180 Colo. 309, 505 P.2d 966 (1973).

But in determining whether the risks of travel are also risks of the employment the decisive test must be whether it is the employment or something else that has sent the traveler forth upon the journey or brought exposure of its perils. Employers' Liab. Assurance Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 147 Colo. 309, 363 P.2d 646 (1961); Martin K. Eby Const. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 151 Colo. 320, 377 P.2d 745 (1963); Capital Chevrolet Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 159 Colo. 156, 410 P.2d 518 (1966).

When accident during employee's travel is within scope of employment. If an employee's travel is at the express or implied request of the employer, or if the travel confers a benefit on the employer beyond the sole fact of the employee's arrival, or if the employer makes provisions for the employee's transportation, then any disability resulting from an accident during that travel is within the scope of employment. Loffland Bros. v. Baca, 651 P.2d 431 (Colo. App. 1982); Staff Adm'rs, Inc. v. Reynolds, 977 P.2d 866 (Colo. 1999).

In any event, when an employee is required to travel away from home, the activities covered by workmen's compensation are enlarged as the employee has no choice but to eat, sleep, and conduct all his other activities away from his home. Silver Eng'r Works, Inc. v.

Simmons, 30 Colo. App. 396, 495 P.2d 246 (1972).

And the employer may not succeed in showing a deviation from the main objective while traveling by merely establishing that decedent's vehicle, at least momentarily, was proceeding in a direction opposite from his objective. Employers' Liab. Assurance Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 147 Colo. 309, 363 P.2d 646 (1961).

Where an employee, without express authority but with the intent of acting for the benefit of the employer, returned to his place of work after hours and was injured, his injury arose out of and in the course of his employment. Maint. Mgt., Inc. v. Tinkle, 40 Colo. App. 80, 570 P.2d 840 (1977).

When an employer does nothing more than fix an employee's general work time and the employer benefits from an employee's reasonable departure from schedule, he cannot argue that injuries sustained in the departure are not within the course of employment. Maint. Mgt., Inc. v. Tinkle, 40 Colo. App. 80, 570 P.2d 840 (1977).

Industrial claim appeals office correctly determined that claimant's injury arose out of and in the course of employment where claimant's injury occurred while claimant, who worked on an "as needed" basis, was voluntarily assisting in a repair of a piece of heavy equipment which furthered the interest of the employer even though the injury occurred two hours after the claimant had been told that he was no longer required to work. Butland v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 754 P.2d 422 (Colo. App. 1988).

Travel to required meeting after normal working hours. Where claimant was attending an off-premises dinner meeting, after normal working hours, under at least the implied direction of her employer, and travel to and from the meeting was a necessity, these special circumstances justify the determination that claimant's injuries while returning from the meeting were compensable. Dynalectron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 660 P.2d 915 (Colo. App. 1982).

Motorman asleep in car barn held to be acting within course of employment. Taylor v. Saunders, 71 Colo. 160, 204 P. 608 (1922).

As is a man who visits the home of another upon the instructions of his employer. London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. McCoy, 97 Colo. 13, 45 P.2d 900 (1935).

Or an employee who uses his own car to perform services for or at the direction of his employer remains in the course of his employment until he returns home. Indus. Comm'n v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 88 Colo. 82, 292 P. 229 (1930); Driscoll Constr. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 94 Colo. 568, 31 P.2d 491 (1934); Elec. Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 154 Colo. 491, 391 P.2d 677 (1964).

And police officer's injury arises out of and in course of city employment even though also employed by bank. The city employed an officer to enforce the law and authorized him to make arrests. His place of work was the entire territory within the municipal boundaries of the city. The officer was on duty at all times when he was performing the duties required by his employment. At the time of the accident, he was in his official uniform and was attempting to arrest a suspected bank robber in a public street. The accident in which the officer was injured was therefore one arising out of and in the course of his employment by the city, and he is therefore entitled to compensation as a city employee. The officer's claim to compensation is not defeated because he was also employed by the bank as a guard at the time of the accident. Dore v. City & County of Denver, 28 Colo. App. 324, 474 P.2d 190 (1970).

Injury to newsboy while storing bicycle on publishing company property. Where claimant was obligated to deliver all of his assigned newspapers within the two to three hour time span following his release from school and 6:00 p.m.; a bicycle was a necessary aid in the performance of his job-related activities, and the owner of the publishing company approved claimant's storing his bicycle during school hours on company property after acts of vandalism had occurred on the school grounds, claimant's injury, suffered while storing his bicycle, arose out of and occurred in the course of his employment and was compensable. Deterts v. Times Publ'g Co., 38 Colo. App. 48, 552 P.2d 1033 (1976).

Truck driver replacing old tires with new is within course of employment. Zelle v. Indus. Comm'n, 100 Colo. 116, 65 P.2d 1429 (1937).

As is illness from tick bite. Southern Colo. Power Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 118 Colo. 186, 193 P.2d 885 (1948).

Or injuries resulting from vaccination or inoculation. Indus. Comm'n v. Messinger, 116 Colo. 451, 181 P.2d 816 (1947).

Where an employee on duty suffers an injury caused by the playful action of a fellow employee, in which the injured employee is not a participant, such injury arises out of and in the course of employment and is compensable under pertinent provisions of the workmen's compensation act. Gates Rubber Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 112 Colo. 480, 150 P.2d 301 (1947); Indus. Comm'n v. Employers Cas. Co., 136 Colo. 396, 318 P.2d 216 (1957).

But where an employee while engaged in his usual employment was shot by another without any reason, as appeared by the record, it is held, under the disclosed facts, that the injury did not arise out of and in the course of the employment. Rocky Mt. Fuel Co. v. Kruzic, 94 Colo. 398, 30 P.2d 868 (1934).

There is no recovery where two employees step aside from their employment and indulge in gun play. McKnight v. Houck, 87 Colo. 234, 286 P. 279 (1930).

In addition, assaults by co-employees are not ordinarily considered as incidental to the employment and do not "arise out of employment". Wisdom v. Indus. Comm'n, 133 Colo. 266, 293 P.2d 967 (1956); Kirk v. Smith, 674 F. Supp. 803 (D. Colo. 1987).

However, injuries might be compensable if assault is reasonably anticipated. If an assault might reasonably be anticipated because of the general nature or character of the employment, then in some instances, controlled entirely by the facts presented, injuries received as a result thereof are compensable. Wisdom v. Indus. Comm'n, 133 Colo. 266, 293 P.2d 967 (1956).

But injuries compensable under the act include injuries arising from the intentional acts of a co-employee, as long as the requisite degree of job-relatedness is present. Bennett v. Furr's Cafeterias, Inc., 549 F. Supp. 887 (D. Colo. 1982), appeal dismissed, 455 U.S. 930, 102 S. Ct. 1415, 71 L. Ed.2d 639 (1982).

Co-employee immunity for intentional wrongs is strictly limited to injuries sustained where both the tortfeasor and the victim are acting in the course of their employment. Kandt v. Evans, 645 P.2d 1300 (Colo. 1982); Triad Painting Co. v. Blair, 812 P.2d 638 (Colo. 1991).

Dispositive issue was whether employee was acting in course of her employment, and not whether assaulting employees were acting in course of their employment. Stuart v. Frederick R. Ross Inv. Co., 773 P.2d 1107 (Colo. App. 1988).

But where the sexual assault of an employee by a co-employee did not arise from animosity or dispute that is imported into employment from the employee's domestic or private life, the assault arose out of the course of her employment and, therefore, worker's compensation was the exclusive remedy. In re Question Submitted by U.S. Ct. of Appeals, 759 P.2d 17 (Colo. 1988).

Injuries arising from assaults by co-employees have an inherent connection with employment conditions if they grow out of an argument over such conditions. In addition, even though the subject matter of the argument is a personal one, if it was the circumstance of their mutual employment that brought the participating employees together and created the relationship and condition that resulted in the dispute, any injuries are considered to be employment-related. Banks v. Indus. Claim Appeal Office, 794 P.2d 1062 (Colo. App. 1990); Ventura v. Albertson's, Inc., 856 P.2d 35 (Colo. App. 1992).

On the other hand, if a dispute between co-employees relates solely to a personal matter between the combatants, not arising from the employment relationship, any injuries resulting from that dispute have no nexus to the combatants' employment, do not arise out of employment, and are not, therefore, compensable. Banks v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 794 P.2d 1062 (Colo. App. 1990).

Inherently employment-related torts are those that have an inherent connection with employment and emanate from the duties of the job, while inherently private torts are those that originate in the private affairs of the claimant and tortfeasor and are unrelated to their respective employment functions. Triad Painting Co. v. Blair, 812 P.2d 638 (Colo. 1991).

For the purpose of the "arising out of employment" requirement of the Workers' Compensation Act, assaults upon employees can be divided into three categories: (1) Those with an "inherent connection" to employment such as a dispute over performance, pay, or termination; (2) those stemming from "inherently private" disputes imported into the employment from the claimant's domestic or private life and not exacerbated by the employment; and (3) those resulting from a "neutral force" such as random assaults. In re Question submitted by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 10th Circuit, 759 P.2d 17 (Colo. 1988); Triad Painting Co. v. Blair, 812 P.2d 638 (Colo. 1991).

An assault is compensable if it grew out of an argument over performance of work, possession of work tools or equipment, delivery of a paycheck, quitting or being terminated, or mediating between quarreling co-employees. In re Question submitted by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 10th Circuit, 759 P.2d 17 (Colo. 1988); Triad Painting Co. v. Blair, 812 P.2d 638 (Colo. 1991).

The Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado does not expressly authorize a defense against an initial aggressor in an altercation leading to an otherwise compensable injury. Triad Painting Co. v. Blair, 812 P.2d 638 (Colo. 1991).

Assault on employee by co-employee did not arise out of employment and therefore employee's tort claim against employer for hiring a rapist was not subject to the exclusive remedies of the act. Tolbert v. Martin Marietta Corp., 621 F. Supp. 1099 (D. Colo. 1985).

Where it appears that the plaintiff was specifically chosen as the victim in a sexual assault as a result of circumstances arising outside of the plaintiff's employment, the exclusivity provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act do not apply, and the dismissal of the plaintiff's common law claims is reversed. Patel v. Thomas, 793 P.2d 632 (Colo. App. 1990).

If plaintiff proves he was specifically targeted when subjected to racial and ethnic jokes, his tort claim will stand outside of the Workers' Compensation Act. Mass v. Martin Marietta Corp., 805 F. Supp. 1530 (D. Colo. 1992).

Teacher's injuries allegedly sustained from reprimand, harassment, retaliatory demotion, and assault by her superintendent did not arise out of her employment and therefore tort action for recovery of damages was not barred by Colorado Workmen's Compensation Act. Kirk v. Smith, 674 F. Supp. 803 (D. Colo. 1987).

Employees' claims of outrageous conduct based on federal pregnancy discrimination and sexual harassment statutes did not arise out of their employment and therefore were not barred by the Colorado Worker's Compensation Act. Donaldson v. Am. Banco Corp., Inc., 945 F. Supp. 1456 (D. Colo. 1996).

Injury not compensable where employee left his work at the request of a nine-year-old son of his employer. Chaney v. Indus. Comm'n, 120 Colo. 111, 207 P.2d 816 (1949).

Nor is injury sustained in submitting to blood test required by health regulation. Indus. Comm'n v. Messinger, 116 Colo. 451, 181 P.2d 816 (1947).

Injury in auto accident while returning from company baseball game does not arise out of employment. Indus. Comm'n v. Murphy, 102 Colo. 59, 76 P.2d 741 (1938).

But claimant is entitled to compensation where the claimant was required to play football in order to hold his job. Divellbiss v. Indus. Comm'n, 140 Colo. 452, 344 P.2d 1084 (1959).

Plaintiff's argument that he was reentering store as a customer rather than an employee when the altercation which resulted in plaintiff's injury occurred is unfounded. The fact that the employment premises were public and plaintiff could be an employee one minute and a customer the next was irrelevant because it is not the nature of the employment premises, but the nexus between the employment conditions and the injury, which is determinative. Ventura v. Albertson's, Inc., 856 P.2d 35 (Colo. App. 1992).

The majority rule is that the courts will not look to the relative fault of the combatants to determine eligibility for receipt of benefits. If injuries occur as a result of a physical altercation between co-employees which stems from a dispute having a substantial connection with their employment, the employees are entitled to compensation for such injuries, regardless of the identity of the party initiating the altercation. Banks v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 794 P.2d 1062 (Colo. App. 1990).

The injuries of an employee of a subcontractor are not rendered noncompensable for failure to satisfy the "arising out of employment" requirement simply because they were caused by an intentional act of a supervisor employed by the general contractor. Triad Painting Co. v. Blair, 812 P.2d 638 (Colo. 1991).

The fact that a claimant may overreact to an adverse condition of employment, or that the overreaction may stem from some unusual quality of the claimant's personality, does not alter the fact that the subject of that reaction had an inherent connection with employment. Triad Painting Co. v. Blair, 812 P.2d 638 (Colo. 1991).

Several variables determine by their presence or absence whether a particular recreational activity is within the scope of employment: Whether the activity occurred during working hours; whether it was on or off the employer's premises; whether participation was required; whether the employer took the initiative in sponsoring or organizing the team; whether the employer made contributions to the team; and whether the employer derived benefit from the team. Lindsay v. Pub. Serv. Co., 146 Colo. 579, 362 P.2d 407 (1961); Murphey v. Marquez, 155 Colo. 89, 393 P.2d 553 (1964); City & County of Denver v. Lee, 168 Colo. 208, 450 P.2d 352 (1969).

Question of whether an employee who is injured while engaging in a job-related recreational activity is within the course of his employment determined by: (1) Whether the activity occurred during working hours; (2) whether it was on the employer's premises; (3) whether participation was required; (4) whether the employer took the initiative in sponsoring the recreational activity. Dorsch v. Indus. Comm'n, 185 Colo. 219, 523 P.2d 458 (1974).

Where the employer's principal business is recreation, the weight of authority holds that the following test should be applied to determine whether the injured employee was in the course of employment: (1) The extent to which the employer derives substantial benefit from the policy—beyond the intangible value of improvement of employee morale; (2) the extent to which the recreational activity represents compensation for employment; (3) the extent to which the obligations of employment create the special danger which precipitates the injury; (4) whether the use of the recreational activity was an inducement for employment; (5) whether the use of the recreational facility was originally contemplated by the parties at the time of employment. Dorsch v. Indus. Comm'n, 185 Colo. 219, 523 P.2d 458 (1974).

Positional risk doctrine met. Where claimant's job placed her at a particular place at a particular time and the injury resulted from a neutral force, i.e., an attack which is neither personal to her nor distinctly associated with her employment, claimant met her burden of establishing that injury arose as a result of her employment. White Star Linen v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 787 P.2d 189 (Colo. App. 1989).

Encounters with an armed assailant do not constitute facts and circumstances common to all fields of employment. White Star Linen v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 787 P.2d 189 (Colo. App. 1989).

Plaintiff's claims for damages for emotional distress are based on work-related acts of his program chiefs and his recovery is limited by the provisions of the workmen's compensation act. Calderon v. Martin Marietta Corp., 675 F. Supp. 1279 (D. Colo. 1987).

Workers' Compensation Act is sole remedy for plaintiff's claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress, where the conduct cited in support of the claim relates to disciplinary measures imposed by her employer to prevent her from tending to personal matters during work. Smith v. Colo. Interstate Gas Co., 794 F. Supp. 1035 (D. Colo. 1992).

The language in subsection (2)(c) requiring that stress-related claims not be based upon facts and circumstances that are common to all fields of employment does not bar as a matter of law all claims arising out of a common work condition; rather compensability depends upon the particular facts and circumstances of each case. Holme, Roberts, & Owen v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 800 P.2d 1332 (Colo. App. 1990).

Employee's sudden job demotion was not based upon circumstances which are common to all fields of employment; therefore, claim arising out of job demotion was not barred. Holme, Roberts, & Owen v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 800 P.2d 1332 (Colo. App. 1990).

Mental health impairment caused by multiple employment stressors, some of which were common to all fields of employment, was not compensable. Trujillo v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 957 P.2d 1052 (Colo. App. 1998).

Psychological illness arising from work stress associated with harassment by co-workers is eligible for compensation. When mental illness primarily results from harassment at work, benefits will be awarded. Pub. Serv. of Colo. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 68 P.3d 583 (Colo. App. 2003).

Heart attack not compensable where it follows activity not required by position. A fatal heart attack to dean of law school following preparation and delivery of speech at banquet of legal fraternity of which he was province president, which activity was not a requirement of his position as dean of law school, was not compensable as accident arising out of and in the course of his employment. Univ. of Denver v. Johnston, 151 Colo. 465, 378 P.2d 830 (1963).

And heart attack not "arising out of employment" not compensable even if "arising in course of employment". Coors Porcelain Co. v. Grenfell, 109 Colo. 39, 121 P.2d 669 (1942).

No recovery where deputy water commissioner is killed by gun carried for own sport. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Russell, 105 Colo. 274, 96 P.2d 846 (1939).

Nor when salesman injured while hunting with employees of customer. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 127 Colo. 225, 255 P.2d 961 (1953).

Concrete floor held not to be a special hazard of employment. Gates Rubber Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 705 P.2d 6 (Colo. App. 1985).

Trial court was not bound by the findings and conclusions of ALJ and Panel where there was no substantial evidence to support that employer's system of rotating credit union employees was a common practice in credit union industry, much less a practice common to all fields of employment. Peterson v. ENT Fed. Credit Union, 827 P.2d 621 (Colo. App. 1992) (decided under law in effect prior to 1991 amendment).

Since the language providing that a mental impairment is not compensable if, inter alia, it results from a job transfer, was absent from subsection (2)(a) prior to the 1991 changes by the general assembly, it is reasonable to conclude that the general assembly did not intend to preclude benefits for all job transfers occurring before the 1991 amendment took effect. Peterson v. ENT Fed. Credit Union, 827 P.2d 621 (Colo. App. 1992) (decided under law in effect prior to 1991 amendment).

For purposes of subsection (2)(c), it is not necessary to logically tie stress producing incidents to a particular line of work. City Market, Inc., v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 800 P.2d 1335 (Colo. App. 1990).

Where claimant's work-related stress occurred as a result of smoking restrictions imposed by the employer, claimant failed to satisfy the requirements of subsection (2) because the evidence was sufficient to show that smoking restrictions are common in today's workplace and that the restriction at issue was not imposed in a manner which was arbitrary, unreasonable, or in bad faith. Riddle v. Ampex Corp., 839 P.2d 489 (Colo. App. 1992).

A suicide attempt that is causally related to an industrial injury is compensable. A self-destructive act is deemed unintentional if the effects of the industrial injury are the cause of a mental condition sufficient in magnitude to impair the ability to resist suicidal impulses or to cause an injured worker to commit self-destructive acts without knowingly intending to end his or her life. Dependable Cleaners v. Vasquez, 883 P.2d 583 (Colo. App. 1994).

The language "intentionally self-inflicted" cannot be read so broadly that it encompasses injuries resulting from grossly negligent or reckless behavior. Triad Painting Co. v. Blair, 812 P.2d 638 (Colo. 1991).

Applied in Pittman Motors, Inc. v. Indus. Comm'n, 156 Colo. 218, 399 P.2d 784 (1964).

B. Employee Going to and from Work.

In the absence of special circumstances there is no recovery for injury while employee is on his way to or from work. Indus. Comm'n v. Anderson, 69 Colo. 147, 169 P. 135 (1917); State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Indus. Comm'n, 89 Colo. 426, 3 P.2d 414 (1931); State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Walter, 143 Colo. 549, 354 P.2d 591 (1960); J. C. Carlile Corp. v. Antaki, 162 Colo. 376, 426 P.2d 549 (1967); Indus. Comm'n v. Lavach, 165 Colo. 433, 439 P.2d 359 (1968); Sieck v. Trueblood, 29 Colo. App. 432, 485 P.2d 134 (1971); Mineral County v. Indus. Comm'n, 649 P.2d 728 (Colo. App. 1982); Staff Adm'rs v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 958 P.2d 509 (Colo. App. 1997), aff'd, 977 P.2d 866 (Colo. 1999).

An employee injured while traveling to or from work is generally not entitled to compensation; however, this rule is subject to exception when special circumstances bring the accident within the course of employment. Colo. Civil Air Patrol v. Hagans, 662 P.2d 194 (Colo. App. 1983); Perry v. Crawford & Co., 677 P.2d 416 (Colo. App. 1983); Varsity Contractors & Home Ins. Co. v. Baca, 709 P.2d 55 (Colo. App. 1985).

The mere presence of the injured employee on the employer's premises is, without more, insufficient to invoke the bar of this section. Stewart v. United States, 716 F.2d 755 (10th Cir. 1982), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1018, 105 S. Ct. 432, 83 L. Ed.2d 359 (1984).

Off-premises injuries are not compensable if employees have fixed hours of employment and the injury takes place while going "to or from" work. Walsh v. Indus. Comm'n, 34 Colo. App. 371, 527 P.2d 1180 (1974).

As a general rule, injuries received by an employee off the employer's premises are not compensable when such injuries occur after the fixed hours of employment and in the course of going to or coming from work. Woodruff World Travel, Inc. v. Indus. Comm'n, 38 Colo. App. 92, 554 P.2d 705 (1976); Colo. Civil Air Patrol

v. Hagans, 662 P.2d 194 (Colo. App. 1983); Varsity Contractors & Home Ins. Co. v. Baca, 709 P.2d 55 (Colo. App. 1985).

Accident while employee was on way to work arose out of and was in course of employment where employer agreed to provide or pay for worker's transportation, and where worker was killed while using vehicle strictly for business purposes in direct route to his job accompanied by evidence that worker's home and vehicle had become part of his workplace. Monolith Portland Cement v. Burak, 772 P.2d (Colo. App. 1989).

If travel is a substantial part of the employee's service to the employer, then it is sufficient by itself to demonstrate a causal connection between the employee's scope of employment and the injury. Staff Adm'rs, Inc. v. Reynolds, 977 P.2d 866 (Colo. 1999).

One of the exceptions to the "coming and going rule" is that where an employee is in a travel status, as distinguished from simply going to and from work, he is normally within the course of his employment from the time he leaves his home until he returns to it. Tatum-Reese Dev. Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 30 Colo. App. 149, 490 P.2d 94 (1971).

Accident occurred within the scope of employment when employee was traveling between job assignments for the employer. Because of the nature of the employment of a home health aide, the travel between assignments conferred a benefit on employer beyond the mere fact of the employee's arrival at work, and there is a sufficient nexus between the employee's injury and her employment to determine as a matter of law that the accident occurred within the scope of employment. Benson v. Colo. Comp. Ins. Authority, 870 P.2d 624 (Colo. App. 1994).

Recovery allowed when employee was required to use her automobile to meet with clients during work day. Whale Commc'ns v. Osborn, 759 P.2d 848 (Colo. App. 1988).

And employer and employee may agree to continue employment relation while going to and from work. An employer may agree with an employee, either expressly or impliedly, that the relationship of employer and employee shall continue during the period of coming and going to and from his place of employment; in such case the employee is entitled to protection of the compensation act during that period, and such agreement may be inferred from the fact that the employee is compensated for the time consumed in traveling to and from work. Martin K. Eby Constr. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 151 Colo. 320, 377 P.2d 745 (1963); Nelson v. Harding, 29 Colo. App. 76, 480 P.2d 851 (1970); Sieck v. Trueblood, 29 Colo. App. 432, 485 P.2d 134 (1971).

An employer may agree, expressly or impliedly, that the employment relation shall continue during the period of coming to and going from work. Colo. Civil Air Patrol v. Hagans, 662 P.2d 194 (Colo. App. 1983).

"Special circumstances" may give rise to benefits under the workmen's compensation law even though the workman has "put down his tools" and is in the act of leaving the premises of his employer. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Walter, 143 Colo. 549, 354 P.2d 591 (1960).

If special circumstances surrounding the employee's injury reflect a causal connection between the conditions under which the work is to be performed and the resulting off-premises injury, compensation is proper. Woodruff World Travel, Inc. v. Indus. Comm'n, 38 Colo. App. 92, 554 P.2d 705 (1976); Friedman's Mkt., Inc. v. Welham, 653 P.2d 760 (Colo. App. 1982); Perry v. Crawford & Co., 677 P.2d 416 (Colo. App. 1983).

An injury arises out of and in the course of employment even though incurred on the way to work if special circumstances create a causal connection between the employee's injury and employment. Stewart v. United States, 716 F.2d 755 (10th Cir. 1982), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1018, 105 S. Ct. 432, 83 L. Ed.2d 359 (1984); Staff Adm'rs v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 958 P.2d 509 (Colo. App. 1997), aff'd, 977 P.2d 866 (Colo. 1999).

Special hazards on normal route may become hazards of employment. Where an off-premises injury occurs at a point which lies on the only route, or at least on the normal route, which employees must traverse to reach their employer's premises, special hazards of that route become hazards of the employment. Friedman's Mkt., Inc. v. Welham, 653 P.2d 760 (Colo. App. 1982).

Such as railroad crossings. Railroad crossings and rights-of-way are typically recognized as a special hazard. Friedman's Mkt., Inc. v. Welham, 653 P.2d 760 (Colo. App. 1982).

But not where access route not used exclusively by employees. But underlying the exception is the requirement that exposure to the route and the hazard is not shared to too great an extent by the general public. Perry v. Crawford & Co., 677 P.2d 416 (Colo. App. 1983).

Claimant exposed to additional hazard in going to work. Where because the employer persisted in directing the employee to come to work, she was exposed to an additional and unusual hazard, namely, the walk from her home over an icy street to her car, employee was injured performing an act necessary to her employment, while under the specific direction of her employer. Her injury, therefore, arose out of and in the course of her employment. Walsh v. Indus. Comm'n, 34 Colo. App. 371, 527 P.2d 1180 (1974).

Accidents occurring in or en route to parking lots are compensable. Accidents occurring in or en route to parking lots maintained on its premises or provided by the employer for the benefit of its employees, are compensable as arising out of and in the course of the employment, even though occurring on the way to or from the place of employment and on a public road or way dividing the place of employment from the parking lot. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Walter, 143 Colo. 549, 354 P.2d 591 (1960).

Injury in adjacent parking lot. Where claimant was injured in the parking lot adjacent to employer's office building, which lot was not owned, maintained, or controlled by the employer, there were special circumstances which reflected a causal connection between claimant's employment and her injury, since space in the parking lot was afforded the employer for the use of its employees, and the employer was aware that its employees used the lot. Parking privileges constituted an obvious fringe benefit to claimant, and claimant was injured while in the act of enjoying that benefit. Woodruff World Travel, Inc. v. Indus. Comm'n, 38 Colo. App. 92, 554 P.2d 705 (1976).

A parking lot injury sustained before work hours is causally related to employment as contemplated by the workmen's compensation act where the work supervisor expects employees to be dressed and ready to work at a certain hour and expects that employees will drive or ride to work in private vehicles because there is no other transportation, and where the principal use of the lot is for employee parking, both employee and employer benefitting from the availability of the lot. Stewart v. United States, 716 F.2d 755 (10th Cir. 1982), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1018, 105 S. Ct. 432, 83 L. Ed.2d 359 (1984).

Fact that employee had permission to park car on employer's premises is irrelevant when injury received on way home. Indus. Comm'n v. Enyeart, 81 Colo. 521, 256 P. 314 (1927).

And no recovery even when injury on employer's premises where employee is riding home with a fellow employee. Indus. Comm'n v. Enyeart, 81 Colo. 521, 256 P. 314 (1927).

However, recovery may be had where employer requests employee to bring his truck to work with him. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Indus. Comm'n, 89 Colo. 426, 3 P.2d 414 (1931).

As well as when employer agrees to furnish transportation. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Batis, 117 Colo. 1, 183 P.2d 891 (1947); J. C. Carlile Corp. v. Antaki, 162 Colo. 376, 426 P.2d 549 (1967); Indus. Comm'n v. Lavach, 165 Colo. 433, 439 P.2d 359 (1968); Kitchens v. Dept. of Labor & Emp. Div. of Labor, 29 Colo. App. 374, 486 P.2d 474 (1971).

Or where there is a mutual agreement for transportation and employer consents to employee's riding with another. Wells v. Cutler, 90 Colo. 111, 6 P.2d 459 (1931).

And the same is true of a mailman who furnishes his own truck by contract. Comstock v. Bivens, 78 Colo. 107, 239 P. 869 (1925).

Or where an automobile salesman has been directed to take a car home. Indus. Comm'n v. Irvine, 72 Colo. 573, 212 P. 829 (1923); Indus. Comm'n v. Pueblo Auto Co., 71 Colo. 424, 207 P. 479, 23 A.L.R. 348 (1922).

Or a school superintendent who falls through a trap door while removing school supplies from his car. Ryan v. Indus. Comm'n, 89 Colo. 393, 3 P.2d 300 (1931).

Or an employee making his way home along the line of work it was his duty to patrol. Indus. Comm'n v. Hunter, 73 Colo. 226, 214 P. 393 (1923); Colo. Contracting Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 74 Colo. 206, 219 P. 1075 (1923).

Bank messenger carrying gun and going into post office is acting within course of employment. Security State Bank v. Propst, 99 Colo. 67, 59 P.2d 798 (1936).

Coal miner. When employee had arrived on the premises of his employer, had changed his clothes, and "was hurrying down the pit car track" to the check room to get his mine check and lamp, in direct and immediate response to the employer's warning whistle, he was performing service within the course of his employment. Indus. Comm'n v. Hayden Coal Co., 113 Colo. 62, 155 P.2d 158 (1944).

The requirement that a policeman be "always on duty" is not an exception to the rule that no recovery is allowed for injury while employee is on his way to or from work. Rogers v. Indus. Comm'n, 40 Colo. App. 313, 574 P.2d 116 (1978).

III. PROXIMATE CAUSE.

For meaning of term "arise out of", see Rocky Mt. Fuel Co. v. Kruzic, 94 Colo. 398, 30 P.2d 868 (1934); Deterts v. Times Publ'g Co., 38 Colo. App. 48, 552 P.2d 1033 (1976).

The terms "injury by accident" and "injury caused by accident" can be used interchangeably. Carroll v. Indus. Comm'n, 69 Colo. 473, 195 P. 1097 (1921).

Injury "arising out of employment" occurs when an employee suffers an injury attributable to unexplained forces which would have injured any person who happened to be in the employee's position at the time. Popovich v. Irlando, 811 P.2d 379 (Colo. 1991).

Stress-related injury was held to arise out of and in the course of employment when claimant's supervisor threatened claimant with the loss of her job and overtime if she ended or revealed their sexual relationship, and claimant's stress resulted from supervisor's authority over her job and his exploitation of that authority. Gen. Cable Co. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 878 P.2d 118 (Colo. App. 1994).

Where injury "arises out of employment" where causal connection exists between work conditions and injury. Indus. Comm'n v. Anderson, 69 Colo. 147, 169 P. 135 (1917); Indus. Comm'n v. Pueblo Auto Co., 71 Colo. 424, 207 P. 479 (1922); Indus. Comm'n v. Eneyart, 81 Colo. 521, 256 P. 314 (1927); Indus. Comm'n v. Nissan, 84 Colo. 19, 267 P. 791 (1928); McKnight v. Houck, 87 Colo. 234, 286 P. 279 (1930); Indus. Comm'n v. Diveley, 88 Colo. 190, 294 P. 532 (1930); Rocky Mt. Fuel Co. v. Kruzic, 94 Colo. 398, 30 P.2d 868 (1934); Gates v. Central City Opera House Ass'n, 107 Colo. 93, 108 P.2d 880 (1940); Chaney v. Indus. Comm'n, 120 Colo. 111, 207 P.2d 816 (1949); Indus. Comm'n v. Golden Cycle Corp., 126 Colo. 68, 246 P.2d 902 (1952); Indus. Comm'n v. Corwin Hosp., 126 Colo. 358, 250 P.2d 135 (1952); *Univ. of Denver v. Therefore, the test is whether or not there is a causal connection between the injury and the employment; that is, are they so connected that the injury naturally results from the employment. Miller v. Denver Post, Inc., 137 Colo. 61, 322 P.2d 661 (1958); Indus. Comm'n v. Horner, 137 Colo. 368, 325 P.2d 698 (1958); Univ. of Denver-Colorado Sem. & Univ. Park Campus v. Johnston, 151 Colo. 465, 378 P.2d 830 (1963).

The test for determining if the injury arises out of the course of employment is whether there is a causal connection between the duties of the employment and the injuries. Walsh v. Indus. Comm'n, 34 Colo. App. 371, 527 P.2d 1180 (1974); Deterts v. Times Publ'g Co., 38 Colo. App. 48, 552 P.2d 1033 (1976); Irwin v. Indus. Comm'n, 695 P.2d 763 (Colo. App. 1984).

Causation is a question of fact for resolution by the administrative law judge. Snyder v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 942 P.2d 1337 (Colo. App. 1997); Faulkner v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 12 P.3d 844 (Colo. App. 2000).

Proof of causation is a threshold requirement which an injured employee must establish by a preponderance of the evidence before any compensation is awarded. Faulkner v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 12 P.3d 844 (Colo. App. 2000).

All that is necessary to warrant the finding of causal connection between the accident and the disability is to show facts and circumstances which would indicate with reasonable probability that the injury complained of resulted from, or was precipitated by, the accident.

But if the evidence, as a matter of law, is insufficient to remove the question of causation from the realm of conjecture and mere possibilities, the award cannot be upheld. Indus. Comm'n v. Royal Indem. Co., 124 Colo. 210, 236 P.2d 293 (1951); Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 129 Colo. 353, 269 P.2d 1070 (1954); *Vandium Corp. of amp; v. App. 1983).

Although a condition precedent to recovery is that death or injury be proximately caused by an accident arising out of and in the course of the deceased's employment. Indus. Comm'n v. Hesler, 149 Colo. 592, 370 P.2d 428 (1962).

It is not necessary that the accident be the immediate cause, but only the proximate cause of the death in order to sustain an award. Prouse v. Indus. Comm'n, 69 Colo. 382, 194 P. 625 (1920); Newkirk v. Golden Cycle Mining & Reduction Co., 79 Colo. 298, 244 P. 1019 (1926); Johnson v. Indus. Comm'n, 148 Colo. 561, 366 P.2d 864 (1961); Standard Metals Corp. v. Ball, 172 Colo. 510, 474 P.2d 622 (1970).

But accident must be traceable to a definite time, place, and cause. Prouse v. Indus. Comm'n, 69 Colo. 382, 194 P. 625 (1920); Peer v. Indus. Comm'n, 94 Colo. 227, 29 P.2d 636 (1934); Martin Marietta Corp. v. Faulk, 158 Colo. 441, 407 P.2d 348 (1965).

Chain-of-causation rule. If a work connected injury causes a deranged mental condition which in turn is a proximate cause of an injured employee's suicide, the deceased employee's dependents are entitled to benefits. Jackco Painting Contractors v. Indus. Comm'n, 702 P.2d 755 (Colo. App. 1985).

Lack of causal connection may be asserted at any time. In a dispute over medical benefits that arises after the filing of a general admission of liability, an employer generally can assert, based on subsequent medical reports, that the claimant did not establish the threshold requirement of a direct causal relationship between the on-the-job injury and the need for medical treatment. Snyder v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 942 P.2d 1337 (Colo. App. 1997).

Ordinarily the employer cannot be held liable for compensation for disability from lightning. Hassell Iron Works Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 70 Colo. 386, 201 P. 894 (1921); Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 81 Colo. 233, 254 P. 995 (1927).

But where the nature of the work and the nature of doing it exposes the employee to a greater danger the employer is liable. Hassell Iron Works Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 70 Colo. 386, 201 P. 894 (1921); Kitchens v. Dept. of Labor & Emp. Div. of Labor, 29 Colo. App. 374, 486 P.2d 474 (1971).

Cold resulting in pneumonia and death not sufficiently connected with accident. See Newkirk v. Golden Cycle Mining & Reduction Co., 79 Colo. 298, 244 P. 1019 (1926).

But this is not true where mechanic is poisoned by fumes and later dies of pneumonia. See Columbine Laundry Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 73 Colo. 397, 215 P. 870 (1923).

Where cause of accident is brought onto the premises by employee for his own purposes there is no recovery. An accident which is the result of a cause brought onto the employer's premises by the workman himself for his own purposes, is not caused by his employment and does not arise out of it. Indus. Comm'n v. Enyeart, 81 Colo. 521, 256 P. 314 (1927).

Where employee died while attempting to rescue his stepchild, the decision by employee to allow the child to accompany him to work was not the cause of the injury. The cause of the injury was a hazard of his occupation. Tri-State Commodities, Inc. v. Stewart, 689 P.2d 712 (Colo. App. 1984).

But the fact that the employee performed his duties in a dangerous and unusual manner does not in itself place him outside the provisions of this section. Indus. Comm'n v. H. Koppers Co., 66 Colo. 596, 185 P. 267 (1919).

Heart attack following strenuous labor may be injury proximately caused by accident. Carroll v. Indus. Comm'n, 69 Colo. 473, 195 P. 1097 (1921); Allen v. Gettler, 94 Colo. 528, 30 P.2d 1117 (1934). But see United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 122 Colo. 31, 219 P.2d 315 (1950).

Because if death is due to "overexertion" "arising out of" the employment and would not have occurred save for such employment, then the "overexertion" is "an accident". Indus. Comm'n v. McKenna, 106 Colo. 323, 104 P.2d 458 (1940); Black Forest Fox Ranch v. Garrett, 110 Colo. 323, 134 P.2d 332 (1943); Peter Kiewit Sons' Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 124 Colo. 217, 236 P.2d 296 (1951); Indus. Comm'n v. Havens, 136 Colo. 111, 314 P.2d 698 (1957).

But overexertion must be established. In cases of heart failure, a claimant must prove more than the mere exertion attendant upon the usual and ordinary course of the employment. Overexertion must be established. Indus. Comm'n v. Int'l. Minerals & Chem. Corp., 132 Colo. 256, 287 P.2d 275 (1955); Indus. Comm'n v. Havens, 136 Colo. 111, 314 P.2d 698 (1957); Claimants in re Death of Bennett v. Durango Furn. Mart., 136 Colo. 529, 319 P.2d 494 (1957); Indus. Comm'n v. Horner, 137 Colo. 368, 325 P.2d 698 (1958); Huff v. Aetna Ins. Co., 146 Colo. 63, 360 P.2d 667 (1961); Indus.

Phillips, 166 Colo. 312, 443 P.2d 379 (1968); Jasinski v. Ginley-Soper Constr. Co., 170 Colo. 52, 458 P.2d 734 (1969).

So that employer is not liable where his evidence is that the exertion was a normal part of decedent's duties and there was competent medical testimony of a prior heart condition. Huff v. Aetna Ins. Co., 146 Colo. 63, 360 P.2d 667 (1961); Indus. Comm'n v. Hesler, 149 Colo. 592, 370 P.2d 428 (1962); Blood v. Indus. Comm'n, 165 Colo. 532, 440 P.2d 775 (1968).

Overexertion not element of claim where heart condition aggravated by trauma. Where there is a claim of aggravation of a preexisting heart condition by trauma, claimant must show his preexisting heart disease was aggravated by trauma, and, in such a case, overexertion is not an element. Legouffe v. Prestige Homes, Inc., 634 P.2d 1010 (Colo. App. 1981), rev'd on other grounds, 658 P.2d 850 (Colo. 1983).

Absence of proximate causation where employee suffered from prior heart condition. Jones v. Indus. Comm'n, 148 Colo. 253, 365 P.2d 689 (1961); Indus. Comm'n v. Wolfer, 152 Colo. 205, 381 P.2d 19 (1968).

Death from heart ailments following operation to correct compensable injury. The death of an employee following an operation to correct a compensable injury was not compensable, where death was not due to the operation, but to heart ailments, and there was no evidence of a causal connection between the injury, the operation and the heart ailments. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 116 Colo. 98, 179 P.2d 973 (1947).

No requirement to establish overexertion in brain aneurysm case. In heart cases, the supreme court generally has required the claimant to prove more than the mere exertion attendant upon the usual and ordinary course of employment, in order to show a causal connection between the employment and death or disability. No such requirement exists in the case of a rupture of a brain aneurysm. Indus. Comm'n v. Riley, 165 Colo. 586, 441 P.2d 3 (1968).

For in brain aneurysm cases the claimant must show either (1) an unexpected incident or event during the course of his work resulting in injury, or (2) injury as the unexpected result of the claimant's normal activities in his employment. In either case, the injury must arise from an occurrence traceable to a definite time, place, and cause. Indus. Comm'n v. Riley, 165 Colo. 586, 441 P.2d 3 (1968).

One claiming compensation as the result of an altercation with a fellow employee has the burden of establishing a causal connection between the altercation and his employment, which may not be inferred from the circumstances of a willful assault for which no satisfactory explanation is offered and which did not originate in any risk peculiar to the work. Wisdom v. Indus. Comm'n, 133 Colo. 266, 293 P.2d 967 (1956).

Disability resulting from exploratory operation. Where claimant slipped and fell, in course of employment, and the accident precipitated symptoms of a kidney disease, which was disclosed during an exploratory operation, resulting in removal of one kidney, regardless of any aggravation of claimant's preexisting condition, he was entitled to recover for the disability resulting from the operation. Merriman v. Indus. Comm'n, 120 Colo. 400, 210 P.2d 448 (1949).

Death resulting from operation to correct compensable injury. Where a compensable injury is involved and an operation for the correction thereof follows, resulting in the death of the employee, no contributing cause whatever is necessary or material in the consideration of an award. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 116 Colo. 98, 179 P.2d 973 (1947).

Sunstroke does not necessarily constitute death resulting from an accident. A search of the workmen's compensation cases in this state discloses none where claim has been made for compensation based on death or injury from sunstroke. A review of the cases from other jurisdictions indicate that such injury or death is compensable where there is no question about injury or death being caused by the sunstroke, but where there is evidence of other contributing factors the general rule is as follows: "The mere fact of sunstroke does not constitute a death resulting therefrom an 'accident' within the statute, and harm resulting from a heat stroke is compensable only where the heat stroke is the direct and superinducing cause of the harm". Wood v. Indus. Comm'n, 100 Colo. 209, 66 P.2d 806 (1937).

Employer is liable for claimant's injuries even though there was no direct striking of the claimant. Where a sudden opening of a door caused the claimant to rapidly move his arm, and the claimant's arm was broken as the result of the sudden movement, the employer is liable since the injury was proximately caused in the course of the employee's employment. H & H Warehouse v. Vicory, 805 P.2d 1167 (Colo. App. 1990).

Applied in In re Hampton v. Dir. of Div. of Labor, 31 Colo. App. 141, 500 P.2d 1186 (1972).

IV. EVIDENCE.

A. In General.

Law reviews. For comment on Finn v. Indus. Comm'n appearing below, see 45 Den. L.J. 780 (1968).

To sustain an award of compensation the industrial commission is required to make a finding of all of the essential facts required by this section, i.e.: (1) That both employer and employee are subject to the provisions of the act; (2) that at the time and place of the accident the employee was performing services arising out of and in the course of his employment; and (3) that the injury was caused by an accident arising out of and in the course of the employment. Metros v. Denver Coney Island, 110 Colo. 40, 129 P.2d 911 (1942); United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 128 Colo. 68, 259 P.2d 869 (1953); Hamilton v. Indus. Comm'n, 132 Colo. 408, 289 P.2d 639 (1955); Miller v. Denver Post, Inc., 137 Colo. 61, 322 P.2d 661 (1958).

And in workmen's compensation cases, both the time and place of the accident must be established, or at least one or the other of these factors fixed, so that there is evidence to show that the accident arose out of and in the course of the employment. Deines Bros. v. Indus. Comm'n, 125 Colo. 258, 242 P.2d 600 (1952).

Consequently, a denial of compensation should follow a finding of the absence of one or more of the essential facts. Miller v. Denver Post, Inc., 137 Colo. 61, 322 P.2d 661 (1958).

And findings on the remaining requirements of this section, whether pro or con, will not alter the result. Miller v. Denver Post, Inc., 137 Colo. 61, 322 P.2d 661 (1958).

But the fact that the industrial commission assigns the wrong reason for the right conclusion is not sufficient to justify reversal where it is undisputed that the death of an employee was caused solely by a coronary occlusion. Skinner v. Indus. Comm'n, 152 Colo. 97, 381 P.2d 253 (1963).

However, court may review where contention is made that evidence is so weak as to amount to no evidence. Rosenkranz v. Indus. Comm'n, 83 Colo. 123, 262 P. 1014 (1927).

Burden of proof is on claimant to show injury was proximate result of accident. Olson-Hall v. Indus. Comm'n, 71 Colo. 228, 205 P. 527 (1922); Peer v. Indus. Comm'n, 94 Colo. 227, 29 P.2d 636 (1934); Wood v. Indus. Comm'n, 100 Colo. 209, 66 P.2d 806 (1937); Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 127 Colo. 225, 255 P.2d 961 (1953); Hamilton v. Indus. Comm'n, 132 Colo. 408, 289 P.2d 639 (1955); Vanadium Corp. of Am. v. Sargent, 134 Colo. 555, 307 P.2d 454 (1957); Indus. Comm'n v. London & Lancashire Indem. Co., 135 Colo. 372, 311 P.2d 705 (1957); State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Indus. Comm'n, 135 Colo. 570, 314 P.2d 288 (1957); Indus. Comm'n v. Havens, 136 Colo. 111, 314 P.2d 698 (1957); Miller v. Denver Post, Inc., 137 Colo. 61, 322 P.2d 661 (1958); Indus. Comm'n v. Peterson, 151 Colo. 289, 377 P.2d 542 (1962); Breit v. Indus. Comm'n, 160 Colo.

205, 415 P.2d 858 (1966); Finn v. Indus. Comm'n, 165 Colo. 106, 437 P.2d 542 (1968); Brown v. Indus. Comm'n, 167 Colo. 391, 447 P.2d 694 (1968).

In order to be entitled to workmen's compensation death benefits, a claimant must establish that the accident causing death arose out of and in the course of the decedent's employment. Harrison W. Corp. v. Hicks' Claimants, 185 Colo. 142, 522 P.2d 722 (1974).

And claim must be established by a preponderance of the evidence. Olson v. Erickson, 105 Colo. 489, 99 P.2d 199 (1940); Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 127 Colo. 225, 255 P.2d 961 (1953); Faulkner v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 12 P.3d 844 (Colo. App. 2000).

"Clear and convincing" standard under § 8-42-107 (8)(b)(III) did not apply where the independent medical examiner's opinion was not at issue, and employer had raised the separate issue of causation under this section before the IME was performed. Therefore the ALJ did not err in applying a preponderance standard in determining whether claimant had sustained a compensable injury. Faulkner v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 12 P.3d 844 (Colo. App. 2000).

A claimant in a workers' compensation case has the initial burden of proving his entitlement to benefits by a preponderance of the evidence. Therefore, the claimant must present a prima facie case sufficient to establish the existence of his disability and to permit a reasonable determination of the extent of such disability. Valley Tree Serv. v. Jimenez, 787 P.2d 658 (Colo. App. 1990).

The claimant must also establish the causal relationship of the injury to his work. Valley Tree Serv. v. Jimenez, 787 P.2d 658 (Colo. App. 1990).

Whether claimant has sustained burden of proof is question of fact. Whether the claimant in a workmen's compensation case has sustained the burden of establishing that the disability he alleges was proximately caused by his accident, is a question of fact, the determination of which is solely the province of the director. Wierman v. Tunnell, 108 Colo. 544, 120 P.2d 638 (1941).

However, there is no need for finding on burden of proof where evidence makes out prima facie case. Gates v. Central City Opera House Ass'n, 107 Colo. 93, 108 P.2d 880 (1940).

Burden on employer to show nonemployment causation. Once the claimant has established a prima facie showing of accident arising out of the employment, the respondent must produce competent evidence of nonemployment causation in rebuttal, or the claimant will prevail. Colo. Contracting Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 74 Colo. 206, 219 P. 1075 (1923); Skinner v. Indus. Comm'n, 152 Colo. 97, 381 P.2d 253 (1963).

But where the claimant is unable to prove more than that he had something happen to him during his employment, and he does not show how or why his condition arose out of his work, he fails to adduce evidence to the point of making a prima facie case. Thus, urging that some of the employer's evidence was erroneous is immaterial. Finn v. Indus. Comm'n, 165 Colo. 106, 437 P.2d 542 (1968).

Reasonable doubt resolved in claimant's favor. Any reasonable doubt as to whether a compensable accidental injury arose out of and in the course of employment must be resolved in favor of the claimant herein. Deterts v. Times Publ'g Co., 38 Colo. App. 48, 552 P.2d 1033 (1976).

The doctrine of res ipsa loquitur does not apply in workmen's compensation cases. Finn v. Indus. Comm'n, 165 Colo. 106, 437 P.2d 542 (1968).

Standard of review for claim based upon claimant's heart condition. Where claim for benefits was based upon claimant's heart condition, appropriate standard for industrial commission review was whether claimant's heart condition was the result of an accident, injury, or occupational disease, as defined by § 8-41-108, which meets the conditions of this section. Eisenberg v. Colo. Indus. Comm'n, 624 P.2d 361 (Colo. App. 1981).

The existence of a latent tendency was irrelevant, and the ALJ's determination that employee's claim was barred by § 8-52-102 (2)(b) was wholly unsupported by the record where employee had functioned well within the range of normal at home and at her job until she was rotated by employer and suffered job-related stress. Peterson v. ENT Fed. Credit Union, 827 P.2d 621 (Colo. App. 1992) (decided under law in effect prior to 1991 amendment).

The language in subsection (2)(c) requiring that stress-related claims not be based upon facts and circumstances that are common to all fields of employment does not bar as a matter of law all claims arising out of a common work condition; rather, compensability depends upon the particular facts and circumstances of each case. Holme, Roberts, & Owen v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 800 P.2d 1332 (Colo. App. 1990).

Employee's sudden job demotion was not based upon circumstances which are common to all fields of employment; therefore, claim arising out of job demotion was not barred. Holme, Roberts, & Owen v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 800 P.2d 1332 (Colo. App. 1990).

For purposes of subsection (2)(c), it is not necessary to logically tie stress-producing incidents to a particular line of work. City Market, Inc., v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 800 P.2d 1335 (Colo. App. 1990).

A workers' compensation claim resulting from a mental stimulus that results in mental impairment is a "mental-mental" injury which requires proof by testimony of a licensed physician or psychologist. If there is a physical component that contributes to the injury, such restrictions are not implicated. Oberle v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 919 P.2d 918 (Colo. App. 1996).

B. Sufficiency of Evidence.

Evidence warranting compensation. If the evidence, and the logical inferences therefrom, can be said to warrant a conclusion that the accident, within a reasonable probability, resulted in the disability, the claimant is entitled to compensation. Indus. Comm'n v. Royal Indem. Co., 124 Colo. 210, 236 P.2d 293 (1951); J. W. Metz Lumber Co. v. Taylor, 134 Colo. 249, 302 P.2d 521 (1956); Martin Marietta Corp. v. Faulk, 158 Colo. 441, 407 P.2d 348 (1965).

Although evidence need not establish causal connection by reasonable "medical" probability. Where the sole issue in dispute was whether there was any causal connection between the accident and the loss of vision in claimant's right eye and the employer asserted that the causal connection must be established with reasonable medical probability, it was held that this is the standard upon which a medical expert must base his opinion but it is not the standard on which the director must make his determination. The evidence must establish the causal connection with reasonable probability, but it need not establish it with reasonable "medical" certainty. Indus. Comm'n v. Havens, 136 Colo. 111, 314 P.2d 698 (1957); Ringsby Truck Lines v. Indus. Comm'n, 30 Colo. App. 224, 491 P.2d 106 (1971); Legouffe v. Prestige Homes, Inc., 634 P.2d 1010 (Colo. App. 1981), rev'd on other grounds, 658 P.2d 850 (Colo. 1983); Morrison v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 760 P.2d 654 (Colo. App. 1988).

When doctors are unable to say how much of claimant's disability is due to the accident for which he claimed compensation and how much to an earlier accident, the industrial commission errs in awarding compensation for the whole disability. Ohio Cas. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 115 Colo. 355, 173 P.2d 888 (1946).

Evidence which relates solely to possibilities or probabilities is not sufficient to support an award. Deines Bros. v. Indus. Comm'n, 125 Colo. 258, 242 P.2d 600 (1952); Montgomery Ward & Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 128 Colo. 465, 263 P.2d 817 (1953); Vanadium Corp. of Am. v. Sargent, 134 Colo. 555, 307 P.2d 454 (1957); Maryland Cas. Co. v. Kravig, 153 Colo. 282, 385 P.2d 669 (1963); Martin Marietta Corp. v. Faulk, 158 Colo. 441, 407 P.2d 348 (1965).

On the other hand, awards cannot be denied as the result of speculation or conjecture, nor upon evidence not in the record. Indus.

Comm'n v. Havens, 136 Colo. 111, 134 P.2d 698 (1957).

And the fact that an accident is not witnessed does not preclude proof by circumstantial evidence. Employers' Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 145 Colo. 91, 357 P.2d 929 (1960).

Where evidence not usable to support referee's findings. Where testimony ignores or is contrary to principles of physical science, it cannot serve as a basis for a referee's conclusion that there was no causal connection between the accident and the claimant's injury. Legouffe v. Prestige Homes, Inc., 634 P.2d 1010 (Colo. App. 1981), rev'd on other grounds, 658 P.2d 850 (Colo. 1983).

Testimony of a dentist is insufficient under subsection (2)(a) to support a stress claim even though a dentist would be the treating physician for TMJ, the injury specified by the claimant as arising from stress. This section clearly refers only to a physician or psychologist. Tomsha v. City of Colo. Springs, 856 P.2d 13 (Colo. App. 1992).

Subsection (2) does not require that a mental impairment claimant produce a live witness in all cases. Such a requirement would serve no legitimate purpose and would result in an equal protection violation when other claimants are allowed to submit expert reports and only provide the expert witness when the opposing party chooses to examine the expert. Esser v. Indus. Claims Appeals Office, 8 P.3d 1218 (Colo. App. 2000), aff'd on other grounds, 30 P.3d 189 (Colo. 2001).

For sufficiency of evidence, see Adams v. Indus. Comm'n, 106 Colo. 361, 105 P.2d 403 (1940); Rand v. Indus. Comm'n, 110 Colo. 240, 132 P.2d 784 (1942); Warner v. Mullens, 111 Colo. 60, 137 P.2d 420 (1943); Pitchforth v. Macomb, 111 Colo. 135, 137 P.2d 1021 (1943); Indus. Comm'n v. Menegatti, 111 Colo. 484, 143 P.2d 274 (1943); Indus. Comm'n v. Daniels, 124 Colo. 329, 236 P.2d 291 (1951); Employers' Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 145 Colo. 91, 357 P.2d 929 (1960); Hood v. Indus. Comm'n, 153 Colo. 221, 385 P.2d 256 (1963); Silver Eng'g Works, Inc. v. Simmons, 180 Colo. 309, 505 P.2d 966 (1973); Loveland Police Dept. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 141 P.3d 943 (Colo. App. 2006).

C. Admissibility of Evidence.

Statements of employee to his wife upon returning home held to be inadmissible. Evidence of statements of an employee to his wife upon his return home from work in the evening, as to the happening of an alleged accident, held, under the attending circumstances, to be hearsay, not a part of the res gestae, and its admission in evidence error. H. C. Lallier Constr. &

Eng'g Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 91 Colo. 593, 17 P.2d 532 (1932).

As are hospital records and proof of death based on hearsay. H. C. Lallier Constr. & Eng'g Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 91 Colo. 593, 17 P.2d 532 (1932).

But conversation of injured employee with others at the time of the accident held to be admissible. In a workmen's compensation case, conversations of the injured employee with others at the time of the accident concerning his injury held admissible as a part of the res gestae. Indus. Comm'n v. Diveley, 88 Colo. 190, 294 P. 532 (1930).

Medical testimony in proceedings as to prior injury not competent to determine degree of permanent disability. Where for several months a claimant has continuously performed the same type of work in which he was engaged at the time of his injury, a transcript of proceedings, including medical testimony, relating to a prior injury, where no findings were made, is not competent to determine the degree of permanent disability resulting from accidental injury in Colorado two years afterward in the face of unchallenged medical testimony that claimant has suffered a permanent disability of 25 percent as a working unit, based upon aggra-vation of a preexisting weakness. Gregory v. Swinerton & Walberg Co., 138 Colo. 22, 328 P.2d 948 (1958).

D. Presumption against Suicide.

The well-known rule is that suicide will not be presumed, and that as between accident and suicide the law supposes accident. Indus. Comm'n v. Peterson, 151 Colo. 289, 377 P.2d 542 (1962).

But once there appears substantial evidence to overcome the presumption against suicide it is for the industrial commission to weigh all the evidence and to draw reasonable inferences therefrom. Logical conclusions based upon adequate support in the record should not be disturbed by the courts. Indus. Comm'n v. Peterson, 151 Colo. 289, 377 P.2d 542 (1962).

There is no authority that makes conclusive evidence the quantum of proof by which a presumption against suicide must be rebutted. The burden of proof remains upon the claimant to establish that the injury or death resulted from an accident arising out of and in the course of the employment and not intentionally self-inflicted. Indus. Comm'n v. London & Lancashire Indem. Co., 135 Colo. 372, 311 P.2d 705 (1957).

8-41-302. Scope of terms - "accident" - "injury" - "occupational disease".

(1) "Accident", "injury", and "occupational disease" shall not be construed to include disability or death caused by or resulting from mental or emotional stress unless it is shown by competent evidence that such mental or emotional stress is proximately caused solely by hazards to which the worker would not have been equally exposed outside the employment.

(2) "Accident", "injury", and "occupational disease" shall not be construed to include disability or death caused by heart attack unless it is shown by competent evidence that such heart attack was proximately caused by an unusual exertion arising out of and within the course of the employment.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 8-43-108 as it existed prior to 1990.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 8-41-302 is similar to § 8-41-108 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Fact of preexisting hypersensitivity or secondary cause does not defeat a claim for occupational disease unless it can be shown that a nonindustrial cause was an equally exposing stimulus. Hall v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 757 P.2d 1132 (Colo. App. 1988).

Manifestation of preexisting mental condition resulting from job-related mental or emotional stress is compensable. Ft. Logan Mental Health Center v. Walker, 723 P.2d 740 (Colo. App. 1986).

In order for a mental condition to be compensable under the Workers' Compensation Act, the hazards causing the stress must be more attributable to the workplace than to claimant's personal problems. Young v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 860 P.2d 591 (Colo. App. 1993).

The term "solely" in subsection (1) could be interpreted as meaning "primarily" where the phrase "equally exposed" envisions some exposure to stress outside employment and where compensability arises only on the condition that there not be equal exposure to a stressor both within and outside the workplace. Young v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 860 P.2d 591 (Colo. App. 1993).

Injury caused by emotional or mental stress compensable. Compensation may be awarded when job-related mental or emotional stress proximately causes an injury or occupational disease which results in disability or death. City of Boulder v. Streeb, 706 P.2d 786 (Colo. 1985).

Provision is constitutional. Although it requires a different or more severe standard for establishing that a heart attack is a compensable "accident" or "injury" than is required for other types of accidents or injuries, this provision does not deny equal protection of the law and is therefore constitutional. Claimants In re Kohler v. Indus. Comm'n, 671 P.2d 1002 (Colo. App. 1983).

"Overexertion" was not a prerequisite to a recovery of workmen's compensation for a heart attack sustained in the course of employment; rather, the legislative intent in the 1965 amendment of this section was to make compensable an injury or death which results from exertion in the performance even of usual duties within an employee's scope of employment; there must, of course, be the chain of causation necessary as in all workmen's compensation cases. T & T Loveland Chinchilla Ranch v. Bourn, 173 Colo. 267, 477 P.2d 457 (1970).

For accidents occurring between the effective date of the 1965 amendment to former subsection (2) and July 1, 1971, the 1965 amendment allowing for an award for a heart attack without a showing of overexertion is applicable. Pub. Serv. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 189 Colo. 153, 538 P.2d 430 (1975).

Legislative intent relating to unusual exertion requirement. The intent of the general assembly in enacting the unusual exertion requirement was to ensure that only those heart attack-related injuries resulting from more than the normal work activities of the claimant are compensable. Prestige Homes, Inc. v. Legouffe, 658 P.2d 850 (Colo. 1983).

Where worker's heart attack was an aggravation of preexisting heart disease and the heart attack was not caused by an accident, the worker was required to prove unusual exertion in order to be eligible for workers' compensation benefits. Vialpando v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 757 P.2d 1152 (Colo. App. 1988).

Intent of the 1971 amendment requiring overexertion for a compensable heart attack was to place the law as it existed before the 1965 amendment which did require overexertion. Pub. Serv. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 189 Colo. 153, 538 P.2d 430 (1975).

Overexertion not element of claim where heart condition aggravated by trauma. Where there is a claim of aggravation of a preexisting heart condition by trauma, claimant must show his preexisting heart disease was aggravated by trauma, and, in such a case, overexertion is not an element. Legouffe v. Prestige Homes, Inc., 634 P.2d 1010 (Colo. App. 1981), rev'd on other grounds, 658 P.2d 850 (Colo. 1983).

Unusual exertion doctrine is to be applied according to employee's work history rather than the work patterns of his profession in general. Beaudoin Constr. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 626 P.2d 711 (Colo. App. 1980).

Determination of baseline level of fitness required. If the unusual exertion doctrine is to apply on an individual basis, then a baseline level of fitness of the individual must be determined before a trier of fact can decide what constitutes unusual exertion for that particular individual. This determination must necessarily include consideration of periods of unemployment and consequent deconditioning. Beaudoin Constr. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 626 P.2d 711 (Colo. App. 1980).

Application in context of employer-sponsored fitness program. In order to determine whether an injury suffered by an employee while engaging in an exercise program is compensable under the Workers' Compensation Act, a court should look to the following factors: (1) Whether the injury occurred during working hours; (2) whether the injury occurred on the employer's premises; (3) whether the employer initiated the employee's exercise program; (4) whether the employer exerted any control or direction over the employee's exercise program; and (5) whether the employer stood to benefit from the employee's exercise program. Price v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 919 P.2d 207 (Colo. 1996); Wackenhut Corp. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 975 P.2d 1131 (Colo. App. 1997).

Overexertion not required where heart attack related to accident. Where the claimant alleges that his heart attack was causally related to an accident as defined by subsection (1), the claimant is not required to show that the injury was also causally related to overexertion. Prestige Homes, Inc. v. Legouffe, 658 P.2d 850 (Colo. 1983); Vialpando v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 757 P.2d 1152 (Colo. App. 1988).

But is required where no accident occurs. Where no accident occurred, the claimant is required to show that the heart attack was proximately caused by an unusual or extraordinary overexertion arising out of the claimant's employment. Prestige Homes, Inc. v. Legouffe, 658 P.2d 850 (Colo. 1983).

Heart attack victim's work activities compared to normal work activity. A claimant's work activities near the time of a heart attack must be compared to his normal work activities to determine if the former were unusual; activities claimant would have participated in had he not been working are irrelevant. Townley Hdwe.

Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 636 P.2d 1341 (Colo. App. 1981).

The "unusual overexertion" doctrine must be applied according to the employee's work history. The employee's activities near the time of a heart attack must be compared to his normal work activities in order to determine if the former were unusual. Claimants In re Kohler v. Indus. Comm'n, 671 P.2d 1002 (Colo. App. 1983); Vialpando v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 757 P.2d 1152 (Colo. App. 1988).

Unusual duties may require more, or less, or the same exertion as do the normal activities of an employee. And, it is incumbent upon the claimant to prove unusual exertion in the performance of his duties. Claim of Henricks, 676 P.2d 1220 (Colo. App. 1983).

"Unusual" exertion may be of a kind that recurs. Where decedent was employed as a security guard and suffered a heart attack while preparing for his annual physical fitness test, the exertion was unusual within the meaning of subsection (2). Wackenhut Corp. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 975 P.2d 1131 (Colo. App. 1997).

A heart attack resulting from unusual mental stress or tension arising out of and in the course of employment is compensable. City & County of Denver v. Indus. Comm'n, 40 Colo. App. 202, 573 P.2d 562 (1977), modified, 195 Colo. 431, 579 P.2d 80 (1978); Matter of Carr v. Indus. Comm'n, 709 P.2d 52 (Colo. App. 1985); Vialpando v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 757 P.2d 1152 (Colo. App. 1988).

Even if events preceding heart attack constituted unusual exertion, a finding that such events did not cause heart attack is fatal to claim for benefits. Kinninger v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 759 P.2d 766 (Colo. App. 1988).

8-41-303. Loaning employer liable for compensation. Where an employer, who has accepted the provisions of articles 40 to 47 of this title and has complied therewith, loans the service of any of the employer's employees who have accepted the provisions of said articles to any third person, the employer shall be liable for any compensation thereafter for any injuries or death of said employee as provided in said articles, unless it appears from the evidence in said case that said loaning constitutes a new contract of hire, express or implied, between the employee whose services were loaned and the person to whom the employee was loaned.

ANNOTATION

The common law rule that a worker can simultaneously be the employee of two persons applies to cases arising under the workers' compensation act. The rule allows an employee to be simultaneously in the general employment of one employer and in the special employment of another, provided the employee

When unusual or extraordinary stress may occur. For purposes of determining the right to workmen's compensation, "unusual or extraordinary" stress may occur while the employee is engaged in activities of the same general type as those in which he is regularly employed. City & County of Denver v. Indus. Comm'n, 40 Colo. App. 202, 573 P.2d 562 (1977), modified, 195 Colo. 431, 579 P.2d 80 (1978); Matter of Carr v. Indus. Comm'n, 709 P.2d 52 (Colo. App. 1985).

Standard of review for claim based upon heart condition. Where a claim for benefits was based upon the claimant's heart condition, the appropriate standard for the industrial commission's review was whether the claimant's heart condition was the result of an accident, injury, or occupational disease which meets the conditions of § 8-52-102. Eisenberg v. Indus. Comm'n, 624 P.2d 361 (Colo. App. 1981).

Medical certainty of heart attack cause not necessary. The evidence must establish a causal connection between unusual exertion and a heart attack with reasonable probability, but it need not establish it with reasonable "medical" certainty. Townley Hdwe. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 636 P.2d 1341 (Colo. App. 1981).

And evidence of emotional or mental tension is not prerequisite to recovery for a heart attack caused by job-related overexertion and stress. Townley Hdwe. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 636 P.2d 1341 (Colo. App. 1981).

Expert medical testimony not required to prove causal connection between heart attack and employment and circumstantial evidence may be sufficient to prove such causal connection. In re Talbert, 694 P.2d 864 (Colo. App. 1984).

understands that he or she is submitting to the control of the special employer. In the dual employment situation, the employee's only remedy for an injury sustained while in the course of employment with the borrowing employer is through worker's compensation. A separate tort action against the special employer is barred.

Evans v. Webster, 832 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991).

Unless there is new contract of hire, loaned employee does not become covered employee. Where an employee is loaned to another by his covered employer, he does not become a covered employee of the other, nor does the other become a covered employer unless a new contract of hire is made between the employee and the borrowing employer. Continental Sales Corp. v. Stookesberry, 170 Colo. 16, 459 P.2d 566 (1969); Continental Sales Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 31 Colo. App. 223, 501 P.2d 90 (1972).

Thus, when an employer loans an employee he remains liable for injuries to or death of that loaned employee "... unless it shall appear from the evidence in said case that said loaning constitutes a new contract of hire, express or implied, between the employee whose services were loaned and the person to whom he was loaned". Rocky Mt. Dairy Prods. v. Pease, 161 Colo. 216, 422 P.2d 630 (1966).

"Loaned employee" may maintain negligence action. A "loaned employee" and an "employee" under workmen's compensation are not the same, and no provision prohibits or limits a "loaned employee" from maintaining a negligence action against the borrowing employer. Continental Sales Corp. v. Stookesberry, 170 Colo. 16, 459 P.2d 566 (1969).

For no provision of the workmen's compensation act either specifically or impliedly grants immunity from common-law liability for injury to one who borrows the services of an employee from an employer who has a policy of workmen's compensation insurance. The loaning employer is the only employer whose compliance with the workmen's compensation act makes him immune from a common-law action for injury to the loaned employee. Continental Sales Corp. v. Stookesberry, 170 Colo. 16, 459 P.2d 566 (1969).

But employee loaned for special purpose is employee of borrowing company. Where an employee of one company is loaned to another for a special purpose and while engaged in such purpose is injured, he is an employee of the borrowing company with the attendant rights and duties incident thereto. Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 319 P.2d 975 (1957).

And the special employee loses the right to sue the special employer at common law for negligence. But the courts have usually been vigilant in insisting upon a showing of a deliberate and informed consent by the employee before employment relation will be held a bar to common law suit. Continental Sales Corp. v. Stookesberry, 170 Colo. 16, 459 P.2d 566 (1969).

There are nine criteria relevant to determining whether a special employment relationship exists. They are: (1) Whether the borrowing employer has the right to control the employee's conduct; (2) whether the employee is performing the borrowing employer's work; (3) whether there was an agreement between the original and borrowing employer; (4) whether the employee has acquiesced in the arrangement; (5) whether the borrowing employer had the right to terminate the employee; (6) whether the borrowing employer furnished the tools and place for performance; (7) whether the new employment was to be for a considerable length of time; (8) whether the borrowing employer had the obligation to pay the employee; and (9) whether the original employer terminated its relationship with the employee. Evans v. Webster, 832 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991).

Of the nine criteria, three are decisive: Whether the employee has acquiesced in the arrangement; whether the borrowing employer has the right to control the employee's conduct; and, whether the borrowing employer had the right to terminate the employee. Evans v. Webster, 932 P. 2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991).

A tort suit against a special employer is barred by the workers' compensation act when an employee consents to work for the special employer pursuant to a contract of hire within the workers' compensation act and the employee is an employee of both the general and special employer. Evans v. Webster, 832 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991).

Truck driver special employee of carrier. Truck driver, whose general employer lent him to a carrier pursuant to a lease, became a special employee of the carrier for the purposes of liability for workmen's compensation. Archer Freight Lines v. Horn Transp., Inc., 32 Colo. App. 412, 514 P.2d 330 (1973).

Applied in Horn Transp., Inc. v. Claimants in re Death of Wards, 40 Colo. App. 395, 576 P.2d 195 (1978).

8-41-304. Last employer liable - exception. (1) Where compensation is payable for an occupational disease, the employer in whose employment the employee was last injuriously exposed to the hazards of such disease and suffered a substantial permanent aggravation thereof and the insurance carrier, if any, on the risk when such employee was last so exposed under such employer shall alone be liable therefor, without right to contribution from any prior employer or insurance carrier. In the case of silicosis, asbestosis, or anthracosis, the only employer and insurance carrier liable shall be the last employer in whose employment the employee was last exposed to harmful quantities of silicon dioxide (SiO<sub>2</sub>) dust, asbestos dust, or coal dust on each of at least sixty days or more and the insurance carrier, if any, on the risk when the employee was last so exposed under such employer.

(2) In any case where an employee of an employer becomes disabled from silicosis, asbestosis, anthracosis, or poisoning or disease caused by exposure to radioactive materials, substances, or machines or to fissionable materials, or any type of malignancy caused thereby, or in the event death results from silicosis, asbestosis, anthracosis, or poisoning or disease caused by exposure to radioactive materials, substances, or machines or to fissionable materials, or any type of malignancy caused thereby, and, if such employee has been injuriously exposed to such diseases while in the employ of another employer during the employee's lifetime, the last employer or that employer's insurance carrier, if any, shall be liable for compensation and medical benefits as provided by articles 40 to 47 of this title, including funeral expenses and death benefits.

Annotator's note. Since § 8-41-304 is similar to § 8-51-112 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Constitutional guarantees of equal protection not violated by overall statutory scheme for assessing and apportioning liability among different classes of employees because legitimate governmental interest to encourage the employment of partially disabled persons is furthered. Electron Corp. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 833 P.2d 821 (Colo. App. 1992).

Liability on last employer not violative of equal protection. The imposition of liability of the last employer, while absolving all previous employers from liability, does not violate equal protection. Union Carbide Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 196 Colo. 56, 581 P.2d 734 (1978).

Legislative purpose. The overriding legislative purpose in enacting this section was that losses due to industrial illness be compensated. Claimants in re Death of Garner v. Vanadium Corp. of Am., 194 Colo. 358, 572 P.2d 1205 (1977).

"Employer" means "Colorado employer". It is clear that "employer" as used in subsection (1) of this section cannot subject to liability an out-of-state employer even when it is the last "employer". A reasonable reading of the act leads to the conclusion that "employer" means, prima facie, "Colorado employer". Claimants in re Death of Garner v. Vanadium Corp. of Am., 194 Colo. 358, 572 P.2d 1205 (1977).

Section takes precedence over § 8-51-106 (1)(a) (now § 8-46-101). The specific provisions of this section, applicable to occupational disease, take precedence over the general provisions of § 8-51-106 (1)(a) (now § 8-46-101), applicable to "injury", notwithstanding that the statutory definition of injury, § 8-41-108 (2), includes occupational disease. Denver v. Hansen, 650 P.2d 1319 (Colo. App. 1982).

The common law rule that a "special employment" relationship exists whenever an employer provisionally assigns to another employer the services of an employee who thereby surrenders to the borrowing employer the right of control over the employee's actions applies to cases arising under the Workers' Compensation Act and allows an employee to be simultaneously in the general employment of one employer and in the special employment of another, provided the employee understands that he or she is submitting to the control of the special employer. Evans v. Webster, 832 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991).

A separate tort action against a special employer was barred in dual employment situation and the employee's only remedy for an injury sustained while in the course of employment with the borrowing employer is through workers' compensation. Evans v. Webster, 832 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991).

The criteria considered by courts to be relevant in the determination of whether a special employment relationship exists are (1) whether the borrowing employer has the right to control the employee's conduct; (2) whether the employee is performing the borrowing employer's work; (3) whether there was an agreement between the original and borrowing employer;

(4) whether the employee has acquiesced in the arrangement; (5) whether the borrowing employer had the right to terminate the employee; (6) whether the borrowing employer furnished the tools and place for performance; (7) whether the new employment was to be for a considerable length of time; (8) whether the borrowing employer had the obligation to pay the employee; and (9) whether the original employer terminated its relationship with the employee. Evans v. Webster, 832 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991).

Application of facts to the test of a loaned employee relationship was a question of law where the facts relating to the nature of claimant's work activities and claimant's consent to work for employer were not in dispute. Evans v. Webster, 832 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991).

Liability fixed as of date of last injurious exposure. This statutory provision and a similar provision, former § 8-60-113 (1), evidences a legislative intent to impose liability for injury resulting from an occupational disease on the basis of the date of the last injurious exposure to the hazards of the disease, rather than the date of the initial onset of the disease. Martinez v. Indus. Comm'n, 40 Colo. App. 485, 580 P.2d 36 (1978).

"Injurious exposure" defined. An injurious exposure is a concentration of toxic material which would be sufficient to cause the disease in the event of prolonged exposure to such concentration. Union Carbide Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 40 Colo. App. 182, 573 P.2d 938 (1977), aff'd, 196 Colo. 56, 581 P.2d 734 (1978).

The length of exposure is immaterial. Union Carbide Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 40 Colo. App. 182, 573 P.2d 938 (1977), aff'd, 196 Colo. 56, 581 P.2d 734 (1978).

The employee is not required to ascertain the exact amount that each employer contributed in causing his or her occupational disease, nor is he or she required to pin point exactly which employer most injuriously exposed the claimant. Instead, such an employee is allowed to recover from the last employer in whose employ the last injurious exposure occurred and resulted in an aggravation that is both permanent and substantial. Monfort, Inc. v. Rangel, 867 P.2d 122 (Colo. App. 1993).

Compliance with federal guidelines for safe standards of radiation is immaterial to liability under workmen's compensation statute. Union Carbide Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 40 Colo. App. 182, 573 P.2d 938 (1977), aff'd, 196 Colo. 56, 581 P.2d 734 (1978).

Last injurious exposure need not cause a worsening of condition. Redfield Scope Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 689 P.2d 657 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 723 P.2d 731 (Colo. 1986).

Last injurious exposure rule applied only to compensation benefits, including temporary disability benefits. Royal Globe Ins. Co. v. Collins, 723 P.2d 731 (Colo. 1986).

Last injurious exposure rule is applicable only to determine apportionment of full liability for occupational diseases among the parties who could potentially be liable. Robbins Flower Shop v. Cinea, 894 P.2d 63 (Colo. App. 1995).

This section does not require that the last injurious exposure be the cause in fact of the disease. Union Carbide Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 40 Colo. App. 182, 573 P.2d 938 (1977), aff'd, 196 Colo. 56, 581 P.2d 734 (1978); Royal Globe Ins. Co. v. Collins, 723 P.2d 731 (Colo. 1986).

But liability limited. The last employer which injuriously exposes an employee to toxic materials is liable only for the initial occupational disease benefits and any additional benefits are paid out of the subsequent injury fund to which all employers contribute. Union Carbide Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 196 Colo. 56, 581 P.2d 734 (1978).

This section establishes the "last injurious exposure" rule for disabilities attributable to occupational diseases and is an exception to the general rule set forth in § 8-51-106(1)(a), (now § 8-46-101) providing that the employer and its insurance carrier in whose employment the employee was "last injuriously exposed to the hazards of such disease" shall have full responsibility for that part of the permanent total disability caused by the occupational disease. Subsequent Injury Fund v. Grant, 827 P.2d 574 (Colo. App. 1991).

The phrase, "any type of malignancy caused thereby" must be construed broadly, not narrowly, in order to avoid thwarting policy on which subsequent injury fund provisions are based. The phrase includes cancer caused by exposure to asbestos and not simply "asbestosis" as strictly defined. Henderson v. RSI, Inc., 824 P.2d 91 (Colo. App. 1991).

The phrase, "any type of malignancy caused thereby", refers to all preceding conditions listed in subsection (2), and does not limit the liability of the subsequent injury fund to disability resulting from asbestosis, as opposed to cancer resulting from asbestosis. Subsequent Injury Fund v. Comp. Ins. Auth., 768 P.2d 751 (Colo. App. 1988).

Where employee died of lung cancer incurred as a result of his exposure to radioactive materials during his work as uranium miner for several employers, last employer was liable for benefits even though last exposure of eight days duration was probably not the cause in fact of the disease. Union Carbide Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 40 Colo. App. 182, 573 P.2d 938 (1977), aff'd, 196 Colo. 56, 581 P.2d 734 (1978).

Section not applied when employee's back was reinjured. Reinjury of back did not implicate the "last injurious exposure" rule. Univ.

Park Care Ctr. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 43 P.3d 637 (Colo. App. 2001).

Where claimant's permanent total disability is solely attributable to the occupational disease of silicosis, employer is correctly assessed full liability for claimant's disability benefits. Electron Corp. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 833 P.2d 821 (Colo. App. 1992).

Where a worker's permanent total disability has been caused by the combination of two or more injuries and the subsequent occupational disease of silicosis, liability is apportioned. Liability for that portion of the permanent total disability directly attributable to silicosis is governed by this section. Climax Molybdenum Co. v. Walter, 812 P.2d 1168 (Colo. 1991).

Claimant need not be totally disabled solely as a result of asbestosis to qualify for compensation under subsection (2). If asbestosis is the proximate cause of the claimant's disability, i.e., the necessary precondition for the disability, then, even where the claimant was a heavy cigarette smoker, the disability is caused by asbestos is within the meaning of this section. Subsequent Injury Fund v. Comp. Ins. Auth., 768 P.2d 751 (Colo. App. 1988), aff'd, 793 P.2d 580 (Colo. 1990).

Employer properly assessed with full liability for claimant's disability benefits where claimant's permanent total disability is solely attributable to the occupational disease of silicosis. Electron Corp. v. Indus. Claims Appeals Office, 833 P.2d 821 (Colo. App. 1992).

Subsequent injury fund may be held liable for interest on award. Henderson v. RSI, Inc., 824 P.2d 91 (Colo. App. 1991).

The subsequent injury fund was not liable for compensation in excess of ten thousand dollars although the decedent was employed by more than one employer. The decedent's radiation exposure after the date the new employer became the manager of the plant was found to be insufficient to constitute an injurious exposure. Dow Chemical Co. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 843 P.2d 122 (Colo. App. 1992) (decided prior to 1993 amendment to subsection (2)).

An occupational disease or disability "occurs", within the meaning of § 8-46-104, on the onset of disability, rather than upon the date of diagnosis. Union Carbide Corp. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 128 P.3d 319 (Colo. App. 2005).

An employer's total liability, including interest, cannot exceed ten thousand dollars, and any interest payable that exceeds the employer's maximum obligation remains the sole obligation of the fund. Subsequent Injury Fund

v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 859 P.2d 276 (Colo. App. 1993).

Where diagnosis occurred before April 1, 1994, the subsequent injury fund was liable for benefits claimed under previous version of statute for disability caused by exposure to radioactive materials even though decedent died after such date. Subsequent Injury Fund v. King, 961 P.2d 575 (Colo. App. 1998).

Payment of interest. The interest awarded in excess of the $7,500 award is payable out of the subsequent injury fund, rather than by employer and insurance company. Union Carbide Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 40 Colo. App. 182, 573 P.2d 938 (1977), aff'd, 196 Colo. 56, 581 P.2d 734 (1978).

The addition of the phrase "substantial permanent aggravation" to subsection (1) did not eliminate or change the last injurious exposure test for causation. The phrase does not reflect an intent of the general assembly to depart from the principles set forth in Royal Globe Ins. Co. v. Collins, 713 P.2d 731 (Colo. 1986), including rejection of the contribution test for application of a last injurious exposure standard to occupational diseases caused by physical activities. Monfort, Inc. v. Rangel, 867 P.2d 122 (Colo. App. 1993).

Under the present version of subsection (1), the length of employment with a particular employer continues to be immaterial to a finding of liability. Instead, the focus is now on both the harmful nature of the concentration of the exposure and the magnitude of the effect of such exposure. Monfort, Inc. v. Rangel, 867 P.2d 122 (Colo. App. 1993).

Claimant's tort suit against the employer was barred by the Workers' Compensation Act as a matter of law where claimant had consented to work for the employer pursuant to a contract of hire within the meaning of the Act and she was an employee of both a dual employer and the employer. Evans v. Webster, 832 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991).

Where the administrative law judge determined, based on the evidence, that claimant's disability arose from an upper extremity injury during claimant's tenure with employer, evidence that claimant sustained an aggravation of his condition upon return to self-employment was not relevant. Delta Drywall v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 868 P.2d 1155 (Colo. App. 1993).

CONTRACTORS AND LESSEES

8-41-401. Lessor contractor-out deemed employer - liability - recovery.

(1) (a) Any person, company, or corporation operating or engaged in or conducting any business by leasing or contracting out any part or all of the work thereof to any lessee, sublessee, contractor, or subcontractor, irrespective of the number of employees engaged in such work, shall be construed to be an employer as defined in articles 40 to 47 of this title and shall be liable as provided in said articles to pay compensation for injury or death resulting therefrom to said lessees, sublessees, contractors, and subcontractors and their employees or employees' dependents, except as otherwise provided in subsection (3) of this section.

(a.5) The general assembly hereby finds and determines that the decision of the Colorado court of appeals in the case of Newsom v. Frank M. Hall & Co., No. 02CA1375 (February 26, 2004), in which the court held that an independent contractor may be an entity other than a natural person, did not accurately reflect the intent of the general assembly when it passed Senate Bill 93-132 and Senate Bill 95-072. The general assembly hereby declares that the term "individual", as used in this section and in section 8-40-202, means a natural person.

(b) The employer, before commencing said work, shall insure and keep insured against all liability as provided in said articles, and such lessee, sublessee, contractor, or subcontractor, as well as any employee thereof, shall be deemed employees as defined in said articles. The employer shall be entitled to recover the cost of such insurance from said lessee, sublessee, contractor, or subcontractor and may withhold and deduct the same from the contract price or any royalties or other money due, owing, or to become due said lessee, sublessee, contractor, or subcontractor.

(2) If said lessee, sublessee, contractor, or subcontractor is also an employer in the doing of such work and, before commencing such work, insures and keeps insured its liability for compensation as provided in articles 40 to 47 of this title, neither said lessee, sublessee, contractor, or subcontractor, its employees, or its insurer shall have any right of contribution or action of any kind, including actions under section 8-41-203, against the person, company, or corporation operating or engaged in or conducting any business by leasing or contracting out any part or all of the work thereof, or against its employees, servants, or agents.

(3) Notwithstanding any provision of this section or section 8-41-402 to the contrary, any individual who is excluded from the definition of employee pursuant to section 8-40-202 (2), or a working general partner or sole proprietor who is not covered under a policy of workers' compensation insurance, or a corporate officer or member of a limited liability company who executes and files an election to reject coverage under section 8-41-202 (1) shall not have any cause of action of any kind under articles 40 to 47 of this title. Nothing in this section shall be construed to restrict the right of any such individual to elect to proceed against a third party in accordance with the provisions of section 8-41-203. The total amount of damages recoverable pursuant to any cause of action resulting from a work-related injury brought by such individual that would otherwise have been compensable under articles 40 to 47 of this title shall not exceed fifteen thousand dollars, except in any cause of action brought against another not in the same employ.

(4) (a) Notwithstanding any provision of this section to the contrary, any person, company, or corporation who contracts with a landowner or lessee of a farm or ranch to perform a specified farming or ranching operation shall, prior to entering into such contract, provide for and maintain, for the period of such contract, workers' compensation coverage pursuant to articles 40 to 47 of this title covering all the employees and laborers to be utilized under such contract. Proof of such coverage on forms or certificates issued by the insurer shall be provided to the person, company, or corporation contracting for the labor prior to performing such contract.

(b) Any person, company, or corporation contracting with a landowner or lessee of a farm or ranch to provide a specified farming or ranching operation who fails to provide coverage pursuant to subsection (1) of this section or who fails to maintain such coverage for the term of the contract is guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than sixty days, or by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(c) Notwithstanding any provision of this section to the contrary, no person, company, or corporation contracting with a landowner or lessee of a farm or ranch operation to perform a specified farming or ranching operation nor any employee of such person, company, or corporation required to be covered by workers' compensation pursuant to this subsection (4) shall have any right of contribution from, or any action of any kind, including actions under section 8-41-203, against, the person, company, or corporation contracting to have such agricultural labor performed.

(d) (I) If any person, company, or corporation contracting to provide labor to perform specified farming or ranching operations and required to provide workers' compensation coverage pursuant to articles 40 to 47 of this title fails to provide such coverage and the person, company, or corporation for whom the labor is provided incurs any liability thereby, the person, company, or corporation providing the labor shall be subject to a cause of action for said liability and for reasonable attorney fees.

(II) If the person, company, or corporation for whom the labor for the performance of a specified farming or ranching operation is provided is sued by the injured employee, said person, company, or corporation may join the person, company, or corporation providing the labor as a third-party defendant in lieu of filing an independent action.

(5) The provisions of this section shall not apply to licensed real estate brokers and licensed real estate sales agents, as regulated in article 61 of title 12, C.R.S., who are excluded from the definition of employee pursuant to section 8-40-301 (2).

(6) Notwithstanding any provision of this section to the contrary, any person, company, or corporation operating a commercial vehicle as defined in section 42-4-235 (1) (a), C.R.S., who holds oneself or itself out as an independent contractor only to perform for-hire transportation, including loading and unloading, and who contracts to perform a specific transportation job, transportation task, or transportation delivery for another person, company, or corporation is not entering into an employee and employer relationship for purposes of workers' compensation coverage pursuant to articles 40 to 47 of this title. Nothing in this subsection (6) shall be construed to prohibit a determination that an individual is excluded from the definition of employee pursuant to section 8-40-202 (2) if such individual is operating a commercial vehicle as defined in section 42-4-235 (1) (a), C.R.S.

(7) This section shall not apply to any person excluded from the definition of "employee" pursuant to section 8-40-301 (5) or (7).

ANNOTATION

I. General Consideration.

II. Liability of Lessor or Employer.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For note, "Uranium Mining Lease", see 27 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 425 (1955). For article, "One Year Review of Corporations, Partnership and Agency", see 37 Dicta 11

(1960). For article, "Independent Contractors and the Colorado Workers' Compensation Act — Parts I and II", see 22 Colo. Law. 545 and 1281 (1993). For article, "Update on Colorado Appellate Decisions in Workers' Compensation Law", see 33 Colo. Law. 117 (November 2004).

Annotator's note. (1) Since § 8-41-401 is similar to § 8-48-101 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

(2) Cases included in the annotations to this section which refer to the industrial commission were decided prior to the enactment of 1986 Senate Bill No. 12 which abolished said commission and transferred some of its powers, duties, and functions under the act to the industrial claim appeals office.

This section is constitutional. Indus. Comm'n v. Hammond, 77 Colo. 414, 236 P. 1006 (1925); Maryland Cas. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 86 Colo. 553, 283 P. 548 (1929).

This section does not deprive one of due process and equal protection. Ellerman v. Amax, Inc., 194 Colo. 392, 572 P.2d 836 (1977).

Furthermore, this section is not class legislation and not unconstitutional on that ground. Neither is this section unconstitutional because inconsistent with § 8-41-105; they may be construed together. Flick v. Indus. Comm'n, 78 Colo. 117, 239 P. 1022 (1925).

Subsection (3), limiting damages available to one who waives workers' compensation insurance, is constitutional. The amount of the cap on damages was arrived at through legislative compromise in an effort to address the competing concerns of providing support for sole proprietors while encouraging participation in the workers' compensation system and protecting the interests of builders and general contractors. It is not special legislation nor does it deprive claimants of property without due process. Snook v. Joyce Homes, Inc., 215 P.3d 1210 (Colo. App. 2009).

Not modification of § 8-41-105. The contracting-out provision of this section does not modify the exemption for farm and ranch labor of § 8-41-105. Hefley v. Morales, 197 Colo. 523, 595 P.2d 233 (1979).

Section also held to comport with constitutional provisions on due process, equal protection, and special legislation. O'Quinn v. Walt Disney Prods., Inc., 177 Colo. 190, 493 P.2d 344 (1972).

The creation of the classification of statutory employers and employees under this section is not a denial of equal protection. Edwards v. Price, 191 Colo. 46, 550 P.2d 856 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1056, 97 S. Ct. 778, 50 L. Ed.2d 773 (1977); Buzard v. Super Walls, Inc., 681 P.2d 520 (Colo. 1984).

While this section does not bar negligence actions by employees of one subcontractor against another subcontractor, nor negligence actions by employees of the general contractor against a subcontractor, but employees of a subcontractor are barred from bringing an action against the general contractor, this classification does not deny equal protection of the laws, since the classification is not based upon "a suspect classification", nor does it infringe upon "a fundamental right", and it satisfies the "rational basis" test. Edwards v. Price, 191 Colo. 46, 550 P.2d 856 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1056, 97 S. Ct. 778, 50 L. Ed.2d 773 (1977).

The purpose of this section is to prevent the avoidance of the insurance contract by calling the relation one of principal and independent contractor when such relation does not exist. The statute is intended to cover every business conducted by one through the activities of another under any kind of a contract. Indus. Comm'n v. Bracken, 83 Colo. 72, 262 P. 521 (1927); Rogers v. Solem, 103 Colo. 52, 83 P.2d 154 (1938); Zimmerman v. Indus. Comm'n, 109 Colo. 533, 127 P.2d 878 (1942); Faith Realty & Dev. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 170 Colo. 215, 460 P.2d 228 (1969); Morales v. Indus. Comm'n, 41 Colo. App. 180, 584 P.2d 1229 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 197 Colo. 523, 595 P.2d 233 (1979).

The statutory intent behind this statute is to prevent employers from evading compensation coverage by contracting-out work instead of directly hiring the workmen. San Isabel Elec. Ass'n v. Bramer, 182 Colo. 15, 510 P.2d 438 (1973).

To implement the general purpose of the workmen's compensation laws, this section was enacted to prevent an employer from avoiding responsibility under the workmen's compensation act by contracting-out his work to an uninsured subcontractor. Frohlick Crane Serv., Inc. v. Mack, 182 Colo. 34, 510 P.2d 891 (1973); Hefley v. Morales, 197 Colo. 523, 595 P.2d 233 (1979).

State policy. It is the policy in Colorado to make the more financially solvent general contractor ultimately responsible for workmen's compensation benefits arising out of injuries to employees of all subcontractors. Edwards v. Price, 191 Colo. 46, 550 P.2d 856 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1056, 97 S. Ct. 778, 50 L. Ed.2d 773 (1977).

It is the general contractor to whom the employees of all subcontractors may look for workmen's compensation if their immediate employer is uninsured or financially irresponsible. This distinguishes the general contractor from the subcontractor and is the rationale which sustains the different treatment accorded general contractors by statute. Edwards v. Price, 191 Colo. 46, 550 P.2d 856 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1056, 97 S. Ct. 778, 50 L. Ed.2d 773 (1977).

Basis for policy. The public policy upon which the workmen's compensation act is founded derives from the need to provide monetary relief for workmen injured in the course of their employment, regardless of the negligence of the employer or the lack of negligence on the part of the employee. Edwards v. Price, 191 Colo. 46, 550 P.2d 856 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1056, 97 S. Ct. 778, 50 L. Ed.2d 773 (1977).

Burden of proof in workers' compensation case rests on the employer asserting the affirmative defense that the section bars the independent contractor from bringing such a claim. Stampados v. Colo. D & S Enters., 833 P.2d 815 (Colo. App. 1992).

Section bars only claims by independent contractors who have the option of obtaining workers' compensation insurance under the listed statutes and fail to do so, therefore it can apply only to those independent contractors who are corporate officers, working partners, individual employers, or employers in general who do not obtain insurance coverage. Stampados v. Colo. D & S Enters., 833 P.2d 815 (Colo. App. 1992).

Award based upon erroneous interpretation of law sustained if award proper absent misinterpretation. Even though a court may determine that the industrial commission erroneously interpreted the law, if the commission's award would have been correct had the law been properly interpreted, that award will be sustained. Univ. of Colo. Med. Center v. Indus. Comm'n, 622 P.2d 596 (Colo. App. 1980).

A supplier is not a subcontractor within meaning of this section. While statutory employer provisions have been liberally construed by the courts, it is not every relationship that constitutes a contract within the purview of the act. Thus, the term "subcontractor" is not intended to include suppliers of goods and materials. This construction rests not only upon the legal distinction between a "subcontractor" and a "supplier", but also upon recognition that if this section were applied to ordinary sales of merchandise, business dealings would be seriously hampered. Doyle v. Missouri Valley Contractors, Inc., 288 F. Supp. 121 (D. Colo. 1968).

Lessor is liable irrespective of the number of men employed. The liability of the lessor of a business, under the workmen's compensation act, is fixed by this section, irrespective of the number of men employed. Indus. Comm'n v. Hammond, 77 Colo. 414, 236 P. 1006 (1925).

Likewise, a person operating or engaged in a business, who contracts out a part or all of the work to another contractor or subcontractor, is an employer regardless of the number of employees engaged in the work. Snyder v. Indus. Comm'n, 138 Colo. 523, 335 P.2d 543 (1959).

A person need not be engaged in a business in order to be considered an employer under the Workers' Compensation Act. Evans v. Webster, 832 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991).

Without control one is not a statutory employer. An owner who leases equipment to a corporation for use in the corporation's business, and who has no control or interest in such business or in its operation, is not an employer within the meaning of this section. Flake Motors

v. Huskins, 128 Colo. 414, 262 P.2d 736 (1953); Indus. Comm'n v. Vancil, 133 Colo. 238, 293 P.2d 641 (1956); White v. Indus. Comm'n, 140 Colo. 11, 342 P.2d 688 (1959).

But where the claimant and the equipment are admittedly under the exclusive control, and subject at all times to the exclusive direction of a company when claimant begins an interstate journey in consummation of the business objectives of the company, he becomes a special employee of that company so far as liability for payment of workmen's compensation is concerned. Am. Red Ball Transit Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 145 Colo. 509, 359 P.2d 1018 (1961).

Statutory employment relationship is not predicated on a finding of employer control. Rather, the alleged statutory employer's control over the employee is but one method of demonstrating the importance of the contracted services to the alleged employer. Virginians Heritage Square Co. v. Smith, 808 P.2d 366 (Colo. App. 1991); Finlay v. Storage Tech. Corp., 733 P.2d 322 (Colo. App. 1986), aff'd, 764 P.2d 62 (Colo. 1988).

In contrast to the borrowed employee relationship, the statutory employment relationship does not rest upon a finding of employer control. Evans v. Webster, 832 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991).

Test for statutory employer. Company is a statutory employer if it engages in contract work when: (1) The work contracted out is a part of the normal business of the company contracting out such business and (2) the work contracted out is business which the company would ordinarily accomplish with its own employees. Campbell v. Black Mountain Spruce, Inc., 677 P.2d 379 (Colo. App. 1983).

For purposes of deciding whether company qualifies as "statutory employer" of independent contractor's employees, work that company contracts out may constitute part of its regular business operation, even though it does not contribute directly to particular business in which company is engaged. Finlay v. Storage Tech. Corp., 733 P.2d 322 (Colo. App. 1986), aff'd, 764 P.2d 62 (Colo. 1988); Humphrey v. Whole Foods Mkt. Rocky Mtn., 250 P.3d 706 (Colo. App. 2010).

And fact that work is always performed by independent contractor is not material in deciding whether work is part of contracting party's regular business operation under workers' compensation statute. Finlay v. Storage Tech. Corp., 733 P.2d 322 (Colo. App. 1986), aff'd, 764 P.2d 62 (Colo. 1988).

One can be a statutory employer and liable for benefits under this section even if the work contracted out is casual and not related to the business or profession of the property owner. O'Neill v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 778 P.2d 295 (Colo. App. 1989).

Regular business is defined by its total business operation considering elements of routineness, regularity, and importance of contracted service to the employer. Finlay v. Storage Tech. Corp., 764 P.2d 62 (Colo. 1988); Porta-Pacific v. Smithers, 781 P.2d 147 (Colo. App. 1989); Littlefield v. Mobil Exploration & Producing, North Am., Inc., 988 F. Supp. 1403 (D. Utah 1996); Rowan v. Vail Holdings, Inc., 31 F. Supp.2d 889 (D. Colo. 1998).

Thus, this section by definition extends the concepts of employer and employee far beyond the meanings of these terms at common law. By such extension there have been introduced into the nomenclature of the law on master and servant the terms statutory employer and statutory employee. Snyder v. Indus. Comm'n, 138 Colo. 523, 335 P.2d 543 (1959); Morales v. Indus. Comm'n, 41 Colo. App. 180, 584 P.2d 1229 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 197 Colo. 523, 595 P.2d 233 (1979).

And to bring this section into application the test is whether the subcontracted work is part of the regular business of the constructive employer as the statute covers all situations in which the subcontracted work is such part of his regular business operation as the statutory employer ordinarily would accomplish with his own employees. Pioneer Constr. Co. v. Davis, 152 Colo. 121, 381 P.2d 22 (1963); Gardner Motor Co. v. Feistel, 160 Colo. 135, 414 P.2d 915 (1966); San Isabel Elec. Ass'n v. Bramer, 31 Colo. App. 134, 500 P.2d 821 (1972); Posey v. Intermountain Rural Elec. Ass'n, 41 Colo. App. 7, 583 P.2d 303 (1978).

Condominium owner was a statutory employer of house cleaner hired by maintenance company where owner, although using condominium unit as a second residence, was also in the regular business of renting it out. Thornbury v. Allen, 39 P.3d 1195 (Colo. App. 2001).

Alleged statutory employer was exempt from operation of this section where its primary business was to lease property for investment purposes. The fact that the lease contained provisions specifically applicable to business of lessee was not sufficient to show that lessor was involved in lessee's business. Virginians Heritage Square Co. v. Smith, 808 P.2d 366 (Colo. App. 1991).

General contractor remains statutory employer of subcontractor's employee and is entitled to a corresponding immunity from suit, despite the fact that the subcontractor is an independent contractor of the general contractor. The exception stated in subsection (1)(a) (now subsection (3)) of this section applies only to individuals working as independent contractors and to individual partners, members, corporate officers, and sole proprietors who have waived coverage under the workers' compensation act. Frank M. Hall & Co. v. Newsom, 125 P.3d 444 (Colo. 2005) (decided prior to the 2004 amendment to subsection (1)(a) and adoption of subsection (1)(a.5)).

Employer's past practices are relevant in determining whether an employer is a statutory or constructive employer. San Isabel Elec. Ass'n v. Bramer, 182 Colo. 15, 510 P.2d 438 (1973); Campbell v. Black Mountain Spruce, Inc., 677 P.2d 379 (Colo. App. 1983).

Trucking company by statute construed to be employer. Where the work contracted out by trucking company was part of its regular business operation that ordinarily would have been accomplished by its own employees, under such circumstances, trucking company is by statute construed to be an employer. Archer Freight Lines v. Horn Transp., Inc., 32 Colo. App. 412, 514 P.2d 330 (1973).

Governmental entity cannot be a constructive employer pursuant to subsection (1). Antal v. Delta County Mosquito Control Dist. No. 1, 644 P.2d 87 (Colo. App. 1982).

Parent corporation, sued by employee of its wholly-owned subsidiary, is not an "employer" entitled to immunity from tort liability under the workmen's compensation act. Peterson v. Trailways, Inc., 555 F. Supp. 827 (D. Colo. 1983).

Parent company was a statutory employer where court found an implied contract existed between parent and subsidiary in which there was a mutuality of obligation. Therefore, parent company was immune from suit pursuant to subsection (1)(a). Rowan v. Vail Holdings, Inc., 31 F. Supp.2d 889 (D. Colo. 1998).

This section is not intended to apply to employers otherwise exempted. Hefley v. Morales, 197 Colo. 523, 595 P.2d 233 (1979).

Whether a person or entity has the status of statutory employer is generally a question of fact. Thornbury v. Allen, 991 P.2d 335 (Colo. App. 1999); Humphrey v. Whole Foods Mkt. Rocky Mtn., 250 P.3d 706 (Colo. App. 2010).

However, where the facts are undisputed, the trial court's determination of statutory employment status drawn from those facts is a question of law that is reviewed de novo. Newsom v. Frank M. Hall & Co., 101 P.3d 1107 (Colo. App. 2004), rev'd on other grounds, 125 P.3d 444 (Colo. 2005); Humphrey v. Whole Foods Mkt. Rocky Mtn., 250 P.3d 706 (Colo. App. 2010).

Type of employee deemed question of law. Where the facts are undisputed, the question of whether an individual is an employee, as defined by § 8-41-106, or a constructive employee, to whom work has been contracted out as defined by subsection (1) of this section, is a question of law, not a question of fact. Univ. of Colo. Med. Center v. Indus. Comm'n, 622 P.2d 596 (Colo. App. 1980).

"Cost of such insurance" recoverable by statutory employer is actual cost, where general contractor seeks reimbursement from uninsured subcontractor under subsection (1)(b). This provision should not be construed to encourage subcontractors to ignore their primary responsibility for insuring their own employees, as by allowing the statutory employer to recover only the hypothetical cost of insuring the one employee of the subcontractor that happened to be injured under a "guaranteed cost" type of policy. Winer's Pumping Units v. Emerald Gas Operating Co., 936 P.2d 627 (Colo. App. 1997).

The Workers' Compensation Act excepts from coverage employers of persons engaged in domestic or other work "about a private home" and excepts from employer status "the owner of a private home who contracts out any work done to or about said home." These exceptions are not intended to abrogate the borrowed servant doctrine in the case of work performed at a private home, except in the limited situations in which the domestic employment is not on a full-time basis. Evans v. Webster, 832 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991).

Dispositive considerations as to whether construction constitutes work "to or about" a home are the location of the improvement and the purpose for which it is to be used. O'Neill v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 778 P.2d 295 (Colo. App. 1989).

The Workers' Compensation Act was intended to apply to claimant who was hired to perform domestic services on a full-time basis, when employer compensated dual employer for claimant's services, and dual employer maintained workers' compensation coverage on claimant's behalf. Evans v. Webster, 832 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991).

Proper characterization of employment relationship depends upon facts determined by commission. The determination of the proper characterization of the employment relationship depends upon the facts in each case. This determination must properly be made by the commission rather than the court, even though the facts are largely undisputed, because this matter is not within the court's scope of review. Schultz v. Indus. Comm'n, 34 Colo. App. 122, 523 P.2d 164 (1974).

Examination of nature and needs of employer's business determines nature of work contracted out. The issue of whether work contracted out is part of the regular business of an employer is not affected by the fact that the subcontractor is an independent entity who has a business of his own; rather, the question is to be determined by examining the nature and needs of the employer's business. Melody Homes, Inc. v. Lay, 44 Colo. App. 49, 610 P.2d 1081 (1980).

Lessees are liable for accidental injuries to their employees, regardless of the liability of the lessor. Index Mines Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 82 Colo. 272, 259 P. 1036 (1927).

This section cannot be limited to cases where lessees are themselves employees. In*dex Mines Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n*, 82 Colo. 272, 259 P. 1036 (1927).

This section extends common-law immunity from suit by an injured employee to an agent of the claimant's statutory employer. Posey v. Intermountain Rural Elec. Ass'n, 41 Colo. App. 7, 583 P.2d 303 (1978).

This section has no force if it applies only to the case of actual employer and employee. Its force lies in the fact that it says that one shall "be construed to be" an employer who would not otherwise be such. Index Mines Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 82 Colo. 272, 259 P. 1036 (1927); Zimmerman v. Indus. Comm'n, 109 Colo. 533, 127 P.2d 878 (1942).

This section pertains to the potential liability of a general contractor under the Act for injuries to a subcontractor's employee when the general contractor has not borrowed the subcontractor's employee; the focus is whether the work contracted out is part of the employer's regular business operation. Evans v. Webster, 832 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1991).

One who contracts out his work or any part of it to a subcontractor is himself an employer of the subcontractor and the subcontractor's employees. Herriott v. Stevenson, 172 Colo. 379, 473 P.2d 720 (1970).

This statute makes an employer responsible for subcontractors and their employees when the employer has contracted-out part of his regular business. Frohlick Crane Serv., Inc. v. Mack, 182 Colo. 34, 510 P.2d 891 (1973).

The general assembly, by extending workers' compensation liability to cover the injury or death of "contractors, or subcontractors", intended that workers' compensation be the remedy for all contractors "downstream" from the one contracting work, regardless of how many intermediate contractors there might be. Buzard v. Super Walls, Inc., 681 P.2d 520 (Colo. 1984).

And it provides that a subcontractor and his employees are deemed to be employees of the employer who contracts for others to do his work. Frohlick Crane Serv., Inc. v. Mack, 182 Colo. 34, 510 P.2d 891 (1973).

The general assembly did not intend that a subcontractor should be free of responsibility for his own negligence or the negligence of his employees. Frohlick Crane Serv., Inc. v. Mack, 182 Colo. 34, 510 P.2d 891 (1973).

And a subcontractor may be sued by an employee of a general contractor. Frohlick Crane Serv., Inc. v. Mack, 182 Colo. 34, 510 P.2d 891 (1973).

Subcontractor's violation of contract could not prevent operation of section. If a violation by a subcontractor of the terms of his contract could prevent the operation of the contracting-out statute, the statute's effectiveness in the statutory scheme would be lost. San Isabel Elec. Ass'n v. Bramer, 182 Colo. 15, 510 P.2d 438 (1973).

This section is not limited to specific technical relationships. It covers every business conducted by one through the activities of another under any kind of contract. Rhodes v. Indus. Comm'n, 99 Colo. 271, 61 P.2d 1035 (1936); Cont'l Oil Co. v. Sirhall, 122 Colo. 332, 222 P.2d 612 (1950).

And one may be an employee by virtue of this section, when in fact he is not an employee by common-law definition. Cont'l Oil Co. v. Sirhall, 122 Colo. 332, 222 P.2d 612 (1950).

Where claimant worked full-time and there was no evidence that he was hired for the completion of single tasks, or on a per task basis, ALJ erred in concluding that he was not an actual employee. The "relative nature of the work" test, if applied, would show that the claimant was an actual employee and not an independent contractor barred from making a claim by this section. Stampados v. Colo. D & S Enters., 833 P.2d 815 (Colo. App. 1992).

The "business" of a person is that calling which he pursues for livelihood or gain. Am. Radiator Co. v. Franzen, 81 Colo. 161, 254 P. 160 (1927).

Owners of leased property become "employers" of lessee within meaning of this section. Rogers v. Solem, 103 Colo. 52, 83 P.2d 154 (1938).

Application of subsection (1). Subsection (1) has been construed to apply to businesses conducted through the activities of another under a contractual relationship. Standard Oil Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 38 Colo. App. 39, 552 P.2d 1029 (1976).

A general contractor is only immune from tort liability under subsection (2) if it is a statutory employer under subsection (1)(a). Cowger v. Henderson Heavy Haul Trucking, 179 P.3d 116 (Colo. App. 2007).

Provisions apply on federal land. State workmen's compensation provisions apply to land owned by the federal government. Hence, statutory employer immunity bars a suit for damages for personal injuries incurring in an accident at a nuclear weapons facility in Colorado, owned by the United States and operated by a private company. Stewart v. United States, 716 F.2d 755 (10th Cir. 1982), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1018, 105 S. Ct. 432, 83 L. Ed.2d 359 (1984).

Employees of lessee. Where an oil company owned a good many filling stations which it leased out for a term of one year and it was shown that all of the lessees sold only the lessor's products, by virtue of this section any employee of the lessee was an employee of the oil company as far as workmen's compensation is concerned. Cont'l Oil Co. v. Sirhall, 122 Colo. 332, 222 P.2d 612 (1950).

Oil company was the constructive statutory employer of claimant who worked at a service station leased by the oil company to its dealer. Standard Oil Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 38 Colo. App. 39, 552 P.2d 1029 (1976).

Officer rejecting coverage under the act pursuant to § 8-41-202 is subject to the cap on tort recovery found in this section. Kelly v. Mile Hi Single Ply, Inc., 890 P.2d 1161 (Colo. 1995).

As a sole proprietor and a person excluded from the definition of employee, sole proprietor who chose not to purchase workers' compensation coverage is within the group of individuals generally subject to the statutory limit on damages pursuant to subsection (3). Pulsifer v. Pueblo Prof'l Contractors, Inc., 161 P.3d 656 (Colo. 2007).

In reconciling § 8-41-103 and subsection (3), the court upheld trial court's reasoning that corporate officer who has elected to reject workers' compensation coverage may bring tort action only against employer. Whether or not a corporate officer has elected to reject such coverage, employees covered by Workers' Compensation Act are still limited to their rights and remedies under the Act. Kelly v. Mile Hi Single Ply, Inc., 873 P.2d 13 (Colo. App. 1993).

Tort suit against borrowed employee barred where: Special employer had the exclusive right to control the work of the borrowed employee operator pursuant to the lease agreement, at the time of the accident the borrowed employee operator was performing work for the special employer, the special employer was controlling the work, and the borrowed employee operator acquiesced to this special employment relationship. Morphew v. Ridge Crane Serv., Inc., 902 P.2d 848 (Colo. App. 1995).

The focus on "another not in the same employ" is on whether the services are being directly performed for another and not on whether one of the parties meets the statutory definition of employer; therefore, an injured plaintiff is entitled to sue a defendant who is not a direct party to the agreement for services and is not subject to the statutory limitation on damages. If the parties are principle parties to the agreement for services, the limitation on damages does apply. Pulsifer v. Pueblo Prof'l Contractors, Inc., 161 P.3d 656 (Colo. 2007).

Independent contractor who elects not to obtain a policy of workers' compensation insurance covering himself is precluded from recovering more than the $15,000 statutory limit in damages from an uninsured motorist policy of the employer of a tortfeasor who is in the same employ as the independent contractor. Cont'l Divide Ins. Co. v. Dickinson, 179 P.3d 202 (Colo. App. 2007).

II. LIABILITY OF LESSOR OR EMPLOYER.

Employee of a trust. Rhodes v. Indus. Comm'n, 99 Colo. 271, 61 P.2d 1035 (1936), distinguishing Flick v. Indus. Comm'n, 78 Colo. 117, 239 P. 1022 (1925).

General contractor liable for benefits to survivors of subcontractor's employee. As a statutory employer, a general contractor is liable for workmen's compensation benefits to survivors of an employee of a subcontractor if the subcontractor fails to obtain workmen's compensation insurance coverage. Edwards v. Price, 191 Colo. 46, 550 P.2d 856 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1056, 97 S. Ct. 778, 50 L. Ed.2d 773 (1977).

Security service employee entitled to benefits under section. An employee of a security service, who is injured while patrolling a construction site which the security service has been hired to guard, is a statutory employee of the general contractor and, therefore, he is entitled to benefits under this section. Melody Homes, Inc. v. Lay, 44 Colo. App. 49, 610 P.2d 1081 (1980).

Application of subsection (2). Even though subcontractor had workmen's compensation coverage for his employees, the subcontractor himself was not covered by the policy and therefore was covered by the policy of the prime contractor as an employee thereof. Oliver Const. Co., Inc. v. Indus. Comm'n, 680 P.2d 1308 (Colo. App. 1983).

This section confers an immunity on a general contractor or a real property owner in exchange for a duty which inheres to the benefit of a workman, so that, while a workman will be required to forego a negligence action against a general contractor or real property owner, he will be assured that regardless of fault, the more solvent general contractor or real property owner stands behind and secures the workmen's compensation liability of the workman's immediate employer. O'Quinn v. Walt Disney Prods., Inc., 177 Colo. 190, 493 P.2d 344 (1972).

Where the survivors of an employee of a subcontractor received their workmen's compensation benefits from the subcontractor, this section provides that the survivors cannot maintain a negligence action against the general contractor or any of its principals. Edwards v. Price, 191 Colo. 46, 550 P.2d 856 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1056, 97 S. Ct. 778, 50 L. Ed.2d 773 (1977).

Liability as employer of corporation leasing or contracting out. This section provides that any corporation engaged in any business by leasing, or contracting out any part or all of the work thereof to any contractor or subcontractor, shall be construed to be and be an employer as defined in articles 42 to 66 of this title, and shall be liable to pay compensation for injury or death resulting therefrom to the contractors and subcontractors and their employees. Index Mines Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 82 Colo. 272, 259 P. 1036 (1927); Cont'l Oil Co. v. Sirhall, 122 Colo. 332, 222 P.2d 612 (1950); Indus. Comm'n v. Vancil, 133 Colo. 238, 293 P.2d 641 (1956); White v. Indus. Comm'n, 140 Colo. 11, 342 P.2d 668 (1959); Nicks v. Electron Corp., 29 Colo. App. 114, 478 P.2d 683 (1970); San Isabel Elec. Ass'n v. Bramer, 31 Colo. App. 134, 500 P.2d 821 (1972).

A lessor is liable as a statutory employer under this section when it is shown that the lessor operates, engages in, or conducts his business by leasing his property. Standard Oil Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 38 Colo. App. 39, 552 P.2d 1029 (1976).

And single act of leasing constitutes "operating" or "conducting" business under this section. Indus. Comm'n v. Hammond, 77 Colo. 414, 236 P. 1006 (1925).

Apparent corporate status of contractor not basis for estoppel defense of employer. An employer who fails to obtain workmen's compensation coverage for a contractor who is not himself an "employer" as defined by § 8-41-105 (1)(b) cannot assert a defense of equitable estoppel based upon the contractor's alleged corporate status. Canda v. Indus. Comm'n, 44 Colo. App. 70, 607 P.2d 403 (1980).

Company not a statutory employer. Where a contract speaks in terms of an independent contractor and not of an employee; it has little to do with a company's business; it contemplates a single definite result without the company's having the slightest control as to the method or time of work; and it refers to no semblance of wages, the company is not construed to be a statutory employer. London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 95 Colo. 306, 35 P.2d 1010 (1934).

The test as to whether a lessor is liable is whether the subcontracted work is part of the regular business of the lessor. Standard Oil Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 38 Colo. App. 39, 552 P.2d 1029 (1976).

Principals engaged in a joint enterprise are jointly responsible under the workmen's compensation act. Snyder v. Indus. Comm'n, 138 Colo. 523, 335 P.2d 543 (1959).

A joint venture falls within the meaning of the term "company" in this section. Edwards v. Price, 191 Colo. 46, 550 P.2d 856 (1976), appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 1056, 97 S. Ct. 778, 50 L. Ed.2d 773 (1977).

No comparative liability between subcontractor and contractor. Although this section gives the power to impose liability for the payment of compensation upon the original employer, who has become a subcontractor, and upon the contractor in the case of a compensable injury to an employee of the subcontractor, this section gives no authority to determine or fix a comparative degree of liability for the compensation as between the subcontractor employer and the contractor. Sechler v. Pastore, 103 Colo. 139, 84 P.2d 61 (1938).

Party who contracts work away is construed to be the employer. If the party to whom this statutory employer has contracted work out fails to secure workmen's compensation insurance, the statutory employer is liable to respond in damages to the injured employees of the other party. Stewart v. United States, 716 F.2d 755 (10th Cir. 1982).

Employment of claimants by an uninsured contractor operated to impose liability for compensation on the person contracting out the work of its business, and contractor was not liable for compensation. Breckenridge Co. v. Swales Mgt. Corp., 33 Colo. App. 51, 517 P.2d 476 (1973), modified, 185 Colo. 160, 522 P.2d 737 (1974).

Automobile manufacturer neither contractor nor statutory employer of dealer's employee. Bukowich v. Ford Motor Co., 99 Colo. 56, 59 P.2d 470 (1936).

Unincorporated self-employed repairman. Self-employed sheet metal and heating repairman, using the name "M. Kunz and Sons, Inc.", although he had not completed incorporation, is not an "employer" and not required to carry workmen's compensation insurance for himself. Canda v. Indus. Comm'n, 44 Colo. App. 70, 607 P.2d 403 (1980).

Lessor is not liable where his lessee is an employer who has insured his liability under the act. Indus. Comm'n v. Bracken, 83 Colo. 72, 262 P. 521 (1927).

But lessor liable where lessee's insurance did not cover leased business. A lessee who carried compensation insurance for a business separate and distinct from operation of a leased mine, which insurance did not cover the mining operations, had not insured and kept insured his liability for compensation as required by this section, the lessor was thus liable. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Batis, 117 Colo. 1, 183 P.2d 891 (1947).

And failure of lessee to carry out agreement to insure does not relieve the lessor from liability. Index Mines Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 82 Colo. 272, 259 P. 1036 (1927); Joe Dandy Mining Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 112 Colo. 241, 148 P.2d 817 (1944); Chevron Oil Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 169 Colo. 336, 456 P.2d 735 (1969).

Likewise where a subcontractor fails to keep his compensation insurance in force, the contractor was not released from its liability under the act, and said subcontractor and deceased, under this section, are both constructive employees of the contractor and covered by its insurance policy. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. v. Clifton, 117 Colo. 547, 190 P.2d 909 (1948).

Section does not apply to state board of land commissioners unless it elects to come under provisions of act. Where the state board of land commissioners, in exercising its administrative functions, executes a lease of mineral lands under its supervision for mining purposes, it is not conducting a mining business by leasing as contemplated by this section, unless it elects to place itself within the provisions of the act. Indus. Comm'n v. State Comp. Ins. Fund, 94 Colo. 194, 29 P.2d 372 (1934).

Lessors of coal mining property, operated by lessee, are employers within the meaning of this section and liable for compensation to an employee of lessee injured on the property in the course of his employment. McKune v. Indus. Comm'n, 94 Colo. 523, 31 P.2d 322 (1934).

Lessee who subleases construed as employer. Where owner of coal lease subleases to a partnership and thereby the partnership conducts mining operations, the owner of the lease is a lessor and employer under this section and liable to the employees of the partnership. Zimmerman v. Indus. Comm'n, 109 Colo. 533, 127 P.2d 878 (1942).

Failure of lessee to protect employees held to be a breach of the lease. Rocky Mt. Fuel Co. v. New Std. Coal Mining Co., 89 F.2d 147 (10th Cir. 1937).

Owner of property liable as "employer" unless independent contractor carries insurance covering employee. Indus. Comm'n v. Int'l Mut. Liab. Ins. Co., 103 Colo. 419, 86 P.2d 970 (1939).

Under previous section primary contractor was liable as third-party tortfeasor even though subcontractor had workmen's compensation insurance. Thomas v. Farnsworth Chambers Co., 286 F.2d 270 (10th Cir. 1960), rev'g 183 F. Supp. 764 (D. Colo. 1960).

Common-law action barred now unless subcontractor not an employer or not insured. While the definition of an employer found in § 8-48-101 adds a contractor-out to the definition of an employer in § 8-41-105, the language of the statute is clear to the effect that no common-law action under the act may be brought against a contractor-out by an injured employee of a subcontractor unless the subcontractor is either not an employer as defined by the act or has not insured his liability for compensation as required by the act. Herriott v. Stevenson, 172 Colo. 379, 473 P.2d 720 (1970); Nicks v. Electron Corp., 29 Colo. App. 114, 478 P.2d 683 (1970).

But subcontractor not immune from action in tort for injury to employee of another subcontractor. Inasmuch as the statute does not impose any workmen's compensation liability on a subcontractor for injury to an employee of another subcontractor on the same job, the statute does not grant immunity to such a subcontractor for torts against employees of other subcontractors. Krueger v. Merriman Elec., 29 Colo. App. 492, 488 P.2d 228 (1971).

For right to third-party action denied only as against one contracting out. The right to bring third-party actions, referred to in the statute as "actions under section 8-52-108", is denied only as against the person, engaged in or conducting any business by contracting out any part or all of the work thereof. The person thus protected from third-party liability is the person on whom statutory liability is imposed; i.e., the principal contractor. Krueger v. Merriman Elec., 29 Colo. App. 492, 488 P.2d 228 (1971).

Lessor is not liable for hospital bills contracted with strangers. While under this section a lessor of property upon which business operations are conducted sustains the relationship of employer to the lessee thereof and his employees, the law does not extend its liability beyond that of paying compensation for accidental injury or death sustained in the course of employment, and the commission is without jurisdiction to order it to discharge medical and hospital bills contracted with strangers to the law, the parties and proceedings, the bills not being authorized by such lessor. Rocky Mt. Fuel Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 105 Colo. 220, 96 P.2d 413 (1939). Rocky Mt. Fuel Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 105 Colo. 226, 96 P.2d 416 (1939).

Where a canning company, in order to obtain products for canning, enters into contracts with growers giving the company an option to assist growers to produce, or to produce for the grower the crews, trucks, and other equipment proper for the expeditious harvesting and delivery of peas, and at company's option to pay for such labor, trucks and services and charge same against grower's account, and the company exercises such option by directing a grower's employee to gather peas for other contracting growers, the gathering of peas becomes "a part of the work thereof" and grower's employee is an employee of the company under this section. Betz v. Indus. Comm'n, 109 Colo. 385, 125 P.2d 958 (1942).

Death of independent contractor. A country club, whose organization was merely for the convenience and pleasure of its members, was held not to be liable for benefits payable under workmen's compensation for the death of a contractor who was accidentally electrocuted while constructing three manholes along the club sewer line, as all of the facts showed that decedent was an independent contractor. Meyer v. Lakewood Country Club, 122 Colo. 110, 220 P.2d 371 (1950).

Interstate moving company liable for helper's compensation benefits. Where interstate moving company leased truck from its New York intrastate agent and where truck driver, who was a driver for the agent, was directly supervised and controlled by the interstate company, the driver was an employee of the interstate company at the time of the injury to his helper while working in Colorado and thus, the interstate company was liable for the helper's workmen's compensation benefits. Market v. Feuer Moving & Storage, 33 Colo. App. 80, 515 P.2d 126 (1973).

Subsection (6) creates a narrow exception to statutory employment status for independent transportation contractors who contract for a single delivery. The exception does not apply to a transportation contractor who contracts for regular delivery of eight to twelve loads a day for six weeks. Hurst Constr. Co. v. Ramey, 821 P.2d 858 (Colo. App. 1991).

Person cleaning windows for heating company held to be employee of window cleaning company. A person accidentally injured while cleaning windows for a company engaged in manufacturing and selling heating plants and which employed a window cleaning company to clean its windows, held to be an employee of the window cleaning company by which he was regularly employed, and not of the heating company. Am. Radiator Co. v. Frazen, 81 Colo. 161, 254 P. 160 (1927).

One engaged by a coal company to haul coal with his own truck at a fixed price per ton, held, under the facts disclosed, to be an employer and not a contractor. Indus. Comm'n v. Bonfils, 78 Colo. 306, 241 P. 735 (1925).

The terms farming, ranching, or agricultural labor, using their ordinary meanings, do not include construction of a building. Sorensen v. Goldman, 837 P.2d 266 (Colo. App. 1992).

Contracting out for delivery of part of crop was a "farming operation" within meaning of subsection (3). Therefore, the contractor, not the farmer, was primarily responsible for workers' compensation coverage. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Indus. Comm'n, 713 P.2d 405 (Colo. App. 1985).

Owner of land agreeing that another might enter and operate a gravel pit on a royalty basis is not liable as a lessor. Where the owner of land agreed that another might enter thereon and operate a gravel pit on a royalty basis, it is held that the industrial commission was not justified in finding him liable for the payment of compensation as a lessor, under this section. Flick v. Indus. Comm'n, 78 Colo. 117, 239 P. 1022 (1925).

Assignees of mining property contracting with original lessee held to be contracting out part of work. Assignees of mining lease with option to purchase, who contracted with the original lessee for mining work on the property, held to have been engaged in the operation of a mining business by contracting out part of the work, under this section, and liable for compensation for the accidental death of their assignor contractor occurring while he was engaged in such work. Devereux v. Indus. Comm'n, 87 Colo. 594, 290 P. 287 (1930).

And fact that assignees with option to purchase did not own property held not to affect their liability. The fact that assignees of a mining lease with option to purchase did not own the property and had not perfected any interest therein when their assignor was killed while doing work for them under contract on the property, held not to affect their liability for his death under the workmen's compensation act. Devereux v. Indus. Comm'n, 87 Colo. 594, 290 P. 287 (1930).

Owner of mining property liable for injuries to employee of contractor constructing an upraise on mining property. An owner who contracted with another to construct an upraise on his mining property, held to be an employer engaged in the business of mining and liable for compensation for injuries received by an employee of the contractor received while engaged in the work, under this section. Ontario Mining Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 86 Colo. 206, 280 P. 483 (1929).

A person employed by an independent contractor to drive a truck in delivering coal, held, under the provisions of this section, to be an employee of the company under which the contractor was doing business. Indus. Comm'n v. Cont'l Inv. Co., 78 Colo. 399, 242 P. 49 (1925).

Claim of regular employee of university's medical center controlled by § 8-41-106 (1)(a)(I). Where nurse claiming benefits was a regular employee of the university of Colorado medical center, § 8-41-106 (1)(a)(I) controlled the award of benefits, not subsection (1) of this section. Univ. of Colo. Med. Center v. Indus. Comm'n, 622 P.2d 596 (Colo. App. 1980).

Injury to employee of company contracting with municipality. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Alishio, 125 Colo. 242, 250 P.2d 1015 (1952).

Applied in Pittman Motors, Inc. v. Indus. Comm'n, 156 Colo. 218, 399 P.2d 784 (1964).

8-41-402. Repairs to real property - exception for liability of occupant of residential real property. (1) Every person, company, or corporation owning any real property or improvements thereon and contracting out any work done on and to said property to any contractor, subcontractor, or person who hires or uses employees in the doing of such work shall be deemed to be an employer under the terms of articles 40 to 47 of this title. Every such contractor, subcontractor, or person, as well as such contractor's, subcontractor's, and person's employees, shall be deemed to be an employee, and such employer shall be liable as provided in said articles to pay compensation for injury or death resulting therefrom to said contractor, subcontractor, or person and said employees or employees' dependents and, before commencing said work, shall insure and keep insured all liability as provided in said articles. Such employer shall be entitled to recover the cost of such insurance from said contractor, subcontractor, or person and may withhold and deduct the same from the contract price or any royalties or other money due, owing, or to become due to said contractor, subcontractor, or person. Articles 40 to 47 of this title shall not apply to the owner or occupant, or both, of residential real property which meets the definition of a "qualified residence" under section 163 (h) (4) (A) of the federal "Internal Revenue Code of 1986", as amended, who contracts out any work done to the property, unless the person performing the work is otherwise an employee of the owner or occupant, or both, of the property.

(2) If said contractor, subcontractor, or person doing or undertaking to do any work for an owner of property, as provided in subsection (1) of this section, is also an employer in the doing of such work and, before commencing such work, insures and keeps insured all liability for compensation as provided in articles 40 to 47 of this title, neither said contractor, subcontractor, or person nor any employees or insurers thereof shall have any right of contribution or action of any kind, including actions under section 8-41-203, against the person, company, or corporation owning real property and improvements thereon which contracts out work done on said property, or against its employees, servants, or agents.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 8-41-402 is similar to § 8-48-102 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

There is no reason that compensation coverage need be linked to common-law definitions of employment in order to be constitutional. Lancaster v. C.F. & I. Steel Corp., 190 Colo. 463, 548 P.2d 914 (1976).

Section held to comport with constitutional provisions on due process, equal protection, and special legislation. Flick v. Indus. Comm'n, 78 Colo. 117, 239 P. 1022 (1925); O'Quinn v. Walt Disney Prods., Inc., 177 Colo. 190, 493 P.2d 344 (1972).

The industrial claim appeals panel's interpretation of subsection (1) does not violate equal protection requirements. The owners of other real property are not similarly situated with owners or occupants of qualified residential real property. The exemption is compatible with the normal expectations of property owners who contract with craftsmen and artisans for work on residential properties. Brown v. Muto, 943 P.2d 38 (Colo. App. 1996).

The 1991 amendment to subsection (1) did not violate equal protection by distinguishing between residential properties with encumbrances and those that are free from any encumbrances; the amendment did not draw such distinction. Colo. AFL-CIO v. Donlon, 914 P.2d 396 (Colo. App. 1995).

The intent of the workmen's compensation law was to create special categories of employees and employers to provide protection for employees and to compel employers to maintain insurance coverage. Lancaster v. C.F. & I. Steel Corp., 190 Colo. 463, 548 P.2d 914 (1976).

Lack of ownership would, of course, preclude the applicability of this section. Lancaster v. C.F. & I. Steel Corp., 190 Colo. 463, 548 P.2d 914 (1976).

This section confers an immunity on a real property owner in exchange for a duty which inheres to the benefit of a workman, so that, while a workman will be required to forego a negligence action against a real property owner, he will be assured that regardless of fault, the more solvent real property owner stands behind and secures the workmen's compensation liability of the workman's immediate employer. O'Quinn v. Walt Disney Prods., Inc., 177 Colo. 190, 493 P.2d 344 (1972).

And this section was intended to cover a case where the landowners owned the real property and the improvements thereon, and contracted out work on and to the property to a contractor who hired at least four employees on this job, where the claimant was a regular employee. Stewart v. Indus. Comm'n, 163 Colo. 12, 428 P.2d 367 (1967).

Enhancement of real property's capital value is a relevant but not essential factor in determining whether an object is an improvement. The intention of the owner of the object located on the real property or the intention of the real property owner may be considered in determining whether the object constituted an improvement to real property within the meaning of subsection (1). Barron v. Kerr-McGee Rocky Mtn. Corp., 181 P.3d 348 (Colo. App. 2007).

The following three factors made the installation an improvement: (1) The owner intended the object to be an improvement; (2) the object enhanced the utility of the property; and (3) the object was permanently affixed to the property. Barron v. Kerr-McGee Rocky Mtn. Corp., 181 P.3d 348 (Colo. App. 2007).

To establish whether a workers' compensation award was the exclusive remedy available to a contract house cleaner who was injured while cleaning a leased condominium, case had to be remanded to determine whether the condominium was a "qualified residence", and, if so, whether the house cleaner was "otherwise an employee" of the condominium owner. Thornbury v. Allen, 991 P.2d 335 (Colo. App. 1999).

House cleaner was "otherwise an employee" of condominium owner where owner qualified as a statutory employer under § 8-41-401(1)(a). Thornbury v. Allen, 39 P.3d 1195 (Colo. App. 2001).

Legislative purpose of the 1963 amendment to this section, which added subsection (2), was to protect all landowners from all common-law liability if the landowner requires his contractor to carry approved workmen's compensation insurance. City of Colo. Springs v. Ellsworth, 187 Colo. 193, 529 P.2d 646 (1974).

Government entity cannot be an employer under subsection (1). Univ. of Colo. v. Graham, 807 P.2d 1204 (Colo. App. 1990).

General assembly did not exempt municipal corporations from coverage under subsection (2). City of Colo. Springs v. Ellsworth, 187 Colo. 193, 529 P.2d 646 (1974).

But cities protected if employee covered in primary employment. Cities that are landowners are among those protected from claims for either compensation or for negligence if the employee is covered by workmen's compensation in his primary employment. City of Colo. Springs v. Ellsworth, 187 Colo. 193, 529 P.2d 646 (1974).

No competency test to be contractor. Subsection (2) requires no minimal competency test for designation as a "contractor, subcontractor, or other person". Schwartz v. Tom Brown, Inc., 649 P.2d 733 (Colo. App. 1982).

Pleadings must allege that company "contracted out". Although alleged to have been a co-owner of the land on which the accident occurred, if it does not appear from the pleadings that the company "contracted out" the work to the employer, it is not possible to bring the company within the terms of this section. Alexander v. Morrison-Knudsen Co., 166 Colo. 118, 444 P.2d 397 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1063, 89 S. Ct. 715, 21 L. Ed.2d 706 (1969).

Where work not "contracted out". Under the latter part of this section if the owner is contracting out a job, he protects himself against liability for anyone injured on the job by seeing that the contractor with whom he is dealing provides or carries a policy on all workmen on the job contracted for, but this part of the section does not apply where the work was not "contracted out" to claimant even though claimant is by business or trade a contractor and when doing contract work had his men insured at the time of the accident involved. Indus. Comm'n v. State Comp. Ins. Fund, 122 Colo. 128, 220 P.2d 721 (1950).

Term "private home" in subsection (1) means a structure that is inhabited or capable of being inhabited, not substantially uncompleted structures. Betts v. Kempers, 745 P.2d 283 (Colo. App. 1987).

"Private home" under subsection (1) neither requires that structure be homeowner's primary residence, nor that homeowner be a citizen of or domiciled in locale of property, nor a minimum usage time. Homeowners were exempted from statutory employer status even though homeowners primarily resided in Mexico, were Mexican citizens, and used property less than six months during the year. English v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 764 P.2d 386 (Colo. App. 1988).

A residence may be a "qualified residence" entitling the owner or occupant to an exception from statutory employment status under subsection (1) even if the owner or occupant is not claiming an interest deduction under I.R.C. § 163(h) at the time of the injury or hearing on compensability. Organ v. Jorgensen, 888 P.2d 336 (Colo. App. 1994).

Definition of "qualified residence" under I.R.C. § 163(h) includes a second residence used by the taxpayer in accordance with related I.R.C. provisions. Thornbury v. Allen, 39 P.3d 1195 (Colo. App. 2001).

Respondent met his burden of proof that the barn on which claimant was injured was a "qualified residence". The administrative law judge's determination is supported by testimony as to the planned use of the barn and the ultimate construction of a primary or secondary residence on the parcel. Brown v. Muto, 943 P.2d 38 (Colo. App. 1996).

The qualified residential property exemption applies to actual as well as statutory employment relationships. The exemption applies to actual as well as statutory employees of the owner or occupant of qualified residential real property unless the person is otherwise an employee of the owner or occupant. Brown v. Muto, 943 P.2d 38 (Colo. App. 1996).

The 1991 amendment to subsection (1) replaced the term "private home" with the phrase "owner or occupant, or both of residential real property which meets the definition of a "qualified residence" under the Internal Revenue Code. Accordingly, home owners' residence under construction at the time of claimant's injury constituted a "qualified residence" under the Internal Revenue Code and the owners were exempt from statutory liability under the Workers' Compensation Act, regardless of the fact that they did not actually claim any interest on their tax return. Organ v. Jorgensen, 888 P.2d 336 (Colo. App. 1994).

Joint venturers may be held liable for claims arising under the workmen's compensation statutes where a joint activity results in injury. Breckenridge Co. v. Swales Mgt. Corp., 185 Colo. 160, 522 P.2d 737 (1974).

Where the record indicates that the parties anticipated only the regular presence of the claimant and one assistant for the duration of the project, and assuming that one could include the respondent and a nine-year-old boy, the fact that on one day four people actually worked does not bring the employment within this section. Schultz v. Indus. Comm'n, 34 Colo. App. 122, 523 P.2d 164 (1974).

Machinery operator rented to contractor is employee of company. Where a company contracts for work to be done on its premises and rents machinery to a contractor together with its operator, the operator is the employee of the company and not of the contractor. Great W. Sugar Co. v. Erbes, 148 Colo. 566, 367 P.2d 329 (1961).

But where a hotel company hired a plasterer to do remodeling and there was no specific time mentioned as to how long he would be hired nor any specific amount of plastering that was to be done and the company furnished all the materials to be used on the job, the plasterer was an employee of the hotel company even though he was an insured employer himself. Indus. Comm'n v. State Comp. Ins. Fund, 122 Colo. 128, 220 P.2d 721 (1950).

Owner's liability to contractor working on job. The provision of this section that the building owner "shall keep insured his liability" means a liability not only to the employees of a contractor, but also to the contractor himself if working on the job. Indus. Comm'n v. State Comp. Ins. Fund, 122 Colo. 128, 220 P.2d 721 (1950).

Owner immune if contractor insured. An owner of real property or improvements thereon who contracts out work to be performed thereon is immune from suit by the injured employees of the contractor, so long as the contractor is properly insured under this act. Wagner v. Coors Energy Co., 685 P.2d 1380 (Colo. App. 1984).

The landowner may protect himself in such situations by requiring the contractor to secure and maintain proper insurance coverage against such accidents as the one in the case at bar, or secure insurance coverage himself and deduct the premiums from the contract price. Stewart v. Indus. Comm'n, 163 Colo. 12, 428 P.2d 367 (1967).

But if the contractor or subcontractor is unable to meet his responsibilities under the act, then those responsibilities devolve upon the owner. Alexander v. Morrison-Knudsen Co., 166 Colo. 118, 444, P.2d 397 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1063, 89 S. Ct. 715, 21 L. Ed.2d 706 (1969); Nicks v. Electron Corp., 29 Colo. 114, 478 P.2d 683 (1970).

However, where employer insures his liability to employees it is held that insurer's liability does not extend to employees of subcontractor. Where an employer of men lets out part of his work to contractors and insured his liability to employees, the insurer's liability extends only to employees of the employer — its policy so providing — and not to those of the contractors. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Turkey Creek Stone, Clay & Gypsum Co., 75 Colo. 611, 227 P. 569 (1924).

Under previous section, landowner was not immune from common-law liability where contractor was insured. Great W. Sugar Co. v. Erbes, 148 Colo. 566, 367 P.2d 329 (1961).

But now, under this section, owner is free of tort liability if contractor is insured. If the contractor undertaking to do such work "shall before commencing such work insure and keep insured his liability for compensation", the owner of the property shall be free of responsibility to the injured workman, including tort liability. Alexander v. Morrison-Knudsen Co., 166 Colo. 118, 444 P.2d 397 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1063, 89 S. Ct. 715, 21 L. Ed.2d 706 (1969); Nicks v. Electron Corp., 29 Colo. App. 114, 478 P.2d 683 (1970); Varela v. Colo. Milling & Elevator Co., 31 Colo. App. 49, 499 P.2d 1206 (1972).

In order to be an employer under this statute, the owner must have contracted with a contractor, subcontractor, or person who, in turn, must hire or use employee in the doing of the contracted work. Moe v. Indus. Comm'n, 734 P.2d 661 (Colo. App. 1986); English v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 764 P.2d 386 (Colo. App. 1988).

Architects were immune under subsection (2) where contract provided that architects were "representative(s) of the Owner", creating an agency relationship. Halter v. Waco Scaffolding & Equip. Co., 797 P.2d 790 (Colo. App. 1990).

Calculation of $2,000 threshold limit in subsection (3). The $2,000 threshold limit of subsection (3) is to be calculated on all property owned by the owner, irrespective of its location, in the pro rata share of ownership interest. Porta-Pacific v. Smithers, 781 P.2d 147 (Colo. App. 1989).

Applied in Lackey v. Indus. Comm'n, 80 Colo. 112, 249 P. 662 (1926); Index Mines Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 82 Colo. 272, 259 P. 1036 (1927); Ontario Mining Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 86 Colo. 206, 280 P. 483 (1929); Alson Inv. Co. v. Youngquist, 107 Colo. 1, 108 P.2d 228 (1940); State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Batis, 117 Colo. 1, 183 P.2d 891 (1947).

8-41-403. Exemption of certain lessors of real property. (1) The provisions of this part 4 shall not apply to any lessor or sublessor of real property who rents or leases real property to any lessee or sublessee for the purpose of conducting the business of such lessee or sublessee, whether as a franchise holder, independent agent, or consignee or in any other separate capacity and whether or not such person is an employer, as defined in section 8-40-203, but in no event where such lessee or sublessee is an employee, as defined in section 8-40-202.

(2) No such lessee or sublessee, or any employee or insurer thereof, shall have any right of contribution from or action against such lessor or sublessor under articles 40 to 47 of this title.

(3) The provisions of this part 4 shall not apply to any lessor or sublessor of real property who leases or rents real property to any lessee or sublessee for the purpose of conducting any agricultural production business of such lessee or sublessee, and no such lessee or sublessee, or any employee or insurer thereof, shall have any right of contribution from or action against such lessor or sublessor under articles 40 to 47 of this title.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 8-41-403 is similar to § 8-48-103 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Subsection (1) continues to constitute an exception only to the concept of statutory employment; it is inapplicable in those instances in which the evidence establishes an actual employment relationship between the parties. Bailey v. C.P. Const., Inc., 837 P.2d 277 (Colo. App. 1992).

Application of the statute hinges upon whether the property upon which the injury occurred is under lease to a lessee who conducts its business upon the property. Bain v. Doyle, 807 P.2d 1225 (Colo. App. 1990).

What lessors exempt. This section provides that those lessors who rent property which is used for the purpose of conducting the business of the lessee are exempt from the liability imposed by § 8-48-101. Standard Oil Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 38 Colo. App. 39, 552 P.2d 1029 (1976).

The test as to whether a lessor is liable is whether the subcontracted work is part of the regular business of the lessor. Standard Oil Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 38 Colo. App. 39, 552 P.2d 1029 (1976).

Oil company was the constructive statutory employer of claimant who worked at a service station leased by the oil company to its dealer. Standard Oil Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 38 Colo. App. 39, 552 P.2d 1029 (1976).

Applied in Rian v. Imperial Mun. Serv. Group, Inc., 768 P.2d 1260 (Colo. App. 1988); Virginians Heritage Square Co. v. Smith, 808 P.2d 366 (Colo. App. 1991).

8-41-404. Construction work - proof of coverage required - violation - penalty - definitions. (1) (a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (4) of this section, every person performing construction work on a construction site shall be covered by workers' compensation insurance, and a person who contracts for the performance of construction work on a construction site shall either provide, pursuant to articles 40 to 47 of this title, workers' compensation coverage for, or require proof of workers' compensation coverage from, every person with whom he or she has a direct contract to perform construction work on the construction site.

(b) A site owner, general contractor, or other person who is not a direct party to a contract for construction work shall not be held liable under subsection (3) of this section solely as a result of the person's ownership interest or general supervisory role in a construction project.

(c) Any person who contracts for the performance of construction work on a construction site and who exercises due diligence by either providing workers' compensation coverage as required by this section or requiring proof of workers' compensation coverage as required by this section from every person with whom he or she has a direct contract to perform construction work on the construction site shall not be liable under subsection (3) of this section.

(2) If the parties to a contract that includes construction work agree that part of the contract price shall be withheld to cover workers' compensation premiums for coverage required under this section, the premiums shall be calculated based only on that portion of the contract price that represents the labor portion of the contract.

(3) A violation of subsection (1) of this section is punishable by an administrative fine imposed pursuant to section 8-43-409 (1) (b). The division shall transmit revenues collected through the imposition of fines pursuant to this section to the state treasurer, who shall credit them to the workers' compensation cash fund created in section 8-44-112 (7). Such revenues shall be appropriated to the division for the purpose of enforcing this section.

(4) (a) This section shall not apply to:

(I) An owner or occupant, or both, of residential real property that meets the definition of a "qualified residence" under section 163 (h) (4) (A) of the federal "Internal Revenue Code of 1986", as amended, who contracts out any work done to the real property, unless the person performing the work is otherwise an employee of the owner or occupant, or both, of the real property;

(II) An owner or occupant of real property who hires a person or persons specifically to do routine repair and maintenance on the real property of such owner or occupant;

(III) An independent contractor, who is a natural person, who has formed a corporation pursuant to section 7-102-103, C.R.S., or a limited liability company pursuant to section 7-80-203, C.R.S., and who has rejected workers' compensation coverage pursuant to section 8-41-202;

(IV) Corporate officers and members of a limited liability company who have rejected workers' compensation coverage pursuant to section 8-41-202;

(V) A partner in a partnership who has filed a certificate of limited partnership pursuant to section 7-62-201, C.R.S., a partnership registration statement pursuant to section 7-60-144 or 7-64-1002, C.R.S., or a statement of trade name pursuant to section 7-71-103, C.R.S., and has filed with the division a form, approved by the director, rejecting workers' compensation; or

(VI) A sole proprietor who has filed a statement of trade name pursuant to section 7-71-103, C.R.S., and has filed with the division a form, approved by the director, rejecting workers' compensation.

(b) Nothing in this section shall be construed to limit the responsibility of corporations, limited liability companies, partnerships, or sole proprietorships to provide coverage for their employees as required under articles 40 to 47 of this title.

(5) As used in this section:

(a) "Construction site" means a location where a structure that is attached or will be attached to real property is constructed, altered, or remodeled.

(b) "Construction work" includes all or any part of the construction, alteration, or remodeling of a structure. "Construction work" does not include surveying, engineering, examination, or inspection of a construction site or the delivery of materials to a construction site.

(c) "Proof of workers' compensation coverage" includes a certificate or other written confirmation, issued by the insurer or authorized agent of the insurer, of the existence of workers' compensation coverage in force during the period of the performance of construction work on the construction site.

DEPENDENCY

8-41-501. Persons presumed wholly dependent. (1) For the purposes of articles 40 to 47 of this title, the following described persons shall be presumed to be wholly dependent (however, such presumption may be rebutted by competent evidence):

(a) Widow or widower, unless it is shown that she or he was voluntarily separated and living apart from the spouse at the time of the injury or death or was not dependent in whole or in part on the deceased for support;

(a.5) A person who is designated in a designated beneficiary agreement for purposes of receiving workers' compensation benefits in accordance with the provisions of article 22 of title 15, C.R.S., unless it is shown that the designated beneficiary was voluntarily separated and living apart from the other designated beneficiary at the time of the injury or death or was not dependent in whole or in part on the deceased for support;

(b) Minor children of the deceased under the age of eighteen years, including posthumous or legally adopted children;

(c) Minor children of the deceased who are eighteen years or over and under the age of twenty-one years if it is shown that:

(I) At the time of the decedent's death they were actually dependent upon the deceased for support; and

(II) Either at the time of the decedent's death or at the time they attained the age of eighteen years they were engaged in courses of study as full-time students at any accredited school. The period of presumed dependency of such persons shall continue until they attain the age of twenty-one years or until they cease to be engaged in courses of study as full-time students at an accredited school, whichever occurs first.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Widow or Widower as Dependent.
- III. Minor Child as Dependent.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION

Law reviews. For comment on McBride v. Indus. Comm'n appearing below, see 8 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 292 (1936).

Annotator's note. Since § 8-41-501 is similar to § 8-50-101 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

The workmen's compensation act is to be liberally construed in order to effectuate its beneficent purposes. McBride v. Indus. Comm'n, 97 Colo. 166, 49 P.2d 386 (1935).

No specific provision prescribes an equal apportionment among dependents. It does not follow from the language of former section, "conclusively presumed to be wholly dependent", when read in conjunction with § 8-50-115, that all such dependents must, as a matter of law, be treated on an equal basis. To so conclude would be to ignore the express provisions of § 8-50-115. Spoo v. Spoo, 145 Colo. 268, 358 P.2d 870 (1961).

The question of dependency of a widow and minor children is purely a question of law. United States Nat'l Bank v. Indus. Comm'n, 128 Colo. 417, 262 P.2d 731 (1953).

Dependency rests upon an obligation of support and not upon the question as to whether that obligation is being discharged. Latting v. Broadmoor Hotel, 105 Colo. 386, 98 P.2d 857 (1940).

"Wholly dependent" means dependent on no one else. London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 78 Colo. 478, 242 P. 680 (1925).

Applied in Travelers Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 646 P.2d 399 (Colo. App. 1981); Frontier Airlines v. Indus. Comm'n, 654 P.2d 1333 (Colo. App. 1982).

II. WIDOW OR WIDOWER AS DEPENDENT.

State law of marriage applied to establish marital relationship. In compensation proceedings where a claimant must establish a marital relationship to the deceased, the domestic relations law of the state where the marriage was contracted is controlling. Williams v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 670 P.2d 453 (Colo. App. 1983).

This section applies where the wife makes a claim for compensation on account of the death of her husband, and not where she makes a claim for compensation on account of the death of a child. Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 82 Colo. 281, 260 P. 106 (1927).

The dependency of a wife is determined as a matter of law where there is a showing that she was living with her husband at the time of his death and was dependent on him for support. McBride v. Indus. Comm'n, 97 Colo. 166, 49 P.2d 386 (1935), citing London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 78 Colo. 478, 242 P. 680 (1925); Vaughn v. Indus. Comm'n, 79 Colo. 257, 245 P. 712 (1926).

Thus, a wife living with her husband as such is conclusively presumed to be wholly dependent upon him for her support. Employer's Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 82 Colo. 281, 260 P. 106 (1927). See McBride v. Indus. Comm'n, 97 Colo. 166, 49 P.2d 386 (1935).

Presumptive dependency overcome by finding of nonsupport by deceased. Widow is "wholly" dependent under this section regardless of whether she receives all or only part of her support from the deceased, and the presumption afforded by the statute is overcome only by a finding that the widow receives no support from the deceased. Diamond Indus. v. Claimants in Death of Crouse, 41 Colo. App. 541, 589 P.2d 1383 (1978); Michalski v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 781 P.2d 183 (Colo. App. 1989).

Presumptive dependency overcome only by showing that the surviving spouse was voluntarily separated and living apart from the decedent or was not dependent on the decedent for support at the time of death. Exeter

Drilling v. Colo. Indus. Claim, 801 P.2d 20 (Colo. App. 1990).

The party desiring to overcome the presumption has the burden of bringing forward the necessary proof. Colo. Fuel & Iron Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 93 Colo. 188, 24 P.2d 1117 (1933).

But the presumption is overthrown only by the appearance of three specific elements. A wife is conclusively presumed, under the language of this section, to be wholly dependent, unless it shall be made to appear that she was (1) voluntarily separated and (2) living apart from her husband at the time of his death, and (3) was not dependent in whole or in part on him for support. This section is in the conjunctive, and all three of these elements must be made to appear before the conclusive presumption of dependency of the wife can be overthrown. Vaughn v. Indus. Comm'n, 79 Colo. 257, 245 P. 712 (1926); Latting v. Broadmoor Hotel, 105 Colo. 386, 98 P.2d 857 (1940); Empire Zinc Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 71 Colo. 251, 206 P. 158 (1952).

Statutory presumption of dependency in subsection (1)(a) can be rebutted only by a showing that all three elements — voluntary separation, living apart, not dependent for support — exist in a particular case. Tilley v. Bill's Sinclair, 34 Colo. App. 141, 524 P.2d 314 (1974).

And mere prolonged separation does not overcome presumption. Although a separation is an unusually protracted one, the question of dependency does not turn on time or distance, but upon the nature and character of the absence and the intention of the parties respecting it. Intent is an important element in determining the nature of the absence. Empire Zinc Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 71 Colo. 251, 206 P. 158 (1922); Latting v. Broadmoor Hotel, 105 Colo. 386, 98 P.2d 857 (1940).

An act of adultery on the part of the wife constitutes a voluntary separation from the husband. Indus. Comm'n v. Fanganiello, 72 Colo. 140, 209 P. 803 (1922).

Voluntary separation a question of fact. Whether a wife is voluntarily separated and living apart from her husband, within the meaning of this section, is a question of fact. Gold Mines Consol. v. Simmons, 107 Colo. 359, 112 P.2d 555 (1941).

Voluntary separation established by the fact that the couple was living apart and that the claimant filed a petition for dissolution of marriage prior to his wife's death. City of Aurora v. Corr, 689 P.2d 659 (Colo. App. 1984).

Estrangement and divorce of the parties may not be controlling in determining whether there was a voluntary separation under this section, but does have a bearing in construing the evidence. Gold Mines Consol. v. Simmons, 107 Colo. 359, 112 P.2d 555 (1941).

Where the parties to a divorce resume living together both before and after the formal entry of a divorce decree and hold themselves out to their family and neighbors as being husband and wife, the wife will be considered a widow under this section. Employers' Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 145 Colo. 91, 357 P.2d 929 (1960).

Wife of employee married after injury held to be a dependent. Where an employee married more than a year after receiving accidental injuries in the course of his employment resulting in his death subsequently, it is held that the wife was a dependent within the meaning of this section. McBride v. Indus. Comm'n, 97 Colo. 166, 49 P.2d 386 (1935); State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Hartman, 99 Colo. 324, 64 P.2d 122 (1936).

Decedent's legal obligation to support wife establishes dependency. If a widow of a deceased workman demonstrates a need for support, then, under subsection (1)(a), the decedent's legal obligation to support his wife, whether or not that duty is being discharged, is sufficient to establish dependency. Tilley v. Bill's Sinclair, 34 Colo. App. 141, 524 P.2d 314 (1974); Black Mt. Spruce, Inc. v. Johnson, 670 P.2d 1241 (Colo. App. 1983).

Innocent claimant held to be spouse. An innocent claimant who would qualify as a spouse but for decedent's failure before his death to reduce an interlocutory decree dissolving a prior marriage to final judgment is entitled to spousal benefits. Williams v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 670 P.2d 453 (Colo. App. 1983).

Common-law marriage entitles wife to benefits of section. Clayton Coal Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 93 Colo. 145, 25 P.2d 170 (1933); Rocky Mt. Fuel Co. v. Reed, 110 Colo. 88, 130 P.2d 1049 (1942).

Evidence insufficient to establish common-law marriage. Zuzich v. Leyden Lignite Co., 120 Colo. 21, 206 P.2d 883 (1949); Employers' Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 124 Colo. 68, 234 P.2d 901 (1951).

Finding on dependency will not be disturbed on review if supported by evidence. Indus. Comm'n v. Elkas, 73 Colo. 475, 216 P. 521 (1923); New Jersey Fid. & Plate Glass Ins. Co. v. Richey, 85 Colo. 376, 275 P. 937 (1929); Pub. Serv. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 89 Colo. 440, 3 P.2d 799 (1931); Indus. Comm'n v. Coop. Oil Co. 93 Colo. 192, 24 P.2d 753 (1933); Clarke v. Clarke, 95 Colo. 409, 36 P.2d 461 (1934).

III. MINOR CHILD AS DEPENDENT.

Children of deceased worker are entitled to death benefits as full-time students even though they were not 18 at the time of death. Western Gas v. Indus. Claim App. Office, 797 P.2d 823 (Colo. App. 1990).

The statutory presumption that a child is wholly dependent upon parent is based upon the legal obligation of a parent to support a child. Truitt v. Indus. Comm'n, 31 Colo. App. 166, 499 P.2d 621 (1972).

But adoption of decedent's children by decedent's parents terminates a decedent's obligation of support, and the statutory presumption that a child is wholly dependent upon a parent is not applicable. Truitt v. Indus. Comm'n, 31 Colo. App. 166, 499 P.2d 621 (1972).

Furthermore, this section does not hold that minor children must be wholly dependent upon only one of the parents. United States Nat'l Bank v. Indus. Comm'n, 128 Colo. 417, 262 P.2d 731 (1953).

More specifically, this section does not confine the conclusive presumption of dependency wholly on the father. In determining who is conclusively presumed to be wholly dependent it says, "Minor children of the deceased". United States Nat'l Bank v. Indus. Comm'n, 128 Colo. 417, 262 P.2d 731 (1953).

And where the provision is that the minor children are wholly dependent on the deceased, it means a deceased mother equally as much as a deceased father, and especially where the statute does not specifically provide that the minor children are wholly dependent on the father alone. United States Nat'l Bank v. Indus. Comm'n, 128 Colo. 417, 262 P.2d 731 (1953).

So that under this section, an employer, being within the terms of the statute, is re- quired to insure its employees, including the mother of claimants, and therefore the insurer cannot escape liability to answer to her minor children for her death. United States Nat'l Bank v. Indus. Comm'n, 128 Colo. 417, 262 P.2d 731 (1953).

The insurer's liability is fixed as distinguished from measured liability to be determined upon questions of fact concerning the relationship of dependents. These fixed statutory payments are what may be regarded as the appropriate responsibility of an employer, and not what it actually takes to support a child. An employer cannot successfully argue about the responsibility under this conclusive presumption. The fixed liability and the fixed payments are not a substitute for the actual parents' support of their children. Prior to the enactment of workmen's compensation laws, an employer was subjected to actions for damages in such cases commensurate with the loss of the parents' support. United States Nat'l Bank v. Indus. Comm'n, 128 Colo. 417, 262 P.2d 731 (1953).

Stepchildren not legally adopted are precluded from being dependents for purposes of an award of death benefits. Tri-State Commodities, Inc. v. Stewart, 689 P.2d 712 (Colo. App. 1984).

A minor under 18 years of age cannot conclusively be presumed to be a dependent of a brother under the terms of this section. Central Sur. & Ins. Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 94 Colo. 341, 30 P.2d 253 (1934).

8-41-502. Other dependents - temporary dependency. Except as otherwise provided in section 8-41-501 (1) (c), a child eighteen years of age or over and a mother, father, grandmother, grandfather, sister, brother, or grandchild who was wholly or partially supported by the deceased employee at the time of death and for a reasonable period of time immediately prior thereto is considered an actual dependent. To be entitled to compensation, such dependents, except as provided in section 8-41-501 (1) (c), must prove that they were incapable of or actually disabled from earning their own living. If said incapacity or disability is temporary only, compensation shall be paid only during the period of such temporary incapacity or disability.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For comment on McBride v. Indus. Comm'n appearing below, see 8 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 292 (1936).

This section fixes the condition upon which certain persons are to be considered dependent. McBride v. Indus. Comm'n, 97 Colo. 166, 49 P.2d 386 (1935).

And each case depends on its facts. Failure of an employee, after contributing to the support of his sister, to so contribute for a short time prior to his death, caused by accident, would not negative her dependency. Dependency must rest upon the prevailing facts and conditions of each particular case. Empire Zinc Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 102 Colo. 26, 77 P.2d 130 (1938); Regal Coal Co. v. Jackvich, 105 Colo. 479, 99 P.2d 196 (1940).

Under this section the question of dependency is to be determined as a matter of fact and cannot be based upon an existing legal duty to provide support. Tilley v. Bill's Sinclair, 34 Colo. App. 141, 524 P.2d 314 (1974).

No presumption as to dependency. Claimant in a workmen's compensation case, being a sister of deceased employee, there was no presumption of dependency, and the burden was upon her to establish such dependency as would bring her within the provisions of the workmen's compensation act. Empire Zinc Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 102 Colo. 26, 77 P.2d 130 (1938).

Financial contributions by an employee to the support of a sister is evidence of recognition of her dependency upon him. Empire Zinc Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 102 Colo. 26, 77 P.2d 130 (1938).

But dependency can exist without any actual money payment where that payment might have been prevented by some cause operating against the will of the employee. Empire Zinc Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 102 Colo. 26, 77 P.2d 130 (1938).

Mother not precluded from recovery because living with husband. The fact that a mother, at the time of the death of her employee son, was living with her husband who was able and bound to support her, does not preclude an award to her as a partial dependent of the deceased son and the same rule applies to brothers under 18 years of age and who claim compensation for the death of their brother. Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 82 Colo. 281, 260 P. 106 (1927); Indus. Comm'n v. DiNardi, 103 Colo. 591, 87 P.2d 494 (1939).

And partially dependent minor not required to show his inability to earn his own living. Under this section a minor, partially dependent upon a brother who has sustained an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment, is not required to establish he was unable to earn his own living during the period involved in order to be entitled to compensation as a dependent. Indus. Comm'n v. DiNardi, 103 Colo. 591, 87 P.2d 494 (1939).

Entire or partial support is necessary for recovery as a dependent. The father of an employee to be dependent under this section must have been wholly or partially supported by the son at the time of his death and for a reasonable period of time immediately prior thereto. Indus. Comm'n v. Ahel, 80 Colo. 128, 249 P. 866 (1926).

The question of what is "a reasonable period of time" is one of fact which will not ordinarily be disturbed on review. Indus. Comm'n v. Ahel, 80 Colo. 128, 249 P. 866 (1926).

Findings on conflicting evidence will not be disturbed on review. Passini v. Indus. Comm'n, 64 Colo. 349, 171 P. 369 (1918); Indus. Comm'n v. Johnson, 66 Colo. 292, 181 P. 977 (1919); McPhee & McGinnity Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 67 Colo. 86, 185 P. 268 (1919); Youngquist v. Indus. Comm'n 67 Colo. 187, 184 P. 381 (1919); Crawford v. Indus. Comm'n, 72 Colo. 581, 212 P. 828 (1923).

Thus, no review of finding on evidence that father was not incapable. The ground upon which the claimant was denied the compensation was that the father was not shown to be "incapable of or actually disabled from earning his own living", as provided in this section. The district court had no power and the supreme court has no power to review this finding upon the evidence. Picardi v. Indus. Comm'n, 70 Colo. 266, 199 P. 420 (1921).

The word "incapable" as employed in this section has a common and generally accepted meaning. Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 152 Colo. 256, 381 P.2d 267 (1963).

And no definition of the word "incapable" would justify the conclusion as a matter of law that a person over the age of 18 years is incapable of earning his living because he has voluntarily removed himself from the labor market and elected to go to college. Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 152 Colo. 256, 381 P.2d 267 (1963).

Applied in Byrd v. Indus. Comm'n, 658 P.2d 274 (Colo. App. 1982).

8-41-503. Dependency and extent determined - how. (1) Dependents and the extent of their dependency shall be determined as of the date of the injury to the injured employee, and the right to death benefits shall become fixed as of said date irrespective of any subsequent change in conditions except as provided in section 8-41-501 (1) (c). Death benefits shall be directly payable to the dependents entitled thereto or to such person legally entitled thereto as the director may designate.

(2) In case an employee or claimant entitled to compensation dies leaving dependents, any accrued and unpaid portion of the compensation or benefits up to the time of the death of such employee or claimant shall be paid to such dependents as may be ordered by the director and not to the legal representative as such of said decedent. In case the injured employee or claimant leaves no dependents, the director may order the application of any accrued and unpaid benefits up to the time of the death of such employee or claimant paid upon the expenses of the last sickness or funeral of such decedent, the preference in such payment to be to funeral expenses.

(3) In case an injured employee or dependent of a deceased employee entitled to benefits under articles 40 to 47 of this title is declared incompetent or insane, any benefits accrued or to accrue may be paid to the conservator of the estate, if any, or to any dependents, or to the party or institution having custody of the person of such injured employee or dependent of a deceased employee as may be ordered by the director in the director's discretion.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For comment on McBride v. Indus. Comm'n appearing below, see 8 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 292 (1936).

Purpose of section. The purpose of the workmen's compensation act is to cast upon the particular industry the burden resulting from accidental injuries sustained by its employees while performing duties arising out of and in the course of their employment. It is not intended to compensate employees for injuries or illness not due to their employment, or to pay benefits to their dependents when death results from such injuries or illness; or to pay the medical, hospital, funeral, or other expenses incurred by reason of such injuries, illness, or death. In such case, however, it is not unreasonable to pay to such dependents, or, where there are no dependents, to pay on account of such expenses, any unpaid installments of compensation that may have become due and payable to the employee during his lifetime, under a disability award made during his lifetime. That is the purpose of this section. Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 89 Colo. 475, 3 P.2d 1079 (1931).

The survival statute is applicable to claims filed under the Workers' Compensation Act. The conditions of recovery under the Act were fulfilled on the date that the injury was incurred and are dependent only on whether claimant's claim is timely filed. Claimant's death by unrelated causes prior to final adjudication has no effect on the claim. Estate of Huey v. J.C. Trucking, 837 P.2d 1218 (Colo. 1992).

This section deals with the fact of dependency and not with the amount of compensation to be paid. Colo. Fuel & Iron Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 93 Colo. 188, 24 P.2d 1117 (1933).

Fact of dependency cannot be based on legal duty to support. Under this section and §§ 8-50-102 and 8-50-104 of this article the question of dependency is to be determined as a matter of fact and cannot be based upon an existing legal duty to provide support. Colo. Fuel & Iron Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 90 Colo. 330, 9 P.2d 285 (1932); Subsequent Injury Fund v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 131 P.3d 1224 (Colo. App. 2006).

Innocent party in prohibited marriage. While it is true that a marriage entered into prior to the dissolution of a previous marriage is prohibited in Colorado, an innocent party to such a marriage is not deprived of the rights conferred upon a legal spouse. As a putative spouse, upon the other person's death, she acquires the legal spouse's right to workmen's compensation. Williams v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 670 P.2d 453 (Colo. App. 1983).

Mother a partial dependent of deceased employee son at time of his death. Indus. Comm'n v. DiNardi, 103 Colo. 591, 87 P.2d 494 (1939).

This section does not fix all dependencies as of the time of the accident. Section 8-50-102 fixes the condition upon which certain persons are to be considered dependent. It determines their dependency as of the time of employee's death, and does so, regardless of the time of the accident. It then follows that § 8-50-102 is in conflict with this section, if this section is to be construed as fixing all dependencies as of the time of the accident. We do not so construe it. Injury and death are not always coincident. This being true, conditions constituting dependency may change during the intervening period, as is often the case, and it must follow, that the extent of the right to death benefits cannot always be fixed as of the date of the accident. McBride v. Indus. Comm'n, 97 Colo. 166, 49 P.2d 386 (1935).

And the wording of this section presupposes a question to be determined. That question is "who" and "the extent". Sections 8-50-101 and 8-50-102 leave no question to be determined. Dependency and extent are fixed as a matter of law. "For all purposes of the act" the general assembly said the wife is conclusively presumed to be wholly dependent on the husband if living with him at the time of his injury or his death. Had the general assembly intended to exclude a post-injury wife, words were just as available then as now, to so specifically state. McBride v. Indus. Comm'n, 97 Colo. 166, 49 P.2d 386 (1935).

Amount of death benefits should be fixed as of the date of death, not the date of injury. Richards v. Richards & Richards, 664 P.2d 254 (Colo. App. 1983).

The final clause in the first sentence of subsection (1) refers not to the amount of death benefits to be paid, rather it refers to a dependent's right to death benefits which is fixed as of the date of the injury regardless of any subsequent change in that dependent's status. Richards v. Richards & Richards, 664 P.2d 254 (Colo. App. 1983).

Payment of balance of partial disability award after death of employee. If, at the time of the employee's death, there was an unpaid balance of the temporary partial disability award made prior thereto, that had become due and payable to the employee in his lifetime, such balance was "accrued and unpaid" within the meaning of this section, and was applicable to payment upon the expenses of the last sickness or funeral. Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 89 Colo. 475, 3 P.2d 1079 (1931).

Authority to discharge expenses is permissive. This section is merely a grant of authority to discharge expenses of last sickness and funeral from accrued and unpaid benefits instead of paying the total to the personal representative. Moreover, the word is "may" not "shall", hence, that authority is apparently permissive not mandatory. Moffat Coal Co. v. Hilliard, 117 Colo. 556, 190 P.2d 907 (1948).

Employee's estate may collect accrued payments. Were an insurance company had been paying compensation to employee for disability, and said employee returns to his native country of Greece, residing there until its occupation by an enemy during which time he died, even though payments were authorized to be suspended during occupation, the deceased employee's estate may now collect accrued payments. Moffat Coal Co. v. Hilliard, 117 Colo. 556, 190 P.2d 907 (1948).

"Irrespective of any subsequent change in conditions" refers only to dependents. McBride v. Indus. Comm'n, 97 Colo. 166, 49 P.2d 386 (1935).

But a child is entitled to compensation even though adopted since father's death. Employers'

Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 70 Colo. 229, 199 P. 483 (1921).

Phrase "irrespective of any subsequent change in conditions" is evidence of the general assembly's intent that death benefit awards, once fixed, should not be reopened because of later changes in a beneficiary's economic condition. Ward v. Ward, 928 P.2d 739 (Colo. App. 1996).

The word "accrued" in this section is used in the sense of due and payable. Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 89 Colo. 475, 3 P.2d 1079 (1931).

"Accrue" means "to come into existence as an enforceable claim: vest as a right." Permanent partial disability benefits do not come into existence as an enforceable claim or vest as a right until maximum medical improvement is reached. Dependents of Nunnally v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 943 P.2d 26 (Colo. App. 1996).

The term "accrued" as used in subsection (2) means "to come into existence as an enforceable claim: vest as a right." Singleton v. Kenya Corp., 961 P.2d 571 (Colo. App. 1998).

"Accrued and unpaid", as used in subsection (2), means "due and payable". Therefore, workers' compensation benefits that accrued prior to claimant's death but were not awarded by an administrative law judge until after his death could not be awarded to his estate. Estate of Huey v. J.C. Trucking Co., 824 P.2d 89 (Colo. App. 1991).

And the work "benefits" means compensation. As used in this section the word "benefits" is construed to mean compensation. "Compensation" is awarded to an employee; "benefits" are awarded to his dependents. Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 89 Colo. 475, 3 P.2d 1079 (1931).

Applied in Frontier Airlines v. Indus. Comm'n, 654 P.2d 1333 (Colo. App. 1982); Byrd v. Indus. Comm'n, 658 P.2d 274 (Colo. App. 1982); Dziewior v. Michigan Gen. Corp., 672 P.2d 1026 (Colo. App. 1983).

8-41-504. Action by injured employee - dependents not parties in interest. No dependent of an injured employee, during the life of the employee, shall be deemed a party in interest to any proceeding by said employee for the enforcement of any claim for compensation nor with respect to any settlement thereof by said employee.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 8-50-108 as it existed prior to 1990.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 8-41-504 is similar to § 8-50-108 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, a relevant case construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this section.

Dependents are not parties in interest to any action by the injured employee during his lifetime. In re Hampton v. State, 31 Colo.

App. 141, 500 P.2d 1186 (1972).

And an employee's dependent's right to death benefits under workmen's compensation are independent and distinct from right of employee. In re Hampton v. State, 31 Colo. App. 141, 500 P.2d 1186 (1972).

Thus, the statute of limitations applicable to an employee's claim for compensation does not bar dependent's subsequent claim for death benefits. In re Hampton v. State, 31 Colo. App. 141, 500 P.2d 1186 (1972).

Also, as a consequence of the independent nature of dependents' right, an employee's release or waiver of his rights does not bar his dependents' subsequent claim for death benefits. In re Hampton v. State, 31 Colo. App. 141, 500 P.2d 1186 (1972).

8-41-505. Illegitimate minor children. Illegitimate minor children of a deceased putative father shall be entitled to compensation in the same respect as a legitimate minor child of said decedent when it is proved to the satisfaction of the director that the father, during his lifetime, has acknowledged said children to be his and has regularly contributed to their support and maintenance for a reasonable period of time prior to his death.

8-42-101. Employer must furnish medical aid - approval of plan - fee schedule - contracting for treatment - no recovery from employee - medical treatment guidelines - accreditation of physicians - rules - repeal. (1) (a) Every employer, regardless of said employer's method of insurance, shall furnish such medical, surgical, dental, nursing, and hospital treatment, medical, hospital, and surgical supplies, crutches, and apparatus as may reasonably be needed at the time of the injury or occupational disease and thereafter during the disability to cure and relieve the employee from the effects of the injury.

(b) In all cases where the injury results in the loss of a member or part of the employee's body, loss of teeth, loss of vision or hearing, or damage to an existing prosthetic device, the employer shall furnish within the limits of the medical benefits provided in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1) artificial members, glasses, hearing aids, braces, and other external prosthetic devices, including dentures, which are reasonably required to replace or improve the function of each member or part of the body or prosthetic device so affected or to improve the employee's vision or hearing. The employee may petition the division for a replacement of any artificial member, glasses, hearing aid, brace, or other external prosthetic device, including dentures, upon grounds that the employee has undergone an anatomical change since the previous device was furnished or for other good cause shown, that the anatomical change or good cause is directly related to and caused by the injury, and that the replacement is necessary to improve the function of each member or part of the body so affected or to relieve pain and discomfort. Implants or devices necessary to regulate the operation of, or to replace, with implantable devices, internal organs or structures of the body may be replaced when the authorized treating physician deems it necessary. Every employer subject to the terms and provisions of articles 40 to 47 of this title must insure against liability for the medical, surgical, and hospital expenses provided for in this article, unless permission is given by the director to such employer to operate under a medical plan, as set forth in subsection (2) of this section.

(c) In any case in which a firefighter, emergency medical services provider, or peace officer, as described in section 16-2.5-101, C.R.S., is exposed during the course and within the scope of employment to a known or possible source of hepatitis C, the employer, or if insured, the insurer, shall, at their expense, provide for baseline testing within the period of time specified in section 8-41-208 (1) (a) to determine whether the employee was free of hepatitis C at the time of the on-the-job exposure. The employer, or if insured, the insurer, shall pay for all reasonable and necessary medical procedures and treatment for exposure to hepatitis C during the period of time set forth in section 8-41-208 (1) (d).

(2) Every such plan, which is agreed to between the employer and employee, for the furnishing of medical, surgical, and hospital treatment, whether or not the employee is to pay any part of the expense of such treatment, before being put into effect, shall receive the approval of the director. The director has full power to formulate the terms and conditions under which any such plan may operate and the essentials thereof, and at any time the director may order modifications or changes in any such plan or withdraw prior approval thereof. No plan shall be approved by the director which relieves the employer from the burden of assuming and paying for any part of the medical, surgical, and hospital services and supplies required.

(3) (a) (I) The director shall establish a schedule fixing the fees for which all surgical, hospital, dental, nursing, vocational rehabilitation, and medical services, whether related to treatment or not, pertaining to injured employees under this section shall be compensated. It is unlawful, void, and unenforceable as a debt for any physician, chiropractor, hospital, person, expert witness, reviewer, evaluator, or institution to contract with, bill, or charge any party for services, rendered in connection with injuries coming within the purview of this article or an applicable fee schedule, which are or may be in excess of said fee schedule unless such charges are approved by the director. Fee schedules shall be reviewed on or before July 1 of each year by the director, and appropriate health care practitioners shall be given a reasonable opportunity to be heard as required pursuant to section 24-4-103, C.R.S., prior to fixing the fees, impairment rating guidelines, which shall be based on the revised third edition of the "American Medical Association Guides to the Evaluation of Permanent Impairment", in effect as of July 1, 1991, and medical treatment guidelines and utilization standards. Fee schedules established pursuant to this subparagraph (I) shall take effect on January 1. The director shall promulgate rules concerning reporting requirements, penalties for failure to report correctly or in a timely manner, utilization control requirements for services provided under this section, and the accreditation process in subsection (3.6) of this section. The fee schedule shall apply to all surgical, hospital, dental, nursing, vocational rehabilitation, and medical services and to expert witness, expert reviewer, or expert evaluator services, whether related to treatment or not, provided after any final order, final admission, or full or partial settlement of the claim.

(II) Notwithstanding the provisions of subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (a) the fees set forth in the schedule established pursuant to subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (a) shall be those fees in effect immediately prior to July 1, 1991, and such fees shall remain in effect until July 1, 1995.

(III) Notwithstanding the provisions of subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (a), until the impairment rating guidelines and medical treatment guidelines and utilization standards required by subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (a) and subsection (3.5) of this section are adopted and level I accreditation is received, compensation for fees for chiropractic treatments shall not be made more than ninety days after the first of such treatments nor after the twelfth such treatment, whichever first occurs, unless the chiropractor has received level I accreditation.

(b) Medical treatment guidelines and utilization standards, developed by the director, shall be used by health care practitioners for compliance with this section.

(3.5) (a) (I) "Physician" means, for the purposes of the level I and level II accreditation programs, a physician licensed under the "Colorado Medical Practice Act". For the purposes of level I accreditation only and not level II accreditation, "physician" means a dentist licensed under the "Dental Practice Law of Colorado", a podiatrist licensed under the provisions of article 32 of title 12, C.R.S., and a chiropractor licensed under the provisions of article 33 of title 12, C.R.S. No physician shall be deemed to be accredited under either level I or level II solely by reason of being licensed.

(II) The director shall promulgate rules establishing a system for the determination of medical treatment guidelines and utilization standards and medical impairment rating guidelines for impairment ratings as a percent of the whole person or affected body part based on the revised third edition of the "American Medical Association Guides to the Evaluation of Permanent Impairment", in effect as of July 1, 1991.

(b) A medical impairment rating system shall be maintained by the director.

(c) (I) This subsection (3.5) is repealed, effective July 1, 2014.

(II) Prior to such repeal the accreditation process created by this subsection (3.5) and subsection (3.6) of this section shall be reviewed as provided for in section 24-34-104, C.R.S.

(3.6) The two-tier accreditation system shall comprise the following programs:

(a) (I) A program establishing the accreditation requirements for physicians providing primary care to patients who have, as a result of their injury, been unable to return to work for more than three working days, referred to in this section as "time-loss injuries", which program shall be voluntary except in the case of chiropractors, for whom it shall be mandatory, and which shall be known as level I accreditation; and

(II) A program establishing the accreditation requirements for physicians providing impairment evaluation of injured workers, which program shall be known as level II accreditation.

(b) A physician who provides impairment evaluation of injured workers shall complete and must have received accreditation under the level II accreditation program. However, the authorized treating physician providing primary care need not be level II accredited to determine that no permanent medical impairment has resulted from the injury. Specialists who do not render primary care to injured workers and who do not perform impairment evaluations do not require accreditation. The facility where a physician provides such services cannot be accredited.

(c) Both the level I and level II accreditation programs shall be implemented and available to physicians. All physicians who are required to be accredited shall complete the level II accreditation program or programs.

(d) The level I and level II accreditation programs shall operate in such a manner that the costs thereof shall be fully met by registration fees paid by the physicians. The registration fee for level I accreditation shall not exceed two hundred fifty dollars, and the registration fee for level II accreditation shall not exceed four hundred dollars. The registration fee for each program shall cover the cost of all accreditation course work and materials.

(e) The accreditation system shall be established so as to provide physicians with an understanding of the administrative, legal, and medical roles and in such a manner that accreditation is accessible to every licensed physician, with consideration of specialty and geographic diversity.

(f) Initial accreditation shall be for a three-year period and may be renewed for successive three-year periods. The director by regulation may determine any additional training program required prior to accreditation renewal.

(g) The director shall, upon good cause shown, revoke the accreditation of any physician who violates the provisions of this subsection (3.6) or any rule promulgated by the director pursuant to this subsection (3.6), following a hearing on the merits before an administrative law judge, subject to review by the industrial claim appeals office and the court of appeals, in accordance with all applicable provisions of article 43 of this title.

(h) If a physician whose accreditation has been revoked submits a claim for payment for services rendered subsequent to such revocation, the physician shall be considered in violation of section 10-1-128, C.R.S., and neither an insurance carrier nor a self-insured employer shall be under any obligation to pay such claim.

(i) A physician who provides treatment for nontime loss injuries need not be accredited to be reimbursed for the costs of such treatment pursuant to the provisions of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado".

(j) (Deleted by amendment, L. 96, p. 151, § 2, effective July 1, 1996.)

(k) The division shall make available to insurers, claimants, and employers a list of all accredited physicians and a list of all physicians whose accreditation has been revoked. Such lists shall be updated on a monthly basis.

(l) The registration fees collected pursuant to paragraph (d) of this subsection (3.6) shall be transmitted to the state treasurer, who shall credit the same to the physicians accreditation program cash fund, which is hereby created in the state treasury. Moneys in the physicians accreditation program cash fund are hereby continuously appropriated for the payment of the direct costs of providing the level I and level II accreditation courses and materials.

(m) All administrative costs associated with the level I and level II accreditation programs shall be paid out of the workers' compensation cash fund in accordance with appropriations made pursuant to section 8-44-112 (7).

(n) The director shall contract with the medical school of the university of Colorado for the services of a medical director to advise the director on issues of accreditation, impairment rating guidelines, medical treatment guidelines and utilization standards, and case management and to consult with the director on peer review activities as specified in this subsection (3.6) and section 8-43-501. Such medical director shall be a medical doctor licensed to practice in this state with experience in occupational medicine. The director may contract with an appropriate private organization which meets the definition of a utilization and quality control peer review organization as set forth in 42 U.S.C. sec. 1320c-1 (1) (A) or (1) (B), to conduct peer review activities under this subsection (3.6) and section 8-43-501 and to recommend whether or not adverse action is warranted.

(o) Except as provided in this subsection (3.6), neither an insurance carrier nor a self-insured employer or injured worker shall be liable for costs incurred for an impairment evaluation rendered by a physician where there is a determination of permanent medical impairment if such physician is not level II accredited pursuant to the provisions of this subsection (3.6).

(p) (I) For purposes of this paragraph (p):

(A) "Case management" means a system developed by the insurance carrier in which the carrier shall assign a person knowledgeable in workers' compensation health care to communicate with the employer, employee, and treating physician to assure that appropriate and timely medical care is being provided.

(B) "Managed care" means the provision of medical services through a recognized organization authorized under the provisions of parts 1, 3, and 4 of article 16 of title 10, C.R.S., or a network of medical providers accredited to practice workers' compensation under this subsection (3.6).

(II) Every employer or its insurance carrier shall offer at least managed care or medical case management in the counties of Denver, Adams, Jefferson, Arapahoe, Douglas, Boulder, Larimer, Weld, El Paso, Pueblo, and Mesa and shall offer medical case management in all other counties of the state.

(q) The division is authorized to accept moneys from any governmental unit as well as grants, gifts, and donations from individuals, private organizations, and foundations; except that no grant, gift, or donation may be accepted by the division if it is subject to conditions which are inconsistent with this article or any other laws of this state or which require expenditures from the workers' compensation cash fund which have not been approved by the general assembly. All moneys accepted by the division shall be transmitted to the state treasurer for credit to the workers' compensation cash fund.

(r) (I) This subsection (3.6) is repealed, effective July 1, 2014.

(II) Prior to such repeal the accreditation process created by subsection (3.5) of this section and this subsection (3.6) shall be reviewed as provided for in section 24-34-104, C.R.S.

(3.7) On and after July 1, 1991, all physical impairment ratings used under articles 40 to 47 of this title shall be based on the revised third edition of the "American Medical Association Guides to the Evaluation of Permanent Impairment", in effect as of July 1, 1991. For purposes of determining levels of medical impairment pursuant to articles 40 to 47 of this title a physician shall not render a medical impairment rating based on chronic pain without anatomic or physiologic correlation. Anatomic correlation must be based on objective findings.

(4) Once there has been an admission of liability or the entry of a final order finding that an employer or insurance carrier is liable for the payment of an employee's medical costs or fees, a medical provider shall under no circumstances seek to recover such costs or fees from the employee.

(5) If any party files an application for hearing on whether the claimant is entitled to medical maintenance benefits recommended by an authorized treating physician that are unpaid and contested, and any requested medical maintenance benefit is admitted fewer than twenty days before the hearing or ordered after application for hearing is filed, the court shall award the claimant all reasonable costs incurred in pursuing the medical benefit. Such costs do not include attorney fees.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Primer on Permanent Disability in the Colorado Workmen's Compensation Law", see 57 Den. L.J. 573 (1980). For article, "A Review of Medical Issues in Worker's Compensation", see 19 Colo. Law. 667 (1990).

Annotator's note. (1) Since § 8-42-101 is similar to § 8-49-101 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

(2) Many of the cases annotated below which arose prior to July 1, 1987, were decided under the former provisions of § 8-49-101 which have been substantially amended or which have been repealed.

(3) Cases included in the annotations which refer to the industrial commission were decided prior to the 1969 amendment which removed powers formerly exercised by the industrial commission and vested them in the division of labor and its director.

Property interest created requiring procedural due process. A claimant has a property interest in receiving treatment and supplies that may reasonably be needed at the time of injury or occupational disease and thereafter during the disability to cure and relieve the employee from the effects of the injury. Colo. Comp. Ins. Auth. v. Nofio, 886 P.2d 714 (Colo. 1994).

Litigation expenses not exempt. The director's authority to establish a fee schedule under this section is not limited to fees for treatment but may extend to the amount charged by a physician for review of a deposition in connection with a hearing. Janssen v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 40 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2001), rev'd on other grounds sub nom. Indus. Claim Appeals Office v. Zarlingo, 57 P.3d 736 (Colo. 2002).

Failure of the director of the division of workers' compensation to adopt rules for rating psychological impairment pursuant to this section did not deprive employer and the compensation insurance authority of due process where the appropriate report form for impairment ratings was used, the provider that gave the impairment rating was accredited, and an opinion of independent medical examiner was not sought pursuant to § 8-42-107 (8)(b) after the initial medical impairment assessment. City of Boulder v. Dinsmore, 902 P.2d 925 (Colo. App. 1995).

This section requires all physical impairment ratings to be based on the AMA Guides. Gonzales v. Advanced Component Sys., 949 P.2d 569 (Colo. 1997).

The AMA Guides do not preclude a physician from concluding that an injury primarily occurred to or affected only one side of the back. Wackenhut Corp. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 17 P.3d 202 (Colo. App. 2000).

The date of maximum medical improvement is not relevant in and of itself to applying the AMA guidelines. Therefore, a date of maximum medical improvement does not invalidate a physician's findings that a condition, such as pain, has existed after such date, and applying such findings to the AMA guidelines. McLane Western Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 996 P.2d 263 (Colo. App. 1999).

Neither subsection (3.7) of this section nor the AMA Guides can be read as superseding or overriding the express legislative directive in § 8-42-107 (1) regarding how benefits are to be calculated for employees who have sustained only scheduled injuries. Kolar v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 122 P.3d 1075 (Colo. App. 2005).

Disabling industrial injury suffered prior to July 1, 1987. A worker who has been awarded temporary partial disability benefits and who has been directed to undergo a vocational rehabilitation evaluation is entitled to receive temporary partial disability benefits until the commencement of a vocational rehabilitation program or the entry of an administrative ruling that vocational rehabilitation is not necessary to render the worker fit for a remunerative occupation. Allee v. Contractors, Inc., 783 P.2d 273 (Colo. 1989); Gerber v. CAN-USA Construction, Inc., 783 P.2d 269 (Colo. 1989);

Phillips v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 783 P.2d 271 (Colo. 1989); Indus. Claim Appeals Office v. Mid-Continent Res., Inc., 783 P.2d 290 (Colo. 1989); Arndt v. Elec. Metal Prods., Inc., 783 P.2d 290 (Colo. 1989); Northeastern Junior Coll. v. Kenyon, 783 P.2d 853 (Colo. 1989) (decided prior to 1987 repeal of subsections (4) and (5)).

This section imposes upon an employer the duty of furnishing medical, surgical, nursing and hospital treatment and supplies and apparatus for a fixed time and to a fixed minimum regardless of the compensation allowed, and where such bills are not paid but are included in the award they are paid direct to those who have rendered the service or furnished the supplies. Jacobson v. Doan, 136 Colo. 496, 319 P.2d 975 (1957); Publix Cab Co. v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 139 Colo. 205, 338 P.2d 702 (1959).

The act authorizes an award of medical benefits reasonably necessary to relieve the injured worker from the effects of the industrial injury. Employers have been required to provide services which are either medically necessary for the treatment of a claimant's injuries or incidental to obtaining such treatment. Atencio v. Quality Care, Inc., 791 P.2d 7 (Colo. App. 1990); Colo. Comp. Ins. Auth. v. Nofio, 886 P.2d 714 (Colo. 1994).

A prosthetic hip is an internal device that may be replaced when the treating physician deems it necessary; therefore, an employee who suffers a left hip prosthetic shift is entitled to workers' compensation benefits. Because the prosthesis is an internal device, it is not subject to the same limitations as an external device. Am. Appliances, Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 166 P.3d 267 (Colo. App. 2007).

Treatments for a condition not caused by employment are not compensated. Claimant was not entitled to increased costs for cancer treatment even when the increased costs were caused by an employment injury. The condition being treated was not caused by employment; therefore, the treatments will not "relieve the employee of the effects of the injury." Owens v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 49 P.3d 1187 (Colo. App. 2002).

In certain instances an employer can be held liable for treatment of a nonindustrial condition necessary to prepare a claimant for surgery to treat a compensable industrial injury. Pub. Serv. Co. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 979 P.2d 584 (Colo. App. 1999).

Obligation of employer. This section obligates the employer to furnish the necessary medical assistance for treatment of the claimant's injury both at the time of the injury "and thereafter during the disability". Granite Constr. Co. v. Leonard, 40 Colo. App. 20, 568 P.2d 500 (1977).

Disability is determined as of the time physicians notify claimant they can do nothing further for him. There is no provision of the workmen's compensation act which specifies the time at which disability is to be determined, and the industrial commission has authority to fix the disability as of the time physicians for the employer and insurance carrier notify claimant they can do nothing further for him. This is true notwithstanding that the employee, by undergoing further surgical treatment at his own expense, is able to decrease the extent of his disability below the percentage fixed by the division. London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 72 Colo. 177, 210 P. 70 (1922).

The language of this section is clear and unambiguous in stating that the employer, through his insurance carrier, shall not be required to pay for medical expenses beyond $7,500 (now $20,000). Weaver-Beatty Motor Co. v. Billen, 36 Colo. App. 442, 541 P.2d 120 (1975).

Income maintenance benefits are not included in listing of benefits to be offset by any disability annuity payments; to extend this section to include such benefits would not only be tantamount to indulging in judicial legislation but would ignore the express statutory language. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Velasquez, 628 P.2d 190 (Colo. App. 1981).

Director may not extend rehabilitation beyond 52 weeks. The director does not have any discretion to extend the period of vocational rehabilitation once the 52-week limitation of subsection (4) is reached. In re Sterling v. Indus. Comm'n, 662 P.2d 1096 (Colo. App. 1982).

Claimant's temporary disability benefits should not have been suspended because he withdrew monthly amounts from his company's assets for living expenses, where claimant was not earning any income. Winters v. Indus. Comm'n, 736 P.2d 1256 (Colo. App. 1986).

Determination of permanent disability under former subsection (5). Former subsection (5) required that permanent disability be determined as if the employee had successfully completed the rehabilitation program. From the commission's finding that, since the claimant voluntarily withdrew from the rehabilitation program, the industrial disability equaled physical impairment, it cannot be determined that the physical disability was assessed from subsection (5)'s perspective. Thus, further findings on this issue are needed. Churchill v. Sears Roebuck & Co., 720 P.2d 171 (Colo. App. 1986) (decided prior to 1986 abolishment of the industrial commission).

Assertion of permanent disability claim not necessary for vocational rehabilitation. This section does not impose a burden upon one who seeks vocational rehabilitation to assert first a permanent disability claim. Timberline Sawmill & Lumber, Inc. v. Indus. Comm'n, 624 P.2d 367 (Colo. App. 1981).

And ineligibility for vocational rehabilitation benefits not inconsistent with award of disability benefits. A finding that a claimant is not eligible for vocational rehabilitation benefits is not inconsistent with its award of permanent partial disability benefits. Southwest Inv. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 650 P.2d 1355 (Colo. App. 1982).

Issue of the claimant's entitlement to vocational rehabilitation must be reevaluated where there is further medical treatment for her disability and her subsequent ability to perform work for which she has previous training or experience. This issue is not precluded by an initial determination that the claimant does not meet the statutory standards for vocational rehabilitation. Dziewior v. Michigan Gen. Corp., 672 P.2d 1026 (Colo. App. 1983).

Subrogation has no effect on limits of liability under this section. The right of subrogation granted to the state fund under § 8-52-108 is a separate and distinct right which has no effect on the limits of liability under this section established by the general assembly. Weaver-Beatty Motor Co. v. Billen, 36 Colo. App. 442, 541 P.2d 120 (1975).

Because subrogation would be meaningless if the limit of liability fluctuated with every recovery. Weaver-Beatty Motor Co. v. Billen, 36 Colo. App. 442, 541 P.2d 120 (1975).

When limit is reached, application under § 8-66-108 is appropriate. The general assembly established the limit of liability under this section, and when this limit has been initially reached, application for major medical benefits under § 8-66-108 is appropriate. A later recovery or lack of recovery will only affect the employer's loss experience and premium charges; it cannot affect the question of whether the statutory limit of liability has been exhausted. Weaver-Beatty Motor Co. v. Billen, 36 Colo. App. 442, 541 P.2d 120 (1975).

Initial responsibility for identifying the need for a vocational rehabilitation plan rests with the employer or insurance carrier. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Savio, 706 P.2d 1258 (Colo. 1985).

Rules of procedure relative to vocational rehabilitation allows a claimant the remedy of securing official intervention when an insurer delays or denies providing rehabilitation services. This remedy does not compensate a claimant for any injury caused by a bad faith delay or denial by the employer or insurance carrier. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Savio, 706 P.2d 1258 (Colo. 1985).

Requisites for major medical insurance fund liability for vocational rehabilitation benefits are that the employee suffer a compensable injury rendering him incapable of employment for which he has training or experience and that total benefits expended by the employer for medical and vocational rehabilitation benefits exceed $20,000. White v. State Comp. Ins. Fund, 700 P.2d 923 (Colo. App. 1985).

Claimant remained eligible to recover vocational rehabilitation benefits from the major medical insurance fund despite his settlement with the state compensation insurance fund which recited that it was not to compromise claims against the major medical fund. White v. State Comp. Ins. Fund, 700 P.2d 923 (Colo. App. 1985).

Injured employee must have permanent physical impairment which renders him unable to work in order to receive vocational rehabilitation benefits. However, no determination need be made of the employee's degree of permanent partial disability until after completion of the rehabilitation program. Freilinger v. Gates Rubber Co., 733 P.2d 1214 (Colo. App. 1987).

The authority to determine a claimant's eligibility for vocational rehabilitation is not an unconstitutional delegation of authority because the legislative standards and procedural safeguards are sufficient to protect against an arbitrary exercise of administrative discretion. Electron Corp. v. Wuerz, 820 P.2d 356 (Colo. App. 1991).

Vocational rehabilitation benefits denied. Where the evidence establishes that the injury to claimant's thumb neither permanently precludes him from engaging in his usual and customary occupation, nor has it rendered him unable to perform work for which he has previous training or experience, the commission correctly held that claimant was not entitled to vocational rehabilitation benefits. Smith v. Indus. Comm'n, 735 P.2d 921 (Colo. App. 1986).

Injured employee not entitled to vocational rehabilitation benefits where accident which occurred at most recent work place did not result in any permanent disability and was not the cause of the employee's inability to work. Freilinger v. Gates Rubber Co., 733 P.2d 1214 (Colo. App. 1987).

Vocational rehabilitation benefits may be suspended when claimant declines offer of suitable gainful employment. Employability in general labor market may be considered but is not essential to the determination of such employment. Roe v. Indus. Comm'n, 734 P.2d 138 (Colo. App. 1986).

Waiver of right to retraining in another field was not waiver of all rights under vocational rehabilitation statute and therefore the commission should adopt claimant's plan so long as it is feasible and could reasonably be expected to accomplish its goals. Winters v. Indus. Comm'n, 736 P.2d 1256 (Colo. App. 1986).

Retraining plan may be approved even if it might not be completed in one year, but income maintenance and other vocational rehabilitation benefits would cease after one year. Winters v. Indus. Comm'n, 736 P.2d 1256 (Colo. App. 1986).

A vocational rehabilitation "plan" which attempts to help a claimant start his own business is contrary to the language and intent of this section. Husson v. Babbit, 728 P.2d 750 (Colo. App. 1986).

Claimant withdrew from rehabilitation program voluntarily and without good cause. Where claimant testified she thought she had left the rehabilitation program voluntarily because "it wasn't working out", where there was evidence that claimant was informed before termination of the areas and improvement necessary and made little effort to improve, and where the record revealed that for claimant's position no prior experience or training was necessary, there was ample evidence that claimant withdrew from the program voluntarily without good cause. Churchill v. Sears Roebuck & Co., 720 P.2d 171 (Colo. App. 1986).

Child care services were compensable to extent necessary to allow claimant to attend medical appointments and to allow her to rest. Bellone v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 940 P.2d 1116 (Colo. App. 1997).

Recovery of child care expenses allowed during period of vocational rehabilitation as a necessary service under former subsection (4). Grover v. Indus. Comm'n, 759 P.2d 705 (Colo. 1988).

Claim is allowed only for injury arising out of and in the course of employment. A claim for medical expenses rendered to an injured employee at the instance of the employer or insurance carrier in cases where the injury is not caused by accident arising out of and in the course of employment may be enforced in an independent action, but cannot be allowed in a proceeding under the workmen's compensation act. Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 89 Colo. 475, 3 P.2d 1079 (1931); Morey Mercantile Co. v. Flynt, 97 Colo. 163, 47 P.2d 864 (1935).

And an injury takes place when the claimant, as a reasonable man, should recognize the nature, seriousness, and probable compensable character of his injury. Crest Fence Co. v. Cec, 175 Colo. 21, 485 P.2d 709 (1971).

The provision of § 8-44-107 that compensation awarded against employer may be increased 50 percent, does not apply to an award for medical, surgical, nursing, and hospital treatment. Indus. Comm'n v. Hammond, 77 Colo. 414, 236 P. 1006 (1925).

Medical expense paid for a claimant under the workmen's compensation act is compensation within the meaning of the act. Morey Mercantile Co. v. Flynt, 97 Colo. 163, 47 P.2d 864 (1935), citing Indus. Comm'n v. Globe Indem. Co., 74 Colo. 52, 218 P. 910 (1923); Indus. Comm'n v. Lockard, 89 Colo. 428, 3 P.2d 416 (1931).

And an employer is required to pay medical expenses only in cases in which he would be charged with the duty of paying other compensation. Morey Mercantile Co. v. Flynt, 97 Colo. 163, 47 P.2d 864 (1935), citing Indus. Comm'n v. Globe Indem. Co., 74 Colo. 52, 218 P. 910 (1923).

But if an injury is compensable, the employer has an absolute duty to provide medical and kindred relief at the employer's own expense. It cannot be made to depend upon any requirement of payment of medical assessments by the employee; such a requirement, in case of compensable injury, would be unlawful. Frank v. Indus. Comm'n, 96 Colo. 364, 43 P.2d 158 (1935).

Employer's duty to provide future medical treatment. The fact that an employee had reached maximum medical improvement would not prohibit an award requiring an employer to provide future medical treatment reasonably necessary to relieve the claimant from the effects of an industrial injury. Grover v. Indus. Comm'n, 759 P.2d 705 (Colo. 1988); Milco Const. v. Cowan, 860 P.2d 539 (Colo. App. 1992).

However, there must be substantial evidence in the record to support a determination that future medical treatment will be reasonably necessary to accomplish the statutory purpose. Grover v. Indus. Comm'n, 759 P.2d 705 (Colo. 1988); Milco Const. v. Cowan, 860 P.2d 539 (Colo. App. 1992).

Where the administrative law judge failed to determine whether a physician's report constituted substantial evidence that future knee replacement surgery would be reasonably necessary, the Industrial Claims Appeals Office had no authority to conclude that such report did constitute such evidence. Milco Const. v. Cowan, 860 P.2d 539 (Colo. App. 1992).

In the absence of a recommendation for treatment that has a reasonable prospect for improving claimant's condition, the claimant may be found to be at maximum medical improvement. Gonzales v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 905 P.2d 16 (Colo. App. 1995).

Workers' compensation insurer not liable to reimburse no-fault automobile insurer for any medical expenses covered by director's fee schedule to the extent any fee listed in the schedule is exceeded. Law requires that parties undertake comparison of each expenditure for medical or other services covered by the schedule with the scheduled fee. Employers Fire Ins. v. Lumbermens Mut., 964 P.2d 591 (Colo. App. 1998).

Claimant has no right to receive medical care from a particular medical provider or to receive a particular type of treatment. Colo. Comp. Ins. Auth. v. Nofio, 886 P.2d 714 (Colo. 1994).

Treatment contemplated by the act includes all treatment, including legally recognized nonmedical treatment, reasonably nec- essary to relieve claimant from effects of an industrial injury. Suetrack v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 902 P.2d 854 (Colo. App. 1995).

Treatment to "relieve the employee from the effects of the injury" under subsection (1). If the evidence establishes that, but for a particular course of medical treatment, a claimant's condition can reasonably be expected to deteriorate so that the claimant will suffer a greater disability than sustained thus far, such treatment, irrespective of its nature, must be viewed as treatment designed to relieve the effects of the injury or to prevent deterioration of the claimant's present condition. Milco Const. v. Cowan, 860 P.2d 539 (Colo. App. 1992).

Transportation expenses incidental to medical treatment. Claimant entitled to transportation expenses incidental to authorized medical treatment. Sigman Meat v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 761 P.2d 265 (Colo. App. 1988).

Expenses of exploratory operation disclosing disease precipitated by accident. Where claimant slipped and fell in course of employment, and the accident precipitated symptoms of a kidney disease, which was disclosed during an exploratory operation, resulting in removal of one kidney, regardless of any aggravation of claimant's preexisting condition, he was entitled to recover the amounts he expended for surgical and hospital treatment which was deemed by competent physicians reasonably necessary to relieve him from the effects of the accident. Merriman v. Indus. Comm'n, 120 Colo. 400, 210 P.2d 448 (1949).

The mandate of this section is clear that in "all cases" a prosthetic device be furnished as may be reasonably required as a replacement where an employee has suffered a loss of a member or part of his body. Arkin v. Indus. Comm'n, 145 Colo. 463, 358 P.2d 879 (1961).

Whether a hot tub was equipment reasonably necessary at the time of injury is applied in City and County of Denver v. Indus. Comm'n, 682 P.2d 513 (Colo. App. 1984).

Housekeeping services may be compensable if it can be demonstrated that such services are incident to any medically necessary attendant care services and are central to a claimant's physical injury. Valdez v. Gas Stop, 857 P.2d 544 (Colo. App. 1993).

Panel did not err in determining that child care services did not constitute a compensable medical benefit under subsection (1)(a). Kuziel v. Pet Fair, Inc., 931 P.2d 521 (Colo. App. 1996).

Medical prescription alone is insufficient to support a claim for compensation for housekeeping services where claimant testified that she was unable to perform only certain household duties and was able to continue to work and attend a vocational education program. Valdez v. Gas Stop, 857 P.2d 544 (Colo. App. 1993).

Housekeeping services provided by attendant compensable. Facts were sufficient to support the ALJ's finding that the attendant care services were necessary assistance, were reasonable, and were compensable under subsection (1)(a). Atencio v. Quality Care, Inc., 791 P.2d 7 (Colo. App. 1990).

Housekeeping services are not compensable under this section unless the services either enable the claimant to obtain medical care or treatment or, alternatively, are relatively minor in comparison to the medical care and treatment. Country Squire Kennels v. Tarshis, 899 P.2d 362 (Colo. App. 1995).

This section requires an employer to compensate an employee's spouse who provides home care services to the employee, if such services are more than ordinary household services and the injury is of a nature that requires an attendant to remain nearby or on call. The fact that a spouse performs household tasks when not actually providing specific services to the injured employee does not affect the nature of the home care services provided to the employee by the spouse. Edward Kraemer & Sons, Inc. v. Downey, 852 P.2d 1286 (Colo. App. 1992).

Home health care services provided to claimant by claimant's wife were compensable where authorized physician referred claimant to and for such services, but none were available in claimant's rural locale. Suetrack v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 902 P.2d 854 (Colo. App. 1995).

Award to claimant for room and board during the time when claimant, although discharged from the hospital, was required to remain in Denver for treatment, and during that period he was paying rent for an apartment at Granby, must be considered correct as being incident to secondary hospital services. Indus. Comm'n v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co., 120 Colo. 373, 209 P.2d 908 (1949).

But where no hospitalization was indicated and claimant was not required to maintain two places of residence, but was living with his wife and going to the physician's office for treatments, an award for room and board was not proper. Indus. Comm'n v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co., 120 Colo. 373, 209 P.2d 908 (1949).

Snowblower is not an "apparatus" necessary to relieve the claimant from the effects of his injury. ABC Disposal Servs. v. Fortier, 809 P.2d 1071 (Colo. App. 1990).

Stair glider is not "apparatus" necessary for the treatment of the claimant's injury or for therapeutic relief from the effects of the claimant's injury. Cheyenne County Nursing Home v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 892 P.2d 443 (Colo. App. 1995).

Wheelchair-accessible van is not a medical aid reasonably necessary for treatment of claimant's injury. Van does nothing to care for or remedy injury and does not provide therapeutic tic medical relief from effects or symptoms of injury. Bouge v. SDI Corp., Inc., 931 P.2d 477 (Colo. App. 1996).

Employer must make such improvements or modifications to the claimant's residence as may be necessary to allow the claimant access to, and the use of, those portions of the residence that provide for the claimant's health and medical necessities. Cheyenne County Nursing Home v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 892 P.2d 443 (Colo. App. 1995).

Lawn care services held not medically necessary. Unlike housekeeping services such as cooking, lawn care does not bear a direct relation to a person's physical needs. Hillen v. Tool King, 851 P.2d 289 (Colo. App. 1993).

The benefit ceiling on prosthetic devices does not deny claimant equal protection of the law and the statute is not unconstitutional. Reynolds v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 794 P.2d 1083 (Colo. App. 1990).

Where not necessitated by anatomical change, a finding that no replacement prosthesis would be awarded was correct. Reynolds v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 794 P.2d 1080 (Colo. App. 1990).

The industrial commission may not disregard the provisions of this section, and impose upon the employer or insurance carrier a burden greater than that fixed by statute. John Thompson Grocery Stores Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 85 Colo. 576, 277 P. 789 (1929).

Thus, industrial commission may not award compensation for permanent disability when there is none. The fact that an injured employee might have suffered a permanent disability equal to the loss of a leg at the knee, had he not had additional medical and surgical treatment after having exhausted the statutory amount furnished by the employer, did not justify the commission in awarding compensation for such a permanent disability when in fact there was no such result from the injury. John Thompson Grocery Stores Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 85 Colo. 576, 277 P. 789 (1929).

Order requiring employer to give bond is not unreasonable. Order of the industrial commission requiring employer to give bond in the sum of $1,500, to insure the payment of medical expense and awarded compensation, is not unreasonable under this section. Kamp v. Disney, 110 Colo. 518, 135 P.2d 1019 (1943).

No "particular" or specific course of treatment is necessary to warrant award for maintenance care. Stollmeyer v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 916 P.2d 609 (Colo. App. 1995).

But a showing of need for treatment is not met by simply proving that degenerative changes will occur. Where it appears that no treatment could prevent or relieve degeneration, an award of ongoing medical benefits is inappropriate. Stollmeyer v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 916 P.2d 609 (Colo. App. 1995).

Burden is on claimant to prove entitlement to ongoing medical benefits by a preponderance of the evidence. Lerner v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 865 P.2d 915 (Colo. App. 1993).

Applied in Robbolino v. Fischer-White Contractors, 738 P.2d 70 (Colo. App. 1987).

8-42-102. Basis of compensation - "wages" defined - average weekly wage - "at the time of injury" clarified. (1) The average weekly wage of an injured employee shall be taken as the basis upon which to compute compensation payments.

(2) Average weekly wages for the purpose of computing benefits provided in articles 40 to 47 of this title, except as provided in this section, shall be calculated upon the monthly, weekly, daily, hourly, or other remuneration which the injured or deceased employee was receiving at the time of the injury, and in the following manner; except that any portion of such remuneration representing a per diem payment shall be excluded from the calculation unless such payment is considered wages for federal income tax purposes:

(a) Where the employee is being paid by the month for services under a contract of hire, the weekly wage shall be determined by multiplying the monthly wage or salary at the time of the accident by twelve and dividing by fifty-two.

(b) Where the employee is being paid by the week for services under a contract of hire, said weekly remuneration at the time of the injury shall be deemed to be the weekly wage for the purposes of articles 40 to 47 of this title.

(c) Where the employee is rendering service on a per diem basis, the weekly wage shall be determined by multiplying the daily wage by the number of days and fractions of days in the week during which the employee under a contract of hire was working at the time of the injury or would have worked if the injury had not intervened.

(d) Where the employee is being paid by the hour, the weekly wage shall be determined by multiplying the hourly rate by the number of hours in a day during which the employee was working at the time of the injury or would have worked if the injury had not intervened, to determine the daily wage; then the weekly wage shall be determined from said daily wage in the manner set forth in paragraph (c) of this subsection (2).

(e) Where the employee is paid on a piecework, tonnage, commission, or basis other than a monthly, weekly, daily, or hourly wage and where the employment is but casual and in the usual course of the trade, business, profession, or occupation of his employer, the total amount earned by the injured or killed employee in the twelve months preceding the injury shall be computed, which sum shall be divided by the number of pay periods the injured person was employed during the twelve months immediately preceding the injury, and the result thus ascertained shall be considered the average wage of said employee per pay period.

(f) Where the employee is being paid by the mile, the weekly wage shall be determined by multiplying the rate per mile by the average number of miles per day the employee drove in the service of the employer in the sixty working days immediately preceding the date of the injury, to arrive at a daily wage; then the weekly wage shall be determined from the said daily wage in the manner set forth in paragraph (c) of this subsection (2). If, on the date of the injury, the employee has worked for the employer less than sixty days, the average daily wage shall be based on the average miles driven per working day during such period.

(3) Where the foregoing methods of computing the average weekly wage of the employee, by reason of the nature of the employment or the fact that the injured employee has not worked a sufficient length of time to enable earnings to be fairly computed thereunder or has been ill or has been self-employed or for any other reason, will not fairly compute the average weekly wage, the division, in each particular case, may compute the average weekly wage of said employee in such other manner and by such other method as will, in the opinion of the director based upon the facts presented, fairly determine such employee's average weekly wage.

(4) Where an employee is a minor and the disability is temporary, the average weekly wage of such minor shall be determined by the division as in cases of disability of adults. Where the disability of such minor is permanent or if benefits under articles 40 to 47 of this title accrue because of the death of such minor, compensation to said minor or death benefits to said minor's dependents shall be paid at the maximum rate of compensation payable under said articles at the time of the determination of such permanency or of such death.

(5) (a) The general assembly hereby finds that the phrase "at the time of injury" in subsection (2) of this section refers to the date of the employee's accident. When subsection (2) of this section is used to determine a worker's average weekly wage, the wage on the date of the accident shall be used.

(b) Nothing in this subsection (5) alters the discretion of the division or the director to fairly determine a worker's average weekly wage in accordance with subsection (3) of this section.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "The November Meeting and Debate", see 6 Dicta 11 (Dec. 1928). For article, "Labor and Employment Law", which discusses recent Tenth Circuit decisions dealing with stock option plans, see 64

Den. U.L. Rev. 280 (1987). For article, "Time, Equity and the Average Weekly Wage", see 23 Colo. Law. 1831 (1994).

Annotator's note. (1) Since § 8-42-102 is similar to § 8-47-101 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

(2) Cases included in the annotations to this section which refer to the industrial commission were decided prior to the 1969 amendment which specified that the division of labor, instead of the industrial commission, was responsible for establishing the basis of compensation.

Compensation formula constitutional. The compensation formula established in this section violates neither due process nor equal protection. Bellendir v. Kezer, 648 P.2d 645 (Colo. 1982).

The evident purpose of this section is to give the dependents what they have lost. Roughly and in general that is about one-half the income of their supporter for the last 12 months, yet often that would not be so and for that reason there is the qualification in subsection (4). Frink Dairy Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 78 Colo. 71, 239 P. 727 (1925).

Subsection (4) which provides for compensation at maximum rate for minors who have been permanently disabled applies to cases of either partial or total disability. Mills v. Guido's, 800 P.2d 1370 (Colo. App. 1990); De Giacomo v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 817 P.2d 552 (Colo. App. 1991).

However, where statutory scheme contained no "maximum rate of compensation", minor was entitled to compensation at standardized rate under § 8-2-110 (1)(b). De Giacomo v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 817 P.2d 552 (Colo. App. 1991) (decided prior to 1991 repeal of § 8-42-110).

"Maximum rate of compensation payable under these articles", for purposes of computing permanent partial disability award under subsection (4), did not mean the maximum weekly rate prescribed in § 8-42-105 for temporary total disability. De Giacomo v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 817 P.2d 552 (Colo. App. 1991) (decided prior to 1991 amendment of § 8-42-105).

Maximum benefits to a minor under subsection (4) are not mandated until a "determination of such permanency" is made regardless of whether a party can prove a minor will suffer some degree of permanent damage. Hussion v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 991 P.2d 346 (Colo. App. 1999).

Time used for computation of benefits under subsection (4) is time of determination of permanency of injury, not time of injury itself. De Giacomo v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 817 P.2d 552 (Colo. App. 1991).

A minor claimant with a scheduled injury is entitled to the same benefits as an adult with the same scheduled injury and not entitled to benefits based on a whole person impairment. Torres v. Canam Indus., Inc., 942 P.2d 1384 (Colo. App. 1997).

The "time of injury" means the "time of disablement", not the date of the accident. The statutory language in the definitions section, § 8-40-201, maintains a distinction between the terms "accident" and "injury", with an "accident" occurring at a discrete event and "injury" as the disability resulting from that discrete event. Accordingly, if the average weekly wage is tied to the "time of the injury", and the "injury" includes the "disability resulting from accident", then the "time of injury" necessarily includes the time of disablement, not only the time of the precipitating accident. Avalanche Indus., Inc. v. Clark, 198 P.3d 589 (Colo. 2008), overruled in Benchmark/Elite, Inc. v. Simpson, 232 P.3d 777 (Colo. 2010).

The "time of injury" does not include the time of disablement. Benchmark/Elite, Inc. v. Simpson, 232 P.3d 777 (Colo. 2010) (overruling Avalanche Indus., Inc. v. Clark, 198 P.3d 589 (Colo. 2008)).

"Time of the injury" means time employee was disabled, not time of last injurious exposure to disease agent listed in § 8-41-304. Worker who was last exposed to asbestos dust in 1977 and developed cancer in 1983 was entitled to benefits based on his 1983 earnings. Henderson v. RSI, Inc., 824 P.2d 91 (Colo. App. 1991).

In cases of occupational disease, "time of injury" is generally held to be the time of last exposure or onset of disability. Campbell v. IBM Corp., 867 P.2d 77 (Colo. App. 1993).

Under provision that authorized director to establish fee schedule for cost containment purposes, rule that restricted nature of treatment was improper. Riley Family Trust v. Hood, 874 P.2d 503 (Colo. App. 1994) (decided under former § 8-49-101 as it existed prior to 1990 repeal).

In determining compensation for permanently disabled minors, the compensation scheme specified in this section takes precedence over the general compensation scheme for adults under § 8-42-107 (8)(d). Horton v. Golden Animal Hosp., 879 P.2d 459 (Colo. App. 1994).

But provisions of 1991 repeal and reenactment of workers' compensation statutes apply only in cases where the injuries occurred on or after July 1, 1991. Golden Animal Hosp. v. Horton, 897 P.2d 833 (Colo. 1995).

Applied in Kalmon v. Indus. Comm'n, 41 Colo. App. 259, 583 P.2d 946 (1978).

II. CONSTRUCTION OF TERM.

The term "wages" is construed to mean the "money rate" at which the services are recompensed under the contract of hire in force at the time of the accident. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Lyttle, 151 Colo. 590, 380 P.2d 62 (1963).

Tips and gratuities are not proper elements of wages under this section. Indus. Comm'n v. Lindvay, 94 Colo. 531, 31 P. 2d 495 (1934).

Tips are to be considered in computing average weekly wages. In re Petrafeck v. Indus. Comm'n, 191 Colo. 566, 554 P.2d 1097 (1976).

Compensation for cultivation of vegetables at so much per acre held to be "wages". Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 74 Colo. 201, 219 P. 1078 (1923).

Rate not affected by wages attributable to truck furnished by employee. In determining an employee's weekly wages, a portion of the hourly rate of compensation previously paid by the employer may not be allocated to "maintenance or overhead" of a truck furnished by the employee, rather than the employer, thus reducing the final award. Filippone v. Indus. Comm'n, 41 Colo. App. 322, 590 P.2d 977 (1978).

The value of group health insurance and supplemental life insurance provided by claimant's employer should be included in determining the "wages" of claimant. Murphy v. Ampex Corp., 703 P.2d 632 (Colo. App. 1985).

Wages to be received subsequent to the date of injury may be included in determining wages under this section since there was an implied contract in force at the time of injury authorizing the payment of such wages. Lenco Leasing Co. v. O'Dell, 704 P.2d 329 (Colo. App. 1985).

Average weekly wage does not include employer contributions for nonvested retirement benefits. Russell v. Colo. Div. of Employment, 786 P.2d 483 (Colo. App. 1989).

Net cost to the employee of replacing health insurance or similar benefits should be added to the average weekly wage for purposes of calculating temporary disability benefits. State Compensation Insurance Authority v. Smith, 768 P.2d 1256 (Colo. App. 1988).

The term gratuity does not include a bonus given as compensation for working and which is subject to income taxes and FICA and, therefore, should be included as wages when computing a claimant's average weekly wage. Simmonds v. Eastman Kodak Co., 781 P.2d 140 (Colo. App. 1989).

Reasonable value of lodging at the time of the injury is a question of fact and will vary depending on the available evidence and the accompanying circumstances. Western Cultural Res. Mgt. v. Krull, 782 P.2d 870 (Colo. App. 1989).

Applied in Casa Bonita Restaurant v. Indus. Comm'n, 677 P.2d 344 (Colo. App. 1983).

III. STATUTORY COMPUTATION OF AVERAGE WEEKLY WAGE.

Law reviews. For article, "Update on Colorado Appellate Decisions in Colorado Workers' Compensation Law", see 30 Colo. Law. 69 (April 2001).

What constitutes a week. While for some, perhaps for most, purposes a week means a calendar week, extending from midnight Saturday until midnight the following Saturday, it does not mean that for all purposes. For example, if a man, hired at so much a week, commences work at the beginning of the working day on Wednesday and continues during all the working days until the end of the working day on Tuesday of the next calendar week, the money he earns would be one week's wage, not two weeks' wages. In re Tyson, 13 Colo. 482, 22 P. 810 (1889); Mora v. People, 19 Colo. 255, 35 P. 179 (1893); Danielson v. Indus. Comm'n, 96 Colo. 522, 44 P.2d 1011 (1935).

The fact that "shall" is used in subsection (3) does not mean that the industrial commission must comply with subsection (3). Williams Bros. v. Grimm, 88 Colo. 416, 297 P. 1003 (1931).

Basis of award of benefits to member of family unit employed to perform services. Where the family unit, of which workmen's compensation claimant was a member, was employed to perform services and where these services which claimant was performing at the time of her injury were to be recompensated at a particular rate per month, the claimant's award of benefits should be based on that rate of compensation even though all such compensation was paid to the family unit. Booher v. Las Animas County Sch. Dist. R-88, 30 Colo. App. 233, 491 P.2d 104 (1971).

Wages may be on the basis of so much per day or week, or on the basis of tonnage, or upon acreage, or sugar content of beets, where the employment is to care for growing crops. Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 74 Colo. 201, 219 P. 1078 (1923).

Tips as wages. From the standpoint of both the employer and the employee, tips are an integral part of the contract of hire and comprise a substantial portion of the employee's average weekly wage. In re Petrafeck v. Indus. Comm'n, 191 Colo. 566, 554 P.2d 1097 (1976).

Where employment is casual within the meaning and intent of the workmen's compensation act, it is not regular, periodic or certain in nature. Berkeley Constr. Co. v. Fransua, 162 Colo. 296, 425 P.2d 801 (1967).

And when the only compensable wage is for casual piecework under the statute which provides the formula to be used in determining the daily wage for compensation in such a case, the claimant is entitled only to minimum benefits. Pittman Motors, Inc. v. Indus. Comm'n, 156 Colo. 218, 399 P.2d 784 (1964).

During the portion of the year an employee is attending he is "in business for himself" within the meaning of that phrase as used in subsection (4) of this section. Lindner Packing & Provision Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 99 Colo. 143, 60 P.2d 924 (1936).

Computation where employee works for himself a part of the time. Where an employee works for himself a part of the time, his average weekly wage, under this section, is to be determined by dividing the amount earned by him for the year immediately preceding his accident and while working for his employer, by the number of weeks he was engaged in such employment. Imperial Coal Co. v. Holland, 98 Colo. 448, 56 P.2d 30 (1936).

Average weekly wage must be computed based on the employee's compensation rate in force at the time of injury. Where hearing officer had awarded claimant-employee benefits based on hourly rate paid employee-claimant by previous employer, it was not an abuse of discretion to reverse hearing officer's determination and recompute benefits based on hourly wage paid by employer at the time of injury. Dugan v. Indus. Comm'n, 690 P.2d 267 (Colo. App. 1984).

Average weekly wage includes both the employer's and employee's contribution to group health insurance premiums. Humane Soc'y of Pikes Peak Region v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 26 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2001).

Claimant is not required to present proof that he or she actually purchased replacement coverage. The statute merely seeks to ensure that the claimant will have funds available to make the purchase. Humane Soc'y of Pikes Peak Region v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 26 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2001).

Actual purchase of health insurance not required in order for cost of benefits to be included in calculating claimant's average weekly wage. Avalanche Indus. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 166 P.3d 147 (Colo. App. 2007), aff'd, 198 P.3d 589 (Colo. 2008).

Although average weekly wage generally is determined from the employee's wage at the time of injury, if for any reason this general method will not render a fair computation of wages, the administrative tribunal has long been vested with discretionary authority to use an alternative method in determining a fair wage. Campbell v. IBM Corp., 867 P.2d 77 (Colo. App. 1993).

Calculation of the average weekly wage based upon wage earned when maximum medical improvement was reached was not an abuse of discretion when the claimant's average weekly wage at a new job was substantially higher than the wage at the time of injury and the alternate computation more fairly compensated the claimant for his future loss of earnings. Pizza Hut v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 18 P.3d 867 (Colo. App. 2001).

The federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) does not preempt former § 8-47-101 (1) and (2), as effective in May 1989, to the extent those subsections required that the value of ERISA-plan benefits be included in calculating an employee's average weekly wage for workers' compensation purposes. Hewlett-Packard Co. v. Diringer, 42 F. Supp.2d 1038 (D. Colo. 1999).

Applied in Danielson v. Indus. Comm'n, 96 Colo. 522, 44 P.2d 1011 (1935); United Util. &

IV. COMPUTATION.

Where the adoption of subsection (3) would penalize claimant, the wage should be determined by subsection (4). Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 74 Colo. 201, 219 P. 1078 (1923); Indus. Comm'n v. Employers' Mut. Ins. Co., 76 Colo. 145, 230 P. 114 (1924); Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 85 Colo. 588, 277 P. 777 (1929); Williams Bros. v. Grimm, 88 Colo. 416, 297 P. 1003 (1931); St. Mary's Church v. Indus. Comm'n, 735 P.2d 902 (Colo. App. 1986), cert. denied, 753 P.2d 769 (Colo. 1988).

Part-time work. Since claimant was a part-time employee, the application of subsection (3) would result in his receiving more in benefits than the maximum wages he had been paid prior to his injury. Therefore, the circumstances of the case call for the application of subsection (4). Western Sizzlin' Steak House v. Axton, 701 P.2d 96 (Colo. App. 1984).

For facts which justify an award under subsection (4), see Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 85 Colo. 374, 275 P. 939 (1929); St. Mary's Church v. Indus. Comm'n, 735 P.2d 902 (Colo. App. 1986), cert. denied, 753 P.2d 769 (Colo. 1988).

For facts which do not justify an award under subsection (4) (now subsection (3)), see R.J.S. Painting v. Indus. Comm'n, 732 P.2d 239 (Colo. App. 1986).

If industrial commission does not follow subsection (3), it should state why and find facts which justify its course. Frink Dairy Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 78 Colo. 71, 239 P. 727 (1925).

Where average weekly wage is less than minimum indemnity allowable, the minimum will be awarded. Roeder v. Indus. Comm'n, 97 Colo. 133, 46 P.2d 898 (1935).

And if employment is without salary, it has the effect of reducing the amount of compensation which an injured employee is entitled to receive to the minimum benefits provided by the workmen's compensation law. Lyttle v. State Comp. Ins. Fund, 137 Colo. 212, 322 P.2d 1049 (1958); Pittman Motors, Inc. v. Indus. Comm'n, 156 Colo. 218, 399 P.2d 784 (1964).

A person's earnings from other work, wholly unrelated to his uncompensated service, cannot be used as the basis for computing an award of compensation under the terms of the workmen's compensation law. Lyttle v. State Comp. Ins. Fund, 137 Colo. 212, 322 P.2d 1049 (1958).

Judgment may reduce award where evidence does not justify award under any method of computation. Indus. Comm'n v.

Employers' Mut. Ins. Co., 76 Colo. 145, 230 P. 114 (1935).

When an employee is paid on a piecework basis, the average wage is generally determined by computing the average amount earned per pay period over the year preceding the injury. When this method will not render a fair computation of wages, the administrative law judge (ALJ) may use some other method to determine a fair average weekly wage. Drywall Prods. v. Constuble, 832 P.2d 957 (Colo. App. 1991).

The average wage is generally determined by computing the average amount earned per pay period over the year preceding the injury when an employee is paid on a piecework basis; except that, when this method will not render a fair computation of wages, the ALJ is empowered to use some other method to determine a fair average weekly wage. Drywall Prods. v. Constuble, 832 P.2d 957 (Colo. App. 1991); Vigil v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 841 P.2d 335 (Colo. App. 1992), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 856 P.2d 850 (Colo. 1993).

Administrative law judge's determination to use an alternate method to compute claimant's average weekly wage rather than by the piecework method set forth in subsection (2)(e) was supported by substantial evidence and could not be disturbed on review where claimant's contract contemplated 10 to 12 hours per day for 5 days per week on a piecework basis and claimant had worked on a piecework basis for a short period of time prior to injury. Drywall Prods. v. Constuble, 832 P.2d 957 (Colo. App. 1991).

Administrative law judge did not abuse his broad discretion of authority in determining that claimant's average weekly wage should be calculated based upon her wages nearly five years after her injury because the determination reflected an increase in wages that claimant would have continued to receive if not for the industrial injury she sustained while working for the former employer when the injury was sustained. Avalanche Indus. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 166 P.3d 147 (Colo. App. 2007), aff'd, 198 P.3d 589 (Colo. 2008).

While calculation of a claimant's average weekly wage is generally tied to the time of injury, the discretionary exception allows an ALJ to base the average weekly wage on a salary that a claimant was actually earning when forced to stop working. Avalanche Indus. v. Clark, 198 P.3d 589 (Colo. 2008).

The discretionary exception allows an ALJ to compute an employee's average weekly wage based on compensation received at a subsequent employer, provided the ALJ does not abuse his or her discretion. Benchmark/Elite, Inc. v. Simpson, 232 P.3d 777 (Colo. 2010).

Administrative law judge did not abuse his discretion when he determined the claimant's average weekly wage included the cost of COBRA insurance, even when the claimant did not actually purchase the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act (COBRA) health insurance after she was unable to work. Avalanche Indus. v. Clark, 198 P.3d 589 (Colo. 2008).

For purposes of calculating disability benefits, employment contract covered both hours during which wages and tips were received and hours during which only tips were received but employee remained under direction and control of employer. Romero v. U-LET-US Skycap Servs. Inc., 740 P.2d 1004 (Colo. App. 1987).

Expense reimbursement of four cents per mile was not considered wages for federal income tax purposes and therefore could not be considered wages for purposes of computing a claimant's average weekly wage. Ernie Baylog, Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 923 P.2d 361 (Colo. App. 1996).

Reasonable depreciation deducted from a self-employed workers' compensation claimant's gross earnings as reported on his federal income tax return should be included in the calculation of his post-injury average weekly wage for determining the amount of temporary partial disability benefits to which he is entitled. Elliott v. El Paso County, 860 P.2d 1365 (Colo. 1993).

Workers' compensation claimant bears the burden of establishing the reasonableness of depreciation deductions included in calculating temporary partial disability benefits because the claimant bears the burden of showing the statutory entitlement to compensation by a preponderance of the evidence. Elliott v. El Paso County, 860 P.2d 1365 (Colo. 1993).

Concurrent employment. Where an injury impairs a claimant's ability to earn from concurrent employments, a "fair" computation of the average weekly wage may warrant inclusion of all such wages. Jefferson County Pub. Sch. v. Dragoo, 765 P.2d 636 (Colo. App. 1988); Broadmoor Ins. Co. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 939 P.2d 460 (Colo. App. 1996).

The phrase "at the time of the determination of such permanency," as used in subsection (4), refers to the time of the treating physician's determination of maximum medical improvement, not the date of hearing or adjudication on the issue of permanent impairment benefits. The date that the administrative docket can accommodate a hearing bears no relation to the claimant's physical condition. Golden Animal Hosp. v. Horton, 897 P.2d 833 (Colo. 1995).

Purpose of the minors' statute now codified in subsection (4) is to eliminate the disparity of benefits between adult workers and minor workers, who frequently work part-time and at substantially lower wages. Golden Animal Hosp. v. Horton, 897 P.2d 833 (Colo. 1995).

Conclusion that an injured minor remains entitled to the benefit of the higher end "age factor" listed in § 8-42-107 as well as computation of benefits at the maximum temporary disability rate, is not inconsistent with the legislative intent of this section or § 8-42-107. Arkansas Valley Seeds, Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 972 P.2d 695 (Colo. App. 1998).

Minor with scheduled disability is not entitled to aggregate amount of benefits allowed by statute as provided by subsection (4). Since § 8-42-107 (6) provides for a fixed rate of compensation for all scheduled disabilities, there is no disparity between the benefits paid to minors and to adults. Williams v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 932 P.2d 869 (Colo. App. 1997).

Applied in Robbolino v. Fischer-White Contractors, 738 P.2d 70 (Colo. App. 1987).

8-42-103. Disability indemnity payable as wages - period of disability. (1) If the injury or occupational disease causes disability, a disability indemnity shall be payable as wages pursuant to section 8-42-105 (2) (a) subject to the following limitations:

(a) If the period of disability does not last longer than three days from the day the employee leaves work as a result of the injury, no disability indemnity shall be recoverable except the disbursement provided in articles 40 to 47 of this title for medical, surgical, nursing, and hospital services, apparatus, and supplies, nor in any case unless the division has actual knowledge of the injury or is notified thereof within the period specified in said articles.

(b) If the period of disability lasts longer than two weeks from the day the injured employee leaves work as the result of the injury, disability indemnity shall be recoverable from the day the injured employee leaves work.

(c) (I) In cases where it is determined that periodic disability benefits granted by the federal "Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance Amendments of 1965", Pub.L. 89-97, are payable to an individual and the individual's dependents, the aggregate benefits payable for temporary total disability, temporary partial disability, and permanent total disability pursuant to this section shall be reduced, but not below zero, by an amount equal as nearly as practical to one-half the federal periodic benefits; but, if the federal "Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance Amendments of 1965", Pub.L. 89-97, is amended to provide for a reduction of an individual's disability benefits thereunder because of compensation benefits payable under articles 40 to 47 of this title, the reduction of compensation benefits provided in said articles shall be decreased by an amount equal to the federal reduction. Upon request of the insurer or employer, the employee shall apply for such federal periodic disability benefits and respond to requests from the insurer or employer as to the status of such application. Failure to comply with this section constitutes cause for suspension of benefits.

(II) In cases where it is determined that periodic benefits granted by the federal old-age, survivors, and disability insurance act or employer-paid retirement benefits are payable to an individual and the individual's dependents, the aggregate benefits payable for permanent total disability pursuant to this section shall be reduced, but not below zero:

(A) By an amount equal as nearly as practical to one-half such federal benefits; except that this reduction for the periodic benefits granted by the federal old-age, survivors, and disability insurance act shall not exceed the reduction specified in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (c) for the periodic disability benefits payable to an individual;

(B) By an amount determined as a percentage of the employer-paid retirement benefits, said percentage to be determined by a weighted average of the employer's contributions during the period of covered employment divided by the total contributions during the period of covered employment; except that in permanent total disability cases all contributions made by the employer pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement with the employee's representative shall be considered to have been made by the employee.

(II.5) In cases where an employer does not participate in federal old-age, survivors, and disability insurance, and it is determined that employer-paid retirement benefits are payable to an individual and the individual's dependents, the aggregate benefits payable for permanent total disability pursuant to this section shall be reduced, but not below zero by an amount determined as a percentage of the employer-paid retirement benefits, said percentage to be determined by a weighted average of the employer's contributions during the period of covered employment divided by the total contributions during the period of covered employment.

(III) Notwithstanding sub-subparagraph (A) of subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (c), if the federal "Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance Amendments of 1965", Pub.L. 89-97, is amended to provide for a reduction of an individual's periodic benefits thereunder because of compensation benefits payable under articles 40 to 47 of this title, the reduction of compensation benefits provided in said articles shall be decreased by an amount equal to the federal reduction.

(IV) The provisions of subparagraphs (II) and (III) of this paragraph (c) shall apply only if the injury on which the award for permanent total disability was based occurred after the claimant reached forty-five years of age.

(d) (I) In cases where it is determined that periodic disability benefits are payable to an employee under a pension or disability plan financed in whole or in part by the employer, hereinafter called "employer pension or disability plan", the aggregate benefits payable for temporary total disability, temporary partial disability, and permanent total disability pursuant to this section shall be reduced, but not below zero, by an amount equal as nearly as practical to the employer pension or disability plan benefits, with the following limitations:

(A) Where the employee has contributed to the employer pension or disability plan, benefits shall be reduced under this section only in an amount proportional to the employer's percentage of total contributions to the employer pension or disability plan.

(B) Where the employer pension or disability plan provides by its terms that benefits are precluded thereunder in whole or in part if benefits are awarded under articles 40 to 47 of this title, the reduction provided in this paragraph (d) shall not be applicable to the extent of the amount so precluded.

(II) Upon request of the insurer or employer, the employee shall apply for such periodic disability benefits and respond to requests from the insurer or employer as to the status of such application. Failure to comply with this section shall be cause for suspension of benefits.

(III) The provisions of this paragraph (d) shall apply to a disability pension paid pursuant to article 30.5 or 31 of title 31, C.R.S.; except that said reduction shall not reduce the combined weekly disability benefits below a sum equal to one hundred percent of the state average weekly wage as defined in section 8-47-106 and applicable to the year in which the weekly disability benefits are being paid.

(IV) If the disability benefits awarded pursuant to articles 40 to 47 of this title are paid in a lump sum pursuant to section 8-43-406, the weekly benefit attributed to such workers' compensation benefits, for the purpose of calculating the combined weekly disability benefit specified in subparagraph (III) of this paragraph (d), shall be calculated by assuming that the employee is receiving the weekly disability benefits payments such employee would have received had such weekly disability payments not been reduced and paid as a lump sum.

(e) In cases where it is determined that periodic disability benefits are payable to an individual and said individual's dependents pursuant to a workers' compensation act of another state or of the federal government, the aggregate benefits payable for temporary total disability, temporary partial disability, permanent partial disability, and permanent total disability pursuant to this section shall be reduced, but not below zero, by an amount equal to the benefits payable pursuant to such other workers' compensation act.

(f) In cases where it is determined that unemployment compensation benefits are payable to an employee, the aggregate benefits payable for permanent total disability pursuant to this section shall be reduced, but not below zero, by an amount equal as nearly as practical to such unemployment compensation benefits. In cases where it is determined that unemployment insurance benefits are payable to an employee, compensation for temporary disability shall be reduced, but not below zero, by the amount of unemployment insurance benefits received, unless the unemployment insurance amount has already been reduced by the temporary disability benefit amount and except that temporary total disability shall not be reduced by unemployment insurance benefits received pursuant to section 8-73-112.

(g) In cases where it is determined that a temporarily disabled employee is responsible for termination of employment, the resulting wage loss shall not be attributable to the on-the-job injury.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Update on Colorado Appellate Decisions in Workers' Compensation Law", see 32 Colo. Law. 97 (June 2003). For article, "Termination of Undocumented Workers Under the Workers' Compensation Act", see 37 Colo. Law. 59 (March 2008).

Annotator's note. Since § 8-42-103 is similar to § 8-51-101 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Constitutionality of social security benefit offset. Subsection (1)(c), providing for an offset of social security retirement benefits against workers' compensation benefits, does not violate equal protection under the state or federal constitutions. Culver v. Ace Elec., 952 P.2d 1200 (Colo. App. 1997), aff'd, 971 P.2d 641 (Colo. 1999); Stolworthy v. Clark, 952 P.2d 1198 (Colo. App. 1997), aff'd sub nom. Culver v. Ace Elec., 971 P.2d 641 (Colo. 1999).

Avoiding duplicative benefits serves a legitimate governmental interest, and imposing an offset is rationally related to that interest. Culver v. Ace Elec., 952 P.2d 1200 (Colo. App. 1997), aff'd, 971 P.2d 641 (Colo. 1999).

Other sections may limit rights granted by this section. The general statement in subsection (1)(a) that, whenever an "injury or occupational disease causes disability, a disability indemnity shall be payable as wages" does not override the statutory time limits on reopening of claims under § 8-43-303. Calvert v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 155 P.3d 474 (Colo. App. 2006).

The various provisions of subsection (1)(c) and (1)(d)(I) do not impinge on any of the rights guaranteed by either the state or federal constitution. Myers v. State, 162 Colo. 435, 428 P.2d 83 (1967).

Offset for SSDI benefits set forth in subsection (1)(c)(I) may be taken retroactively against compensation benefits received before the insurer has invoked the claim of an offset. Nothing in the statute indicates that an insurer's right of offset is subject to a time limitation. Imposing such a restriction would undermine the very purpose of the offset, which is to prevent a windfall of duplicative disability benefits regardless of whether such outcome occurs by mistake. Jiminez v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 51 P.3d 1090 (Colo. App. 2002).

Mere happening of accident not cause for benefits. Even though exposure to disease might be considered an accident under the workmen's compensation act, the mere happening of an accident does not give rise to a right to benefits. City of Littleton v. Schum, 38 Colo. App. 122, 553 P.2d 399 (1976).

Benefits flow only to a workman who has suffered a disabling injury as a result of the accident. City of Littleton v. Schum, 38 Colo. App. 122, 553 P.2d 399 (1976).

When employer required to pay medical expenses. An employer is required to pay medical expenses only in cases in which he would be charged with the duty of paying other compensation under the act. City of Littleton v. Schum, 38 Colo. App. 122, 553 P.2d 399 (1976).

Benefits under this section are based on the loss or impairment of the earning power of the workman. They protect against an actual loss of earnings which must be shown to have been occasioned during the period of time for which the claim for benefits is made. An award for disability, either permanent or temporary presupposes the actual inability of the workman to earn as much, because of the injury, as he was able to earn prior thereto. Ice v. Indus. Comm'n, 120 Colo. 144, 207 P.2d 963 (1949).

Benefits are based upon loss or impairment of the earning power of the workman and are designed for protection against actual loss of earnings as a result of the injury. City of Littleton v. Schum, 38 Colo. App. 122, 553 P.2d 399 (1976); Monfort of Colo. v. Husson, 725 P.2d 67 (Colo. App. 1986); Ray v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 920 P.2d 868 (Colo. App. 1996).

"Disability" means industrial disability or loss of earning capacity. The term "disability" as used in the workmen's compensation act means industrial disability or loss of earning capacity, and not mere functional disability. World of Sleep, Inc. v. Davis, 34 Colo. App. 279, 527 P.2d 890 (1974), rev'd on other grounds, 188 Colo. 443, 536 P.2d 34 (1975).

As are medical impairment benefits awarded under § 8-42-107(8). Such benefits are a form of permanent partial disability benefits designed to compensate for loss of earning capacity, and there is no basis for distinguishing between such benefits and the benefits referenced in subsection (1)(c)(I) of this section. Ray v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 920 P.2d 868 (Colo. App. 1996).

Admission of liability for "closed" period not permitted. By filing an admission of liability, an insurer has, in effect, admitted that the claimant has sustained the burden of proving entitlement to temporary disability benefits. Thereafter, the insurer is bound by that admission and must pay accordingly. The insurer may not unilaterally terminate benefits without complying with other statutory and regulatory provisions governing the termination of such benefits. Colo. Comp. Ins. Auth. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 18 P.3d 790 (Colo. App. 2000).

Subsection (1)(a) and § 8-42-105(1) require a claimant to establish a causal connection between a work-related injury and a subsequent wage loss in order to obtain temporary total disability benefits. Lindner Chevrolet v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 914 P.2d 496 (Colo. App. 1995).

To establish eligibility for temporary disability benefits the employee need not prove that the work-related injury was the sole cause of the wage loss; if the claimant establishes that his or her work-related injury contributed in some degree to a temporary wage loss, the claimant is eligible for temporary disability benefits. Lindner Chevrolet v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 914 P.2d 496 (Colo. App. 1995).

It is highly unlikely that the general assembly intended to deny completely temporary disability benefits where an employee was terminated for negligently causing a work injury in light of § 8-42-112 (1), which requires a 50% reduction in benefits if an employee is injured because of willfully violating a safety rule. The term "responsible" does not refer to an employee's injury or injury-producing activity, therefore the termination statutes do not apply where an employee is terminated because of the employee's injury or injury-producing activity. Colo. Springs Disposal v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 58 P.3d 1061 (Colo. App. 2002).

Neither this section nor § 8-42-105 requires claimant to provide a medical opinion restricting her from regular employment as a condition of receiving temporary total disability benefits. The administrative law judge appropriately awarded TTD benefits based on claimant's evidence, including notes of her personal physician, that she had suffered a wage loss as a result of her injury. Lymburn v. Symbios Logic, 952 P.2d 831 (Colo. App. 1997).

"Dependents", as used in subsection (1)(c), is governed by state law. Dietiker v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 867 P.2d 171 (Colo. App. 1993).

A claimant's first wife is not a dependent for the purposes of subsection (1)(c) where the claimant has no legal obligation to support the wife after their divorce. An insurer is not entitled to an offset against the claimant's workers' compensation benefits for federal SSDI benefits received by the first wife. Dietiker v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 867 P.2d 171 (Colo. App. 1993).

An insurer is entitled to an offset against a claimant's workers' compensation benefits for federal SSDI benefits received by the claimant's wife from the date of their marriage. The amount of the offset, however, is based on the amount the dependent would have received at the time of the initial SSDI award to the claimant. Dietiker v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 867 P.2d 171 (Colo. App. 1993).

Legally adopted child under eighteen years of age is a dependent within the meaning of subsection (1)(c). An insurer is entitled to an offset against a claimant's workers' compensation benefits for federal SSDI benefits received by the claimant's legally adopted child from the date of the adoption. The amount of the offset, however, is based on the amount the dependent would have received at the time of the initial SSDI award to the claimant. Dietiker v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 867 P.2d 171 (Colo. App. 1993).

Use of the word "practical" in subsection (1)(d) reflects that the general assembly recognized that in some instances it would not be feasible to calculate the employer's exact contribution to the claimant's pension. Walker v. City and County of Denver, 870 P.2d 1269 (Colo. App. 1994); Johnson v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 973 P.2d 624 (Colo. App. 1997).

Disabled employee has duty to apply for social security benefits. Consistent with the proposition that an injured person has a duty to mitigate his damages, a disabled employee when eligible has a duty to apply for social security disability benefits, not only to benefit himself but also to benefit his employer who is bound by law to provide him with workmen's compensation benefits. Hurtado v. C F & I Steel Corp., 168 Colo. 37, 449 P.2d 819 (1969); Arellano v. Dir., Div. of Labor, 42 Colo. App. 149, 590 P.2d 987 (1979).

And employer may determine the payability of federal benefits and may reduce workmen's compensation. When an employee who is receiving workmen's compensation disability benefits becomes eligible for further disability benefits under the social security act, and such employee fails to make application for such additional benefits, the employer paying the compensation may initially determine the payability of such federal disability benefits and may reduce the workmen's compensation disability payments in accordance with this section. Hurtado v. C F & I Steel Corp., 168 Colo. 37, 449 P.2d 819 (1969); Arellano v. Dir., Div. of Labor, 42 Colo. App. 149, 590 P.2d 987 (1979).

Subsections (1)(c) and (1)(d)(I) apply to the situation where a person, who is receiving benefits under workmen's compensation, is thereafter granted a disability annuity. Yeargain v. State, 162 Colo. 447, 428 P.2d 89 (1967).

For an injured employee should not be permitted to receive so-called "double" disability benefits; i.e., both workmen's compensation benefits and disability annuity at the expense of the employer. Myers v. State, 162 Colo. 435, 428 P.2d 83 (1967).

Rationale behind the setoff provisions is to prevent duplication of benefits at the employer's expense. In re Dailey v. Indus. Comm'n, 651 P.2d 1223 (Colo. App. 1982), rev'd on other grounds, 680 P.2d 231 (Colo. 1984).

Intent of offset provision is to prevent employee from receiving double disability benefits which are both financed by the employer. Scriven v. Indus. Comm'n, 736 P.2d 414 (Colo. App. 1987); Sparling v. Colo. Dept. of Hwys., 812 P.2d 686 (Colo. App. 1990); Walker v. City & County of Denver, 870 P.2d 1269 (Colo. App. 1994).

Subsection (1)(e) was designed to prevent an injured worker from receiving duplicative benefits for the same injury. Circle K Corp. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 809 P.2d 1116 (Colo. App. 1991).

Only pension benefits to which the employer has contributed are available to create an offset. Conversely, benefits attributable to claimant's contributions are not subject to the offset. Spanish Peaks Mental Health v. Huffaker, 928 P.2d 741 (Colo. App. 1996) (decided prior to 1990 repeal and reenactment).

No requirement that social security benefits and workers' compensation benefits both are paid because of a work-related injury. Nor does the plain language of subsection (1)(c)(I) admit of an interpretation that limits its application to cases in which the claimant has a valid reason not to accept SSDI or does not benefit from a determination that SSDI is payable. Ihnen v. Western Forge, 936 P.2d 634 (Colo. App. 1997).

Offset for social security retirement benefits can be taken regardless of a claimant's receipt of, or entitlement to, social security disability benefits. The receipt of, or entitlement to, disability benefits affects only the limitation on the amount of the offset for retirement benefits in subsection (1)(c)(II) but not the applicability of the retirement offset itself. Culver v. Ace Elec., 952 P.2d 1200 (Colo. App. 1997), aff'd, 971 P.2d 641 (Colo. 1999).

A claimant's failure to qualify for social security disability benefits affects only the provision limiting the amount of the offset in subsection (1)(c)(II) not the applicability of the offset itself. Stolworthy v. Clark, 952 P.2d 1198 (Colo. App. 1997), aff'd sub nom. Culver v. Ace Elec., 971 P.2d 641 (Colo. 1999).

The term "payable" in subsection (1)(c)(II) should be construed to mean that a claimant is entitled to benefits, not whether he or she actually applied for and received them. Culver v. Ace Elec., 952 P.2d 1200 (Colo. App. 1997), aff'd, 971 P.2d 641 (Colo. 1999).

Offset for social security disability benefits is taken after, not before, application of maximum benefit provisions of § 8-42-105. To do otherwise would ignore the word "payable" in subsection (1)(c). Yates v. Sinton Dairy, 883 P.2d 562 (Colo. App. 1994).

Offset for social security disability benefits is taken from the aggregate total of the workers' compensation benefits payable, not from each benefit separately. Where an employee is receiving PPD benefits for one injury and TTD benefits for another, the offset applies only once. U.S. West Commc'ns, Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 978 P.2d 154 (Colo. App. 1999).

Offset for social security disability insurance benefits taken against permanent partial disability benefits is calculated by converting the overall aggregate amount of permanent partial disability benefits to its weekly equivalent to determine the number of weeks of eligibility. The number of weeks is multiplied by the weekly social security offset to yield the total offset. Armijo v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 989 P.3d 198 (Colo. App. 1999).

Benefits not offset by social security cost of living increases. State workmen's compensation benefits may not be offset by the amount of federal cost of living increases. Engelbrecht v. Hartford Acc. & Indem. Co., 680 P.2d 231 (Colo. 1984).

Holding that state workers' compensation benefits may not be offset by the amount of federal cost of living increases is to be applied retroactively. Marinez v. Indus. Comm'n, 746 P.2d 552 (Colo. 1987); Ward v. Azotea Contractors, 748 P.2d 338 (Colo. 1987).

Purpose and effect of not offsetting benefits by social security cost of living increases is furthered by retroactive application since injured workers who had been deprived of one-half the increase provided under federal law would have that inequity redressed. Marinez v. Indus. Comm'n, 746 P.2d 552 (Colo. 1987);

Harrison v. Indus. Comm'n, 750 P.2d 65 (Colo. 1988); Fraker v. Indus. Comm'n, 750 P.2d 67 (Colo. 1988).

Even though employer did not pay social security taxes, employer is allowed an offset against workers' compensation benefits for social security benefits paid to a claimant. Sampson v. Weld County Sch. Dist., 786 P.2d 488 (Colo. App. 1989).

Where insurer makes an offset for social security disability benefits pursuant to subsection (1)(c), the insurer is not required to file a petition to modify. Gregory v. Crown Transp., 776 P.2d 1163 (Colo. App. 1989), cert. denied, 785 P.2d 916 (Colo. 1989).

The phrase "individual and his dependents" in subsection (1)(e) refers to the deceased workman and his dependents and thus, award of death benefits without an offset for social security benefits received by the deceased's nondependent stepchildren was proper. Acme Glass v. Indus. Comm'n, 682 P.2d 521 (Colo. App. 1984).

Offset provision applies to multi-employer plans as well as to single employer plans. Scriven v. Indus. Comm'n, 736 P.2d 414 (Colo. App. 1987).

Offset provision applies to both vested and nonvested retirement benefits. Nye v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 883 P.2d 607 (Colo. App. 1994).

Workers' compensation insurer is entitled to offset against future disability benefits paid to the claimant one-half of the amount of social security disability benefits received by the claimant before right of offset was invoked. This section allows the commission to reduce future benefits to the claimant to offset the social security disability benefits already paid to the claimant. Johnson v. Indus. Comm'n, 761 P.2d 1140 (Colo. 1988).

City, a self-insured employer, was entitled to offset claimant's pension benefits under this section, even though the City made no actual contributions to his pension for period of time, where the evidence was undisputed that the City was required by statute to make, and did make, substantial amortized retroactive contributions to its pension plan since becoming affiliated with the Police and Fire Pension Association in 1981. Walker v. City & County of Denver, 870 P.2d 1269 (Colo. App. 1994).

Benefits cannot be offset by amounts withheld from claimant's lump sum disability benefits and paid directly to claimant's attorney as fees earned in appealing the initial denial of the disability benefits. St. Vincent's Hosp. v. Alires, 778 P.2d 277 (Colo. App. 1989).

Payments made under a "pension plan" may not be offset against a workers' compensation award since these two payment types are mutually exclusive: The former payment type is provided for payments of injuries not arising out of the course of employment; the latter payment is for injuries arising out of employment. Halliburton Serv. v. Miller, 720 P.2d 571 (Colo. 1986).

Fact that pension plan is a negotiated employment benefit does not change its character as being employer financed and, therefore, workers' compensation benefits are subject to offset by amount of disability benefits. Scriven v. Indus. Comm'n, 736 P.2d 414 (Colo. App. 1987).

To determine the amount by which a state employee's workers' compensation benefits must be offset by PERA benefits, the portion of the employee's PERA benefits attributable to employer's contribution to the pension program are subtracted from workers' compensation benefits. Indus. Comm'n v. Edlund, 759 P.2d 7 (Colo. 1988).

Purpose of subsection (1)(e) is to prevent double recovery by an employee. If an offset is determined by net PERA benefits, rather than PERA benefits before federal and state taxes are deducted, the employer would in effect be required to pay an employee's taxes. Colo. Dept. of Hwys. v. Sparling, 821 P.2d 780 (Colo. 1991).

"Total pension benefits", as used in subsection (1)(e) means gross benefits, before federal and state taxes are withheld from disability pension benefits payable to an employee pursuant to an employer's pension plan. Taxes shall not be deducted before calculating the offset of such periodic disability benefits from the aggregate benefits payable pursuant to such subsection. Colo. Dept. of Hwys. v. Sparling, 821 P.2d 780 (Colo. 1991).

Offset calculated pursuant to this section properly included amounts withheld at option of claimant from claimant's PERA disability payments for health and life insurance coverages as such deducted insurance premiums are "payable to" claimant even though not actually received. Sparling v. Colo. Dept. of Hwys., 812 P.2d 686 (Colo. App. 1990).

Calculation of employer's total contributions to PERA includes its contributions to the cost-of-living stabilization fund and contributions for unfunded liabilities. Johnson v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 973 P.2d 624 (Colo. App. 1997).

This section does not make a distinction between PERA disability retirement contributions and service retirement contributions. Johnson v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 973 P.2d 624 (Colo. App. 1997).

Offset properly excluded taxes mandatorily deducted from claimant's PERA disability benefits as such amounts are not "payable to" nor paid to claimant. Sparling v. Colo. Dept. of Hwys., 812 P.2d 686 (Colo. App. 1990).

The offset afforded by this section should continue so long as PERA disability benefits continue, and should not automatically terminate based upon claimant achieving 65 years of age where statutes provide and testimony before ALJ indicated that part of the PERA disability retirement benefit payable to the claimant was directly attributable to the fact that she was permanently disabled and that such disability benefit would, after age 65, be paid for the rest of her life regardless of her recovery or her work status, subject to certain limitations. State Penitentiary v. Toothaker, 832 P.2d 1009 (Colo. App. 1991).

The offset under subsection (1)(d) is an offset against pension benefits and, if for some reason, the claimant's pension benefits are reduced or terminated and are no longer "payable" to the claimant, the offset under subsection (1)(d) will become inapplicable and claimant's weekly workers' compensation benefit will be restored to its pre-offset level. Walker v. City & County of Denver, 870 P.2d 1269 (Colo. App. 1994).

Pension payments from the firemen's pension fund were properly offset against the claimant's benefits for permanent partial disability even though the employer's contributions to the plan were in the form of revenues derived from an ad valorem tax. Keelan v. City & County of Denver, 868 P.2d 1173 (Colo. App. 1994).

Attorney fees were properly deducted before calculation of the offset, so that the claimant and the Colorado Compensation Insurance Authority each bore one-half of the fees. Jones v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 892 P.2d 425 (Colo. App. 1994).

Denial of offset for veteran's disability benefits was proper because veteran's disability benefits are not benefits pursuant to a "workers' compensation act" of another state or the federal government. City and County of Denver v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 892 P.2d 429 (Colo. App. 1994).

Veteran's disability benefits are not included in section that provides for an offset for benefits payable to an employee under the provisions of a pension or disability plan financed in whole or in part by the employer. City and County of Denver v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 892 P.2d 429 (Colo. App. 1994).

The introductory portion to paragraph (d) of subsection (1) and subparagraph (I) of paragraph (d) must be construed together. Bailey v. Lakewood Fire Prot. Dist., 44 Colo. App. 463, 618 P.2d 716 (1980).

Workmen's compensation benefits are reduced when employer has disability pension plan for employees. A reduction in the workmen's compensation benefits otherwise payable to an injured employee is required where the employer, who has himself already paid the cost of workmen's compensation insurance, has also purchased, in whole or in part, a disability pension or annuity plan for his employee. Myers v.

State, 162 Colo. 435, 428 P.2d 83 (1967); Jefferson County Pub. Sch. v. Sago, 786 P.2d 486 (Colo. App. 1989).

And the phrase "pension plan" is used in the broad, generic sense, and if there are to be exceptions, these have to be provided for in a clear and unmistakable manner. Myers v. State, 162 Colo. 435, 428 P.2d 83 (1967).

Sickness and disability insurance plan does not constitute a pension plan under subsection (1)(d). Miller v. Halliburton Servs., 689 P.2d 662 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd, 720 P.2d 571 (Colo. 1986).

Plain meaning of subsection (1) requires only that the deduction in benefits paid the claimant be an amount equal "as near as practical" to the employer's proportional contributions to the pension plan. Bailey v. Lakewood Fire Prot. Dist., 44 Colo. App. 463, 618 P.2d 716 (1980).

Offset inapplicable. If the pension plan provides for a reduction equal to the amount of workmen's compensation benefits, the offset in subsection (1)(d) is inapplicable. Masdin v. Gardner-Denver-Cooper Indus., Inc., 689 P.2d 714 (Colo. App. 1984).

Income maintenance benefits are not included in listing of benefits to be offset by any disability annuity payments; to extend the statute to include such benefits would not only be tantamount to indulging in judicial legislation but would ignore the express statutory language. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Velasquez, 628 P.2d 190 (Colo. App. 1981).

Offset provision in subsection (1)(f) found unconstitutional as applied, because it deprived claimant and others similarly situated of their full entitlement to workers' compensation benefits where their employers choose to contest. Here claimant had applied for unemployment insurance benefits before the conclusion of her temporary total disability benefits and, thus, before reaching maximum medical improvement. Axelson v. Pace Membership Warehouse, 923 P.2d 322 (Colo. App. 1996).

Award for medical expenses held erroneous. An award of compensation for medical expenses incurred for inoculations claimant secured after his exposure to infectious hepatitis was erroneous because (1) infectious hepatitis was not an occupational disease as defined in former article 60 of this title, and (2) mere exposure to a disease does not warrant an award of benefits. City of Littleton v. Schum, 38 Colo. App. 122, 553 P.2d 399 (1976).

It is error for the appellate court to specify in an order of remand the amount of the average weekly wage derived in accordance with this section before the administrative law judge has been given the opportunity to exercise its discretion under this section. Coates, Reid & Waldron v. Vigil, 856 P.2d 850 (Colo. 1993).

The failure of the administrative law judge to determine the average weekly wage for a second injury in accordance with subsection (4) is an abuse of discretion and is not supported by applicable law. Where a claimant suffers serious disability from an initial injury and must return to work in a much lower-paying job, and subsequently suffers a second injury under the same employer, such that the claimant becomes permanently and totally disabled as a result of the combination of the injuries and substantial compensation in the way of permanent partial disability benefits is precluded from the first injury, the average weekly wage is to be determined in accordance with this section. Coates, Reid & Waldron v. Vigil, 856 P.2d 850 (Colo. 1993).

The term "employment" in subsection (1)(g) is not ambiguous and encompasses both modified and regular employment. Colo. Springs Disposal v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 58 P.3d 1061 (Colo. App. 2002).

Where faultless employee is terminated while still temporarily disabled, the resulting wage loss must be attributable to the injury, and an employer must pay temporary disability benefits for any resulting wage loss. Monfort of Colo. v. Husson, 725 P.2d 67 (Colo. App. 1986).

When an employee experiences a worsening of a condition or the development of a disability after termination of employment that is a result of an on-the-job injury, sub- section (1)(g) does not apply to terminate employee disability benefits. Grisbaum v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 109 P.3d 1054 (Colo. App. 2005).

Section 2-4-108 (1) covers computation of time periods under this section. Thus, the date of the claimant's injury should be excluded from the computation of the three-day waiting period. Ralston Purina-Keystone v. Lowry, 821 P.2d 910 (Colo. App. 1991).

Medical impairment benefits are a form of permanent partial disability within the context of subsection (1)(d). Durocher v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 905 P.2d 4 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd on other grounds sub nom. Mountain City Meat Co. v. Oqueda, 919 P.2d 246 (Colo. 1996).

Previously existing disability incurred during active military service is not a "permanent partial industrial disability" within the meaning of the statute. Therefore there is no liability to the fund for a prior partial military service connected disability. City and County of Denver v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 892 P.2d 429 (Colo. App. 1994).

Applied in Consolidated Coal & Coke Co. v. Todoroff, 97 Colo. 125, 47 P.2d 404 (1935); City of Thornton v. Teeter, 37 Colo. App. 427, 548 P.2d 133 (1976); Romero v. Indus. Comm'n, 632 P.2d 1052 (Colo. App. 1981); Valdez v. United Parcel Serv., 728 P.2d 340 (Colo. App. 1986).

8-42-104. Effect of previous injury or compensation. (1) The fact that an employee has suffered a previous disability or impairment or received compensation therefor shall not preclude compensation for a later injury or for death, but, in determining compensation benefits payable for the later injury or death, the employee's average weekly earnings at the time of the later injury shall be used in determining the compensation payable to the employee or such employee's dependents. Notwithstanding any other provision of articles 40 to 47 of this title, no claimant may receive concurrent permanent total disability awards from injuries occurring in this state or any other state.

(3) An employee's temporary total disability, temporary partial disability, or medical benefits shall not be reduced based on a previous injury.

(4) An employee's recovery of permanent total disability shall not be reduced when the disability is the result of work-related injury or work-related injury combined with genetic, congenital, or similar conditions; except that this subsection (4) shall not apply to reductions in recovery or apportionments allowed pursuant to the Colorado supreme court's decision in the case denominated Anderson v. Brinkhoff, 859 P.2d 819 (Colo. 1993).

(5) In cases of permanent medical impairment, the employee's award or settlement shall be reduced:

(a) When an employee has suffered more than one permanent medical impairment to the same body part and has received an award or settlement under the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado" or a similar act from another state. The permanent medical impairment rating applicable to the previous injury to the same body part, established by award or settlement, shall be deducted from the permanent medical impairment rating for the subsequent injury to the same body part.

(b) When an employee has a nonwork-related previous permanent medical impairment to the same body part that has been identified, treated, and, at the time of the subsequent compensable injury, is independently disabling. The percentage of the nonwork-related permanent medical impairment existing at the time of the subsequent injury to the same body part shall be deducted from the permanent medical impairment rating for the subsequent compensable injury.

(6) Nothing in this section shall be construed to preclude employers or insurers from seeking contribution or reimbursement, as permitted by law, from other employers or insurers for benefits paid to or for an injured employee as long as the employee's benefits are not reduced or otherwise affected by such contribution or reimbursement.

Law reviews. For article, "Primer on Permanent Disability in the Colorado Workmen's Compensation Law", see 57 Den. L.J. 573 (1980). For article, "A Curious Journey: Apportionment in Workers' Compensation Today", see 38 Colo. Law. 69 (March 2009).

Annotator's note. (1) Since § 8-42-104 is similar to § 8-47-102 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

(2) Cases included in the annotations to this section which refer to the industrial commission were decided prior to the 1969 amendment which empowered the director of the division of labor to enforce and administer the workmen's compensation act.

Section recognizes right to compensation for second injury. This section recognizes that even though an employee has suffered a previous disability and even received compensation therefor, he is nonetheless entitled to also receive compensation for a subsequent or later injury sustained in a second industrial accident. Empire Oldsmobile, Inc. v. McLain, 151 Colo. 510, 379 P.2d 402 (1963); Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Rhodes, 166 Colo. 82, 441 P.2d 652 (1968).

An employer takes an employee as he finds him, and if an injury is significant in that there is a direct causal relationship between the precipitating event and the resulting disability, an industrial injury is still compensable if it has caused a dormant pre-existing condition to become disabling. Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 151 Colo. 18, 379 P.2d 153 (1962); Seifried v. Indus. Comm'n, 736 P.2d 1262 (Colo. App. 1986); Lindner Chevrolet v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 914 P.2d 496 (Colo. App. 1995).

This section addresses apportionment when a claimant has suffered multiple industrial disabilities and, contrary to petitioners' assertion, the general assembly has accorded employers the protection of apportionment only for prior industrial disabilities and has not extended the apportionment to prior non-industrial disabilities. Lindner Chevrolet v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 914 P.2d 496 (Colo. App. 1995).

This section applies to all previous disabilities except when § 8-46-101 (1), governing the subsequent injury fund's liability for previous industrial disabilities, is applicable. Mountain Meadows Nursing Center v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 990 P.2d 1090 (Colo. App. 1999).

This section provides no statutory direction for the apportionment of liability between an employer and a claimant whose disability resulted from a preexisting medical condition and a subsequent work-related injury. Under the full responsibility rule, an employer is generally liable for the entire disability that results from a compensable accident. Res. One, LLC v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 148 P.3d 287 (Colo. App. 2006).

No apportionment where employee has fully recovered from past disability. Apportionment under this section is appropriate only when a prior disability, as defined in the AMA Guides, is a contributing factor to a subsequent industrial injury. Askew v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 927 P.2d 1333 (Colo. 1996); Mountain Meadows Nursing Center v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 990 P.2d 1090 (Colo. App. 1999).

Benefits payable to a disabled employee for a later injury shall be based on the employee's average weekly wage at the time of the later injury. Platte Valley Lumber v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 870 P.2d 634 (Colo. App. 1994).

This section spells out just how the percentage of disability for the subsequent injury shall be determined, namely, by computing the percentage of entire disability and deducting therefrom the percentage of the previous disability as it existed at the time of the subsequent injury. Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Rhodes, 166 Colo. 82, 441 P.2d 652 (1968).

Basis for compensation of later injury is earning capacity at time of that injury. Where a claimant has suffered a previous disability, a court in determining average earnings, as a basis for compensation for his later injury, has the right and duty to fix such amount as would reasonably represent his earning capacity at the time of the later injury in the employment in which he was then working. Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 151 Colo. 18, 379 P.2d 153 (1962); Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Rhodes, 166 Colo. 82, 441 P.2d 652 (1968).

Allocation of a percentage of disability to previous injuries cannot be on an arbitrary basis of guesswork or assumption. Matthews v. Indus. Comm'n, 144 Colo. 146, 355 P.2d 300 (1960); Empire Oldsmobile, Inc. v. McLain, 151 Colo. 510, 379 P.2d 402 (1963); Parrish v. Indus. Comm'n, 151 Colo. 538, 379 P.2d 384 (1963).

Inquiry is limited to the claimant's ability to earn a wage at the same or other employment in inquiry to apportion injuries to employee with permanent total disabilities. Colo. Mental Health Inst. v. Austill, 940 P.2d 1125 (Colo. App. 1997).

Apportionment pursuant to this section not limited to apportioning liability between employers without reducing benefits to the claimant. Colo. Mental Health Inst. v. Austill, 940 P.2d 1125 (Colo. App. 1997).

Disabilities caused by accident and those caused by occupational disease are treated the same for apportionment purposes under this section. Colo. Mental Health Inst. v. Austill, 940 P.2d 1125 (Colo. App. 1997).

The allocation of disability as required by this section must be based on evidence. City & County of Denver v. Moore, 31 Colo. App. 310, 504 P.2d 367 (1972).

And where the medical opinion upon which the industrial commission based its award is definite and unequivocal, the allocation of disability between a preexisting condition and an industrial accident is proper if supported by that kind of competent evidence. Holmstrom v. Pub. Serv. Co., 169 Colo. 439, 458 P.2d 77 (1969).

Full benefits even if fully recovered from prior injury. A claimant who has suffered a prior injury for which he had been compensated on a permanent basis and from which he had fully recovered as a working unit at the time of his employment by present employer, is entitled to full benefits provided by articles 42 to 66 of this title. Empire Oldsmobile, Inc. v. McLain, 151 Colo. 510, 379 P.2d 402 (1963); Powers v. William Van Genderen Co., 153 Colo. 561, 387 P.2d 285 (1963).

But where claimant had suffered a prior injury and the medical evidence was in agreement as to the percentage of disability to be allocated to recent injury, an award in excess of such percentage was without support in the evidence. Indus. Comm'n v. Navajo Freight Lines, 149 Colo. 86, 367 P.2d 894 (1962).

Where an employer hires a workman who by reason of a preexisting condition or a prior injury is to some extent disabled, he takes such employee with such handicap. Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 151 Colo. 18, 379 P.2d 153 (1962).

This section governs all apportionment of disability awards except when a previous disability impacts upon a present disability, in which case § 8-46-101, the subsequent injury fund statute, applies. Holly Nursing Care Ctr. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 992 P.2d 701 (Colo. App. 1999).

Subsection (2)(c) applies only to apportionment of permanent partial and permanent total disability benefits. Holly Nursing Care Ctr. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 992 P.2d 701 (Colo. App. 1999).

The effects of a prior industrial injury cannot constitute a "previous disability" unless a claimant has attained maximum medical improvement for the prior injury before the date of the subsequent injury. Holly Nursing Care Ctr. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 992 P.2d 701 (Colo. App. 1999).

A partially disabled person who receives an injury which totally disables him is entitled to compensation without apportionment. Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 151 Colo. 18, 379 P.2d 153 (1962).

For this section does not provide for apportionment between injuries sustained. Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 151 Colo. 18, 379 P.2d 153 (1962); United Airlines v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 993 P.2d 1152 (Colo. 2000).

And in the absence of an apportionment statute, the general rule is that the employer becomes liable for the entire disability resulting from a compensable accident. Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 151 Colo. 18, 379 P.2d 153 (1962); United Airlines v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 993 P.2d 1152 (Colo. 2000).

The full responsibility rule does not bar apportionment under this section where there is no SIF liability for non-industrial injuries. Waddell v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 964 P.2d 552 (Colo. App. 1998).

The difference between a total permanent disability order and an apportionment of compensation between one injury and a prior one is that in the former the payments continue for life, and in the latter the payments would, in all probability, be terminable sometime before his death. Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 151 Colo. 18, 379 P.2d 153 (1962).

Apportionment may be had for a prior disability, but not for a latent preexisting condition. And an impairment becomes a disability only when the medical condition limits the claimant's capacity to meet the demands of life's activities. Baldwin Const. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 937 P.2d 895 (Colo. App. 1997).

Apportionment based on preexisting impairment is not proper unless the impairment was independently disabling at the time of the industrial injury. Thus, if a claimant's condition has improved to the extent that a disability is no longer present when the later injury occurs, that prior disability cannot be considered a contributing factor. Pub. Serv. Co. of Colo. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 40 P.3d 68 (Colo. App. 2001).

Apportionment of medical impairment constitutes a pure medical determination and is not based on pre-existing impairment as formerly permitted if the impairment was independently disabling at the time of the injury. Martinez v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 176 P.3d 826 (Colo. App. 2007).

Under the AMA Guides, a preexisting condition was not a previous disability and therefore not subject to apportionment when prior to injury at work the condition or impairment was asymptomatic and did not hinder claimant's capacity to meet any demands. Askew v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 927 P.2d 1333 (Colo. 1996); Lambert & Sons, Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 984 P.2d 656 (Colo. App. 1998).

"Apportionable" disability does not include congenital conditions that are not affected by circumstances subsequent to birth. Further, the general assembly recognized that individual claimants are born with different physical and mental aptitudes, and therefore, with a baseline access to the labor market, which is limited. An apportionable "disability" arises when the claimant's baseline access to the labor market is reduced by injuries, illness, or the aging process. Absolute Employment Servs., Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 997 P.2d 1229 (Colo. App. 1999).

In case of death of employee intoxicated at time of injury, subsection (1)(c) does not operate to reduce the $15,000 employer is required to contribute to the subsequent injury fund pursuant to § 8-51-106 (1)(b) (now § 8-46-102) because this amount is a tax imposed upon the employer for the purpose of funding the subsequent injury fund and not a benefit to the claimant or his dependents. Portofino Apts. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 789 P.2d 1117 (Colo. App. 1990).

Requirement that average weekly earnings at time of later injury be used to compute compensation payable for a later injury or death are subject to provisions of § 8-42-102 (3) allowing variation from general rule if a fair computation of wages can not be obtained. Vigil v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 841 P.2d 335 (Colo. App. 1992), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 856 P.2d 850 (Colo. 1993).

Even though subsection (2) references "disability", the term is used in the context of a "previous disability", and concerns the effects of an injury as they were termed prior to amendments to the Workers' Compensation Act. Under the amended version of the Act, "medical impairment" simply describes "permanent disability". Thornton v. Replogle, 888 P.2d 782 (Colo. 1995).

8-42-105. Temporary total disability. (1) In case of temporary total disability of more than three regular working days' duration, the employee shall receive sixty-six and two-thirds percent of said employee's average weekly wages so long as such disability is total, not to exceed a maximum of ninety-one percent of the state average weekly wage per week. Except where vocational rehabilitation is offered and accepted as provided in section 8-42-111 (3), temporary total disability payments shall cease upon the occurrence of any of the events enumerated in subsection (3) of this section. If vocational rehabilitation is offered and accepted, any party may at any time terminate vocational rehabilitation upon fourteen days' written notice to the other parties and the director. For purposes of this section, termination of vocational rehabilitation shall be the same as if vocational rehabilitation had never been offered and accepted, and the employer or insurance carrier shall not be entitled to recover any temporary total disability benefits paid during the period that vocational rehabilitation was provided.

(2) (a) The first installment of compensation shall be paid no later than the date that liability for the claim is admitted by the insurance carrier or self-insured employer. If the insurance carrier or self-insured employer denies liability for the claim, the claimant may request an expedited hearing on the issue of compensability if the application is filed within forty-five days after the date of mailing of the notice of contest. The director shall set any such expedited matter for hearing within forty days after the date of the application, when the issue is liability for the disease or injury. The time schedule for such an expedited hearing is subject to the extensions set forth in section 8-43-209. If a claimant elects not to request an expedited hearing pursuant to this paragraph (a), the time schedule for hearing the matter shall be as set forth in section 8-43-209. Compensation shall be paid at least once every two weeks, except where the director determines that payment in installments should be made at some other interval. The director may by rule convert monthly benefit schedules to weekly or other periodic schedules.

(b) Temporary disability compensation is not due and payable for any period of time for which the insurer or self-insured employer has requested from the employee's attending physician verification of the employee's inability to work resulting from the claimed injury or disease and the physician cannot verify the employee's inability to work, unless the employee has been unable to receive treatment for reasons beyond the employee's control. Failure of the physician to submit such verification, through no fault of the employee, shall not affect the payment of temporary disability compensation under this section.

(c) If an employee fails to appear at an appointment with the employee's attending physician, the insurer or self-insured employer shall notify the employee by certified mail that temporary disability benefits may be suspended after the employee fails to appear at a rescheduled appointment. If the employee fails to appear at a rescheduled appointment, the insurer or self-insured employer may, without a prior hearing, suspend payment of temporary disability benefits to the employee until the employee appears at a subsequent rescheduled appointment.

(d) If the insurer or self-insured employer has requested and failed to receive from the employee's attending physician verification of the employee's inability to work resulting from the claimed injury or disease, medical services provided by the attending physician are not compensable until the attending physician submits such verification.

(3) Temporary total disability benefits shall continue until the first occurrence of any one of the following:

- (a) The employee reaches maximum medical improvement;
- (b) The employee returns to regular or modified employment;
- (c) The attending physician gives the employee a written release to return to regular employment; or

(d) (I) The attending physician gives the employee a written release to return to modified employment, such employment is offered to the employee in writing, and the employee fails to begin such employment.

(II) In the case of employment by a temporary help contracting firm, once the employee has received one written offer of modified employment meeting the requirements of subparagraph (III) of this paragraph (d), the employee shall be deemed to be on notice that modified employment is available. Subsequent offers of modified employment need not be in writing so long as the job requirements of such modified employment are within the restrictions given the employee by the employee's attending physician and the employee is allowed a period of at least twenty-four hours, not including any part of a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, within which to respond to any such offer.

(III) A written offer of modified employment under subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (d) shall clearly state:

- (A) That future offers of employment need not be in writing;
- (B) The policy of the temporary help contracting firm regarding how and when employees are expected to learn of such future offers; and
- (C) That benefits under this section will be terminated if an employee fails to respond to an offer of modified employment.

(4) (a) In cases where it is determined that a temporarily disabled employee is responsible for termination of employment, the resulting wage loss shall not be attributable to the on-the-job injury.

(b) The claimant's refusal to accept an offer of modified employment under either of the following conditions does not constitute responsibility for termination:

(I) The offer of modified employment would require the claimant to travel a distance of greater than fifty miles one way more than the claimant's preinjury commute; or

(II) An administrative law judge determines that the claimant's rejection of the offer of modified employment was reasonable considering the totality of the claimant's circumstances, including accounting for:

- (A) The consequences of the industrial injury;
- (B) The financial hardship that would be imposed on the claimant in order to accept the offer of modified employment; or

(C) Any other reasons that would, in the opinion of the administrative law judge, make it impracticable for the claimant to accept the offer of modified employment.

(c) The circumstances described in paragraph (b) of this subsection (4) are not exhaustive.

Annotator's note. Since § 8-42-105 is similar to § 8-51-102 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Benefits based on claimant's average weekly wage. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Lyttle, 151 Colo. 590, 380 P.2d 62 (1963).

An award under this section is mandatory if three conditions are met: (1) The injury or occupational disease causes disability; (2) the injured employee leaves work as a result of the injury; and (3) the temporary disability is total and lasts more than three regular working days' duration. PDM Molding, Inc. v. Stanberg, 898 P.2d 542 (Colo. 1995).

Admission of liability for "closed" period not permitted. By filing an admission of liability, an insurer has, in effect, admitted that the claimant has sustained the burden of proving entitlement to temporary disability benefits. Thereafter, the insurer is bound by that admission and must pay accordingly. The insurer may not unilaterally terminate benefits without complying with this section and with rules governing the termination of such benefits. Colo. Comp. Ins. Auth. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 18 P.3d 790 (Colo. App. 2000).

Subsection (1) and § 8-42-103(1)(a) require a claimant to establish a causal connection between a work-related injury and a subsequent wage loss in order to obtain temporary total disability benefits. Lindner Chevrolet v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 914 P.2d 496 (Colo. App. 1995); City of Colo. Springs v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 954 P.2d 637 (Colo. App. 1997).

A later injury to another part of the body, not resulting in additional wage loss, does not entitle the claimant to a renewed award of benefits under this section. City of Colo. Springs v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 954 P.2d 637 (Colo. App. 1997).

To establish eligibility for temporary disability benefits the employee need not prove that the work-related injury was the sole cause of the wage loss; if the claimant establishes that his or her work-related injury contributed in some degree to a temporary wage loss, the claimant is eligible for temporary disability benefits. Lindner Chevrolet v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 914 P.2d 496 (Colo. App. 1995).

Employee does not have to prove that work-related injury was sole cause of wage loss to establish eligibility for benefits. Horton v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 942 P.2d 1209 (Colo. App. 1996).

Standard of "suitable gainful employment" is inapplicable in determining eligibility for workmen's compensation benefits when the employee is temporarily disabled and vocational rehabilitation services remain open. Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Husson, 732 P.2d 1245 (Colo. App. 1986).

Right to temporary disability benefits is measured by the degree of wage loss attributable to an industrial injury, not by the degree of physical impairment nor willingness to seek employment. Denny's Restaurant, Inc. v. Husson, 746 P.2d 63 (Colo. App. 1987); Black Roofing Inc. v. West, 967 P.2d 195 (Colo. App. 1998).

Neither this section nor § 8-42-103 requires claimant to provide a medical opinion restricting her from regular employment as a condition of receiving temporary total disability benefits. The administrative law judge appropriately awarded TTD benefits based on claimant's evidence, including notes of her personal physician, that she had suffered a wage loss as a result of her injury. Lymburn v. Symbios Logic, 952 P.2d 831 (Colo. App. 1997).

Release to work by attending physician precludes an award of temporary total disability benefits. Unless there are conflicting opinions from attending physicians, an administrative law judge cannot disregard physician's opinion. Burns v. Robinson Dairy, Inc., 911 P.2d 661 (Colo. App. 1995); Popke v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 944 P.2d 677 (Colo. App. 1997).

But an attending physician's report that has an internal conflict is subject to interpretation by the administrative law judge. Imperial Headware, Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 15 P.3d 295 (Colo. App. 2000).

Subsection (3) limits scope and frequency of disputes concerning duration of TTD benefits by treating the attending physician's opinion as conclusive. Burns v. Robinson Dairy, Inc., 911 P.2d 661 (Colo. App. 1995).

When an offer and acceptance of vocational rehabilitation occur, the provisions of subsection (3) do not apply. As a result, when there is such an offer and acceptance, the attainment of maximum medical improvement is irrelevant to a claimant's right to temporary total disability benefits. Larimer County v. Sinclair, 939 P.2d 515 (Colo. App. 1997).

Termination of temporary total disability benefits under any one of the conditions enumerated in this section is mandatory. Burns v. Robinson Dairy, Inc., 911 P.2d 661 (Colo. App. 1995); Laurel Manor v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 964 P.2d 589 (Colo. App. 1998).

ALJ is required to terminate benefits when attending physician provides claimant with written release to work. Burns v. Robinson Dairy, Inc., 911 P.2d 661 (Colo. App. 1995).

The term "attending physician" includes only those physicians who are authorized to provide treatment. An attending physician must be one within the chain of authorization. Popke v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 944 P.2d 677 (Colo. App. 1997).

The author of an effective release for return to employment must be the health care provider identified as the attending physician. While there can be more than one attending physician, the statute does not provide for release by any attending physician. Popke v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 944 P.2d 677 (Colo. App. 1997).

Court will not impute to the general assembly an intent that the opinion of the first physician treating a claimant concerning the resuming of full-time employment outweighs the opinion of the second physician who began treatment at a later time. Bestway Con- crete v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 984 P.2d 680 (Colo. App. 1999).

A physician's status as the attending physician is a question fact that should be resolved by the ALJ. Popke v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 944 P.2d 677 (Colo. App. 1997); Bestway Concrete v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 984 P.2d 680 (Colo. App. 1999).

Claimant was no longer entitled to temporary total disability benefits for injury incurred in course of her employment when claimant was offered and refused suitable gainful employment that was approved by her physician, was within her physical limitations, and which paid an increased amount of wages since the wage loss suffered was due to rejection of the offered employment. Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Husson, 732 P.2d 1245 (Colo. App. 1986).

For an attending physician's written release to be effective for the purpose of terminating temporary total disability benefits, the release must be delivered to the employee. Popke v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 944 P.2d 677 (Colo. App. 1997).

Industrial claim appeals panel did not terminate temporary total disability benefits prematurely by relying on the physician's release to regular employment as the termination date. McKinley v. Bronco Billy's, 903 P.2d 1239 (Colo. App. 1995).

Disabling industrial injury suffered prior to July 1, 1987. A worker who has been awarded temporary partial disability benefits and who has been directed to undergo a vocational rehabilitation evaluation is entitled to receive temporary partial disability benefits until the commencement of a vocational rehabilitation program or the entry of an administrative ruling that vocational rehabilitation is not necessary to render the worker fit for a remunerative occupation. Allee v. Contractors, Inc., 783 P.2d 273 (Colo. 1989); Gerber v. CAN-USA Construction, Inc., 783 P.2d 269 (Colo. 1989); Phillips v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 783 P.2d 271 (Colo. 1989); Indus. Claim Appeals Office v. Mid-Continent Res., Inc., 783 P.2d 290 (Colo. 1989); Arndt v. Elec. Metal Prods., Inc., 783 P.2d 290 (Colo. 1989); Northeastern Junior Coll. v. Kenyon, 783 P.2d 853 (Colo. 1989) (decided prior to 1987 repeal of subsections (4) and (5)).

Temporary disability benefits may be suspended if intervening events other than compensable injury are operative. Claimant need not reach maximum medical improvement. Roe v. Indus. Comm'n, 734 P.2d 138 (Colo. App. 1986).

An intervening injury does not suspend temporary disability benefit payments, even if such injury delays the attainment of maximum medical improvement. Horton v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 942 P.2d 1209 (Colo. App. 1996).

Subsection (1) sets the rate for temporary total disability benefits. Allison v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 916 P.2d 623 (Colo. App. 1995).

However, this section does not mandate a legal duty upon the employer to pay that rate without regard to any claimed offset prior to the administrative law judge's determination of benefits. Allison v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 916 P.2d 623 (Colo. App. 1995).

Timing of temporary total disability payments. The statutory language of subsection (2)(a) requires that temporary total disability payments be paid at least every two weeks from the date compensation first becomes payable. Nothing in this subsection suggests that the date for payment of compensation is to be adjusted based on the date the insurer issued the most recent benefits check. An employer's decision to pay some temporary total disability payments before completion of the two-week intervals does not alter the due dates for subsequent payments or accelerate the payment schedule. Jones v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 87 P.3d 259 (Colo. App. 2004).

Subsection (2)(a) does not suggest that the date of the most recent check for payment of temporary total disability imposes a new baseline date for issuance of the next payment. Jones v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 87 P.3d 259 (Colo. App. 2004).

Subsection (2)(a) should not be interpreted to establish grounds to punish insurers who make payments before the two-week window expires or to accelerate the due date for the next payment if the insurer decides to make an early payment. Jones v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 87 P.3d 259 (Colo. App. 2004).

Under the plain language of subsection (2)(c), an employer that has admitted liability must automatically reinstate temporary disability benefits that were suspended for an injured employee's failure to appear at a rescheduled medical appointment when it is undisputed that the employer knew that the employee later appeared at a subsequent rescheduled medical appointment. Rocky Mtn. Cardiology v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 94 P.3d 1182 (Colo. App. 2004).

Term "suspend" as used in subsection (2)(c) means to stop temporarily and not to bar or exclude. Where the employee misses a rescheduled appointment but appears at a subsequent rescheduled appointment, the benefits that were suspended become due and payable. Sigala v. Atencio's Market, 184 P.3d 40 (Colo. 2008).

Grounds for termination of benefits in subsection (3) are exclusive. The insurer may not unilaterally terminate benefits based on the claimant's return to school. Assertion of such a defense creates a factual question that can be resolved only after a hearing. Colo. Comp. Ins. Auth. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 18 P.3d 790 (Colo. App. 2000).

The word "wages", as used in the workmen's compensation act, is construed to mean "money rate at which the services are recompensed under the contract of hire in force at the time of the accident". Roeder v. Indus. Comm'n, 97 Colo. 133, 46 P.2d 898 (1935); Lyttle v. State Comp. Ins. Fund, 137 Colo. 212, 322 P.2d 1049 (1958).

And where employment is without salary, it has the effect of reducing the amount of compensation which an injured employee is entitled to receive to the minimum benefits provided by the workmen's compensation law. Lyttle v. State Comp. Ins. Fund, 137 Colo. 212, 322 P.2d 1049 (1958).

"Wages" includes health insurance and similar advantages received from the employer, for purposes of this section, and the net cost to the employee of replacing the benefit should be added to the average weekly wage. State Comp. Ins. Auth. v. Smith, 768 P.2d 1256 (Colo. App. 1988).

Average weekly wage includes both the employer's and employee's contribution to group health insurance premiums. Humane Soc'y of Pikes Peak Region v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 26 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2001).

Claimant is not required to present proof that he or she actually purchased replacement coverage. The statute merely seeks to ensure that the claimant will have funds available to make the purchase. Humane Soc'y of Pikes Peak Region v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 26 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2001).

The term "employment" in subsection (4) is not ambiguous and encompasses both modified and regular employment. Colo. Springs Disposal v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 58 P.3d 1061 (Colo. App. 2002).

Subsection (4) bars temporary total disability wage loss claims when the voluntary or for-cause termination of the modified employment causes the wage loss but not when the worsening of a prior work-related injury causes the wage loss. Anderson v. Longmont Toyota, 102 P.3d 323 (Colo. 2004).

If an injured employee loses his job because of economic factors, is not at fault for the layoff, and has reasonably sought new employment, the employee is entitled to temporary disability benefits. Lunsford v. Sawatsky, 780 P.2d 76, (Colo. App. 1989); City of Aurora v. Dorch, 799 P.2d 461 (Colo. App. 1990).

Claimant would be entitled to temporary total disability benefits, despite being terminated the same day as the injury for reasons unrelated to the injury, if the claimant was not at fault for the termination. PDM Molding, Inc. v. Stanberg, 885 P.2d 280 (Colo. App. 1994).

If claimant is at fault for termination for reasons unrelated to the injury, ALJ must consider the totality of the circumstances to determine whether the claimant's work-related injury is the cause of the claimant's inability to find work. PDM Molding, Inc. v. Stanberg, 885 P.2d 280 (Colo. App. 1994).

Claimant who was not at fault for termination from post injury employment during the period of temporary disability is entitled to have temporary total disability benefits resumed, as there is a causal link between the industrial injury and the subsequent wage loss. Schlage Lock v. Lahr, 870 P.2d 615 (Colo. App. 1993).

Termination for fault not an automatic bar to receipt of benefits. Notwithstanding termination for fault, if the work-related injury in fact contributed in some degree to the employee's wage loss during the period of disability, the employee is eligible for benefits under this section. PDM Molding, Inc. v. Stanberg, 898 P.2d 542 (Colo. 1995); Bestway Concrete v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 984 P.2d 680 (Colo. App. 1999).

The test for determining eligibility for such post-termination benefits is whether the work-related injury contributed in some degree to the subsequent wage loss. Once the claimant shows that the subsequent wage loss was related to the industrial injury, temporary total disability benefits can be denied or terminated only if one of the four statutory criteria set forth in subsection (3) is satisfied. Laurel Manor v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 964 P.2d 589 (Colo. App. 1998).

When an employee experiences a worsening of a condition or the development of a disability after termination of employment that is a result of an on-the-job injury, subsection (4) does not apply to terminate employee disability benefits. Grisbaum v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 109 P.3d 1054 (Colo. App. 2005).

Claimant who did not challenge a determination that she had reached maximum medical improvement of her work-related injury may obtain temporary total disability benefits where she has experienced a worsening of her original injury. Loofbourrow v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

It is highly unlikely that the general assembly intended to deny completely temporary disability benefits where an employee was terminated for negligently causing a work injury in light of § 8-42-112 (1), which requires a 50% reduction in benefits if an employee is injured because of willfully violating a safety rule. The term "responsible" does not refer to an employee's injury or injury-producing activity, therefore the termination statutes do not apply where an employee is terminated because of the employee's injury or injury-producing activity. Colo. Springs Disposal v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 58 P.3d 1061 (Colo. App. 2002).

Seasonal employment does not preclude an award of temporary disability payments. If the record establishes that claimant's industrial disability contributed directly to her post-injury wage loss, the award of temporary disability benefits was proper. City of Aurora v. Dortch, 799 P.2d 461 (Colo. App. 1990).

Evidence that claimant was actively seeking employment during time period for which benefits were sought was insufficient basis upon which to disallow benefits, where claimant's physician testified to claimant's disability. Denny's Restaurant, Inc. v. Husson, 746 P.2d 63 (Colo. App. 1987).

Reopening case for new award of temporary total disability. Claimant entitled to reopening of case for a determination of temporary total disability and award of benefits therefor, where claimant underwent additional surgery after an initial award of permanent partial disability and the surgery left him totally incapacitated for a period of time. Loucks v. Safeway Stores, 757 P.2d 639 (Colo. App. 1988).

This section does not contemplate unilateral termination of benefits by insurer. Collins v. Indus. Comm'n, 676 P.2d 1270 (Colo. App. 1984); Colo. Compensation Ins. Auth. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 18 P.3d 790 (Colo. App. 2000).

Payment of temporary disability benefits continues until an event enumerated in subsection (3) occurs. Horton v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 942 P.2d 1209 (Colo. App. 1996).

Benefits properly continued during employee's employment as a salesman compensated solely by commission when record supported administrative law judge's findings that employee's injuries prevented him from earning any commissions and that there had been no return to regular employment. Magnetic Eng'g, Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 5 P.3d 385 (Colo. App. 2000).

Claimant erroneously awarded temporary total disability benefits where, by signing document containing written list of duties prepared by facility director, she accepted offer of modified employment, but failed to appear for work after the offer had been extended. Consequently, claimant's failure to commence the work offered occurred prior to her termination. Thus, the termination of temporary total disability benefits was warranted before claimant sustained the wage loss for which she seeks benefits. Laurel Manor v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 964 P.2d 589 (Colo. App. 1998).

A claimant must begin modified employment for eligibility for temporary total disability benefits. Liberty Heights v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 30 P.3d 872 (Colo. App. 2001).

Department of labor and employment rules governing the termination of temporary disability benefits are not inconsistent with this section. Monfort Transp. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 942 P.2d 1358 (Colo. App. 1997).

Temporary disability benefits paid on account of vocational rehabilitation are included in the calculation of the benefit cap pursuant to § 8-42-107.5. Grogan v. Lutheran Med. Center, Inc., 950 P.2d 690 (Colo. App. 1997).

8-42-106. Temporary partial disability. (1) In case of temporary partial disability, the employee shall receive sixty-six and two-thirds percent of the difference between said employee's average weekly wage at the time of the injury and said employee's average weekly wage during the continuance of the temporary partial disability, not to exceed a maximum of ninety-one percent of the state average weekly wage per week.

(2) Temporary partial disability payments shall continue until the first occurrence of either one of the following:

(a) The employee reaches maximum medical improvement; or

(b) (I) The attending physician gives the employee a written release to return to modified employment, such employment is offered to the employee in writing, and the employee fails to begin such employment.

(II) In the case of employment by a temporary help contracting firm, once the employee has received one written offer of modified employment meeting the requirements of subparagraph (III) of this paragraph (b), the employee shall be deemed to be on notice that modified employment is available. Subsequent offers of modified employment need not be in writing so long as the job requirements of such modified employment are within the restrictions given the employee by the employee's attending physician and the employee is allowed a period of at least twenty-four hours, not including any part of a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, within which to respond to any such offer.

(III) A written offer of modified employment under subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (b) shall clearly state:

(A) That future offers of employment need not be in writing;

(B) The policy of the temporary help contracting firm regarding how and when employees are expected to learn of such future offers; and

(C) That benefits under this section will be terminated if an employee fails to respond to an offer of modified employment.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. (1) Since § 8-42-106 is similar to § 8-51-103 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

(2) The case included in the annotations to this section which refers to the industrial commission was decided prior to the 1969 amendment which vested the director of the division of labor with the power previously exercised by the industrial commission to enforce and administer the workmen's compensation act.

"Earning capacity" relates to money rate at which services are recompensed. Although language of this section varies from that of §§ 8-51-102, 8-51-108, and 8-51-109, dealing with general disability, it is apparent that the general assembly intended that the same base be used for determining compensation throughout the act, and the term "earning capacity" as used in this section must be related to the money rate at which the services were recompensed under the contract of hire at the time of the accident. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Lyttle, 151 Colo. 590, 380 P.2d 62 (1963).

Standard of "suitable gainful employment" is inapplicable in determining eligibility for workers' compensation benefits when the employee is temporarily disabled and vocational rehabilitation services remain open. Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Husson, 732 P.2d 1245 (Colo. App. 1986).

But where a claimant earned no salary and therefore had a money rate of nothing at time of accident, and since this section does not provide a minimum compensation rate for temporary partial disability, the amount of compensation to which claimant is entitled is, and remains, zero. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Lyttle, 151 Colo. 590, 380 P.2d 62 (1963).

And neither the industrial commission nor the court may supplement this section by adding thereto a minimum rate provision. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Lyttle, 151 Colo. 590, 380 P.2d 62 (1963).

Compensation benefits for a temporary partial disability are designed to be a partial substitute for lost wages or impaired earning capacity arising from a compensable injury. Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Husson, 732 P.2d 1245 (Colo. App. 1986).

"Wages" includes health insurance and similar advantages received from the employer, for purposes of this section, and net cost to the employee of replacing the benefit should be added to the average weekly wage. State Compensation Insurance Authority v. Smith, 768 P.2d 1256 (Colo. App. 1988).

Average weekly wage includes both the employer's and employee's contribution to group health insurance premiums. Humane Soc'y of Pikes Peak Region v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 26 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2001).

Claimant is not required to present proof that he or she actually purchased replacement coverage. The statute merely seeks to ensure that the claimant will have funds available to make the purchase. Humane Soc'y of Pikes Peak Region v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 26 P.3d 546 (Colo. App. 2001).

Reasonable depreciation deducted from a self-employed workers' compensation claimant's gross earnings as reported on his federal income tax return should be included in the calculation of his post-injury average weekly wage for determining the amount of temporary partial disability benefits to which he is entitled. Elliott v. El Paso County, 860 P.2d 1365 (Colo. 1993).

Workers' compensation claimant bears the burden of establishing the reasonableness of depreciation deductions included in calculating temporary partial disability benefits because the claimant bears the burden of showing the statutory entitlement to compensation by a preponderance of the evidence. Elliott v. El Paso County, 860 P.2d 1365 (Colo. 1993).

Under this statute, disability is measured in terms of diminished earning capacity and not the ability or inability of claimant to work a given number of hours. Ski Depot Rentals, Inc. v. Lynch, 714 P.2d 516 (Colo. App. 1985).

The term "earning capacity" means the loss of the ability to earn, not simply lost wages. Accordingly, while in some instances loss of earning capacity can be computed simply by subtracting post-injury earnings from the average weekly wage at the time of the injury, in other instances a comparative wage approach will not accurately reflect the impairment of earning capacity attributable to the injury. Hendricks v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 809 P.2d 1076 (Colo. App. 1990).

Where the claimant had received a wage increase after the accident, but was unable to work the same number of hours as prior to the accident, the ALJ reasonably calculated claimant's diminished earning capacity by considering the percentage decrease in hours worked. Univ. Park Holiday Inn v. Brien, 868 P.2d 1164 (Colo. App. 1994).

If a simple calculation between pre-injury and post-injury wages would distort the loss of earning capacity attributable to the injury, then the claimant's post-injury wages must reflect the wage level in effect at the time of injury. Hendricks v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 809 P.2d 1076 (Colo. App. 1990).

An injured employee was entitled to receive temporary partial disability benefits after attainment of maximum medical improvement and until the employee either commences a vocational rehabilitation program or an administrative order is entered which provides that vocational rehabilitation is not necessary, if the employee was awarded temporary partial disability and ordered to undergo a vocational rehabilitation evaluation. Allee v. Contractors, Inc., 783 P.2d 273 (Colo. 1989).

The date of maximum medical improvement for purposes of ending a claimant's temporary disability is the date upon which the claimant has attained maximum medical recovery from all of the injuries sustained in a particular accident. Maximum medical improvement is not divisible and cannot be parceled out among various components of a multi-faceted industrial injury. Paint Connection v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 240 P.3d 439 (Colo. App. 2010).

Disabling industrial injury suffered prior to July 1, 1987. A worker who has been awarded temporary partial disability benefits and who has been directed to undergo a vocational rehabilitation evaluation is entitled to receive temporary partial disability benefits until the commencement of a vocational rehabilitation program or the entry of an administrative ruling that vocational rehabilitation is not necessary to render the worker fit for a remunerative occupation. Allee v. Contractors, Inc., 783 P.2d 273 (Colo. 1989); Gerber v. CAN-USA Construction, Inc., 783 P.2d 269 (Colo. 1989); Phillips v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 783 P.2d 271 (Colo. 1989); Indus. Claim Appeals Office v. Mid-Continent Res., Inc., 783 P.2d 290 (Colo. 1989); Arndt v. Electronic Metal Prods., Inc., 783 P.2d 290 (Colo. 1989); Northeastern Junior Coll. v. Kenyon, 783 P.2d 853 (Colo. 1989).

(decided prior to 1987 repeal of subsections (4) and (5)).

The term "public", as used in this section, means accessible to or shared by all members of the community. Twilight Jones Lounge v. Showers, 732 P.2d 1230 (Colo. App. 1986).

Disfigurement award for scar on abdominal area was proper as the abdominal area is a part of the body normally exposed to public view. Twilight Jones Lounge v. Showers, 732 P.2d 1230 (Colo. App. 1986).

Temporary partial disability benefits can be denied only if one of the statutory conditions is satisfied if the injury contributed in part to the wage loss. Champion Auto Body v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 950 P.2d 671 (Colo. App. 1997).

Applied in Sterling Colo. Beef v. Baca, 699 P.2d 1347 (Colo. App. 1985).

8-42-107. Permanent partial disability benefits - schedule - medical impairment benefits - how determined. (1) Benefits available. (a) When an injury results in permanent medical impairment, and the employee has an injury or injuries enumerated in the schedule set forth in subsection (2) of this section, the employee shall be limited to medical impairment benefits as specified in subsection (2) of this section.

(3) Temporary disability terminates as to injuries coming under any provision of this section upon the occurrence of any of the events enumerated in section 8-42-105 (3).

(4) For the purpose of this schedule, permanent and complete paralysis of any member as the proximate result of accidental injury shall be deemed equivalent to the loss thereof.

(5) If amputation is made between any two joints mentioned in this schedule, except amputation between the knee and the hip joint, the resulting loss shall be estimated as if the amputation had been made at the joint nearest thereto. If any portion of the bone of the distal joint of any finger, thumb, or toe is amputated, the amount paid therefor shall be the amount allowed for amputation at said distal joint.

(6) (a) The amounts specified in subsections (1) to (5) of this section shall be at the compensation rate of one hundred seventy-six dollars per week.

(b) On July 1, 2000, and on each succeeding July 1 thereafter, the compensation rate established in this subsection (6) shall be modified for claims arising on and after such date by the same percentage increase or decrease as the state average weekly wage as determined by the director when the director establishes the state average weekly wage pursuant to section 8-47-106.

(7) (a) When an injured employee sustains two or more injuries coming under this schedule, the disabilities specified in subsections (1) to (5) of this section shall be added, and the injured employee shall receive the sum total thereof; except that, where the injury results in the loss or partial loss of use of the index finger and thumb of the same hand or of more than two digits of any one hand or foot, the disability, in the discretion of the director, may be compensated on the basis of the partial loss of use of said hand or foot, measured respectively from the wrist or ankle.

(b) (I) The general assembly finds, determines, and declares that the rating organization that studied the impact of the changes in Senate Bill 91-218, enacted at the first regular session of the fifty-eighth general assembly, assumed that scheduled injuries would remain on the schedule and nonscheduled injuries would be compensated as medical impairment benefits. Therefore, the general assembly finds, determines, and declares that the purpose of changing the provisions of subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (b), as amended by House Bill 99-1157, enacted at the first regular session of the sixty-second general assembly, is to clarify that scheduled injuries shall be compensated as provided on the schedule and nonscheduled injuries shall be compensated as medical impairment benefits, and that, when an injured worker sustains both scheduled and nonscheduled injuries, the losses shall be compensated on the schedule for scheduled injuries and the nonscheduled injuries shall be compensated as medical impairment benefits. The general assembly further determines and declares that mental or emotional stress shall be compensated pursuant to section 8-41-301 (2) and shall not be combined with a scheduled or a nonscheduled injury.

(II) Except as provided in subsection (8) of this section, where an injury causes the loss of, loss of use of, or partial loss of use of any member specified in the foregoing schedule, the amount of permanent partial disability shall be the proportionate share of the amount stated in the above schedule for the total loss of a member, and such amount shall be in addition to compensation for temporary disability. Where an injury causes a loss set forth in the schedule in subsection (2) of this section and a loss set forth for medical impairment benefits in subsection (8) of this section, the loss set forth in the schedule found in said subsection (2) shall be compensated solely on the basis of such schedule and the loss set forth in said subsection (8) shall be compensated solely on the basis for such medical impairment benefits specified in said subsection (8).

(III) Mental or emotional stress shall be compensated pursuant to section 8-41-301 (2) and shall not be combined with a scheduled or a nonscheduled injury, except for the purposes of calculating a claimant's impairment rating to determine the applicable cap for benefits pursuant to section 8-42-107.5.

(8) Medical impairment benefits - determination of MMI for scheduled and nonscheduled injuries. (a) When an injury results in permanent medical impairment not set forth in the schedule in subsection (2) of this section, the employee shall be limited to medical impairment benefits calculated as provided in this subsection (8). The procedures for determination of maximum medical improvement set forth in paragraph (b) of this subsection (8) shall be available in cases of injuries set forth in the schedule in subsection (2) of this section and also in cases of injuries that are not set forth in said schedule.

(b) (I) An authorized treating physician shall make a determination as to when the injured employee reaches maximum medical improvement as defined in section 8-40-201 (11.5).

(II) If either party disputes a determination by an authorized treating physician on the question of whether the injured worker has or has not reached maximum medical improvement, an independent medical examiner may be selected in accordance with section 8-42-107.2; except that, if an authorized treating physician has not determined that the employee has reached maximum medical improvement, the employer or insurer may only request the selection of an independent medical examiner if all of the following conditions are met:

(A) At least eighteen months have passed since the date of injury;

(B) A party has requested in writing that an authorized treating physician determine whether the employee has reached maximum medical improvement;

(C) Such authorized treating physician has not determined that the employee has reached maximum medical improvement; and

(D) A physician other than such authorized treating physician has determined that the employee has reached maximum medical improvement.

(III) The finding of an independent medical examiner in a dispute arising under subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (b) shall be overcome only by clear and convincing evidence. A hearing on this matter shall not take place until the finding of the independent medical examiner has been filed with the division.

(b.5) When an authorized treating physician providing primary care who is not accredited under the level II accreditation program pursuant to section 8-42-101 (3.5) makes a determination that an employee has reached maximum medical improvement, the following procedures shall apply:

(I) (A) If the employee is not a state resident upon reaching maximum medical improvement, such physician shall, within twenty days after the determination of maximum medical improvement, determine whether the employee has sustained any permanent impairment. If the employee has sustained any permanent impairment, such physician shall conduct such tests as are required by the revised third edition of the "American Medical Association Guides to the Evaluation of Permanent Impairment" to determine such employee's medical impairment rating and shall transmit to the self-insured employer or insurer all test results and all relevant medical information.

(B) However, if the employee chooses not to have the authorized treating physician perform such tests, or if the information is not transmitted in a timely manner, the self-insured employer or insurer shall arrange and pay for the employee to return to Colorado for examination, testing, and rating, at the expense of the self-insured employer or insurer. If the employee refuses to return to Colorado for examination, no permanent disability benefits shall be awarded.

(C) The self-insured employer or insurer shall, within twenty days after receipt of the medical information described in sub-subparagraph (A) of this subparagraph (I), appoint a level II accredited physician to determine the employee's medical impairment rating. If the employee was treated by an authorized level II accredited physician in Colorado for the same injury for which a medical impairment rating is being sought, the self-insured employer or insurer shall request such physician to determine the claimant's medical impairment rating. At the same time as such rating is transmitted to the self-insured employer or insurer, the level II physician shall transmit a copy of the same to the authorized treating physician and the employee.

(D) If the employee, insurer, or self-insured employer disputes a medical impairment rating, including a finding that there is no medical impairment, made pursuant to subsubparagraph (A) of this subparagraph (I), the parties to the dispute may select an independent medical examiner in accordance with section 8-42-107.2 to review the rating. The cost of such independent medical examination shall be borne by the requesting party. The finding of such independent medical examiner shall be overcome only by clear and convincing evidence. Any review by an independent medical examiner shall be based on the employee's written medical records only, without further examination, unless a party to the dispute requests that such review include a physical examination by the independent medical examiner. Except when the provisions of section 8-42-107.2 (5) (b) apply, the party requesting a physical examination shall pay all additional costs, including, if applicable, the reasonable cost of returning the employee to Colorado.

(II) If the employee is a state resident, such physician shall, within twenty days after the determination of maximum medical improvement, determine whether the employee has sustained any permanent impairment. If the employee has sustained any permanent impairment, such physician shall refer such employee to a level II accredited physician for a medical impairment rating, which shall be based on the revised third edition of the "American Medical Association Guides to the Evaluation of Permanent Impairment". If the referral is not timely made by the authorized treating physician, the insurer or self-insured employer shall refer the employee to a level II accredited physician within forty days after the determination of maximum medical improvement. If the employee, insurer, or self-insured employer disputes the finding regarding permanent medical impairment, including a finding that there is no permanent medical impairment, the parties to the dispute may select an independent medical examiner in accordance with section 8-42-107.2. The finding of any such independent medical examiner shall be overcome only by clear and convincing evidence.

(c) When the injured employee's date of maximum medical improvement has been determined pursuant to paragraph (b) of this subsection (8), and there is a determination that permanent medical impairment has resulted from the injury, the authorized treating physician shall determine a medical impairment rating as a percentage of the whole person based on the revised third edition of the "American Medical Association Guides to the Evaluation of Permanent Impairment", in effect as of July 1, 1991. Except for a determination by the authorized treating physician providing primary care that no permanent medical impairment has resulted from the injury, any physician who determines a medical impairment rating shall have received accreditation under the level II accreditation program pursuant to section 8-42-101. For purposes of determining levels of medical impairment, the physician shall not render a medical impairment rating based on chronic pain without anatomic or physiologic correlation. Anatomic correlation must be based on objective findings. If either party disputes the authorized treating physician's finding of medical impairment, including a finding that there is no permanent medical impairment, the parties may select an independent medical examiner in accordance with section 8-42-107.2. The finding of such independent medical examiner shall be overcome only by clear and convincing evidence. A hearing on this matter shall not take place until the finding of the independent medical examiner has been filed with the division.

(c.5) When an injury results in the total loss or total loss of use of an arm at the shoulder, a forearm at the elbow, a hand at the wrist, a leg at the hip or so near thereto as to preclude the use of an artificial limb, the loss of a leg at or above the knee where the stump remains sufficient to permit the use of an artificial limb, a foot at the ankle, an eye, or a combination of any such losses, the benefits for such loss shall be determined pursuant to this subsection (8).

(d) Medical impairment benefits shall be determined by multiplying the medical impairment rating determined pursuant to paragraph (c) of this subsection (8) by the age factor determined pursuant to paragraph (e) of this subsection (8) and by four hundred weeks and shall be calculated at the temporary total disability rate specified in section 8-42-105. Up to ten thousand dollars of the total amount of any such award or scheduled award shall be automatically paid in a lump sum less the discount as calculated in section 8-43-406 upon the injured employee's written request to the employer or, if insured, to the employer's insurance carrier. The remaining periodic payments of any such award, after subtracting the total amount of the lump sum requested by the employee without subtracting the discount calculated in section 8-43-406, shall be paid at the temporary total disability rate but not less than one hundred fifty dollars per week and not more than fifty percent of the state average weekly wage, beginning on the date of maximum medical improvement.

(e) The age factor for use in calculating medical impairment benefits pursuant to this subsection (8) is as follows:

(f) In all claims in which an authorized treating physician recommends medical benefits after maximum medical improvement, and there is no contrary medical opinion in the record, the employer shall, in a final admission of liability, admit liability for related reasonable and necessary medical benefits by an authorized treating physician.

Annotator's note. (1) Since provisions in § 8-42-110 relating to the determination of permanent partial disability were moved to this section in 1991, relevant cases construing § 8-51-108, which included the provisions of § 8-42-110 prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, and relevant cases construing § 8-51-104 have been included in the annotations to this section.

(2) Cases included in the annotations to this section which refer to the industrial commission were decided prior to the 1969 amendment which vested the director of the division of labor with the power previously exercised by the industrial commission to determine disability and make awards or were decided prior the enactment of 1986 Senate Bill No. 12 which abolished said commission.

This section does not violate constitutional guarantees of equal protection. Difference in methods of calculating benefits for partial and total injuries is rationally related to the governmental interest in providing benefits efficiently and fairly, notwithstanding that the classification is not perfect and that inequality may result in individual cases. Duran v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 883 P.2d 477 (Colo. 1994); Colo. AFL-CIO v. Donlon, 914 P.2d 396 (Colo. App. 1995).

Application of the schedule of disabilities in this section to minors with scheduled injuries does not deny those minors the equal protection guarantees of the fourteenth amendment and article II, § 25, of the Colorado Constitution. Torres v. Canam Indus., Inc., 942 P.2d 1384 (Colo. App. 1997).

This section not void for vagueness and does not operate as a deprivation of due process. The fact that there may be many examples of "loss of use" of a member does not equate to unconstitutional vagueness. The statute must necessarily be phrased in general terms in order to ensure applicability to varied circumstances. Fundamental fairness does not require a statute to enumerate examples or criteria in every instance. "Loss of use" is sufficiently precise to permit persons of common intelligence to understand its meaning. Walker v. Jim Fuoco Motor Co., 942 P.2d 1390 (Colo. App. 1997).

This section is clear, definite and mandatory. Cresson Consol. Gold Mining & Milling Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 90 Colo. 353, 9 P.2d 295 (1932); Hawkeye-Security Ins. Co. v. Tupper, 152 Colo. 12, 380 P.2d 31 (1963).

And a liberal construction does not clothe the industrial commission or a court with power to ignore its mandatory provisions. Thompson Stores Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 85 Colo. 576, 277 P. 789 (1929); Colo. Fuel & Iron Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 88 Colo. 573, 298 P. 955 (1931); Cresson Consol. Gold Mining & Milling Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 90 Colo. 353, 9 P.2d 295 (1932); Hawkeye-Security Ins. Co. v. Tupper, 152 Colo. 12, 380 P.2d 31 (1963).

This section not retroactive. Provisions of 1991 repeal and reenactment of workers' compensation statutes, including this section, apply only in cases where the injuries occurred on or after July 1, 1991. Golden Animal Hosp. v. Horton, 897 P.2d 833 (Colo. 1995).

Claims for injuries sustained prior to July 1, 1991, are subject to the former reemployment statute where applicable. The plain language of former § 8-42-110 required that the benefits of a claimant who is reemployed by an employer be based on the degree of medical impairment rather than an ALJ's determination of the claimant's industrial disability even though a higher award is the result of such calculation. Turner v. City & County of Denver, 867 P.2d 197 (Colo. App. 1993) (decided under former § 8-42-110).

General assembly may deem injury compensable per se. The provisions of the statutory scheme reflect the general assembly's conclusion that the scheduled injuries are of a kind which is so likely to result in loss of earning capacity that proof of such loss is unnecessary. Matthews v. Indus. Comm'n, 627 P.2d 1123 (Colo. App. 1980).

When an employee is involved in a work-related accident that results in both a scheduled injury and a nonscheduled injury, the scheduled injury must be converted to a whole person impairment rating and combined with the nonscheduled injury's whole person impairment rating in calculating permanent disability benefits. Mountain City Meat Co. v. Oqueda, 919 P.2d 246 (Colo. 1996); Human Res. Co. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 984 P.2d 1194 (Colo. App. 1999).

An injury must be ratable under the AMA Guides before it is compensable under subsection (8). Therefore, a functional impairment that rates at zero percent under the AMA Guides is not a compensable injury. Morris v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 942 P.2d 1343 (Colo. App. 1997).

When a claimant sustains both a scheduled and a nonscheduled injury from the same industrial accident, and the two are separately ratable impairments, subsection (7)(b)(II) precludes conversion of the scheduled disability rating to a whole person impairment rating. Warthen v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 100 P.3d 581 (Colo. App. 2004).

The cumulative trauma disorder rating scheme set forth in department of labor & employment rule XIX(G)(2), 7 Code Colo. Regs. 1101-3, which includes a provision directing the rating physician to convert each upper extremity impairment to a whole person rating when the impairment is bilateral, is applicable only where the claimant has suffered a functional impairment not found on the schedule of disabilities in subsection (2) of this section. To read rule XIX(G)(2) as requiring scheduled injuries related to cumulative trauma disorder to be rated as a whole person impairment in all cases would make it inconsistent with subsection (1)(a), and such inconsistency would render the regulation void. Kolar v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 122 P.3d 1075 (Colo. App. 2005).

The compensation provided in this section is payable irrespective of one's ability to work and irrespective of his ability to earn. Great Am. Indem. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 114 Colo. 91, 162 P.2d 413 (1945); Hawkeye-Security Ins. Co. v. Tupper, 152 Colo. 12, 380 P.2d 31 (1963).

This section contains a schedule of specific injuries to which attach specific awards of compensation, and any award of compensation as to an injury included in the schedule is limited and determined thereby. Hawkeye-Security Ins. Co. v. Tupper, 152 Colo. 12, 380 P.2d 31 (1963).

And for a specific injury relating solely to the injured member claimant cannot have compensation for disability, either total or partial. Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 89 Colo. 475, 3 P.2d 1079 (1931); Hawkeye-Security Ins. Co. v. Tupper, 152 Colo. 12, 380 P.2d 31 (1963).

The term "injury" refers to the manifestation in a part or parts of the body which have been impaired or disabled as a result of the industrial accident. Strauch v. PSL Swedish Healthcare Sys., 917 P.2d 366 (Colo. App. 1996).

Whether claimant has suffered a functional impairment that is listed in the schedule of disabilities is a factual question to be resolved by the administrative law judge. Strauch v. PSL Swedish Healthcare Sys., 917 P.2d 366 (Colo. App. 1996); Delaney v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 30 P.3d 691 (Colo. App. 2000); Kolar v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 122 P.3d 1075 (Colo. App. 2005).

It is the situs of the functional impairment, not the situs of the initial harm, that is the relevant inquiry. Strauch v. PSL Swedish Healthcare Sys., 917 P.2d 366 (Colo. App. 1996); Langton v. Rocky Mountain Health Care, 937 P.2d 883 (Colo. App. 1996); Kolar v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 122 P.3d 1075 (Colo. App. 2005).

Therefore, it was not improper for the panel to base an award that included disability to the shoulder on the proportionate loss to the use of the arm when the functional impairment occurred only in the arm. Strauch v. PSL Swedish Healthcare Sys., 917 P.2d 366 (Colo. App. 1996).

This section grants broad discretion to elect between scheduled or working unit award. Lerner v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 865 P.2d 915 (Colo. App. 1993).

Therefore, the method of determining disability provided by § 8-51-108 cannot be used when the injury is one appearing in the schedule set forth in this section, since by its specific terms such injuries are excluded. Cresson Consol. Gold Mining & Milling Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 90 Colo. 353, 9 P.2d 295 (1932); Hawkeye-Security Ins. Co. v. Tupper, 152 Colo. 12, 380 P.2d 31 (1963).

Thus, to obtain compensation in addition to that scheduled for an injured member, claimant must show that some other part of his body is affected. Hawkeye-Security Ins. Co. v. Tupper, 152 Colo. 12, 380 P.2d 31 (1963).

Neither § 8-42-101 (3.7) nor the AMA Guides can be read as superseding or overriding the express legislative directive in subsection (1) regarding how benefits are to be calculated for employees who have sustained only scheduled injuries. Kolar v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 122 P.3d 1075 (Colo. App. 2005).

"Disability", as used in this section, means disability to work. Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 70 Colo. 228, 199 P. 482 (1921).

The term "disability" is broader and more inclusive than the term "medical impairment" as used in subsection (3); a person can have a medical impairment but still not have a disability that adversely affects earning capacity. Boice v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 800 P.2d 1339 (Colo. App. 1990).

Medical impairment benefits are designed to compensate for lost earning capacity. Salazar v. Hi-Land Potato Co., 917 P.2d 326 (Colo. App. 1996).

Construction of this section and § 8-51-108. Where there is no evidence upon which an award for permanent partial disability may be made under § 8-51-108, an award may be properly entered under this section, where it is supported by findings based upon the evidence. Winteroth v. Indus. Comm'n, 93 Colo. 38, 22 P.2d 865 (1933).

The commission has discretionary power to compensate an injured employee for his disability under either the scheduled loss provisions of this section or under the permanent partial disability provisions of § 8-51-105, but not both. World of Sleep, Inc. v. Davis, 188 Colo. 443, 536 P.2d 34 (1975); Collins v. Indus. Comm'n, 676 P.2d 1270 (Colo. App. 1984).

While there is no direct prohibition in subsection (7) not to consider the factors of this section while awarding under § 8-51-108, the use of the disjunctive indicates a choice, not a fusion, of the sections to be applied. World of Sleep, Inc. v. Davis, 188 Colo. 443, 536 P.2d 34 (1975).

Subsection (7) is not facially invalid for want of guidelines limiting the director's discretion. Martinez v. Indus. Comm'n, 632 P.2d 1044 (Colo. App. 1981).

Subsection (7) is to be limited to cases where the injury results in the loss of use or partial loss of use of another member. Great Am. Indem. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 114 Colo. 91, 162 P.2d 413 (1945); Indus. Comm'n v. General Acci- dent, Fire & Life Assurance Corp., 71 Colo. 115, 204 P. 338 (1922).

Subsection (7) gives the industrial commission the discretion to grant a percentage award under the schedule found in this section or to rate the claimant under the working unit disability provisions of § 8-51-108. Indus. Comm'n v. Seastone, 167 Colo. 571, 448 P.2d 963 (1969); Cosmopolitan W. Hotel v. Henry, 172 Colo. 279, 472 P.2d 134 (1970); Padillo v. F. H. Linneman Constr. Co., 29 Colo. App. 137, 479 P.2d 990 (1971).

But if claimant has completely lost his hand he can be compensated only under the schedule, and no discretion would be vested in the commission under subsections (6) and (7). Indus. Comm'n v. Seastone, 167 Colo. 571, 448 P.2d 963 (1969).

Formula to determine amount of compensation under subsection (7). Amount of compensation to be awarded under subsection (7) is found by applying the percentage of loss of use to the amount of compensation which the general assembly has precisely provided in a schedule set out in this section. World of Sleep, Inc. v. Davis, 188 Colo. 443, 536 P.2d 34 (1975).

If an employee's disability is the result of an occupational disease, he cannot recover compensation therefor under former provisions of the workmen's compensation act. Hallenbeck v. Butler, 101 Colo. 486, 74 P.2d 708 (1937).

Although evidence was conflicting, where expert based finding of permanent partial loss of hearing on valid formula and the process used was not new or novel, such evidence was properly interpreted by the ALJ and award was properly based on the disability award schedule and not on the lower disability ratings proffered by the employer's experts. City of Aurora v. Vaughn, 824 P.2d 825 (Colo. App. 1991).

Only medical impairment considered. Where the commission compensates an injured employee under this section, it may consider only medical impairment and is limited to a disability award based entirely on the comparative compensation formula expressed therein. World of Sleep, Inc. v. Davis, 188 Colo. 443, 536 P.2d 34 (1975); Jones v. Adolph Coors Co., 689 P.2d 681 (Colo. App. 1984).

Under subsection (3), usual wage adjustments do not include expected union job classification upgrades. Therefore, employee's delay in attaining journeyman mechanic status did not defeat the application of this section. Fulton v. Soopers, 823 P.2d 709 (Colo. 1992).

Subsection (3) applies only to an employer who reemploys an injured employee "at the employee's preinjury rate of pay" and extends "the usual wage adjustments" to the employee, which, read as a whole and giving full meaning to the plain language thereof, are limited to the payment arrangements between the injured em- ployee and the employer who is liable for payment of disability benefits because the injury-producing work was performed for that employer. Snyder Oil Co. v. Embree, 862 P.2d 259 (Colo. 1993).

Where hearing officer strictly followed medical opinion in determining the degree of claimant's industrial disability, it was not harmless error for the hearing officer to have excluded counselor's testimony on the degree of industrial disability merely because it embraced an ultimate issue to be decided by the trier of fact. Chambers v. CF & I Steel Corp., 757 P.2d 1171 (Colo. App. 1988).

Continued medical treatment is not inconsistent with award of permanent partial disability. Though worker may reach maximum medical improvement, continued medical treatment may be necessary to prevent deterioration in worker's physical condition. Grover v. Indus. Comm'n, 759 P.2d 705 (Colo. 1988).

A claimant's voluntary retirement does not necessarily preclude a permanent disability, where claimant retired before discovering his disabling injury and where claimant established that his employability had been reduced by the injury. State Comp. Ins. Authority v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 786 P.2d 423 (Colo. App. 1989).

Under subsection (3), reemployment or reinstatement of an employee at his preinjury rate of pay when the usual wage adjustments, such as cost of living adjustments, are extended reduces the benefits that would otherwise be available to a claimant. Therefore, proof of subsection (3) is in the nature of an affirmative defense which limits the employer's liability. Valley Tree Serv. v. Jimenez, 787 P.2d 658 (Colo. App. 1990).

The burden of proof is on the employer to present evidence to satisfy each of the conjunctive requirements of subsection (3). The employer had the burden of presenting evidence to establish the statutory basis of subsection (3) which would limit claimant's award to permanent medical impairment or payment for a scheduled disability since there was no dispute that claimant's injury was work-related and the claimant met his burden of proving that he had suffered a loss in earning capacity by showing that his future efficiency and employability in the competitive labor market was reduced. The fact that proof of claimant's preinjury rate of pay occurred naturally as a result of the evidence presented by claimant to demonstrate the extent of his disability does not serve to shift the burden, which remains on the employer. Valley Tree Serv. v. Jimenez, 787 P.2d 658 (Colo. App. 1990).

Reemployment statute, former § 8-42-110, does not apply if employer does not meet the burden of proving that, after the employee reached MMI and claimed permanent partial disability, the employer actually offered to re-employ employee and offer the usual wage adjustments. Lerner v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 865 P.2d 915 (Colo. App. 1993) (decided under law prior to 1991 repeal).

The provisions of this section concern only permanent partial disability, and are inapplicable in cases within the scope of § 8-51-106 (1)(a) (now § 8-46-101). McGrath v. Indus. Comm'n, 708 P.2d 1382 (Colo. App. 1985).

Applied in Boulder Valley Coal Co. v. Shipka, 94 Colo. 394, 30 P.2d 852 (1934); Consolidated Coal & Coke Co. v. Todoroff, 97 Colo. 125, 47 P.2d 404 (1935); Indus. Comm'n v. Seastone, 167 Colo. 571, 448 P.2d 963 (1969); Cosmopolitan W. Hotel v. Henry, 172 Colo. 279, 472 P.2d 134 (1970); City of Thornton v. Teeter, 37 Colo. App. 427, 548 P.2d 133 (1976); Martinez v. Indus. Comm'n, 632 P.2d 1044 (Colo. App. 1981); Employers Mut. v. Eidson, 646 P.2d 959 (Colo. App. 1982); R & R Well Serv. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 658 P.2d 1389 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Hurd, 682 P.2d 515 (Colo. App. 1984); Kohnen v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 761 P.2d 231 (Colo. App. 1988).

II. DETERMINATION OF DISABILITY.

Meaning of "disability" under this section.

The term "disability" is not restricted to such disability as impairs present earning power at a particular occupation, but embraces any loss of physical function which detracts from the former efficiency of the body or its members in the ordinary pursuits of life. London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 70 Colo. 256, 199 P. 962 (1921); Wiernan v. Tunnell, 108 Colo. 544, 120 P.2d 638 (1941); Simpson & Co. v. Wheeler, 153 Colo. 480, 386 P.2d 976 (1963).

How word "specifically" used. The general assembly used the word "specifically" in this section to limit the exclusion clause to that portion of § 8-51-104 relating to loss of a member, not that portion relating to loss of use. Leyden Lignite Co. v. Buddy, 98 Colo. 452, 56 P.2d 52 (1936).

The extent of a claimant's industrial impairment is not necessarily restricted to medical considerations. Chambers v. CF & I Steel Corp., 757 P.2d 1171 (Colo. App. 1988).

Determination of medical impairment under subsection (1) was not an issue and apportionment based on medical impairment not appropriate. Lindner Chevrolet v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 914 P.2d 496 (Colo. App. 1995).

The extent and degree of permanent disability is determined on the basis of various interdependent factors that affect a claimant's capacity to be gainfully employed. An ALJ's consideration of unavailable substantial vocational rehabilitation due to the Colorado compensation insurance authority's refusal to provide vocational rehabilitation to a claimant beyond 52 weeks was proper in determining the claimant's ability to regain efficiency in the general labor market. Pro. Fire Prot. v. Long, 867 P.2d 175 (Colo. App. 1993).

A division-sponsored independent medical evaluation (DIME) physician's finding concerning a claimant's impairment rating is binding on the parties unless overcome by clear and convincing evidence. Whether the DIME physician's rating has been overcome is a question of fact for determination by the ALJ. Clear and convincing evidence will demonstrate that it is "highly probable" the DIME physician's rating is incorrect, and such evidence must be unmistakable and free from serious or substantial doubt. Am. Comp. Ins. Co. v. McBride, 107 P.3d 973 (Colo. App. 2004).

Physician's "finding" is not limited to the initial report. For purposes of subsection (8)(c), a division-sponsored independent medical evaluation (DIME) physician's "finding" consists not only of the initial report but also any subsequent opinion given by the physician. Andrade v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 121 P.3d 328 (Colo. App. 2005).

It is a question of fact for the administrative law judge (ALJ) to determine whether a party has overcome, by clear and convincing evidence, the opinion of a division-selected independent medical examiner physician as to an impairment rating. The clear and convincing standard in subsection (8)(b) is satisfied by a showing that the truth of a contention is highly probable. The ALJ is the sole arbiter of conflicting medical evidence, and the ALJ's findings are binding on review if supported by substantial evidence and plausible inferences drawn from the record. Postlewait v. Midwest Barricade, 905 P.2d 21 (Colo. App. 1995).

"Clear and convincing" standard did not apply where the independent medical examiner's opinion was not at issue, and employer had raised the separate issue of causation under § 8-41-301 before the IME was performed. Therefore the ALJ did not err in applying a preponderance standard in determining whether claimant had sustained a compensable injury. Faulkner v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 12 P.3d 844 (Colo. App. 2000).

For where accident aggravated preexisting condition, see Kamp v. Disney, 112 Colo. 65, 145 P.2d 877 (1944).

Where medical examinations come so close together as to indicate nothing more than disagreement concerning a present condition, the industrial commission is justified in considering all the reports together, and does not have to consider the testimony given at the latest hearing, "the manifest weight of the evidence", nor is the commission bound to find, as a matter of law, that there was permanent partial disability under this section, since it clearly appeared that the medical testimony was in direct conflict on question of sterility or loss of function of testicle. Robinson v. Indus. Comm'n, 112 Colo. 21, 144 P.2d 979 (1944).

Degree of permanent partial disability is determined according to claimant's actual condition and earning capacity regardless of who paid for claimant's vocational treatment. Martin K. Eby Const. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 710 P.2d 1164 (Colo. App. 1985).

Determination of permanent disability. Permanent disability generally cannot be determined until the authorized physicians treating a claimant for work-related injuries advise that they can do nothing further for the claimant. Evaluation for permanent disability cannot precede the determination that claimant's condition has stabilized. Dziewior v. Michigan Gen. Corp., 672 P.2d 1026 (Colo. App. 1983).

The method of determining disability provided by this section cannot be used when the injury is one appearing in §§ 8-51-104 to 8-51-107 inclusive, because by its specific terms such injuries are excluded. Arkin v. Indus. Comm'n, 145 Colo. 463, 358 P.2d 879 (1961); Hawkeye-Security Ins. Co. v. Tupper, 152 Colo. 12, 380 P.2d 31 (1963).

Scheduled and nonscheduled impairments are treated differently for purposes of determining permanent disability benefits. Specifically, the procedures of subsection (8)(c), which state that the division-sponsored independent medical examination finding as to permanent impairment can be overcome only by clear and convincing evidence and that such finding is a prerequisite to a hearing on permanent impairment, are applicable only to nonscheduled impairments. Delaney v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 30 P.3d 691 (Colo. App. 2000).

Commission's discretion not abused in determining extent of disability. The commission does not abuse its discretion when it determines that the percentage decrease in the claimant's wages is the proper measure of the extent of his disability. Southwest Inv. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 650 P.2d 1355 (Colo. App. 1982).

But where there is no evidence relating claimant's circumstances to a reduction in wage level, the commission may reject the referee's rating and reach its own determination of the percentage of disability. Gilliatt v. Indus. Comm'n, 680 P.2d 1310 (Colo. App. 1983).

Impairment of earning capacity. Under this section the extent or degree of disability is not to be determined solely by the claimant's impaired earning capacity as it relates to the kind of labor in which he was employed when injured. It is obvious that such factor, while pertinent and important, must be considered with all other elements. Byouk v. Indus. Comm'n, 106 Colo. 430, 105 P.2d 1087 (1940).

Impaired earning capacity one of many factors. While impaired earning capacity, as it relates to the kind of work in which a claimant was employed when he became disabled, is a pertinent factor which the commission must consider when evidence relative thereto is submitted, it is but one of many factors to be considered under the mandate of subsection (1)(b). Evans v. Aurora Elevator Co., 631 P.2d 1201 (Colo. App. 1981).

Impaired earning capacity is only one factor to be taken into consideration under subsection (1)(b). Employers Mut. v. Eidson, 646 P.2d 959 (Colo. App. 1982).

Disability, to be compensable, must rest upon the actual impairment of the claimant as a working unit. Indus. Comm'n v. Vigil, 150 Colo. 356, 373 P.2d 308 (1962).

Insurer's refusal to pay claimant's unauthorized medical expenses does not entitle claimant to compensation for higher degree of permanent disability than that which she actually suffered. Pickett v. Colo. State Hosp., 32 Colo. App. 282, 513 P.2d 228 (1973).

Finding sufficient for award. A finding of the industrial commission that claimant's disability amounts to "permanent partial disability equal to ten percent of permanent total disability", is sufficient upon which to base an award. London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 70 Colo. 256, 199 P. 962 (1921).

This section does not require a greater quantum of proof than that required in other matters in issue before the industrial commission. London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Coffeen, 96 Colo. 375, 42 P.2d 998 (1935).

But sets forth the factors to be considered in translating "partial permanent disability" into terms of "general permanent disability". It is clear that rather than laying down a rule as to the quantum of proof of which the claimant must bear the burden, this section intends to set forth the factors that the commission shall consider in translating what may be an obvious or manifest "partial permanent disability" into terms of "general permanent disability". London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Coffeen, 96 Colo. 375, 42 P.2d 998 (1935).

And "the manifest weight of evidence" is merely one of the factors to be considered along with the "general physical condition and mental training, ability, former employment and education of the injured employee". London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Coffeen, 96 Colo. 375, 42 P.2d 998 (1935).

Meaning of "manifest weight of evidence". The actual physical disability or injury that is manifest, apparent, evident to the mind, and clear to the commission after the weighing of the evidence of it, and determining the nature of such actual disability from the preponderance thereof, is the "manifest weight of evidence" to which reference is made in this section. London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Coffeen, 96 Colo. 375, 42 P.2d 998 (1935).

And the degree of disability cannot be measured by physical condition alone, but the injured man's age, his industrial history, his mentality, his education, and the availability of that type of work which he can do must be taken into consideration. Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 151 Colo. 18, 379 P.2d 153 (1962); Simpson & Co. v. Wheeler, 153 Colo. 480, 386 P.2d 976 (1963); Steel Placers, Inc. v. Reese, 169 Colo. 360, 455 P.2d 874 (1969).

Issue of degree of permanent disability is to be decided according to actual facts and is not to be influenced by who did or who did not pay for claimant's medical treatment. Pickett v. Colo. State Hosp., 32 Colo. App. 282, 513 P.2d 228 (1973).

Estimates relating to anatomical loss of organs may be relevant to the referee's determination of a permanent disability award. In certain circumstances, these estimates may function as guidelines in setting a reasonable percentage figure for permanent disability. Dravo Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 40 Colo. App. 57, 569 P.2d 345 (1977).

Determination of life expectancy. After the industrial commission has determined the percentage of general permanent disability in a workmen's compensation case, it is then authorized to determine from a "recognized expectancy table" the life expectancy of the claimant. Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 148 Colo. 557, 367 P.2d 597 (1961).

Life expectancy table must be used in form it appears at time of use. And where no other evidence relating to expectancy has been presented and where the general assembly itself has designated the "recognized" table, then that table must be used in the form in which it appears at the time of its use. Indus. Comm'n v. Big Six Coal Co., 72 Colo. 377, 211 P. 361 (1922); Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 148 Colo. 557, 367 P.2d 597 (1961).

And the commission may without formal introduction by either party make use of the expectancy table or of other "recognized expectancy tables" in a workmen's compensation case. Indus. Comm'n v. Big Six Coal Co., 72 Colo. 377, 211 P. 361 (1922); Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 148 Colo. 557, 367 P.2d 597 (1961).

For the presumption exists that in making an award the commission considers and gives due weight to all of the factors therein enumerated. Byouk v. Indus. Comm'n, 106 Colo. 430, 105 P.2d 1087 (1940); Nat'l Fuel Co. v. Arnold, 121 Colo. 220, 214 P.2d 784 (1950); Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 151 Colo. 18, 379 P.2d 153 (1962); Holmstrom v. Pub. Serv. Co., 169 Colo. 439, 458 P.2d 77 (1969).

A presumption exists that the referee considered and gave due weight to all factors enumerated in this section in making an award. Dravo

Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 40 Colo. App. 57, 569 P.2d 345 (1977).

Aid life expectancy is a proper element for consideration. Inasmuch as this section provides a maximum amount which a claimant may receive for permanent partial disability, his life expectancy is at least a proper element for consideration to assist in determining whether he is entitled to the full maximum allowance or a lesser sum. Kamp v. Disney, 112 Colo. 65, 145 P.2d 877 (1944).

Neurotic mental disability is as real as any other disability and, in the absence of evidence of malingering, is as much a personal injury. Casa Bonita Restaurant v. Indus. Comm'n, 624 P.2d 1340 (Colo. App. 1981).

Burden of proof is upon claimant to establish his right to benefits. Matthews v. Indus. Comm'n, 627 P.2d 1123 (Colo. App. 1980).

Evidence of degree of functional disability is admissible as relating to the "general physical condition" of the injured employee. Byouk v. Indus. Comm'n, 106 Colo. 430, 105 P.2d 1087 (1940).

Commission entitled to look to claimant's mental ability. The industrial commission had the right to look beyond claimant's physical impairments to her mental ability, including mental impairment, in determining the issue of permanent total disability. Casa Bonita Restaurant v. Indus. Comm'n, 624 P.2d 1340 (Colo. App. 1981).

The industrial commission is vested with the widest possible discretion, with the exercise of which the courts will not interfere, in determining the extent or degree of disability. Byouk v. Indus. Comm'n, 106 Colo. 430, 105 P.2d 1087 (1940); Kamp v. Disney, 112 Colo. 65, 145 P.2d 877 (1944); Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 151 Colo. 18, 379 P.2d 153 (1962); Tillman v. Capitol Hill Transf. & Storage Co., 165 Colo. 514, 440 P.2d 152 (1968); New Jersey Zinc Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 165 Colo. 482, 440 P.2d 284 (1968).

Commission's determination consistent with evidence may not be disturbed on appeal. Where the commission's determination that a claimant has failed to meet his burden is consistent with the evidence of record, that determination may not be disturbed on appeal. Matthews v. Indus. Comm'n, 627 P.2d 1123 (Colo. App. 1980).

Commission is vested with widest possible discretion in determining the extent of an injured worker's disability. Evans v. Aurora Elevator Co., 631 P.2d 1201 (Colo. App. 1981); Gilliatt v. Indus. Comm'n, 680 P.2d 1310 (Colo. App. 1983); City & County of Denver v. Indus. Comm'n, 682 P.2d 513 (Colo. App. 1984).

Evidence not sufficient to sustain determination that claimant sustained a one-percent permanent partial disability. Puffer Mercan- tile Co. v. Arellano, 190 Colo. 138, 546 P.2d 481 (1975).

Award not inconsistent with ineligibility for vocational rehabilitation benefits. The commission's finding that a claimant is not eligible for vocational rehabilitation benefits is not inconsistent with its award for permanent partial disability benefits. Southwest Inv. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 650 P.2d 1355 (Colo. App. 1982).

Hearing on admission of liability is required only when requested by the claimant. Failure to request a hearing to contest an admission is a waiver of the claimant's right to have statutory factors and pre-injury and post-injury factors considered. In re Brunetti v. Indus. Comm'n, 670 P.2d 1246 (Colo. App. 1983).

Timely invocation of former subsection (3)(a). Where an employer continues to employ the injured employee and indicates its intent to elect the five percent rule if unsuccessful in contesting an award, the employer has timely invoked the provisions of subsection (3)(a)(now repealed). Arellano v. Dir., Div. of Labor, 42 Colo. App. 149, 590 P.2d 987 (1979).

III. LOSS OF FINGERS OR LIMBS.

Determination of disability from loss of fingers. Where an employee sustained a loss of his right thumb, index and middle fingers and a partial loss of use of the hand, under subsection (7), the industrial commission has the power to fix the disability on the basis of a partial loss of the use of the hand, under subsection (7), the industrial commission has the power to fix the disability on the basis of a partial loss of the use of the hand, rather than on the loss of the fingers. Indus. Comm'n v. Gen. Accident, Fire & Life Assurance Corp., 71 Colo. 115, 204 P. 338 (1922).

But double compensation is not allowed. The industrial commission may not allow for loss of fingers and add compensation for the loss or partial loss of use of the hand. Indus. Comm'n v. Gen. Accident, Fire & Life Assurance Corp., 71 Colo. 115, 204 P. 338 (1922).

Compensation for an amputation is limited to the specific amount provided in the statutory schedules for such permanent disability. Martinez v. Indus. Comm'n, 32 Colo. App. 270, 511 P.2d 921 (1973).

And employee who suffers amputation cannot receive additional compensation for disability measured as a working unit. Martinez v. Indus. Comm'n, 32 Colo. App. 270, 511 P.2d 921 (1973).

Employee not limited to recovery for loss of use of hands. An employee who was afflicted with deep and extensive adhesions due to burns, and whose arms were bound to his sides, is not limited to recovery for loss of the use of his hands under this section. Rio Grande Motor Way v. De Merschman, 100 Colo. 421, 68 P.2d 446 (1937).

Section differentiates between loss of leg at hip and loss at or above knee. This section, which prescribes the measure of damages for loss of, or loss of use of, a bodily member, differentiates between the loss of a leg at the hip joint or so near thereto as to preclude the use of a prosthesis and loss of a leg at or above the knee which remains sufficient to permit the use of a prosthesis. Horizon Land Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 34 Colo. App. 178, 524 P.2d 638 (1974).

Subsection (4) has no reference to the specifications for loss of an arm. Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 78 Colo. 501, 242 P. 988 (1926).

Award for loss of leg may be amended where artificial limb is later used. Lindsay v. Indus. Comm'n, 77 Colo. 424, 236 P. 1005 (1925).

Claimant award of permanent partial disability benefits based upon a scheduled impairment under this section rather than a whole person impairment was appropriate. The ALJ applied the proper legal standard in determining the claimant's impairment was within the scheduled impairment category for "the loss of an arm at the shoulder". The treating physicians found no impairment beyond the shoulder, and the injury principally affects claimant's arm movements. Walker v. Jim Fuoco Motor Co., 942 P.2d 1390 (Colo. App. 1997).

Applied in Downing v. Gen. Iron Works Co., 120 Colo. 104, 207 P.2d 525 (1949).

IV. LOSS OF SIGHT.

Under subsection (7) the question is one of percent of disability, not of blindness. In case of disability under the schedule in this section, the ratio of the award to the maximum should be the ratio of the proved disability to total disability. Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 70 Colo. 228, 199 P. 482 (1921).

Subsection (7) specifically authorizes an award for partial permanent disability caused by permanent impairment of vision and provides an identical method of computing the amount thereof irrespective of whether the employee before the accident had the sight of one or both eyes. For example, if an employee with perfect vision in both eyes loses 50% of the sight of one and suffers 50% disability as a result thereof, he is entitled to compensation for 50% of 104 or 52 weeks. If he becomes blind in one eye and later suffers 50% partial permanent impairment of vision of the remaining one, he is entitled to the same amount of compensation as in the first instance, namely, 50% of 104 or 52 weeks. Colo. Fuel & Iron Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 88 Colo. 573, 298 P. 955 (1931).

And this section applies if there is anything short of total loss of vision. Platt-Rogers v. Indus. Comm'n, 101 Colo. 458, 74 P.2d 673 (1937).

Thus, only when compensation for permanent partial disability is awarded is this section applicable; and only if there is no loss of vision in a remaining eye may this section be applied when compensation is sought for an enucleated eye. Jewell Collieries Corp. v. Kenda, 110 Colo. 394, 134 P.2d 206 (1943).

An employee who suffers enucleation of a sightless eye, is entitled to permanent disability compensation only for the facial disfigurement caused thereby. London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 76 Colo. 155, 230 P. 598 (1924).

Enucleation of eye in which vision was impaired. Where vision in workman's eye was impaired prior to accident necessitating enucleation the industrial commission could not, upon the theory that the enucleated eye was "industrially blind" prior to the accident, deduct 104 weeks allowed for "total blindness of one eye" from the allowance for "the loss of an eye by enucleation" of 139 weeks, and award to claimant the difference, namely, 35 weeks, "for and on account of the enucleation of the left eye". To translate the phrase "total blindness" into "industrial blindness" would be the usurpation of legislative functions. Downs v. Indus. Comm'n, 109 Colo. 12, 121 P.2d 489 (1942).

Award for total blindness is correct where the vision remaining is of no value for working. The industrial commission awarded employee full compensation under this section for total blindness of the right eye. It is agreed that he lost but ninety percent of the eye's sight and retained ten percent. The commission made a finding of "almost complete loss of vision" in the injured eye, and "That the amount of vision now remaining is of no value from a working standpoint". Under such finding the award was right. Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 70 Colo. 228, 199 P. 482 (1921); Indus. Comm'n v. Johnson, 64 Colo. 461, 172 P. 422 (1918).

Despite small percentage of remaining vision, director may find there is loss of vision. The fact that an employee may have five, eight or even ten percent of vision remaining in an injured eye, does not preclude a finding by the industrial commission of total loss of vision in that eye, the amount of vision remaining being of no value from a working standpoint. Platt-Rogers v. Indus. Comm'n, 101 Colo. 458, 74 P.2d 673 (1937).

The effect of glasses in correcting vision should not be considered in connection with the awarding of the statutory allowance for blindness of an eye. Great Am. Indem. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 114 Colo. 91, 162 P.2d 413 (1945).

Industrial claim appeals panel did not err in its conclusion that injury be compensated as a scheduled injury under this section by refusing to treat "loss of visual acuity" differently from "blindness" for purposes of a scheduled injury. McKinley v. Bronco Billy's, 903 P.2d 1239 (Colo. App. 1995).

Cosmetic deformity of the face impairs an individual's function and may be calculated as a non-scheduled injury and added to the individual's scheduled whole person impairment rating under this section notwithstanding the additional remedy for cosmetic disfigurement available under § 8-42-108. Accordingly, cosmetic deformity of the eye as it affects the functioning of the face is rated under section 9.2 of the AMA Guides and benefits are calculated for a whole person impairment under this section. Gonzales v. Advanced Component Sys., 949 P.2d 569 (Colo. 1997).

A mental impairment rating due to mental or emotional stress cannot be combined with the physical impairment rating for purposes of exceeding the benefit cap applicable to an impairment rating of 25 percent or less pursuant to § 8-42-107.5. Dillard v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 121 P.3d 301 (Colo. App. 2005), aff'd, 134 P.3d 407 (Colo. 2006).

Applied in Rogers, Inc. v. Fishman, 154 Colo. 122, 388 P.2d 755 (1964).

V. DETERMINATION OF COMPENSATION.

This statute provides compensation for the actual degree of permanent partial disability. Pickett v. Colo. State Hosp., 32 Colo. App. 282, 513 P.2d 228 (1973).

Basis of concept of compensable general permanent disability. The concept of a compensable general permanent disability is not based upon one's present functional disability, but rather on the injury's impact upon one's earning capacity, present or future. Dravo Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 40 Colo. App. 57, 569 P.2d 345 (1977).

An employee shall be deemed to be permanently partially disabled from the time he is so declared by the industrial commission, and his age at that time is the criterion which furnishes the basis upon which his life expectancy should be computed. Wiernan v. Tunnell, 108 Colo. 544, 120 P.2d 638 (1941).

And time at which disability is to be determined is within discretion of industrial commission. Since there is no provision in the workmen's compensation act, which specifies the time at which disability is to be determined; this problem is left to the sound discretion of the commission. Wilson v. Sinclair, 109 Colo. 592, 128 P.2d 996 (1942).

In determining compensation for permanently disabled minors, the compensation scheme specified in § 8-42-102 takes precedence over the general compensation scheme for adults under this section. Horton v. Golden Animal Hosp., 879 P.2d 459 (Colo. App. 1994).

The maximum rate payable for medical impairment benefits for a permanently disabled minor is the maximum rate of temporary total disability allowed by § 8-42-105. Arkansas Valley Seeds, Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 972 P.2d 695 (Colo. App. 1998).

Conclusion that an injured minor remains entitled to the benefit of the higher end "age factor" listed in this section as well as computation of benefits at the maximum temporary disability rate, is not inconsistent with the legislative intent of this section or § 8-42-102. Arkansas Valley Seeds, Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 972 P.2d 695 (Colo. App. 1998).

Minor with scheduled disability is not entitled to aggregate amount of benefits allowed by statute as provided by § 8-42-102 (4). Since subsection (6) provides for a fixed rate of compensation for all scheduled disabilities, there is no disparity between the benefits paid to minors and to adults. Williams v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 932 P.2d 869 (Colo. App. 1997).

This section establishes a standard rate for computation of benefits, without reference to the average weekly wage and its inherent disparity of treatment between adults and minors. De Giacomo v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 817 P.2d 552 (Colo. App. 1991).

For purposes of the benefits provided employers by subsection (3), the relevant rate of pay is the amount paid by the reemploying employer to the injured employee prior to the injury, without regard to income from other self-employment previously enjoyed by the employee prior to the injury. Snyder Oil Co. v. Embree, 862 P.2d 259 (Colo. 1993) (decided under law as it existed prior to the 1991 repeal of this section).

Post-injury earnings one factor to consider in determining a percentage disability figure. Vail Assocs., Inc. v. West, 661 P.2d 1187 (Colo. App. 1982), aff'd, 692 P.2d 1111 (Colo. 1984); Smith v. Indus. Comm'n, 735 P.2d 921 (Colo. App. 1986).

It was not error to consider the amount by which claimant's efforts subsequent to termination of employment increased his rental income where claimant spent a substantial amount of time managing and maintaining rental properties in order to maximize his rental income. Smith v. Indus. Comm'n, 735 P.2d 921 (Colo. App. 1986).

The term "loss of earning capacity" as contemplated by this section means the loss of the ability to earn, not simply lost wages. A workers' actual earnings following an industrial accident or occupational disease are relevant but not presumptive evidence of the workers' earning capacity. Nor is a claimant's loss of earnings due to injury or occupational disease dispositive of the amount of the claimant's entitlement to permanent partial disability benefits. Instead, such matters are merely individual factors to be considered in determining the existence of impaired earning capacity. Hobbs v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 804 P.2d 210 (Colo. App. 1990).

Loss of earning capacity is basis for benefits, however denominated. The purpose of the "medical impairment benefits" under subsection (8) is substantially the same as the purpose of the "permanent partial disability benefits" referenced in § 8-42-103 (1)(c)(I), i.e., to compensate for loss of earning capacity. Ray v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 920 P.2d 868 (Colo. App. 1996).

Benefits under subsection (8) are subject to offset pursuant to § 8-42-103. Ray v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 920 P.2d 868 (Colo. App. 1996).

Subsection (8) requires that payment of medical impairment benefits be based upon the temporary total disability rate that workers compensation claimant would have received if claimant had been temporarily and totally disabled for more than three working days, even if claimant had not lost any wages and had not actually received temporary disability benefits. Broadmoor Ins. Co. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 939 P.2d 460 (Colo. App. 1996).

Simply because this section limits the inquiry in determining disability to measurable medical impairment does not mean that awards made thereunder are unrelated to lost earning capacity. Waymire v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 924 P.2d 1168 (Colo. App. 1996).

Medical impairment benefits awarded under this section are a form of permanent partial disability benefits designed to compensate for lost earning capacity. Consequently, such benefits compensate for the same loss of future earning capacity as permanent total disability benefits. It is therefore improper to award contemporaneous medical impairment and total disability benefits. Waymire v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 924 P.2d 1168 (Colo. App. 1996).

Award for permanent partial disability cannot be made after death of employee. Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 89 Colo. 475, 3 P.2d 1079 (1931).

Actual post-injury earnings do not always reflect worker's true earning capacity subsequent to his injury. Evans v. Aurora Elevator Co., 631 P.2d 1201 (Colo. App. 1981); Employers Mut. v. Eidson, 646 P.2d 959 (Colo. App. 1982); Ampex Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 699 P.2d 980 (Colo. App. 1985).

Award may be appropriate even with greater post-injury earnings. A permanent partial disability award may be appropriate even where post-injury earnings are greater than pre-injury earnings. Employers Mut. v. Eidson, 646 P.2d 959 (Colo. App. 1982); Ampex Corp. v.

Indus. Comm'n, 699 P.2d 980 (Colo. App. 1985).

Where a claimant produces evidence that his disability precludes him from pursuing his chosen occupation and excludes him from potentially available jobs, he is entitled to a disability award, even where he has obtained new employment at a higher salary. Vail Assocs. v. West, 661 P.2d 1187 (Colo. App. 1982), aff'd, 692 P.2d 1111 (Colo. 1984).

Although a rule which treats evidence of a post-injury increase in earnings as giving rise to a rebuttable presumption of earning capacity commensurate with actual earnings has been applied in several jurisdictions, the court declines to adopt it and adheres to the existing rule which allows the commission to consider post-injury earnings as one factor among several in ascertaining permanent partial disability. Vail Assocs., Inc. v. West, 692 P.2d 1111 (Colo. 1984).

Application of percentage as a working unit. Percentage as a working unit is not applied to the amount of compensation paid for the loss of the member, but is applied to the total sum which the workman would receive over his expected lifetime if he were permanently disabled. World of Sleep, Inc. v. Davis, 188 Colo. 443, 536 P.2d 34 (1975).

Reopening case for change in extent of disability. Under the proviso of this section at any time during the period for which compensation for permanent partial disability has been awarded, the industrial commission, upon petition of a party in interest, is required to reopen a case upon showing the disability of such injured employee has undergone a change in extent or degree since the entry of the award. Byouk v. Indus. Comm'n, 106 Colo. 430, 105 P.2d 1087 (1940).

In view of prior cases, the beneficial purposes of the act, and the language of this section and § 8-53-113, the conclusion is inescapable that the general assembly has given the director authority to reopen a case within requisite time limitations regardless of how the case was resolved. Padilla v. Indus. Comm'n, 696 P.2d 273 (Colo. 1985) (decided prior to 1985 amendment to subsection (2)).

Denial of petition to reopen claim for additional award of permanent disability benefits and/or vocational rehabilitation was not abuse of discretion where claimant's condition of being unable to work had not changed since time of original award. Loucks v. Safeway Stores, 757 P.2d 639 (Colo. App. 1988).

Second award for increased disability. This section applies only when there has been a determination of total permanent or permanent partial disability, and when there is a supplemental or second award for increased permanent partial disability, it is to be based upon the employee's age as of the date when the supplemental award is entered. Lefkaras v. Moffat Coal Co., 113 Colo. 416, 158 P.2d 386 (1945).

Normal rate of pay, as used in repealed subsection (3)(a), is determined by the total weekly earnings rather than the hourly rate of pay. Miller v. Halliburton Servs., 689 P.2d 662 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd, 720 P. 2d 571 (Colo. 1986).

VI. MAXIMUM MEDICAL IMPROVEMENT.

Procedures prescribed by subsection (8) do not result in any violation of procedural due process. The general assembly sought to reduce litigation over maximum medical improvement (MMI) and degree of impairment for purposes of workers' compensation claims by providing that, if either party disputes the finding of the treating physician as to MMI or degree of impairment, that party may require an independent medical examination (IME) be performed. If the parties cannot agree as to the physician to perform the IME, the director will select the physician, and that physician's opinion upon the issues involved can then be overcome only by clear and convincing evidence. These provisions are rationally related to the general assembly's goal of decreasing such litigation. Colo. AFL-CIO v. Donlon, 914 P.2d 396 (Colo. App. 1995).

However, due process of law guarantees are violated by subsection (8) when a fee requirement requires an indigent worker to prepay a fee before he can obtain either administrative or judicial review of an adverse decision of the employer-selected treating physician. Whiteside v. Smith, 67 P.3d 1240 (Colo. 2003).

Subsection (8)(b)(II), as amended in 1996, does not constitute retrospective legislation. Subsection (8)(b)(II) establishes procedures for the determination of MMI and the allocation of the burden of proof. Because the statute effects a change that is procedural, it may be applied retroactively. Brownson-Rausin v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 131 P.3d 1172 (Colo. App. 2005).

The term "determination" in subsection (8)(b)(II) refers to a medical determination. Brownson-Rausin v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 131 P.3d 1172 (Colo. App. 2005).

Subsection (8)(c) precludes an administrative law judge from considering causation or altering a treating physician's impairment rating when a statutory IME has not been performed. Egan v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 971 P.2d 664 (Colo. App. 1998).

A claimant's agreement to accept the results of an IME as binding constitutes a waiver of procedural due process rights. Colo. AFL-CIO v. Donlon, 914 P.2d 396 (Colo. App. 1995).

The clear and convincing standard set forth in subsection (8) is satisfied by a showing that the truth of a contention is highly probable. Askew v. Sears Roebuck & Co., 914 P.2d 416 (Colo. App. 1995), rev'd on other grounds, 927 P.2d 1333 (Colo. 1996).

Nothing in this section or in division of labor regulation limits a DIME physician who has provider and advisor contracts with employer's insurance company from performing an independent medical examination absent any direct or substantial relationship with the treating physician. Such a physician may be an "independent" medical examiner within the meaning of subsection (8)(c). Benuishis v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 195 P.3d 1142 (Colo. App. 2008).

Whether DIME physician has a conflict of interest is a question of fact. ALJ's findings regarding whether a DIME physician was laboring under an actual or apparent conflict of interest when performing claimant's independent medical examination will be upheld on appeal if supported by substantial evidence in the record. Benuishis v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 195 P.3d 1142 (Colo. App. 2008).

Date of maximum improvement determined compensable actual disability. Where claimant's permanent partial disability was two percent on the date of maximum improvement, this is the actual disability which she suffered and for which she is entitled to compensation. Pickett v. Colo. State Hosp., 32 Colo. App. 282, 513 P.2d 228 (1973).

This section merely codified the already accepted practice of using "maximum medical improvement", or substantially similar expressions of the same concept, to determine when temporary disability ends and permanent disability begins. Golden Animal Hosp. v. Horton, 897 P.2d 833 (Colo. 1995).

Both MMI and need for further treatment to improve existing condition cannot exist together; claimant is either in need of further treatment to improve his existing conditions, thus making permanent disability award premature, or his condition has stabilized and issue of permanent disability must be determined. Grover v. Indus. Comm'n, 739 P.2d 900 (Colo. App. 1987).

Lump sum payments of PPD benefits less than $10,000 are authorized by subsection (8)(d) and acceptance of a lump sum does not imply acceptance of employer's final admission of liability and does not constitute a settlement or waiver of the claimant's right to challenge the final admission of liability. Leprino Foods Co. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 134 P.3d 475 (Colo. App. 2005).

Panel did not err in concluding that a finding of MMI from the authorized treating physician was a prerequisite to either party seeking another physician's evaluation. Aren Design, Inc. v. Becerra, 897 P.2d 902 (Colo. App. 1995).

Denial of and reimbursement for TTD benefits received after a claimant is deemed to have reached MMI is permitted. An independent medical examiner may be authorized to determine whether an employee has reached MMI. If the examiner finds that an employee has reached MMI, that employee is no longer eligible for TTD benefits, and the cost of any such benefits paid out to the employee after the finding of MMI may then be offset against the employee's permanent partial disability benefits. Brownson-Rausin v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 131 P.3d 1172 (Colo. App. 2005).

An IME is required prior to any hearing disputing the validity of the authorized physician's finding of MMI. Because no IME was performed, to the extent claimant's request to change physicians was for purposes of obtaining treatment to further cure her injury, or to obtain reinstatement of temporary total disability benefits, the ALJ exceeded her jurisdiction and authority in granting the request. Story v. Indus. Claims Appeals Office, 910 P.2d 80 (Colo. App. 1995).

Absent a division-sponsored IME, an ALJ lacks jurisdiction to resolve a dispute concerning the validity of an authorized treating physician's finding of MMI. Town of Ignacio v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 70 P.3d 513 (Colo. App. 2002).

But when the issue is not the finding of MMI itself, a division-sponsored IME is not a prerequisite. A claimant who requested a change of physician based on alleged professional misconduct before being placed at MMI by that same physician was clearly not attempting to indirectly challenge the finding of MMI itself, therefore would not be required to undergo a division-sponsored IME. Ames v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 89 P.3d 477 (Colo. App. 2003).

The general assembly expressly made the procedures used to determine MMI available in cases of scheduled and nonscheduled injuries. Delaney v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 30 P.3d 691 (Colo. App. 2000).

Whether the division-sponsored IME physician correctly applied the AMA Guides and whether the rating itself has been overcome are questions of fact for determination by the ALJ and not questions of law. Wilson v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 81 P.3d 1117 (Colo. App. 2003).

Clear and convincing proof that an employee was not at MMI is not required when the record, including the IME physician's report, supports an ALJ's finding that the report concluded that the employee was not at MMI. Magnetic Eng'g, Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 5 P.3d 385 (Colo. App. 2000).

Where the authorized treating physician issues conflicting opinions concerning MMI, the ALJ may resolve the conflict without requiring the claimant to obtain an IME. Blue Mesa Forest v. Lopez, 928 P.2d 831 (Colo. App. 1996); Mosley v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 78 P.3d 1150 (Colo. App. 2003).

An IME physician's conclusion that a claimant's medical problems were components of claimant's overall impairment constitutes a part of the diagnostic assessment that comprises the IME process. As such, the conclusion must be given presumptive effect and can be overcome only by clear and convincing evidence. Qual-Med, Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 961 P.2d 590 (Colo. App. 1998); Mosley v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 78 P.3d 1150 (Colo. App. 2003); Leprino Foods Co. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 134 P.3d 475 (Colo. App. 2005).

Whether the division-sponsored IME physician's rating has been overcome is a question of fact for determination by the ALJ. Wackenhut Corp. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 17 P.3d 202 (Colo. App. 2000); Mosley v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 78 P.3d 1150 (Colo. App. 2003).

It is not incumbent on the claimant to timely request a follow-up division-sponsored IME to contest the authorized treating physician's second MMI determination if the claimant had previously requested a division-sponsored IME to contest the authorized treating physician's initial determination of MMI. Stefanski v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 128 P.3d 282 (Colo. App. 2005), aff'd on other grounds, 147 P.3d 5 (Colo. 2006).

Once a claimant has successfully challenged a finding of MMI through the division independent medical examination process, that process remains open, such that when the authorized treating physician makes a second finding of MMI, the employer or insurer may not file a final admission of liability to close the case until they return the claimant to the IME for a follow-up examination and determination of MMI. Williams v. Kunau, 147 P.3d 33 (Colo. 2006); Sanco Indus. v. Stefanski, 147 P.3d 5 (Colo. 2006).

Employee's death did not trigger the provisions of subsection (8)(b) regarding MMI as a matter of law. The general assembly logically premised enactment of the IME procedure upon an assumption that the employee is alive to participate therein. Because employee was not at MMI when he died, the industrial claim appeals panel did not err in denying his dependents permanent partial disability benefits and penalties. Dependents of Nunnally v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 943 P.2d 26 (Colo. App. 1996).

VII. TERMINATION OF BENEFITS.

An award for initial permanent partial disability should terminate on the commencement date of a permanent total award. Kehm v. Cont'l Grain, 756 P.2d 381 (Colo. App. 1987).

Increased earnings. An increase in post-injury earnings is not presumptive evidence that claimant has not suffered a permanent impairment to earning capacity, but burden is on claimant to prove that such increase is not a true indication of the absence of impaired earning capacity. Rogers v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 746 P.2d 565 (Colo. App. 1987).

8-42-107.2. Selection of independent medical examiner - procedure - time - disclosures regarding physician relationships with insurers, self-insured employers, or claimants - rules - applicability. (1) This section governs the selection of an independent medical examiner, also referred to in this section as an "IME", to resolve disputes arising under section 8-42-107.

(2) (a) (I) Except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (a), the time for selection of an IME commences as follows, depending on which party initiates the dispute:

(A) For the claimant, the time for selection of an IME commences with the date of mailing of a final admission of liability by the insurer or self-insured employer that includes an impairment rating issued in accordance with section 8-42-107.

(B) For the insurer or self-insured employer, the time for selection of an IME commences with the date on which the disputed finding or determination is mailed or physically delivered to the insurer or self-insured employer.

(II) If, as of the date on which the time for selection of an IME would otherwise commence, a medical condition is not yet ratable because of a provision in the medical treatment guidelines or in the revised third edition of the "American Medical Association Guides to the Evaluation of Permanent Impairment", the time for selection of an IME shall commence on the date on which an impairment rating is mailed or physically delivered.

(b) If any party disputes a finding or determination of the authorized treating physician, such party shall request the selection of an IME. The requesting party shall notify all other parties in writing of the request, on a form prescribed by the division by rule, and shall propose one or more acceptable candidates for the purpose of entering into negotiations for the selection of an IME. Such notice and proposal is effective upon mailing via United States mail, first-class postage paid, addressed to the division and to the last-known address of each of the other parties. Unless such notice and proposal are given within thirty days after the date of mailing of the final admission of liability or the date of mailing or delivery of the disputed finding or determination, as applicable pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (2), the authorized treating physician's findings and determinations shall be binding on all parties and on the division.

(c) If the insurer or self-insured employer requests an IME and the examination is conducted before the insurer or self-insured employer admits liability pursuant to section 8-43-203 (2) (b), the claimant may not request a second independent medical examination on that issue but may appeal the IME's decision, as set forth in section 8-43-203 (2) (b) (II).

(3) (a) Upon receiving the requesting party's notice and proposal pursuant to subsection (2) of this section, the other parties have until the end of the thirtieth day after the date of mailing of such notice and proposal within which to negotiate and select an IME. If the parties agree on an IME on or before such thirtieth day, the requesting party shall promptly notify the IME in writing that he or she has been selected. If, within such time, the parties are unable to agree or the requesting party receives no response to the notice and proposal, the insurer or self-insured employer shall give written notice of such fact to the division within thirty days via United States mail, first-class postage paid. The division shall then, within ten days after receiving such written notice, select three physicians by a revolving selection process established by the division from the list of physicians maintained by the division. The division shall administer the list in such fashion as to ensure that the names of candidates to serve as IME in each pending case remain confidential until the IME is selected. The director of the division shall promulgate rules to implement the process of selecting a panel of three physicians from which the parties may select a physician to conduct a division independent medical examination. The selection of a physician panel shall be based on various factors, including, but not limited to, the designation by rule of the fields of specialization authorized to perform independent medical examinations for conditions listed under each medical treatment guideline and measures to prevent the over-utilization of physicians or specialists. The requesting party shall have the opportunity to strike one of the three physicians from the list, followed by the opposing party who shall then be given the opportunity to strike one physician from the list. The remaining IME physician shall be designated by the division to conduct the IME. If one or neither party strikes a physician from the list, the division shall select the physician to conduct the IME from the remaining physicians on the list.

(b) Upon selection of the IME, the insurance carrier shall provide to the IME and all other parties a complete copy of all medical records in its possession pertaining to the subject injury, postmarked or hand-delivered within fourteen days prior to the independent medical examination. If the insurance carrier or its representative fails to timely submit such medical records, the claimant may request that the division cancel the independent medical examination or the claimant may submit all the medical records he or she has available within ten days prior to the independent medical examination, or as otherwise arranged by the division with the IME. If the claimant submits medical records, the defaulting party may supplement such records pursuant to rules of the division. This paragraph (b) shall not be construed to prohibit an independent medical examination from being rescheduled.

(c) Any supplemental medical records shall be prepared according to the rules of the division and shall be submitted to the IME and all other parties no later than seven days prior to the independent medical examination.

(d) (I) The IME shall neither contact any of the authorized treating physicians or any examining or reviewing physician nor request a claimant to undergo repeat testing when the testing results were valid and the IME has resolved any disparity in testing results.

(II) Subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (d), as enacted by Senate Bill 09-168, enacted in 2009, is declared to be procedural and was intended to and shall apply to all workers' compensation claims, regardless of the date the claim was filed.

(3.5) (a) Prior to making a determination to strike a physician from the list of IME physicians provided by the division in accordance with paragraph (a) of subsection (3) of this section, a party may request and shall be entitled to obtain and review a summary disclosure pertaining to any business, financial, employment, or advisory relationship between a listed physician, or any entity affiliated with the physician, and the insurer, self-insured employer, or claimant who is a party to the claim. The party shall not be required to make its determination to strike a physician from the list until he or she has received and has had a reasonable opportunity to review the summary disclosure.

(b) The director shall adopt rules as necessary to implement this subsection (3.5). At a minimum, the rules shall:

(I) Require physicians to disclose the requested business, financial, employment, or advisory relationship information in a summarized format;

(II) Detail the form and manner in which the summary disclosure is to be provided;

(III) Set parameters regarding the period within which a requesting party is allowed to review the summary disclosure prior to making a determination to strike a physician from the list; and

(IV) Prohibit a physician who fails to disclose the requested summarized information from conducting an independent medical examination until he or she complies with the request.

(4) Within thirty days after the date of the mailing of the IME's report, the insurer or self-insured employer shall either file its admission of liability pursuant to section 8-43-203 or request a hearing before the division contesting one or more of the IME's findings or determinations contained in such report.

(5) (a) Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this subsection (5), the requesting party shall advance the full cost of the independent medical examination to the IME at least ten days before the appointed time for the examination.

(b) A claimant who has established that he or she is indigent shall receive an independent medical examination without having to advance the cost to the independent medical examiner. The director of the division of workers' compensation shall promulgate rules to establish a procedure to determine indigence.

(6) This section was enacted by House Bill 98-1062, as enacted at the second regular session of the sixty-first general assembly, as a remedial statute and is procedural in nature.

The purpose of this section is to improve and simplify remedies already existing for the enforcement of rights and the redress of injuries under the workers' compensation laws of Colorado. This section effected procedures related to the selection of an IME and shall be applicable to all open cases with a date of injury on or after July 1, 1991, for which a division IME has not been requested, pursuant to section 8-42-107.

Once a claimant has successfully challenged a finding of maximum medical improvement (MMI) through the division independent medical examination (DIME) process, that process remains open, such that when the authorized treating physician makes a second finding of MMI, the employer or insurer may not file a final admission of liability to close the case until they return the claimant to the IME for a follow-up examination and determination of MMI. Williams v. Kunau, 147 P.3d 33 (Colo. 2006); Sanco Indus. v. Stefanski, 147 P.3d 5 (Colo. 2006).

An employer is limited to the remedies provided in this section when an injured worker requests an IME pursuant to this section. An employer's contention that its first admission to liability prior to the request for an IME pursuant to this section satisfies the requirement of subsection (4) is in error and does not relieve the employer from responding to the IME report pursuant to subsection (4). City Market, Inc. v. Indus. Claims Appeal Office, 68 P.3d 601 (Colo. App. 2003).

Failure of an employer to respond to an IME report pursuant to subsection (4) subjects an employer to penalties pursuant to § 8-43-304 (1). City Market, Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 68 P.3d 601 (Colo. App. 2003).

An employer is precluded from challenging the IME physician's finding that claimant was not at MMI, including the IME physician's finding regarding the cause of claimant's symptoms because employer failed either to admit or contest liability within 30 days of the IME physician's report. Leprino Foods Co. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 134 P.3d 475 (Colo. App. 2005).

Claimant does not waive right to request an IME by accepting a lump sum payment because claimant's note requesting lump sum payment contained no statement indicating that, by accepting the lump sum payment, she intended to surrender her rights to challenge the employer's final admission of liability. Leprino Foods Co. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 134 P.3d 475 (Colo. App. 2005).

Further, there was no written agreement establishing a waiver, and the claimant in fact challenged the final admission of liability by filing an objection to it, together with a notice and proposal for the IME on the same date she received the lump sum payment. Leprino Foods Co. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 134 P.3d 475 (Colo. App. 2005).

The 30-day period for requesting a DIME does not begin to run for claimants who obtained and objected to a final admission of liability prior to the effective date of subsection (6) until such claimants receive notice of the 1999 amendment from the insurer or employer. Lobato v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 105 P.3d 220 (Colo. App. 2005).

Under the plain language of subsection (6), a claimant is not required to file a notice and proposal to select another division-sponsored IME if he or she has previously requested a division-sponsored IME to contest an authorized treating physician's initial determination of maximum medical improvement. Stefanski v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 128 P.3d 282 (Colo. App. 2005), aff'd on other grounds, 147 P.3d 5 (Colo. 2006).

When an employer requests an independent medical examination but then timely cancels the request pursuant to the department's rules after the treating physician reduced the original impairment rating, the employer's final admission of liability based on the amended impairment rating is effective, and the original impairment rating is no longer at issue. Montoya v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 203 P.3d 620 (Colo. App. 2008).

Employer's failure to initiate the DIME process to challenge the authorized treating physician's findings does not make the physician's opinion that the claimant sustained a work-related injury binding. The statutory scheme grants no authority to the physician to determine causation as it pertains to compensability, therefore, the physician's findings and determinations are inconsequential if causation has not been proved. Eller v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 224 P.3d 397 (Colo. App. 2009).

This section, when read in conjunction with § 8-42-107 (8), makes it clear that the statutes contemplate a challenge through the DIME process only to determinations made by the authorized treating physician concerning MMI and impairment, therefore, this section is not unconstitutionally vague. Eller v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 224 P.3d 397 (Colo. App. 2009).

8-42-107.5. Limits on temporary disability payments and permanent partial disability payments. No claimant whose impairment rating is twenty-five percent or less may receive more than seventy-five thousand dollars from combined temporary disability payments and permanent partial disability payments. No claimant whose impairment rating is greater than twenty-five percent may receive more than one hundred fifty thousand dollars from combined temporary disability payments and permanent partial disability payments. For the purposes of this section, any mental impairment rating shall be combined with the physical impairment rating to establish a claimant's impairment rating for determining the applicable cap. For injuries sustained on and after January 1, 2012, the director shall adjust these limits on the amount of compensation for combined temporary disability payments and permanent partial disability payments on July 1, 2011, and each July 1 thereafter, by the percentage of adjustment made by the director to the state average weekly wage pursuant to section 8-47-106.

ANNOTATION

Given that the general purpose of temporary and permanent benefits is to compensate for a present or future possible wage loss, there is no improper discrimination that results from the placing of a limit upon the total benefits, both temporary and permanent, to be received. Colo. AFL-CIO v. Donlon, 914 P.2d 396 (Colo. App. 1995).

Applicability of this section can only be determined if two conditions are met: (1) The claimant reaches maximum medical improvement, and (2) the claimant's medical impairment rating is established. Donald B. Murphy Contractors v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 916 P.2d 611 (Colo. App. 1995).

Neither this section nor § 8-43-303 addresses the situation of further temporary total disability benefits being awarded after the limit on combined temporary total and permanent partial benefits has been paid. But in view of underlying policies, in this situation the employer should be entitled to offset any permanent partial disability benefits paid against temporary total disability benefits. Donald B. Murphy Contractors v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 916 P.2d 611 (Colo. App. 1995).

General assembly clearly intended to require employers to continue paying benefits' without application of the cap until such time as a claimant reaches MMI. Leprino Foods Co. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 134 P.3d 475 (Colo. App. 2005).

Claimant is not entitled to additional temporary total disability benefits for the period between the date of the first determination of maximum medical improvement and the date the claimant returned to work even though a second independent medical examination physician opined the claimant did not reach maximum medical improvement until a date following the claimant's return to work when both maximum medical improvement ratings were less than 25 percent. The possibility that events may have unfolded differently does not establish a right to an exemption from the $60,000 cap resulting in an overpayment when the final rating was less than 25 percent. Rogan v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 91 P.3d 414 (Colo. App. 2003).

In construing that § 8-41-301 (2)(b) meant that award for medical impairment benefits is limited but that award for temporary disability benefits is not, the court noted that combined amount of temporary disability benefits and permanent partial disability benefits was limited by this section. City of Thornton v. Replogle, 873 P.2d 30 (Colo. App. 1993).

The plain language of this section shows there is no exception, for purposes of calculating the cap, for temporary disability benefits paid on account of vocational rehabilitation. Grogan v. Lutheran Medical Center, Inc., 950 P.2d 690 (Colo. App. 1997).

The mental impairment rating cannot be combined with the physical impairment rat- ing for purposes of exceeding the benefit cap applicable to an impairment rating of 25 percent or less. Dillard v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 121 P.3d 301 (Colo. App. 2005), aff'd, 134 P.3d 407 (Colo. 2006).

8-42-107.6. Premium dividend for employing injured employees. The commissioner of insurance shall include within the premium dividends specified in rules and regulations promulgated pursuant to section 10-4-408 (5), C.R.S., a premium dividend of up to ten percent if an employer reemploys injured employees at their preinjury wages including any wage increases to which such employees would have been entitled had the employee not been injured. The total amount of the premium dividend shall be determined on a pro rata basis, taking into account the total number of employees injured during the period of time the insurance policy was in effect and the total number of injured employees who have sustained permanent partial disability as a result of their injuries and who have been rehired by such employer.

8-42-108. Disfigurement - additional compensation. (1) If an employee is seriously, permanently disfigured about the head, face, or parts of the body normally exposed to public view, in addition to all other compensation benefits provided in this article and except as provided in subsection (2) of this section, the director may allow compensation not to exceed four thousand dollars to the employee who suffers such disfigurement.

(2) If an employee sustains any of the following disfigurements, the director may allow up to eight thousand dollars as compensation to the employee in addition to all other compensation benefits provided in this article other than compensation allowed under subsection (1) of this section:

- (a) Extensive facial scars or facial burn scars;
- (b) Extensive body scars or burn scars; or
- (c) Stumps due to loss or partial loss of limbs.

(3) The director shall adjust the limits on the amount of compensation for disfigurement specified in this section on July 1, 2008, and each July 1 thereafter by the percentage of adjustment made by the director to the state average weekly wage pursuant to section 8-47-106.

Law reviews. For article, "Primer on Permanent Disability in the Colorado Workmen's Compensation Law", see 57 Den. L.J. 573 (1980).

Annotator's note. Since § 8-42-108 is similar to § 8-51-105 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Remedy under this section is not exclusive and an individual who suffers a cosmetic deformity to the face can receive benefits under both this section and § 8-42-107 because such a deformity can be classified as a functional medical impairment and rated accordingly. Gonzales v. Advanced Component Sys., 949 P.2d 569 (Colo. 1997).

The term "public", as used in this section, means accessible to or shared by all members of the community. Twilight Jones Lounge v. Show- ers, 732 P.2d 1230 (Colo. App. 1986).

A disfigurement is an observable impairment of the natural appearance of a person. Arkin v. Indus. Comm'n, 145 Colo. 463, 358 P.2d 879 (1961).

And the loss of three upper front teeth is a disfigurement for which the workmen's compensation act provides compensation. Arkin v. Indus. Comm'n, 145 Colo. 463, 358 P.2d 879 (1961).

Furthermore, a claimant's resort to an artificial device to mask the blemish does not alter the fact of disfigurement. Arkin v. Indus. Comm'n, 145 Colo. 463, 358 P.2d 879 (1961).

Disfigurement award for scar on abdominal area was proper as the abdominal area is a part of the body normally exposed to public view. Twilight Jones Lounge v. Showers, 732 P.2d 1230 (Colo. App. 1986).

Fingers are distal extensions of the upper limb; therefore, the stump of a partially am- puted finger constitutes a disfigurement under this section. Leffler v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 252 P.3d 50 (Colo. App. 2010).

The earning capacity principle is of no great significance where disfigurement results from an injury. The very meagerness of the ultimate award allowable for head or facial disfigurement compels the construction that the right to compensation for serious head or facial disfigurement is not dependent on diminution of earning capacity. Arkin v. Indus. Comm'n, 145 Colo. 463, 358 P.2d 879 (1961).

The method of determining disability provided by § 8-51-108 cannot be used when the injury is one appearing in §§ 8-51-104 to 8-51-107 inclusive, because by its specific terms such injuries are excluded. Hawkeye-Security Ins. Co. v. Tupper, 152 Colo. 12, 380 P.2d 31 (1963).

8-42-109. Added compensation for additional injuries. Where an injured employee sustains an injury covered by sections 8-42-107, 8-42-108, and 8-46-101 but in addition thereto receives other injuries which are sufficient in their nature to alone cause temporary total disability, said employee shall receive, in addition to the amounts specified in said schedule, compensation for temporary total disability as long as said disability is found to exist as a result of said other injuries.

Editor's note: (1) Before its repeal in 1991, this section was similar to former § 8-51-108 as it existed prior to 1990.

(2) The current provisions pertaining to the determination of permanent partial disability are contained in § 8-42-107.

8-42-111. Award for permanent total disability. (1) In cases of permanent total disability, the award shall be sixty-six and two-thirds percent of the average weekly wages of the injured employee and shall continue until death of such person so totally disabled but not in excess of the weekly maximum benefits specified in this article for injuries causing temporary total disability.

(2) (Deleted by amendment, L. 91, p. 1313, § 19, effective July 1, 1991.)

(3) A disabled employee capable of rehabilitation which would enable the employee to earn any wages in the same or other employment, who refuses an offer of employment by the same or other employer or an offer of vocational rehabilitation paid for by the employer shall not be awarded permanent total disability.

(4) For injuries occurring on and after July 1, 1991, and before July 1, 1994, the average weekly wage of injured employees used for computing compensation paid for awards pursuant to subsection (1) of this section shall be increased by two percent per year effective July 1 of each year, and such increased compensation shall be payable for the subsequent twelve months.

Annotator's note. (1) Since § 8-42-111 is similar to § 8-51-107 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

(2) Cases included in the annotations to this section which refer to the industrial commission were decided prior to the 1969 amendment which vested the director of the division of labor with powers formerly exercised by the industrial commission or were decided prior to the enactment of 1986 Senate Bill No. 12 which abolished said commission.

Subsection (5) is constitutionally arbitrary. Romero v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 902 P.2d 896 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd, 912 P.2d 62 (Colo. 1996).

Rational relationship standard is proper standard to apply in determining whether classifications created by statute based on age and degree of disability are valid under the state constitution. Romero v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 902 P.2d 896 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd, 912 P.2d 62 (Colo. 1996).

COLA provision in subsection (4) may be given effect even though the age cap in subsection (4) was declared invalid. Montezuma Well Serv., Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 928 P.2d 796 (Colo. App. 1996).

Average weekly wage, as computed under subsection (1), shall become the claimant's av- erage weekly wage for purposes of calculating compensation, as well as calculating the two percent COLA increase under subsection (4), in cases where the earned average weekly wage entitles a claimant to the maximum weekly compensation rate computed at the time of the injury. Guido v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 100 P.3d 575 (Colo. App. 2004).

COLA adjustment is not subject to the maximum benefit cap; the two provisions being in irreconcilable conflict, the latter-enacted provision must be given full effect. Salazar v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 10 P.3d 666 (Colo. App. 2000).

Industrial commission was vested with wide discretion. In determining the extent or degree of disability of an injured workman upon the facts of each case, it is axiomatic that the commission was vested with the widest possible discretion with the exercise of which the courts will not interfere. Nat'l Fuel Co. v. Arnold, 121 Colo. 220, 214 P.2d 784 (1950).

The administrative law judge has broad discretion in determining permanent total disability and may consider the same statutory factors used in determining permanent partial disability, including the manifest weight of the evidence and the claimant's general physical condition. Drywall Prod. v. Constable, 832 P.2d 957 (Colo. App. 1991).

Legislative intent. Since this section provides that "the loss of both hands or both arms or both feet or both legs or both eyes or of any two thereof, shall prima facie constitute total and permanent disability", it is evident that the general assembly, in using the expression, did not have in mind a condition of helpless paralysis reducing bodily functions to the minimum essential for the maintenance of a mere spark of life. New York Indem. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 86 Colo. 364, 281 P. 740 (1929).

Losses constituting total permanent disability. Amputation of the right arm near the elbow and a 90 percent loss of the use of the left constitutes total permanent disability as that term is used in this section. New York Indem. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 86 Colo. 364, 281 P. 740 (1929).

Where a claimant suffers permanent or temporary total disability, compensation is based upon a fixed percentage of his average weekly wage. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Lyttle, 151 Colo. 590, 380 P.2d 62 (1963).

In situations covered by this statute, the subsequent employer is not liable for the degree of permanent partial disability sustained by the subsequent injury; rather, the employer is liable for the portion of the permanent total disability that is attributable to the subsequent injury. Subsequent Injury Fund v. Gallegos, 746 P.2d 71 (Colo. App. 1987).

Claimant not entitled to permanent total disability benefits where occupational injuries were not significant cause of disability and claimant remained disabled because of nonoccupational factors. Seifried v. Indus. Comm'n, 736 P.2d 1262 (Colo. App. 1986).

Subsection (3) does not become applicable until there is a determination that a totally disabled claimant refused an employer's offer of vocational rehabilitation and unless such an offer is made and the claimant refuses it, the claimant is entitled to full payment. Drywall Prod. v. Constuble, 832 P.2d 957 (Colo. App. 1991).

But a claimant has the burden of establishing his right to compensation benefits. Indus. Comm'n v. Ewing, 160 Colo. 503, 418 P.2d 296 (1966).

Partial employment secured by employee himself is not within the proviso. New York Indem. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 86 Colo. 364, 281 P. 740 (1929).

For this promotes justice because if one be totally and permanently disabled he ought not be penalized for obtaining some trivial and unusual employment, or have the door of hope and ambition slammed in his face by being forbidden, on pain of having a portion of his meager sustenance withheld, to make any effort to add thereto. One may be totally disabled for all practical purposes of competing for remunerative employment in any general field of human endeavor and yet be able to obtain occasional employment under rare conditions and at small remuneration. The claimant's status remains unaffected thereby unless the employment be specifically covered by the exception under this section. New York Indem. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 86 Colo. 364, 281 P. 740 (1929); Rio Grande Motor Way v. De Merschman, 100 Colo. 421, 68 P.2d 446 (1937); Nat'l Fuel Co. v. Arnold, 121 Colo. 220, 214 P.2d 784 (1950);

New Jersey Zinc Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 165 Colo. 482, 440 P.2d 284 (1968).

But compensation benefits may be reduced where the employer offers his injured employee "suitable employment". Indus. Comm'n v. Ewing, 160 Colo. 503, 418 P.2d 296 (1966).

However, the employer has the burden of showing the "suitability" of any employment which he offers or obtains for his permanently and totally disabled employee. Indus. Comm'n v. Ewing, 160 Colo. 503, 418 P.2d 296 (1966).

And the fact that a "permanently and totally disabled" person may perform a given task does not necessarily mean that such employment is "suitable". Indus. Comm'n v. Ewing, 160 Colo. 503, 418 P.2d 296 (1966).

But where director finds employment "suitable" court may not review. Where the director has found that the employment offered the claimant was suitable, and that it was work which he could perform, a district court may not review the findings made by the director and substitute its conclusions for those of the director. Indus. Comm'n v. Ewing, 174 Colo. 133, 482 P.2d 981 (1971).

Functional disability of injured workman, compared with that of a normal man, does not control in fixing compensable status, since the term "disability" means industrial disability of loss of earning capacity and not mere functional disability. Byouk v. Indus. Comm'n, 106 Colo. 430, 105 P.2d 1087 (1940).

Classifications created by subsection (5) based on age and degree of disability have no reasonable relationship to the purpose the statute is allegedly aimed at achieving, i.e., to prevent receipt of duplicative benefits and the section, therefore, violates equal protection requirements. Romero v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 902 P.2d 896 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd, 912 P.2d 62 (Colo. 1996); Colo. AFL-CIO v. Donlon, 914 P.2d 396 (Colo. App. 1995).

Unless an employer offers a claimant vocational rehabilitation and the claimant refuses it, the claimant is entitled to full payment of permanent total disability benefits. Drywall Prod. v. Constuble, 832 P.2d 957 (Colo. App. 1991).

Neurotic mental disability is as real as any other disability and, in the absence of evidence of malingering, is as much a personal injury. Casa Bonita Restaurant v. Indus. Comm'n, 624 P.2d 1340 (Colo. App. 1981).

Commission entitled to look to claimant's mental ability. The industrial commission had the right to look beyond claimant's physical impairments to her mental ability, including mental impairment, in determining the issue of permanent total disability. Casa Bonita Restaurant v. Indus. Comm'n, 624 P.2d 1340 (Colo. App. 1981).

The effect of § 8-51-106 (now §§ 8-46-101 and 8-46-102) is to provide a scheme for apportioning the permanent total disability to which a claimant may be entitled under subsection (1) of this section. McGrath v. Indus. Comm'n, 708 P.2d 1382 (Colo. App. 1985); Subsequent Injury Fund v. Gallegos, 746 P.2d 71 (Colo. App. 1987).

Percentage of disability from a previous injury need not be reduced from permanent total disability benefits. Where injured worker suffered previous injuries that cumulatively resulted in permanent total disability, the appellate court did not err in not offsetting the percentage of disability attributable to the previous injuries. United Airlines v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 993 P.2d 1152 (Colo. 2000).

Award for permanent disability held authorized. Wilson v. Sinclair, 109 Colo. 592, 128 P.2d 996 (1942).

Record fully supported award of permanent total disability benefits where ALJ determined that claimant was unable to perform any work that he was capable of performing before his injury and the medical providers recommended vocational rehabilitation for claimant, which employer refused. Drywall Prod. v. Constuble, 832 P.2d 957 (Colo. App. 1991).

Applied in Colo. Fuel & Iron Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 88 Colo. 573, 298 P. 955 (1931); Bellendir v. Kezer, 648 P.2d 645 (Colo. 1982). McGrath v. Indus. Comm'n, 708 P.2d 1382 (Colo. App. 1985).

8-42-112. Acts of employees reducing compensation. (1) The compensation provided for in articles 40 to 47 of this title shall be reduced fifty percent:

(a) Where injury is caused by the willful failure of the employee to use safety devices provided by the employer;

(b) Where injury results from the employee's willful failure to obey any reasonable rule adopted by the employer for the safety of the employee; or

(c) (Deleted by amendment, L. 99, p. 581, § 2, effective July 1, 1999.)

(d) Where the employee willfully misleads an employer concerning the employee's physical ability to perform the job, and the employee is subsequently injured on the job as a result of the physical ability about which the employee willfully misled the employer. Notwithstanding any other provisions of articles 40 to 47 of this title, the provisions of this paragraph (d) shall apply in addition to any other penalty that may be imposed under section 8-43-402.

(2) In the event the claimant or dependent is receiving periodic disability benefits for which a reduction in Colorado workers' compensation benefits has been made pursuant to section 8-42-103, the fifty percent reduction provided for in subsection (1) of this section shall be computed according to the rate of benefits received by the claimant or dependent after, and not before, such other reduction has been made.

- III. Injury Resulting from Intoxication.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "The Enterprise Liability Theory of Torts", see 47 U. Colo. L. Rev. 153 (1976).

Annotator's note. (1) Since § 8-42-112 is similar to § 8-52-104 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

(2) Cases included in the annotations to this section which refer to the industrial commission were decided prior to the enactment of 1986 Senate Bill No. 12 which abolished said commission and transferred some of its powers, duties, and functions under this section to the director of the division of labor.

Abolished defenses not affected. This section has nothing to do with, and does not restore, the fellow servant rule, doctrine of assumption of risk or contributory negligence, abolished by other enactments. Stockdale v. Indus. Comm'n, 76 Colo. 494, 232 P. 669 (1925).

This section applies to claims based upon injuries, as well as to death claims. Indus. Comm'n v. Funk, 68 Colo. 467, 191 P. 125 (1920); Stockdale v. Indus. Comm'n, 76 Colo. 494, 232 P. 669 (1925); Bennett Props. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 165 Colo. 135, 437 P.2d 548 (1968); Mohawk Rubber Co. v. Claimants in re Death of Cribbs, 165 Colo. 526, 440 P.2d 785 (1968); Conn v. Conn, 167 Colo. 177, 446 P.2d 224 (1968).

However, while workmen's compensation laws are construed liberally in favor of the workmen, they are not to be so narrowly construed as to fasten full liability upon an employer when the worker becomes careless or indifferent in his conduct while acting within his employment. Indus. Comm'n v. Golden Cycle Corp., 126 Colo. 68, 246 P.2d 902 (1952).

Deduction of federal death benefits. Federal death benefits are to be deducted from the aggregate benefits payable for death under § 8-50-103 before the amount of compensation is reduced by 50 percent if the employee engaged in conduct proscribed by this section. Cline v. Indus. Comm'n, 43 Colo. App. 123, 599 P.2d 973 (1979).

Applied in Deterts v. Times Publishing Co., 38 Colo. App. 48, 552 P.2d 1033 (1976).

II. VIOLATION OF SAFETY RULES.

This section applies only where the employer has adopted reasonable safety rules. Clayton Coal Co. v. De Santis, 95 Colo. 332, 35 P.2d 492 (1934).

And violation of a safety rule does not bar recovery, but the amount of the recovery is based upon the circumstances under which a safety rule is violated. Indus. Comm'n v. Golden Cycle Corp., 126 Colo. 68, 246 P.2d 902 (1952).

But a wilful violation, while not defeating compensation, does reduce it by 50 percent. Indus. Comm'n v. Funk, 68 Colo. 467, 191 P. 125 (1920); McCulloch v. Indus. Comm'n, 109 Colo. 123, 123 P.2d 414 (1942); Indus. Comm'n v. Golden Cycle Corp., 126 Colo. 68, 246 P.2d 902 (1952); Publix Cab Co. v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 139 Colo. 205, 338 P.2d 702, (1959).

And where compensation is increased 50 percent for failure of employer to carry insurance, deduction for violation of the safety rule is to be made after the addition of the 50 percent for failure to insure. McKune v. Indus. Comm'n, 94 Colo. 523, 31 P.2d 322 (1934).

The word "wilful" does not connote a bad purpose. Stockdale v. Indus. Comm'n, 76 Colo. 494, 232 P. 669 (1925).

The word "wilful" in this section must be given a reasonable interpretation in accord with the objective to be attained by this section. Johnson v. Denver Tramway Corp., 115 Colo. 214, 171 P.2d 410 (1946).

And the meaning of the word "wilful" is "with deliberate intent". If the employee knows of the rule and yet intentionally does the forbidden thing he has "wilfully failed to obey" the rule. Stockdale v. Indus. Comm'n, 76 Colo. 494, 232 P. 669 (1925); Johnson v. Denver Tramway Corp., 115 Colo. 214, 171 P.2d 410 (1946); Bennett Props. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 165 Colo. 135, 437 P.2d 548 (1968).

Where failure to obey orders may have been the result of carelessness, negligence, forgetfulness, remissness, or oversight, such failure would not necessarily be "wilful failure" because any of the causes might occur without a "deliberate intent" on the part of decedent and would not of itself establish a "wilful failure". Johnson v. Denver Tramway Corp., 115 Colo. 214, 171 P.2d 410 (1946).

But if the employee knows the rule, and yet intentionally does the forbidden thing, he has "wilfully failed to obey" the rule. McCulloch v. Indus. Comm'n, 109 Colo. 123, 123 P.2d 414 (1942); Indus. Comm'n v. Golden Cycle Corp., 126 Colo. 68, 246 P.2d 902 (1952); Bennett Props. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 165 Colo. 135, 437 P.2d 548 (1968).

And it is not necessary for the employer to show that the employee, having the rule in mind, determined to break it; it is enough to show that, knowing the rule, he intentionally performed the forbidden act. Stockdale v. Indus. Comm'n, 76 Colo. 494, 232 P. 669 (1925); Bennett Props. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 165 Colo. 135, 437 P.2d 548 (1968).

Since employee had a plausible purpose to explain why he violated a safety rule by removing his rubber glove when working on high voltage lines, so that he could operate employer's faulty equipment, his award should not have been reduced by 50%. City of Las Animas v. Maupin, 804 P.2d 285 (Colo. App. 1990).

However, the employer has the burden of establishing that employee's death was result of "wilful failure" to obey a reasonable rule. Johnson v. Denver Tramway Corp., 115 Colo. 214, 171 P.2d 410 (1946).

It is generally held that oral warnings, prohibitions, and directions meet the safety requirement for the protection of both employer and employee if given by someone generally in authority and known to be heard and understood by the employee. Indus. Comm'n v. Golden Cycle Corp., 126 Colo. 68, 246 P.2d 902 (1952); Bennett Props. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 165 Colo. 135, 437 P.2d 548 (1968).

For warnings, numerously given, coupled with the presumption of common sense on the part of claimant obviated the necessity of the posting of a safety rule concerning the existing dangerous condition. McCullough v. Indus. Comm'n, 109 Colo. 123, 123 Colo. 414 (1942); Indus. Comm'n v. Golden Cycle Corp., 126 Colo. 68, 246 P.2d 902 (1952); Bennett Props. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 165 Colo. 135, 437 P.2d 548 (1968).

And orally forbidding employees to use a bridge is sufficient to constitute a safety rule under the provisions of this section. Stockdale v. Indus. Comm'n, 76 Colo. 494, 232 P. 669 (1925). See Indus. Comm'n v. Funk, 68 Colo. 467, 191 P. 125 (1920).

As is oral direction to wear safety goggles. McCulloch v. Indus. Comm'n, 109 Colo. 123, 123 P.2d 414 (1942).

So also is an order not to work under certain conditions. Indus. Comm'n v. Funk, 68 Colo. 467, 191 P. 125 (1920).

But casual conversation does not amount to adoption of rule. McNeil Coal Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 105 Colo. 263, 96 P.2d 889 (1939).

When republication of order unnecessary. Where employees were forbidden to cross a bridge with teams, attempted repairs to the bridge by third party did not necessitate republishing the order. Stockdale v. Indus. Comm'n, 76 Colo. 494, 232 P. 669 (1925).

But failure to bring existence of safety rule home to employee. Where the existence of safety rule forbidding employees to jump on moving trucks or to ride on trucks had never been brought home to employee, it was held that where employee was crushed to death beneath moving truck he was attempting to jump on, the director was justified in declining to find that deceased had violated a reasonable safety rule which would have the effect of diminishing the award by one-half. Pacific Employers Ins. Co. v. Kirkpatrick, 111 Colo. 470, 143 P.2d 267 (1943).

Violation of state statute is immaterial where employer has adopted no safety rule. Clayton Coal Co. v. De Santis, 95 Colo. 332, 35 P.2d 492 (1934).

The statute provides a penalty for misconduct of employees, not a defense for employers, but the penalty does not have to be applied to all aspects of recovery for the injured employee. The intent of the statute is not to apportion negligence but to deter misconduct. Wild West Radio v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 886 P.2d 304 (Colo. App. 1994).

The Workers' Compensation Act imposes penalties for misconduct such as intoxication that results in injuries but it does not disqualify the claimant from all benefits. Wild West Radio, Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 905

P.2d 6 (Colo. App. 1995); Ackerman v. Hilton's Mechanical Men, 914 P.2d 524 (Colo. App. 1996).

As long as the ALJ's determination of whether an accident was caused by an employee's intoxication is supported by substantial evidence in the record, it is binding on review. Ackerman v. Hilton's Mechanical Men, 914 P.2d 524 (Colo. App. 1996).

III. INJURY RESULTING FROM INTOXICATION.

The intoxication of claimant must be a proximate cause of the injury for reduction in compensation. Stearns-Roger Mfg. Co. v. Casteel, 128 Colo. 289, 261 P.2d 228 (1953).

Where there is no evidence in the record to require a finding, as a matter of law, that intoxicants caused or contributed to the accident, no one knows what caused the accident, the question of whether benefits should be reduced was properly for the trier of facts to determine. J. C. Carlile Corp. v. Antaki, 162 Colo. 376, 426 P.2d 549 (1967).

The causal connection between the blood alcohol level of the decedent and the accident is a question of fact. The court of appeals will not disturb the finding that his intoxication was not the proximate cause of the accident where there is no testimony that the decedent's driving ability was impaired. Elec. Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 154 Colo. 491, 391 P.2d 677 (1964); Tatum-Reese Dev. Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 30 Colo. App. 149, 490 P.2d 94 (1971).

Commission abused discretion in failing to rule intoxication-caused injury. Where the following testimony was uncontroverted: That an autopsy was performed at which it was determined that the blood alcohol level in the deceased's body shortly after death was .225 percent; that in order to reach a blood alcohol level of .225 percent the deceased would have had to have consumed nine ounces of 100 proof liquor or nine 12-ounce cans of beer or some combination thereof; that such a quantity of alcohol in one's bloodstream would have "drastically impaired" one's motor reflexes involved in operating a vehicle; the commission abused its discretion in failing to rule that the injury resulted from the intoxication of the deceased. Harrison W. Corp. v. Hicks' Claimants, 185 Colo. 142, 522 P.2d 722 (1974).

8-42-112.5. Limitation on payments - use of controlled substances. (1) Nonmedical benefits otherwise payable to an injured worker are reduced fifty percent where the injury results from the presence in the worker's system, during working hours, of controlled substances, as defined in section 18-18-102 (5), C.R.S., that are not medically prescribed or of a blood alcohol level at or above 0.10 percent, or at or above an applicable lower level as set forth by federal statute or regulation, as evidenced by a forensic drug or alcohol test conducted by a medical facility or laboratory licensed or certified to conduct such tests. A duplicate sample from any test conducted must be preserved and made available to the worker for purposes of a second test to be conducted at the worker's expense. If the test indicates the presence of such substances or of alcohol at such level, it is presumed that the employee was intoxicated and that the injury was due to the intoxication. This presumption may be overcome by clear and convincing evidence.

(2) As used in this section, "nonmedical benefits" means all benefits provided for in articles 40 to 47 of this title other than disbursements for medical, surgical, nursing, and hospital services, apparatus, and supplies.

8-42-113. Limitations on payments to prisoners - incentives to sheriffs and department of corrections. (1) Notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary except as provided in subsection (4) of this section, any individual who is otherwise entitled to benefits under articles 40 to 47 of this title shall neither receive nor be entitled to such benefits for any week following conviction during which such individual is confined in a jail, prison, or any department of corrections facility.

(1.5) (a) In the event the identifying information transmitted to the department of labor and employment pursuant to section 17-26-118.5 (2), C.R.S., results in the termination of workers' compensation benefits pursuant to subsection (1) of this section, the employer or the insurance carrier, if any, shall pay to the sheriff a reward equal to ten percent of one week's benefit to which the ineligible individual would otherwise be eligible to receive.

(b) An individual who is ineligible pursuant to subsection (1) of this section shall repay to the employer or the insurance carrier, if any, any amounts received while not eligible.

(2) After such individual's release from confinement, the individual shall be restored to the same position with respect to entitlement to benefits under articles 40 to 47 of this title as said individual would otherwise have enjoyed at the point in time of such release from confinement. However, except as provided in subsection (3) of this section, said individual shall not be able to recover, recoup, or otherwise be retroactively entitled to any of the benefits to which the individual would have been entitled without the limitation specified in subsection (1) of this section.

(3) If upon appeal such conviction is overturned, such individual shall be entitled to recover the benefits to which such individual would have been entitled except for the operation of subsection (1) of this section.

(4) This section shall not apply to benefits under articles 40 to 47 of this title to which an inmate of a department of corrections facility or a city, county, or city and county jail is entitled for injury or occupational disease arising out of and in the course of the inmate working, performing services, or participating in a training, rehabilitation, or work release program that has been certified by the federal prison industry enhancement certification program pursuant to the federal "Justice System Improvement Act of 1979", 18 U.S.C. sec. 1761 (c). The inmate shall be entitled to benefits in accordance with section 8-40-301 (3) (a).

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Update on Colorado Appellate Decisions in Workers' Compensation Law", see 33 Colo. Law. 117 (November 2004).

Annotator's note. Since § 8-42-113 is similar to § 8-52-104.5 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, a relevant case construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this section.

This section does not violate the constitu- tional prohibition against ex post facto laws because it does not impose criminal penalties. The intent behind this section is to relieve employers and insurance carriers of the obligation to pay benefits as compensation for lost earning capacity to persons who have no earning capacity because they are imprisoned. Wood v. Beatrice Foods Co., 813 P.2d 821 (Colo. App. 1991).

Statute was not applied retroactively where claimant did not receive award of benefits until after the section was enacted, even though the events supporting the award occurred before the section was enacted. Wood v. Beatrice Foods Co., 813 P.2d 821 (Colo. App. 1991).

The statute does not deny the claimant due process where the claimant did not have a vested entitlement to an award of benefits when the statute was enacted. The existence of workers' compensation benefits is dependent on the workers' compensation statutes, and legislation limiting those benefits does not affect a constitutionally protected property interest. Wood v. Beatrice Foods Co., 813 P.2d 821 (Colo. App. 1991).

The statute does not violate due process or equal protection requirements because the distinction made between prisoners and other persons claiming workers' compensation benefits bears a rational relationship to the purpose of the statute which is to protect em- ployees injured in the course of their work from becoming wards of the state by providing compensation for lost earning capacity. Wood v. Beatrice Foods Co., 813 P.2d 821 (Colo. App. 1991).

Suspension of claimant's medical impairment benefits during incarceration was required by the clear and unambiguous language of this section. Salazar v. Hi-Land Potato Co., 917 P.2d 326 (Colo. App. 1996).

Under subsection (2), upon release from prison, a claimant may again receive medical, disability, and death benefits under the Workers' Compensation Act. Landeros v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 214 P.3d 544 (Colo. App. 2008).

Subsection (2) of this section does not toll the statute of limitations while claimant is in prison. And nothing in either this article 42 or article 43 of the Workers' Compensation Act provides authority for tolling the limitation periods provided in § 8-43-303 while a claimant is in prison. Landeros v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 214 P.3d 544 (Colo. App. 2008).

A community corrections facility is not a "jail, prison, or any department of corrections facility." A community corrections facility is specifically excluded from the definition of a minimum security corrections facility. Therefore, confinement in a community corrections facility does not suspend benefits. City & County of Denver v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 98 P.3d 969 (Colo. App. 2004).

8-42-113.5. Recovery of overpayments - notice required. (1) If a claimant has received an award for the payment of disability benefits or a death benefit under articles 40 to 47 of this title and also receives any payment, award, or entitlement to benefits under the federal old-age, survivors, and disability insurance act, an employer-paid retirement benefit plan, or any other plan, program, or source for which the original disability benefits or death benefit is required to be reduced pursuant to said articles, but which were not reflected in the calculation of such disability benefits or death benefit:

(a) Within twenty calendar days after learning of such payment, award, or entitlement, the claimant, or the legal representative of a claimant who is a minor, shall give written notice of the payment, award, or entitlement to the employer or, if the employer is insured, to the employer's insurer. If the claimant or legal representative gives such notice, any overpayment that resulted from the failure to make the appropriate reduction in the original calculation of such disability benefits or death benefit shall be recovered by the employer or insurer in installments at the same rate as, or a lower rate than, the rate at which the overpayments were made. Such recovery shall reduce the disability benefits or death benefit payable after all other applicable reductions have been made.

(b) If the claimant or legal representative of a claimant who is a minor was receiving benefits in excess of the amounts that should have been paid under articles 40 to 47 of this title and failed to give the notice required by paragraph (a) of this subsection (1), the employer or insurer is authorized to cease all disability or death benefit payments immediately until the overpayments have been recovered in full.

(b.5) (I) After the filing of a final admission of liability, except in cases of fraud, any attempt to recover an overpayment shall be asserted within one year after the time the requestor knew of the existence of the overpayment.

(II) Subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (b.5), as enacted by Senate Bill 09-168, enacted in 2009, is declared to be procedural and was intended to and shall apply to all workers' compensation claims, regardless of the date the claim was filed.

(c) If for any reason recovery of overpayments as contemplated in paragraph (a) or (b) of this subsection (1) is not practicable, the employer or insurer is authorized to seek an order for repayment.

(d) When an overpayment is repaid to the insurer, the insurer shall credit the losses on the claim and report the corrected losses to the insurance rating organization on the next scheduled report for purposes of the employer's experience modification.

ANNOTATION

Action to recoup overpayment of workers' compensation benefits under subsections (1)(a) and (1)(b) does not violate the discharge injunction of 11 U.S.C. § 524, federal bankruptcy code. City may pursue a determination of whether or not debtor received an overpayment of workers' compensation benefits and recoup any overpayment in accordance with the provisions of subsections (1)(a) and (1)(b).

In re Gonzales, 298 B.R. 771 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2003).

City is prohibited under 11 U.S.C. § 524 from collecting any overpayment of workers' compensation benefits from debtor by way of an order for repayment under subsection (1)(c). In re Gonzales, 298 B.R. 771 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2003).

8-42-114. Death benefits. In case of death, the dependents of the deceased entitled thereto shall receive as compensation or death benefits sixty-six and two-thirds percent of the deceased employee's average weekly wages, not to exceed a maximum of ninety-one percent of the state average weekly wage per week for accidents occurring on or after July 1, 1989, and not less than a minimum of twenty-five percent of the applicable maximum per week. In cases where it is determined that periodic death benefits granted by the federal old age, survivors, and disability insurance act or a workers' compensation act of another state or of the federal government are payable to an individual and the individual's dependents, the aggregate benefits payable for death pursuant to this section shall be reduced, but not below zero, by an amount equal to fifty percent of such periodic benefits.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For note, "One Year Review of Colorado Law - 1964", see 42 Den. L. Ctr. J. 140 (1965). For article, "Primer on Permanent Disability in the Colorado Workmen's Compensation Law", see 57 Den. L.J. 573 (1980).

Annotator's note. Since § 8-42-114 is similar to § 8-50-103 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Constitutionality of offset provision. The offset provision of this section is constitutional, and does not violate equal protection. Meyer v. Indus. Comm'n, 644 P.2d 46 (Colo. App. 1981).

The prevention of duplication of benefits is a legitimate goal, and a coordination of various state and federal programs into a single system of wage-loss protection is rationally related to the offset scheme. Meyer v. Indus. Comm'n, 644 P.2d 46 (Colo. App. 1981).

Even though similar deductions are not made for payment from all possible sources, provision is not violative of equal protection. Boehm v. Indus. Comm'n, 738 P.2d 804 (Colo. App. 1987).

This section does not violate the supremacy clause of the U.S. Constitution and is not preempted by the Social Security Act. Therefore, under this section, the state could properly offset social security survivors' benefits against workers' compensation death benefits. Rosa v. Warner Elec. Contracting, 870 P.2d 1210 (Colo. 1994).

Only dependents can receive compensation under the workmen's compensation act. Vaughn v. Indus. Comm'n, 79 Colo. 257, 245 P. 712 (1926).

And this section sets the legislative maximums and minimums on death benefits and directs what deductions will be made against death benefits. Schenfeld v. Shaffer, 29 Colo. App. 425, 487 P.2d 818 (1971).

Amount of death benefits should be fixed as of the date of death, not the date of injury. Richards v. Richards & Richards, 664 P.2d 254 (Colo. App. 1983); State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Indus. Comm'n, 724 P.2d 679 (Colo. App. 1986).

Benefit payments unlike survival actions. While the legal representative, in an action at law which survives under the statute in question, stands in the place of the decedent, the workmen's compensation law differs and provides specific benefits for and to the widow, children and other dependents. In re Dick v. Indus. Comm'n, 197 Colo. 71, 589 P.2d 950 (1979).

Death benefits and disability benefits are independent. Disability benefits awarded to a worker and death benefits awarded to a worker's dependents are entirely independent of one another. This results in two distinct rights — one for the benefit of the workman, the other for the benefit of his dependents. Richards v. Richards & Richards, 664 P.2d 254 (Colo. App. 1983).

Under the "rule of independence", disability benefits awarded an employee and death benefits awarded an employee's dependents are independent of one another, that is, there are two distinct rights, one for the benefit of the worker and the other for the benefit of his or her dependents. Therefore, under the rule, both the death benefit amount and the amount of offset should be determined based on the law in effect on the date of the employee's death. Hoffman v. Hoffman, 872 P.2d 1367 (Colo. App. 1994).

Death benefits are distinct from wage loss and disability benefits, and the limitation on medical impairment disability benefits applies to those cases in which disability benefits are payable to an eligible claimant, not to cases in which a claimant seeks death benefits. Loveland Police Dept. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 141 P.3d 943 (Colo. App. 2006).

Deduction of federal death benefits. Federal death benefits are to be deducted from the aggregate benefits payable for death under this section before the amount of compensation is reduced by 50 percent if the employee engaged in conduct proscribed by § 8-52-104. Cline v. Indus. Comm'n, 43 Colo. App. 123, 599 P.2d 973 (1979).

Federal social security benefits payable to widow, regardless of cause or circumstances of husband's death, are not the type of periodic benefits to serve as basis for offset against workers' compensation benefits awarded to widow. Larimer Cty. Sch. Dist. v. Indus. Comm'n, 727 P.2d 401 (Colo. App. 1986), cert. denied, 752 P.2d 80 (Colo. 1988).

This section does not violate the "anti-alienation" provision of the Social Security Act since that provision was designed to prevent the use of traditional legal process to allow a third party to receive another individual's social security benefits, the petitioners will receive their social security benefits, and this section does not prohibit a worker from receiving social security benefits. Rosa v. Warner Elec. Contracting, 870 P.2d 1210 (Colo. 1994).

The purpose of the social security offset is to preclude an injured worker or his dependents from receiving duplicate benefits. There is no duplication of benefits, however, where it is undisputed that the widow is not receiving any social security benefits nor does she have dependents who receive such benefits. Hoffman v. Hoffman, 872 P.2d 1367 (Colo. App. 1994).

The ruling in Hoffman v. Hoffman, 872 P.2d 1367 (Colo. App. 1994), that no purpose would be served by offsetting a widow's benefits by the social security benefits received by decedent's children from a prior marriage is highly persuasive and achieves a better reasoned result than an earlier decision. The court expressly declines to follow the decision in Knight v. Dept. of Natural Res.s, 689 P.2d 733 (Colo. App. 1984). Koch Indus. v. Pena, 910 P.2d 77 (Colo. App. 1995).

Cost of living increases in social security "periodic death benefits" are not to be offset against workers' compensation death benefits payable because of an industrial accident. However, this ruling only applies to cost of living increases, made after the Engelbrecht ruling (680 P.2d 231 (Colo. 1984)). Wilson v. Jim Snyder Drilling, 729 P.2d 1022 (Colo. App. 1986), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 747 P.2d 647 (Colo. 1987).

The provisions of this section which establish that, when period death benefits under the social security act are payable, the benefits payable pursuant to this section shall be reduced by one hundred percent of such periodic benefits does not exceed the scope of the state offset permitted by the social security act, and there is no violation of the supremacy clause. Rosa v. Warner Elec. Contracting, 849 P.2d 845 (Colo. App. 1992), aff'd, 870 P.2d 1210 (Colo. 1994) (decided under former § 8-50-103 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado, articles 40 to 47 of title 8).

Federal "mother's insurance benefits" are subject to offset under this section. Phrase "federal old age, survivors, and disability insurance act" specifically refers to Subchapter II of the Social Security Act, and all benefits payable under that act are within the intended scope of this section's offset provisions. L.E.L. Construction v. Goode, 867 P.2d 875 (Colo. 1994) (explicitly disapproving Larimer County case, 727 P.2d 401, to the extent inconsistent with this opinion).

Amendment in 1991, changing social security offset amount to fifty percent, applies only prospectively. The ALJ and the industrial claim appeals panel erred in ordering a claim reopened to reduce the offset from one hundred to fifty percent. Rosa v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 885 P.2d 331 (Colo. App. 1994).

Wage value where decedent employee's duties of different character. Where a decedent employee's duties were of a different character but did not constitute a new contract of employment, his trips without wage were a service rendered to enhance his value as an employee rather than a new arrangement. Thus, his wage value for the purposes of this section was the same as that paid for his other work. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Coleman, 135 Colo. 82, 392 P.2d 598 (1964).

No additional death benefit. Since amount paid claimant in periodic disability payments during his lifetime plus amount of lump-sum disability award in which he acquired a vested property right during his lifetime total together in excess of the gross maximum permanent disability award allowed under the statute, than upon payment of the lump-sum award, no additional death benefit is payable to claimant's widow. Schenfeld v. Shaffer, 29 Colo. App. 425, 487 P.2d 818 (1971).

Regardless of § 8-50-106, payments cannot exceed statutory maximum. Regardless of the provision in § 8-50-106 which allows the survival of death benefits to remaining dependents when such benefits are terminated as to another dependent, the payments cannot exceed the statutory maximum. Indus. Comm'n v. Employers Liab. Assurance Corp., 169 Colo. 396, 456 P.2d 739 (1969).

Court has no jurisdiction to consider minor child's argument that the industrial claim appeals panel erred in determining that her old age, survivors, and disability insurance benefits were the type of "periodic benefits" to which the offset applies where the child did not file a notice of cross-appeal. Hoffman v. Hoffman, 872 P.2d 1367 (Colo. App. 1994).

8-42-115. Death from injury - benefits. (1) In case death proximately results from the injury, the benefits shall be in the amount and to the persons following:

(a) If there are no dependents, compensation shall be limited to the expenses provided for medical, hospital, and funeral expense of the deceased, together with such sums as may have accrued or been paid to the deceased during the deceased's lifetime for disability, and any amount or payment which is due under section 8-46-101.

(b) If there are wholly dependent persons at the time of death, the payment shall be in accordance with the provisions of section 8-42-114.

(c) If there are partially dependent persons at the time of death, the payment shall not exceed sixty-six and two-thirds percent of the average weekly wages, subject to the limitations of articles 40 to 47 of this title as to maximum and minimum weekly amounts, to continue for such period after the date of death as is required to pay, at the weekly rate, the total amount awarded by the director to be paid to such partially dependent persons.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 8-41-115 is similar to § 8-50-111 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Payment of expenses as payment of compensation. In this section the general assembly shows an intent to treat the payment of medical, hospital, and funeral expenses as the payment of compensation. Royal Indem. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 88 Colo. 113, 293 P. 342 (1930).

Burden on claimant to establish accident and causal connection between accident and death. In order for a claimant to recover workmen's compensation, the burden is upon the one seeking the benefits under the act to establish by competent evidence an accident and the causal connection between the accident and death. Claimants In re Death of Rumsey v. State Comp. Ins. Fund, 162 Colo. 545, 427 P.2d 694 (1967).

A computation of death benefits without regard to statutory maximums and credits would result in a larger death benefit award to a disabled employee who dies of causes unrelated to a work-connected injury than the benefit conferred on an employee whose death results from his work-connected, disabling injury. Such results contravene the mandate of statutory construction which we must follow requiring us to read together all portions of the workmen's compensation act and to harmonize them if possible. Schenfeld v. Shaffer, 29 Colo. App. 425, 487 P.2d 818 (1971).

The word "accrued" in this section is used in the sense of due and payable. Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 89 Colo. 475, 3 P.2d 1079 (1931).

Since the general assembly can legitimately deny nondependent heirs benefits upon the death of an employee, the fact that payments in cases where there are no statutory dependents may be made to the subsequent injury fund does not wrongfully deprive nondependent heirs of property. Ryan v. Centennial Race Track, Inc., 196 Colo. 30, 580 P.2d 794 (1978).

Survivors are entitled to death benefits if a decedent's death proximately resulted from more than one condition, so long as one condition was the occupational disease. Subsequent Injury Fund v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 131 P.3d 1224 (Colo. App. 2006).

For a death to proximately result from a compensable injury or occupational disease, there must be a significant, direct, and consequential nexus between the death and the injury or disease. Subsequent Injury Fund v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 131 P.3d 1224 (Colo. App. 2006).

A compensable injury would necessarily be a significant, direct, and consequential cause of death if the death would not have occurred "but for" the compensable injury; if the injury was "a necessary precondition or trigger" of the death; or if the injury was the sole cause of the death. Subsequent Injury Fund v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 131 P.3d 1224 (Colo. App. 2006).

8-42-116. When death not proximate result - benefits. (1) If death occurs to an injured employee, other than as a proximate result of any injury, before disability indemnity ceases and the deceased leaves persons wholly dependent upon the deceased for support, death benefits shall be as follows:

(a) Where the injury proximately caused permanent total disability, the death benefit shall consist of the unpaid and unaccrued portion of the permanent total disability benefit which the employee would have received had the employee lived until receiving compensation at the employee's regular rate for a period of six years.

(b) Where the injury proximately caused permanent partial disability, the death benefit shall consist of the unpaid and unaccrued portion of the permanent partial disability benefit which the employee would have received had he lived.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 8-42-116 is similar to § 8-50-112 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

A computation of death benefits without regard to statutory maximums and credits would result in a larger death benefit award to a disabled employee who dies of causes unrelated to a work-connected injury than the benefit conferred on an employee whose death results from his work-connected, disabling injury. Such results contravene the mandate of statutory construction which we must follow requiring us to read together all portions of the workmen's compensation act and to harmonize them if possible. Schenfeld v. Shaffer, 29 Colo. App. 425, 487 P.2d 818 (1971).

Thus, a literal application of subsection (1)(b) yields a computed amount which is only a preliminary figure, subject to further modification by virtue of the statutory maximum limitation and which is reducible by the mandatory credits imposed by § 8-50-103 if all such credits have not been previously deducted. From this amount § 8-50-103 directs that there shall be deducted any sums paid to the employee prior to his death as compensation for his disability under the provisions of the workmen's compensation act. Schenfeld v. Shaffer, 29 Colo. App. 425, 487 P.2d 818 (1971).

This section does not prohibit the posthumous proof that an industrial injury caused a deceased employee to suffer a permanent disability when the employee dies of unrelated causes before reaching maximum medical improvement. Singleton v. Kenya Corp., 961 P.2d 571 (Colo. App. 1998).

For purposes of this section, there is no distinction between permanent disability benefits and permanent medical impairment benefits and, therefore, no right of compensation based upon the statute's reference to permanent disability benefits without any accompanying mention of permanent medical impairment benefits. Cooper v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 109 P.3d 1056 (Colo. App. 2005).

This section does not apply where the widow is a nonresident of the United States. Colo. Fuel & Iron Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 93 Colo. 188, 24 P.2d 1117 (1933).

Where decedent's death was not proximately related to the injury for which decedent was receiving permanent disability payments, the duration of benefit payments receivable by decedent's dependent is limited to six years from the date decedent began receiving payments. Winters v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 819 P.2d 542 (Colo. App. 1991).

When an industrial injury is not the proximate cause of the death, an award of death benefits that is based on the amount of unpaid permanent disability benefits can be made only where there are dependents; therefore, the estate of the deceased is not entitled to benefits. Cooper v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 109 P.3d 1056 (Colo. App. 2005).

The amount of the death benefit payable under this section is not subject to an offset for social security disability insurance payments that terminate upon the disabled worker's death. The applicable "regular rate" is the rate of total permanent disability benefits without regard for the SSDI offset. Metro Glass & Glazing, Inc. v. Orona, 868 P.2d 1178 (Colo. App. 1994).

A lump sum permanent disability payment made to an employee prior to the death of the employee that becomes part of the decedent's estate is not an overpayment and does not have to be repaid. Cooper v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 109 P.3d 1056 (Colo. App. 2005).

Applied in Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 89 Colo. 475, 3 P.2d 1079 (1931).

8-42-117. Benefits to partial dependents. (1) If death occurs to an injured employee, other than as a proximate result of the injury, before disability indemnity ceases and the deceased leaves persons partially dependent upon the deceased for support, death benefits shall be as follows:

(a) Where the injury proximately caused permanent total disability, the death benefit shall consist of that proportion of the unpaid and unaccrued portion of the permanent total disability benefit which the employee would have received had the employee lived until said employee had received compensation at the employee's regular rate for a period of six years as the amount devoted by the deceased to the support of such persons for the year immediately prior to the injury bears to the total income of the persons during said year.

(b) Where the injury caused permanent partial disability, the death benefit shall consist of that proportion of the unpaid and unaccrued portion of the permanent partial disability benefit which the employee would have received if the employee had lived as the amount devoted by the deceased to the support of such persons for the year immediately prior to the injury bears to the total income of the persons during said year.

The purpose of the workmen's compensation act is to cast upon the particular industry the burden resulting from accidental injuries sustained by its employees while performing duties arising out of and in the course of their employment. Borquez v. John Burbank Trucking, 164 Colo. 217, 433 P.2d 767 (1967).

However, this section was not intended to compensate employees for injuries on illness not due to their employment; or to pay benefits to their dependents when death results from such injuries or illness; or to pay the medical, hospital, funeral, or other expenses incurred by reason of such injuries, illness, or death. Borquez v. John Burbank Trucking, 164 Colo. 217, 433 P.2d 767 (1967).

But not unreasonable to pay dependents award made during employee's lifetime. It is not unreasonable to pay dependents, when the employee's death resulted from injuries not due to employment, any unpaid installments or compensation that may become due and payable to the employee during his lifetime, under a disability award made during his lifetime. Borquez v. John Burbank Trucking, 164 Colo. 217, 433 P.2d 767 (1967).

And this section has no application were the employee dies before there has been any determination that he is even entitled to any permanent partial disability benefits. Borquez v. John Burbank Trucking, 164 Colo. 217, 433 P.2d 767 (1967).

Applied in Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 89 Colo. 475, 3 P.2d 1079 (1931).

8-42-118. Applicability of repeal of death benefits to nonresident dependents. The repeal of section 8-50-114, as said section existed prior to July 1, 1983, shall not affect the payments of death benefits which are being paid before July 1, 1983.

8-42-119. Partial dependents - compensation. Partial dependents shall be entitled to receive only that portion of the benefits provided for those wholly dependent which the average amount of the wages regularly contributed by the deceased to such partial dependents at and for a reasonable time immediately prior to the injury bore to the total income of the dependents during the same time. The director has power and discretion to determine the proper elements to be considered as income of said dependents in each particular case. Where there are persons both wholly dependent and partially dependent, only those wholly dependent shall be entitled to compensation.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 8-42-119 is similar to § 8-50-104 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Employer and the state compensation insurance fund were without standing to raise the constitutionality of this section as violative of the equal protection clause of the fourteenth amendment, as such challenges may only be leveled by members of the group whose rights are impaired by the contested legislation. Am. Metal Climax, Inc. v. Claimant of Butler, 188 Colo. 116, 532 P.2d 951 (1975).

Minor children presumed "wholly" dependent. Under the clear statutory language of this section, minor children are presumed "wholly" dependent, and the presumption may be overcome only by evidence showing that the children received no support from the deceased. Knight v. Dept. of Natural Res., 689 P.2d 733 (Colo. App. 1984).

Partially dependent claimants are not entitled to receive compensation during the time that a wholly dependent claimant is entitled thereto. Central Sur. & Ins. Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 94 Colo. 341, 30 P.2d 253 (1934).

But where payment of compensation to those wholly dependent upon an employee is discontinued for statutory reasons, partial dependents are entitled to receive compensation to the extent of the determined percentage of the balance only, due under the original award. Central Sur. & Ins. Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 94 Colo. 341, 30 P.2d 253 (1934).

Presumed whole dependency has no priority over actual whole dependency. Central Sur. & Ins. Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 94 Colo. 341, 30 P.2d 253 (1934); L.B. Cole Produce Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 123 Colo. 278, 228 P.2d 808 (1951).

Evidence supporting findings of whole dependency on son. In a proceeding for compensation where claimant alleged that decedent, her son, had never married, finding that claimant was wholly dependent on son and that he was killed in course of employment and not in violation of a safety rule were supported by competent evidence. L.B. Cole Produce Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 123 Colo. 278, 228 P.2d 808 (1951).

Social security payments used in determining amount of benefits due. Where social security payments constitute substantial and regular income to claimants, such payments are properly considered as source of income in determining amount of benefits due claimants under statute. Truitt v. Indus. Comm'n, 31 Colo. App. 166, 499 P.2d 621 (1972).

Under this section the question of dependency is to be determined as a matter of fact, and cannot be based on an existing legal duty to provide support. Colo. Fuel & Iron Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 90 Colo. 330, 9 P.2d 285 (1932).

But error to dismiss claim despite no detailed findings of fact. If the findings are sufficient to support award on the question of partial dependency, it is error for the trial court to dismiss the claim on the ground that the action was without and in excess of statutory powers, notwithstanding no detailed findings of fact as to partial dependency were made. Indus. Comm'n v. Calumet Fuel Co., 108 Colo. 133, 114 P.2d 297 (1941).

8-42-120. Termination of right to benefits. Death benefits shall be paid to a dependent widow or widower for life or until remarriage, and, if there are no dependent children, as defined in section 8-41-501 (1) (b) and (1) (c), at the time of remarriage, a two-year lump-sum benefit without discount, less any lump sums previously paid, shall be paid to such widow or widower. Death benefits shall terminate upon the happening of any of the following contingencies and shall thereupon survive to the remaining dependents, if any: Upon the death of any dependent; when a child or brother or sister of the deceased reaches the age of eighteen years, except as otherwise provided in sections 8-41-501 (1) (b) and (1) (c) and 8-41-502; and upon the expiration of six years from the date of the death of the injured employee in the case of partial dependents.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 8-42-120 is similar to § 8-50-106 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section is constitutional and does not violate equal protection of the law or due process. Dow Chemical Co. v. Gabel, 746 P.2d 1357 (Colo. App. 1987).

This section does not explicitly provide that termination cannot occur for reasons other than those enumerated. Berry Constr., Inc. v. Indus. Comm'n, 39 Colo. App. 251, 567 P.2d 806 (1977).

Termination where dependents pursue remedy against third-party tortfeasor. The propriety of termination of death benefits where the dependents of deceased elect to take compensation under articles 40 to 54 but nevertheless pursue their remedy against a third-party tortfeasor is implicit in section 8-52-108. Berry Constr., Inc. v. Indus. Comm'n, 39 Colo. App. 251, 567 P.2d 806 (1977).

The adoption of a minor dependent is not a condition upon which the right to death benefits shall lapse. The arguments that the adopted child has ceased to be dependent and that he could collect two death benefits at the same time if his adopted father should be killed by accident in the course of his employment, would be forceful if addressed to the general assembly but the statute is explicit and it cannot be added to or taken from. Employers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 70 Colo. 229, 199 P. 483 (1921).

Words not applying exclusively to wholly dependents. It is contended that the words "shall thereupon survive to the remaining dependents", in this section were intended to apply only to those who are wholly dependent. But if the general assembly so intended, no doubt the word "wholly" would have been inserted in the appropriated place. Its omission is significant. If the provision were not intended to apply to others than those wholly dependent, it would serve no useful purpose; for if there were two or more persons wholly dependent and one remarried or died, the rights of the other or others to compensation would continue without any such provisions. Indeed, the word "survive" would hardly be selected if the intent were such as counsel contend it was. Central Sur. & Ins. Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 94 Colo. 341, 30 P.2d 253 (1934).

Benefits survive. The sixty-six and two-thirds percent of the deceased's salary is payable to those wholly dependent upon the deceased regardless of number. Such benefits survive as provided by statute if one dependent becomes ineligible. Indus. Comm'n v. Employers' Liab. Assurance Corp., 169 Colo. 396, 456 P.2d 739 (1969).

But payments cannot exceed statutory maximum. Regardless of the language providing for the share of surviving dependents to other dependents, the payments cannot in any event exceed the statutory maximum. Indus. Comm'n v. Employers' Liab. Assurance Corp., 169 Colo. 396, 456 P.2d 739 (1969).

And the right of a widow to receive compensation under an award for the death of her husband terminates upon her remarriage. Tavernor v. Royal Indem. Co., 84 Colo. 521, 272 P. 3 (1928); Nat'l Sugar Mfg. Co. v. Bauer, 148 Colo. 436, 366 P.2d 388 (1961).

If a widow with a right to receive compensation under an award for the death of her husband remarries, and the new marriage ends in divorce, the widow's right to receive from her first husband is not reinstated upon the divorce. Dow Chemical Co. v. Gabel, 746 P.2d 1357 (Colo. App. 1987).

Moreover, dependents must prove their dependency on the employee and that such dependency has not been terminated by the dependent's marriage, death, or attainment of age 18. In re Hampton v. State, 31 Colo. App. 141, 500 P.2d 1186 (1972).

Children of deceased worker entitled to death benefits as full-time students pursuant to § 8-50-101 (now § 8-41-501) even though they were not 18 at time of death. Western Gas v. Indus. Claim App. Office, 797 P.2d 823 (Colo. App. 1990).

Applied in Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 152 Colo. 256, 381 P.2d 267 (1963); Indus. Comm'n v. Employers' Liab. Assurance Corp., 169 Colo. 396, 456 P.2d 739 (1969).

8-42-121. Director to determine and apportion benefits. Death benefits shall be paid to such one or more of the dependents of the decedent, for the benefit of all the dependents entitled to such compensation, as may be determined by the director, who may apportion the benefits among such dependents in such manner as the director may deem just and equitable. Payment to a dependent subsequent in right may be made, if the director deems it proper, which payment shall operate to discharge all other claims therefor. The dependents or persons to whom benefits are paid shall apply the same to the use of the several beneficiaries thereof according to their respective claims upon the decedent for support in compliance with the finding and direction of the director.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. (1) Since § 8-42-121 is similar to § 8-50-115 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

(2) Cases included in the annotations to this section which refer to the industrial commission were decided prior to the 1969 amendment which vested the director of the division of labor instead of the industrial commission with the power to determine and apportion benefits.

No specific provision of this article prescribes an equal apportionment among dependents. It does not follow from the language of former § 8-50-101, "conclusively presumed to be wholly dependent", when read in conjunction with this section, that all such dependents must, as a matter of law, be treated on an equal basis. To so conclude would be to ignore the express provisions of this section. Spoo v. Spoo, 145 Colo. 268, 358 P.2d 870 (1961).

For it was the intent of the general assembly to vest the commission with some apportioning power, first among those claiming to be dependents whose status depends upon proof of their dependency, and second, those dependents whose status is fixed by statute. Spoo v. Spoo, 145 Colo. 268, 358 P.2d 870 (1961).

However, an inequitable award is not in accord with the requirements of this section which limits the discretion of the commission to that which is just and equitable. Spoo v. Spoo, 145 Colo. 268, 358 P.2d 870 (1961).

Applied in Indus. Comm'n v. Employers' Liab. Assurance Corp., 169 Colo. 396, 456 P.2d 739 (1969).

8-42-122. Minor dependents - safeguarding payments. In all cases of death where the dependents are minor children, it shall be sufficient for the surviving spouse or a friend to make application and claim on behalf of the minor children. The director, for the purpose of protecting the rights and interests of any dependents whom the director deems incapable of fully protecting their own interests, may deposit the payments in any type of account in state or national banks insured by the federal deposit insurance corporation or its successor, savings and loan associations that are insured by the federal deposit insurance corporation or its successor, or credit unions that are insured by the national credit union share insurance fund and may otherwise provide for the manner and method of safeguarding the payments due such dependents in such manner as the director sees fit.

8-42-123. Burial expenses. When, as a proximate result of an injury, death occurs to an injured employee, there shall be paid in one lump sum within thirty days after death a sum not to exceed seven thousand dollars for reasonable funeral and burial expenses. Said sum may be paid to the undertaker, cemetery, or any other person who has paid the funeral and burial costs, if the director so orders. If the employee leaves no dependents, compensation shall be limited to said sum and the compensation, if any, which has accrued to date of death and the medical, surgical, and hospital expenses provided in articles 40 to 47 of this title. If the deceased employee leaves dependents, said sum shall be paid in addition to all other sums of compensation provided for in this article.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 8-50-107 as it existed prior to 1990.

8-42-124. Assignability and exemption of claims - payment to employers - when. (1) Except for amounts due under court-ordered support or for a judgment for a debt for fraudulently obtained public assistance, fraudulently obtained overpayments of public assistance, or excess public assistance paid for which the recipient was ineligible, claims for compensation or benefits due, or any proceeds thereof, under articles 40 to 47 of this title shall not be assigned, released, or commuted except as provided in said articles and shall be exempt from all claims of creditors and from levy, execution, and attachment or other remedy or recovery or collection of a debt, which exemption may not be waived.

(2) The power given in any power of attorney or other authority from any injured employee or the dependents of any killed employee purporting to authorize any other person to receive, be paid, or receipt for any compensation benefits awarded any such claimant shall be wholly void and illegal and of no force and effect; except that:

(a) Any employer who is subject to the provisions of articles 40 to 47 of this title and who, by separate agreement, working agreement, contract of hire, or any other procedure, continues to pay a sum in excess of the temporary total disability benefits prescribed by articles 40 to 47 of this title to any employee temporarily disabled as a result of any injury arising out of and in the course of such employee's employment and has not charged the employee with any earned vacation leave, sick leave, or other similar benefits shall be reimbursed if insured by an insurance carrier or shall take credit if self-insured to the extent of all moneys that such employee may be eligible to receive as compensation or benefits for temporary partial or temporary total disability under the provisions of said articles, subject to the approval of the director. If the employee is injured while under a fixed duration contract of employment, all salary and wages paid pursuant to that contract shall be prorated over the duration of the contract in determining whether in any given week the employer paid a sum in excess of the temporary total disability benefit.

(b) This subsection (2) shall not apply to an attorney licensed to practice law in this state and acting in accordance with a power of attorney given by the claimant solely for the purpose of distributing funds pursuant to an admission of liability or an order of the division.

(3) Such payments shall be paid directly to the employer during the period of time that such employer continues to pay a sum in excess of the temporary total disability benefits prescribed by articles 40 to 47 of this title and has not charged any earned vacation leave, sick leave, or other similar benefits to any employee so disabled and for so long as such employee is eligible for temporary disability benefits under the provisions of articles 40 to 47 of this title. The payment of such moneys to an employer shall constitute the payment of compensation or benefits to the employee in accordance with the provisions of section 8-42-103.

(4) When the payment by an employer to any such disabled employee is reduced to a sum equal to or less than the temporary total disability benefits prescribed by articles 40 to 47 of this title, or when the employer has charged the employee with any earned vacation leave, sick leave, or other similar benefits for any reason, the rights of the employee to receive direct payment of any award for temporary partial or temporary total disability that said employee may be entitled to on and after the effective date of such reduction shall be reinstated in accordance with the provisions of articles 40 to 47 of this title.

(5) Any employer subject to the provisions of articles 40 to 47 of this title and otherwise qualifying for direct payment of employee benefits as provided in this section shall notify the division and the insurance carrier of such employer's eligibility to receive such moneys. The director shall approve such direct payment after the filing of such information by the employer as the director may require.

(6) Nothing in this section shall be construed to limit in any way the right of any employee to full payment of any award which may be granted to said employee for permanent partial or permanent total disability under the provisions of articles 40 to 47 of this title; except that benefits for permanent total disability and permanent partial disability shall be subject to wage assignment or income assignment as wages pursuant to section 14-14-102 (9), C.R.S., and subject to garnishment as earnings pursuant to section 13-54.5-101 (2) (b), C.R.S., and subject to administrative lien and attachment pursuant to section 26-13-122, C.R.S., for purposes of enforcement of court-ordered child support and subject to garnishment as earnings pursuant to sections 13-54-104 (1) (b) (IV) and 13-54.5-101 (2) (d), C.R.S., for purposes of enforcement of a judgment for a debt for fraudulently obtained public assistance, fraudulently obtained overpayments of public assistance, or excess public assistance paid for which the recipient was ineligible.

(7) Following an injury, any injured employee may authorize in writing the continuation of any payroll deduction which the employee had authorized or could have authorized before the injury, which authorization shall be legal and may be honored by the employer to the extent that proceeds of compensation of claims are available to the employer or are made available to the employer by the employer's insurance carrier for this purpose until the authorization is revoked in writing by the injured employee.

(8) If any employer who pays to an injured employee a sum in excess of the temporary total disability benefits prescribed by articles 40 to 47 of this title and who has not charged the employee with any earned vacation leave, sick leave, or other similar benefits seeks to have assigned the compensation benefits otherwise due the injured employee as provided in this section, the employer shall notify the employee of said request at the same time the employer makes the request of the director or insurance carrier or both.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For note, "Rural Poverty and the Law in Southern Colorado", see 47 Den. L. J. 82 (1970). For article, "Update on Colorado Appellate Decisions in Colorado Workers' Compensation Law", see 30 Colo. Law. 69 (April 2001). For article, "Update on Colorado Appellate Decisions in Workers' Compensation Law", see 33 Colo. Law. 117 (November 2004).

Annotator's note. Since § 8-42-124 is similar to § 8-52-107 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section reflects a legislative intent to ensure that workers' compensation benefits are available as a wage substitute. This policy would be contravened by a judicial holding that such awards are marital property to be divided upon dissolution of the marriage. Unliquidated workers' compensation awards are different from pensions, and whether award is marital property depends on extent to which award compensates for loss of earning capacity and medical expenses incurred during the marriage. If award compensates the spouse for post-dissolution loss of earning capacity, it is not marital property even if the compensable injury occurred during the marriage. If workers' compensation claim is pending on date of dissolution and will likely include indemnification for loss of marital earnings or medical expenses, trial court may reserve jurisdiction to apportion marital interest upon receipt of award. In re Smith, 817 P.2d 641 (Colo. App. 1991).

The general assembly intended that the 2001 amendment to subsection (6) be applied retroactively. Am. Comp. Ins. Co. v. McBride, 107 P.3d 973 (Colo. App. 2004).

Only permanent total disability benefits may be garnished for child support, under the plain meaning of the exception stated in subsection (6). Permanent partial disability benefits may not be so garnished. In re Hamby, 954 P.2d 635 (Colo. App. 1997).

Because the 2001 amendment to subsection (6) did not specify an effective date, the amendment creating an exception that permitted garnishment of temporary total disability benefits for enforcement of child support orders was effective upon its enactment on May 21, 2001, and had to be applied immediately because it was remedial and procedural in nature. Am. Comp. Ins. Co. v. McBride, 107 P.3d 973 (Colo. App. 2004).

Retroactive application of a statute is not necessarily unconstitutional. Where a statute effects a change that is procedural or remedial, it may be applied retroactively. A statute is remedial if it does not create, eliminate, or modify vested rights or liabilities. When retroactive application of a statute is unconstitutional, it is deemed retrospective. Am. Comp. Ins. Co. v. McBride, 107 P.3d 973 (Colo. App. 2004).

Generally, claim that is not assignable does not survive death of claimant. In re Dick v. Indus. Comm'n, 197 Colo. 71, 589 P.2d 950 (1979).

Child Support Enforcement Procedures Act did not create exception to statute specifically prohibiting satisfaction of judgments out of workers' compensation benefits. In re Snyder, 739 P.2d 923 (Colo. App. 1987) (decided prior to 1987 amendment to subsection (1)).

If benefits have been received by claimant and subsequently deposited into a bank account, they are no longer "due" under this statute. Therefore, such benefits are no longer exempt from garnishment when a plaintiff serves a writ of garnishment on defendant's bank. Borrayo v. Lefever, 159 P.3d 657 (Colo. App. 2006).

Vacation and sick benefits paid to claimant are earned benefits and cannot be deducted from or credited against the temporary disability benefits to which claimant is entitled. Pub. Serv. Co. v. Johnson, 789 P.2d 487 (Colo. App. 1990).

Employer did not charge claimant sick leave within the meaning of subsection (2)(a)

when it returned and reinstated the sick leave previously used by claimant after a determination that the claimant suffered a compensable injury. Further, employer continued to pay claimant his full wages in excess of the temporary total disability benefits prescribed under this section throughout the relevant period of time. Therefore, employer is not liable for further temporary disability benefits. City & County of Denver v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 107 P.3d 1019 (Colo. App. 2004).

Attorney lien statute does not create implied exception to protections offered to workers' compensation benefits, because the workers' compensation statute unequivocally exempts workers' compensation benefits from any remedy ordinarily available to satisfy a debt, with only one explicit exception. James E. Freemyer, P.C. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 32 P.3d 564 (Colo. App. 2000).

8-42-125. Data gathering on workers' compensation system. The governor and the leader of the opposing party in the house of representatives and the leader of the opposing party in the senate shall contract with a person or entity for obtaining information on the workers' compensation system. The person or entity gathering the information shall work solely at the unanimous direction of the governor and the opposition leadership. Issues or topics that will be subject to the information gathering process shall be determined by unanimous decision of the governor and the opposition leadership. The contractor for the gathering of the information shall have complete access to all records of and files in the division of workers' compensation and the office of administrative courts. Such contractor shall guarantee that any information gathered on any individual shall be kept confidential.

NOTICES AND REPORTS

8-43-101. Record of injuries - occupational disease - reported to division - rules.

(1) Every employer shall keep a record of all injuries that result in fatality to, or permanent physical impairment of, or lost time from work for the injured employee in excess of three shifts or calendar days and the contraction by an employee of an occupational disease that has been listed by the director by rule. Within ten days after notice or knowledge that an employee has contracted such an occupational disease, or the occurrence of a permanently physically impairing injury, or lost-time injury to an employee, or immediately in the case of a fatality, the employer shall, upon forms prescribed by the division for that purpose, report said occupational disease, permanently physically impairing injury, lost-time injury, or fatality to the division. The report shall contain such information as shall be required by the director.

(2) Unless exempted by the director pursuant to rule because of a small number of filings or a showing of financial hardship, beginning July 1, 2006, reports submitted pursuant to this section shall be submitted in an electronic format as determined by the director. Exposure to an injurious substance as defined by the director by rule and injuries to employees that result in no more than three days' or three shifts' loss of time from work, or no permanent physical impairment, or no fatality to the employee shall be reported by the employer only to the insurer of said employer's workers' compensation insurance liability, which injuries and exposure the insurer shall report only by monthly summary form to or as otherwise requested by the division.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 8-43-101 is similar to § 8-45-101 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Report made part of judgment roll when filed in clerk's office. The first report, made as directed by this section, is one of the class of "documents and papers on file in the matter" which by § 8-1-134 is made a part of the judgment roll when filed in the office of the clerk of the district court. New Jersey Fid. & Plate Glass Ins. Co. v. Patterson, 86 Colo. 580, 284 P. 334 (1929).

Not necessary that report be formally introduced in evidence. New Jersey Fid. & Plate Glass Ins. Co. v. Patterson, 86 Colo. 580, 284 P. 334 (1929).

Report's weight as evidence. Report of an accident by employer may be considered on hearing of the claim of employee for compensation, its weight as evidence being for the division. New Jersey Fid. & Plate Glass Ins. Co. v. Patterson, 86 Colo. 580, 284 P. 334 (1929).

Admissibility of admissions against interest contained in report by employer. Admissions against interest contained in a report of accident by employer cannot be rejected as evidence because contradicted by statements set out in a so-called "notice of contest" filed by the employer. New Jersey Fid. & Plate Glass Ins. Co. v. Patterson, 86 Colo. 580, 284 P. 334 (1929).

Employer's failure to make report, or to correct an erroneous report, tolls the limitation period within which claimant must file notice claiming compensation. City of Englewood v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 954 P.2d 640 (Colo. App. 1998).

Motor vehicle accident reports not part of workmen's compensation act. The provisions which require police reports of all motor vehicle accidents within the state resulting in injury are not a part of the workmen's compensation act. Stewart v. United States, 716 F.2d 755 (10th Cir.

Applied in Grant v. Indus. Claim Apps. Office, 740 P.2d 530 (Colo. App. 1987).

8-43-102. Notice to employer of injury - notice to employees of requirement - failure to report. (1) (a) Every employee who sustains an injury resulting from an accident shall notify said employee's employer in writing of the injury within four days of the occurrence of the injury. If the employee is physically or mentally unable to provide said notice, the employee's foreman, superintendent, manager, or any other person in charge who has notice of said injury shall submit such written notice to the employer. Any other person who has notice of said injury may submit a written notice to the said person in charge or to the employer, and in that event the injured employee shall be relieved of the obligation to give such notice. Otherwise, if said employee fails to report said injury in writing, said employee may lose up to one day's compensation for each day's failure to so report. If, at the time of said injury, the employer has failed to display the notice specified in paragraph (b) of this subsection (1), the time period allotted to the employee shall be tolled for the duration of such failure.

(b) Every employer shall display at all times in a prominent place on the workplace premises a printed card with a minimum height of fourteen inches and a width of eleven inches with each letter to be a minimum of one-half inch in height, which shall read as follows:

WARNING

IF YOU ARE INJURED ON THE JOB, WRITTEN NOTICE OF YOUR INJURY MUST BE GIVEN TO YOUR EMPLOYER WITHIN FOUR WORKING DAYS AFTER THE ACCIDENT, PURSUANT TO SECTION 8-43-102 (1), COLORADO REVISED STATUTES.

IF THE INJURY RESULTS FROM YOUR USE OF ALCOHOL OR CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES, YOUR WORKERS' COMPENSATION DISABILITY BENEFITS MAY BE REDUCED BY ONE-HALF IN ACCORDANCE WITH SECTION 8-42-112.5, COLORADO REVISED STATUTES.

(1.5) (a) Every employee of an employer who has permission to be its own insurance carrier pursuant to section 8-44-201 or of an employer who participates in a public entity self-insurance pool pursuant to section 8-44-204 who sustains an injury resulting from an accident shall notify his employer in writing of said injury within four working days of the occurrence of the injury, unless the employer, or the employee's foreman, superintendent, or manager has written notice of said injury. If the employee is physically or mentally unable to provide said notice, the employee's foreman, superintendent, or manager, or any other person in charge who has written notice of said injury, shall submit such written notice to the employer. If said employee fails to report said injury in writing, such employee may lose up to one day's compensation for each day's failure to so report. Any other person who has notice of said injury may submit a written notice to the employer which report shall relieve the injured employee from reporting the accident. Any employer receiving written notice of an injury pursuant to this subsection (1.5) shall affix thereon the date and time of receipt of such notice and shall make a copy of such notice available to the injured employee within two working days following receipt of such notice.

(b) Every employer who has permission to be its own insurance carrier pursuant to section 8-44-201 or who participates in a public entity self-insurance pool pursuant to section 8-44-204 shall display at all times in a prominent place on the workplace premises a printed card with a minimum height of fourteen inches and a width of eleven inches with each letter to be a minimum of one-half inch in height, which shall read as follows:

IF THE INJURY RESULTS FROM YOUR USE OF ALCOHOL OR CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES, YOUR WORKERS' COMPENSATION DISABILITY BENEFITS MAY BE REDUCED BY ONE-HALF IN ACCORDANCE WITH SECTION 8-42-112.5, COLORADO REVISED STATUTES.

(2) Written notice of the contraction of an occupational disease shall be given to the employer by the affected employee or by someone on behalf of the affected employee within thirty days after the first distinct manifestation thereof. In the event of death from such occupational disease, written notice thereof shall be given to the employer within thirty days after such death. Failure to give either of such notices shall be deemed waived unless objection is made at a hearing on the claim prior to any award or decision thereon. Actual knowledge by an employer in whose employment an employee was last injuriously exposed to an occupational disease of the contraction of such disease by such employee and of exposure to the conditions causing it shall be deemed notice of its contraction. If the notice required in this section is not given as provided and within the time fixed, the director may reduce the compensation that would otherwise have been payable in such manner and to such extent as the director deems just, reasonable, and proper under the existing circumstances.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 8-43-102 is similar to § 8-45-102 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

An injury takes place when the claimant, as a reasonable man, should recognize the nature, seriousness, and probable compensable character of his injury. Crest Fence Co. v. Cec, 175 Colo. 21, 485 P.2d 709 (1971).

And to interpret this section so that a person who reasonably discovers his injury long after the accident and is entitled to compensation, is not entitled to his medical expenses is nearly absurd, and a defeat of the purpose of the act. Crest Fence Co. v. Cec, 175 Colo. 21, 485 P.2d 709 (1971).

Penalties for failure of an employee to report an accidental injury will be enforced unless the case comes within one of the exceptions contained in the section. Jabot v. Indus. Comm'n, 94 Colo. 424, 30 P.2d 871 (1934).

Verbal notice given to the superintendent of the company immediately after the acci- dent is sufficient. Frank v. Indus. Comm'n, 96 Colo. 364, 43 P.2d 158 (1935).

Verbal notice to supervisor and company physician of pain and suffering caused by prolonged standing and lifting was sufficient notification to employer to require compliance with § 8-53-102. Jones v. Adolph Coors Co., 689 P.2d 681 (Colo. App. 1984).

Combined investigatory and adjudicatory functions. Any order purporting to combine investigatory and adjudicatory functions in a single referee would raise serious questions of propriety. Thompson v. Indus. Comm'n, 33 Colo. App. 369, 520 P.2d 139 (1974).

Extrajudicial visit to claimant's home improper. Absent any authorization for such an investigation, the referee acted in excess of his powers when he made an extrajudicial visit to claimant's home. Thompson v. Indus. Comm'n, 33 Colo. App. 369, 520 P.2d 139 (1974).

Actual notice to contractor sufficient. This section does not require a claimant to give notice to landowners within two days from the time of the accident when the contractor in actual charge of a job on the landowners' property is the employer of the claimant at the time of the accident and remained the employer even though he had no insurance. Actual notice to the contractor is sufficient to comply with this section. Stewart v. Indus. Comm'n, 163 Colo. 12, 428 P.2d 367 (1967).

Time begins to run for filing notice claiming compensation when the claimant, as a reasonable man, should recognize the nature, seriousness and probable compensable character of his injury. Romero v. Indus. Comm'n, 632 P.2d 1052 (Colo. App. 1981).

And timing of penalty for failure to report injury. Penalties for failure to report an injury to an employer should only be assessed from the time the employee discovered, or should have discovered, the probable compensable character of the injury; penalties in such cases should not be assessed from the date of the accident. Romero v. Indus. Comm'n, 632 P.2d 1052 (Colo. App. 1981).

Since the imposition of penalties reduces the employer's liability for disability benefits, it is in the nature of an affirmative defense. Accordingly, the employer bears the initial burden of proving it did not receive written notice of an injury to an employee. Postlewait v. Midwest Barricade, 905 P.2d 21 (Colo. App. 1995).

Once an employer presents prima facie evidence that the claimant did not timely report an injury, the burden shifts to the claimant to rebut the prima facie showing. Postlewait v. Midwest Barricade, 905 P.2d 21 (Colo. App. 1995).

Oral notice to an employer of an industrial injury is insufficient and strict compliance with the writing requirement is necessary. Postlewait v. Midwest Barricade, 905 P.2d 21 (Colo. App. 1995).

8-43-103. Notice of injury - time limit. (1) Notice of an injury, for which compensation and benefits are payable, shall be given by the employer to the division and insurance carrier, unless the employer is self-insured, within ten days after the injury, and, in case of the death of any employee resulting from any such injury or any accident in which three or more employees are injured, the employer shall give immediate notice thereof to the director. If no such notice is given by the employer, as required by articles 40 to 47 of this title, such notice may be given by any person. Any notice required to be filed by an injured employee or, if deceased, by said employee's dependents may be made and filed by anyone on behalf of such claimant and shall be considered as done by such claimant if not specifically disclaimed or objected to by such claimant in writing filed with the division within a reasonable time. Such notice shall be in writing and upon forms prescribed by the division for that purpose and served upon the division by delivering to, or by mailing by registered mail two copies thereof addressed to, the division at its office in Denver, Colorado. Upon receipt of such notice from a claimant, the division shall immediately mail one copy thereof to said employer or said employer's agent or insurance carrier.

(2) The director and administrative law judges employed by the office of administrative courts shall have jurisdiction at all times to hear and determine and make findings and awards on all cases of injury for which compensation or benefits are provided by articles 40 to 47 of this title. Except in cases of disability or death resulting from exposure to radioactive materials, substances, or machines or to fissionable materials, or any type of malignancy caused thereby, or from poisoning by uranium or its compounds, or from asbestosis, silicosis, and anthracosis, the right to compensation and benefits provided by said articles shall be barred unless, within two years after the injury or after death resulting therefrom, a notice claiming compensation is filed with the division. This limitation shall not apply to any claimant to whom compensation has been paid or if it is established to the satisfaction of the director within three years after the injury or death that a reasonable excuse exists for the failure to file such notice claiming compensation and if the employer's rights have not been prejudiced thereby, and the furnishing of medical, surgical, or hospital treatment by the employer shall not be considered payment of compensation or benefits within the meaning of this section; but, in all cases in which the employer has been given notice of an injury and fails, neglects, or refuses to report said injury to the division as required by the provisions of said articles, this statute of limitations shall not begin to run against the claim of the injured employee or said employee's dependents in the event of death until the required report has been filed with the division.

(3) In cases of disability or death resulting from exposure to radioactive materials, substances, or machines or to fissionable materials, or any type of malignancy caused thereby, or from poisoning by uranium or its compounds, or from asbestosis, silicosis, or anthracosis, the right to compensation and benefits shall be barred unless, within five years after the commencement of disability or death, a notice claiming compensation is filed with the division.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "The Occupational Disease Disability Act From the Standpoint of the Claimant", see 28 Dicta 41 (1951). For article, "One Year Review of Torts", see 35 Dicta 53 (1958).

Annotator's note. (1) Since § 8-43-103 is similar to § 8-52-105 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

(2) Cases included in the annotations to this section which refer to the industrial commission were decided prior to the 1986 amendment which vested the director of the division of labor with the jurisdiction previously exercised by the industrial commission to hear and determine and make findings and awards on all cases of injury for which compensation or benefits are provided or were decided prior to the enactment of 1986 Senate Bill No. 12 which abolished said commission.

The proceedings hereunder are purely statutory and not equivalent to a suit in equity. The question of permitting the defense of laches or something analogous thereto in a purely statutory proceeding is one of legislative policy which probably can be answered only by express act of the general assembly. The courts are not allowed to indulge in judicial legislation. Indus. Comm'n v. Carpenter, 102 Colo. 22, 24, 76 P.2d 418 (1938).

Compliance with this section is not an admission of liability. The filing of the first report of injury as required in this section is not an admission of liability by an employer. Stadler v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 811 P.2d 447 (Colo. App. 1991).

Applied in First Nat'l Bank v. Long, 44 Colo. App. 317, 616 P.2d 180 (1980).

II. NOTICE OF INJURY BY EMPLOYER.

Employer only required to report accident resulting in injury. Under this section an employer is not required to report all accidents or incidents in connection with his employees, but only those resulting in injury to an employee, the plain legislative intent being that only injuries be reported within the 10-day period prescribed. Monks Excavating & Redi-Mix Cement v. Kopsa, 148 Colo. 586, 367 P.2d 321 (1961).

Injury means compensable injury. Since no benefits flow to a workman merely because he has been the victim of an accident and since injuries must be of sufficient magnitude to prevent him from working for more than seven days before they are compensable, it follows that the term "injury", as it is employed in this section, means compensable injury. The statute so states, in slightly different verbiage. It requires notice to be given of an injury, for which compensation and benefits are payable. City of Boulder v. Payne, 162 Colo. 345, 426 P.2d 194 (1967).

For occupational disease, compensable "injury" occurs when the claimant becomes disabled. Before then, although the claimant may suspect that his or her health problems are work-related, no compensable injury has yet occurred. City of Colo. Springs v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 89 P.3d 504 (Colo. App. 2004).

However, where an employer has no notice of an injury communicated to him by the employee, and where no such injury is apparent, the employer is not required to do anything under this section. Monks Excavating & Redi-Mix Cement v. Kopsa, 148 Colo. 586, 367 P.2d 321 (1961).

And when a claimant states to his employer that he is all right and thus continues for many months thereafter with the work and makes no claim of compensation, the employer is not required to give notice of the injury or to file notice of contest for no such claim of compensation had been made. Monks Excavating & Redi-Mix Cement v. Kopsa, 148 Colo. 586, 367 P.2d 321 (1961).

This section would be an absurdity if interpreted to require the employer to report something about which he has no knowledge, namely an injury to an employee. By the same token, to interpret the statute so as to require the employer to report all accidents would be a burden not to be found in the statute. Because of the burden involved in reporting all of these small incidents, it was plain that the general assembly intended that only injuries be reported within the 10-day period prescribed. Monks Excavating & Redi-Mix Cement v. Kopsa, 148 Colo. 586, 367 P.2d 321 (1961); City of Boulder v. Payne, 162 Colo. 345, 426 P.2d 194 (1967).

Subsection (1) provides that anyone can make a claim for a claimant. Colo. Auto Body, Inc. v. Newton, 160 Colo. 113, 414 P.2d 480 (1966).

Litigation of issues with knowledge of oral claim waives requirement of written claim. While it may be true that an objection to the lack of a written claim at the time of a hearing, upon notice, might result in supplying the omission within the two-year period (now five-year period), the voluntary litigation of other issues, with full knowledge of the oral claim could be construed by the director as a voluntary waiver of the technical requirement of a written claim. Colo. Auto Body, Inc. v. Newton, 160 Colo. 113, 414 P.2d 480 (1966).

But no waiver where no notice of injury. There is a clear distinction delineated by the authorities between no notice of a claimed injury and mere irregularity in the form thereof. When no notice of a claimed injury occurs, it is jurisdictional, and there can be no waiver. When a deficiency is only as to form of notice of a claimed injury there can be a waiver, and the conduct of the parties after the notice can form the basis of such a waiver. Colo. Auto Body, Inc. v. Newton, 160 Colo. 113, 414 P.2d 480 (1966).

III. JURISDICTION.

The fact-finding function in support of any award of compensation is for the fact-finder and not the reviewing court. Bohmann v. Indus. Comm'n, 76 Colo. 588, 233 P. 621 (1925); Pacific Employers Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 127 Colo. 400, 257 P.2d 404 (1953); State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Foulds, 167 Colo. 123, 445 P.2d 716 (1968); Indus. Comm'n v. Nye, 171 Colo. 433, 468 P.2d 28 (1970).

Thus, reviewing court will remand as to issues industrial commission has not heard or determined. Where on review of a judgment in a workmen's compensation case it appears that the commission has not theretofore had an ample opportunity to hear and determine any issues raised in the proceeding, or has for any reason not in fact heard and determined the issues raised, this court should remand the case to the lower court with directions to set aside its judgment and transmit to the commission a statement of the issues not fully presented, staying its proceedings until the commission should hear and determine such issues and return its findings to the court. Black Diamond Fuel Co. v. Frank, 99 Colo. 528, 64 P.2d 797 (1936).

But industrial commission abuses discretion when evidence insufficient to sustain this ruling. When the evidence is insufficient as a matter of law to sustain the commission's suspension of the six month (now three year) limitation of this section, in finding otherwise the commission abused its discretion. Armour & Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 149 Colo. 251, 368 P.2d 798 (1962).

And court must set forth facts to determine whether evidence is competent. In order to determine whether there is competent evidence in the record to support the claim or whether there are reasonable inferences to be drawn therefrom to support the findings, it is necessary for the supreme court to set forth the factual situation as presented by the record. Pacific Employers Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 127 Colo. 400, 257 P.2d 404 (1953).

Court may draw its own conclusions when evidence not conflicting. When the evidence in workmen's compensation cases, as disclosed by the record in the proceeding, is undisputed and without substantial conflict, the court may properly draw its own conclusions therefrom and enter a judgment accordingly, notwithstanding the findings and award of the industrial commission may be to the contrary. Indus. Comm'n v. Pappas, 89 Colo. 329, 1 P.2d 919 (1931); Pacific Employers Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 127 Colo. 400, 257 P.2d 404 (1953).

IV. LIMITATION ON FILING CLAIMS.

A. In General.

Claim does not exist until filed and established. Until a claim is filed and established under the procedure set out in this section, neither claim nor dependents exist. Frontier Airlines v. Indus. Comm'n, 654 P.2d 1333 (Colo. App. 1982).

Time limitation for filing claims is governed by statute in effect at time of onset of disability or death because the extent of employer's liability cannot be determined until disability or death has occurred. Hadley v. Indus. Comm'n, 677 P.2d 443 (Colo. App. 1984).

The time for the filing of a claim under subsection (2) is one year (now three years) from the date of the accident. Colo. Auto Body,

Inc. v. Newton, 160 Colo. 113, 414 P.2d 480 (1966).

Three-year period not jurisdictional. The terms of this section imply a statute of limitations, for they are more like the terms employed in such statutes than like terms of jurisdictional import. The three-year period is not jurisdictional. Kersting v. Indus. Comm'n, 39 Colo. App. 297, 567 P.2d 394 (1977).

General limitation statutes do not govern a proceeding under the workmen's compensation act. Miller v. Indus. Comm'n, 106 Colo. 364, 105 P.2d 404 (1940).

For failure of employee to file notice of claim within one year (now three years) bars recovery. An employee who fails to file notice of his claim for compensation within the time period required by this section is barred from recovery. This is conclusive against employee. Indus. Comm'n v. W.A. Hover & Co., 82 Colo. 335, 259 P. 509 (1927); London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 83 Colo. 252, 263 P. 405 (1928); Monks Excavating & Redi-Mix Cement v. Kopsa, 148 Colo. 586, 367 P.2d 321 (1961).

And fact that employer does not report accident as required does not waive necessity of employee's giving such notice. Indus. Comm'n v. W.A. Hover & Co., 82 Colo. 335, 259 P. 509 (1927); Monks Excavating & Redi-Mix Cement v. Kopsa, 148 Colo. 586, 367 P.2d 321 (1961).

Although the notice may be waived. C.W. Kettering Mercantile Co. v. Fox, 77 Colo. 90, 234 P.464 (1925).

As where employer files petition for rehearing. Objection that no notice of claim was filed is waived by the employer who files a petition for rehearing, participates in the rehearing, and introduces testimony on the merits. Indus. Comm'n v. Employers' Liab. Assurance Corp., 78 Colo. 267, 241 P. 729 (1925); Ontario Mining Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 86 Colo. 206, 280 P. 483 (1929).

Also, an employer waives the limitation for filing claims when the objection is not made until it filed its petition for review after the case had once been decided in its favor, a further hearing ordered, additional evidence taken, and an award made in favor of claimant. Indus. Comm'n v. Co-Operative Oil Co., 93 Colo. 192, 24 P.2d 753 (1933).

If employer in good faith fails to notify, he does not waive right to assert this section. If an employer does not give notice of an accident in the honest belief that the employee was an independent contractor, and so advised employee's agent at the first opportunity, he does not waive his right to assert the running of this section as a defense. Weidensaul v. Indus. Comm'n, 107 Colo. 28, 108 P.2d 234 (1940).

B. Commencement and Tolling of Statute of Limitations.

The time begins to run for filing "a notice claiming compensation" when the claimant, as a reasonable man, should recognize the nature, seriousness and probable compensable character of his injury. City of Boulder v. Payne, 162 Colo. 345, 426 P.2d 194 (1967); Indus. Comm'n v. Workman, 165 Colo. 61, 437 P.2d 795 (1968); Peterson v. Wandell-Lowe Transp. & Storage, 168 Colo. 250, 450 P.2d 660 (1969); Indus. Comm'n v. Canfield, 172 Colo. 18, 469 P.2d 737 (1970); City & County of Denver v. Moore, 31 Colo. App. 310, 504 P.2d 367 (1972); Inter-mountain Rubber Industries v. Valdez, 688 P.2d 1133 (Colo. App. 1984); City of Durango v. Dunagan, 939 P.2d 496 (Colo. App. 1997).

And the critical date involved in this statute of limitations is not the date of the accident, but the date of the injury. Indus. Comm'n v. Canfield, 172 Colo. 18, 469 P.2d 737 (1970); City & County of Denver v. Moore, 31 Colo. App. 310, 504 P.2d 367 (1972).

For occupational disease, "injury" occurs when the claimant becomes disabled, and not before. City of Colo. Springs v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 89 P.3d 504 (Colo. App. 2004).

Rather, claimant need only file claim after discovery of injury. Although claimant had been experiencing monthly acoustic trauma since 1947, where a marked loss of hearing was not revealed by a doctor's examination until March, 1969, and a claim was filed in December, 1969, the claimant met the time requirements, as he was not required to make a report or file a claim until after the discovery of the injury. City & County of Denver v. Moore, 31 Colo. App. 310, 504 P.2d 367 (1972).

Sections 8-43-101 (1) and 8-43-203 (1) do not mandate a conclusion that an employee meeting this three-day or three-shift requirement has, as a matter of law, become aware of the nature or seriousness of his or her injury. City of Durango v. Dunagan, 939 P.2d 496 (Colo. App. 1997).

Statute of limitations on worker's claim for compensation never began to run since employer failed to file an injury report even though worker testified he reported injury to employer two days after accident which constituted sufficient notice. Halliburton Servs. v. Miller, 720 P.2d 571 (Colo. 1986).

Employer's failure to correct an erroneous report tolls the limitation period set forth in this section. Where initial report indicated that claimant was able to continue working after the injury, but instead he missed 23 consecutive shifts encompassing 71 calendar days and this lost time was never reported, his claim was not time-barred. City of Englewood v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 954 P.2d 640 (Colo. App. 1998).

Employer's failure to file injury report tolls limitation periods in both subsection (2) and subsection (3). Miller v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 985 P.2d 94 (Colo. App. 1999).

Determination of issue of time of injury requires fact-finding by director. Although the claimant, sought medical treatment for his injuries the day following the accident, the fact that his injury was not immediately disabling, and he was able to continue with his employment raises an issue of when the injury occurred and the six-month (now three-year) period commenced. Upon remand, that issue must be determined and a finding of fact made thereon by the director. Indus. Comm'n v. Canfield, 172 Colo. 18, 469 P.2d 737 (1970).

Finding as to when claimant should have recognized compensable injury required. Where industrial commission dismissed a compensation claim for failure of claimant to file within the statutory time period provided in this section, the commission was required to make a finding as to when the claimant reasonably should have recognized the compensable character of his injury. Richmond v. Indus. Comm'n, 33 Colo. App. 21, 513 P.2d 1088 (1973).

Employer relieved of financial burden when injured claimant files. If claimant has a compensable injury and files his claim therefor within the time provided by statute, the employer is relieved of all financial burdens respecting his injured employee. It becomes the primary obligation of the insurance carrier to pay any compensation which the director should determine to be due. Pacific Employers Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 127 Colo. 400, 257 P.2d 404 (1953).

War is sufficient to toll the running of this section. Colo. Fuel & Iron Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 73 Colo. 579, 216 P. 706 (1923); Indus. Comm'n v. Peppas, 71 Colo. 25, 203 P. 664 (1922).

Mistaken allegation of ownership of property where injury occurred will not bar recovery. Joe Dandy Mining Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 112 Colo. 241, 148 P.2d 817 (1944).

And an employee's claim for compensation for a back injury is not barred by the six-month (now three-year) limitation in this section, where his claim for another injury, received in the same accident, has been allowed by the director and later suspended, and his claim for the back injury was made when the cause was reopened on the director's own motion for the purpose of determining whether or not there had been error, mistake, or change in condition. Safeway Stores v. Newman, 123 Colo. 362, 230 P.2d 168 (1951).

But claimant's minority and ignorance of death will not toll the statutory limitation. Miller v. Indus. Comm'n, 106 Colo. 364, 105 P.2d 404 (1940).

Nor will physical and mental incapacity. Weidensaul v. Indus. Comm'n, 107 Colo. 28, 108 P.2d 234 (1940).

Corporate officer is not precluded from receiving protection of tolling of statute of limitations by virtue of his status alone. The mere fact that such officer had the authority to file a first report of injury on behalf of the corporate employer does not restrict such officer's right to file a claim. There must be a showing of fraud or improper corporate manipulation in order to overcome the statutory protection. (Decided under previous § 8-52-105.) White House Industries, Inc. v. May, 845 P.2d 544 (Colo. App. 1992).

C. Estoppel.

The doctrine of equitable estoppel may in a proper case be invoked to prevent a party from relying upon a statute of limitations. Kettering Mercantile Co. v. Fox, 77 Colo. 90, 234 P. 464 (1925); Greeley Gas & Oil Co. v. Thomas, 87 Colo. 486, 288 P. 1051 (1930).

Estoppel not shown. Where injured employee's personal friend and physician told him that he would take care of everything and file all necessary papers and reports, but failed to tell employee that employer would resist his claim, and there was no evidence that the doctor was the employer's agent for any purpose, there was no basis for estoppel against the employer to preclude him from relying on the running of this section. Weidensaul v. Indus. Comm'n, 107 Colo. 28, 108 P.2d 234 (1940).

Waiver. Where the state compensation insurance fund awaits the outcome of a hearing on the merits before invoking the three-year statute of limitations, it waives its right to the protection of that provision. Kersting v. Indus. Comm'n, 39 Colo. App. 297, 567 P.2d 394 (1977).

Defense of untimely filing not estopped by employer's payments. The previous payment by an employer and his insurer of most of an employee's medical expenses and an offer to pay for surgery do not estop them from asserting as a defense the employee's untimely filing of his claim. Martin v. Indus. Comm'n, 43 Colo. App. 521, 608 P.2d 366 (1979).

V. EFFECT OF PAYMENT OF COMPENSATION.

The bar of this section "does not apply to any claimant to whom compensation has been paid". Indus. Comm'n v. Globe Indem. Co., 74 Colo. 52, 218 P. 910 (1923); C. W. Kettering Mercantile Co. v. Fox, 77 Colo. 90, 234 P. 464 (1925); Ontario Mining Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 86 Colo. 206, 280 P. 483 (1929); Frank v. Indus. Comm'n, 96 Colo. 364, 43 P.2d 158 (1935); City of Boulder v. Payne, 162 Colo. 345, 426 P.2d 194 (1967).

But payment of wages to employee injured in employment accident does not of itself establish payment of compensation. Pacific Employers Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 127 Colo. 440, 257 P.2d 404 (1953), rev'g Comerford v. Carr, 86 Colo. 590, 284 P. 121 (1930); Morrow v. Indus. Comm'n, 98 Colo. 348, 56 P.2d 35 (1936); Sommers v. Borgmann, 111 Colo. 552, 144 P.2d 554 (1943); Stauss v. Indus. Comm'n, 144 Colo. 288, 355 P.2d 1076 (1960).

And in order that the payment of wages during the absence of an employee may be held to be the payment of compensation under the workmen's compensation act, it must be established by competent evidence or reasonable inferences to be drawn therefrom that in making these payments the employer was doing so conscious of the fact that he was making the same as compensation, and it must be received by the employee with the knowledge or reasonable grounds for assuming that the payments made to him were being made as compensation for his injuries. Pacific Employers Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 127 Colo. 400, 257 P.2d 404 (1953); Stauss v. Indus. Comm'n, 144 Colo. 288, 355 P.2d 1076 (1960).

Furthermore, payment of salary during bona fide illness does not constitute payment of compensation tolling the statutory limitation. Rahder v. Indus. Comm'n, 105 Colo. 594, 100 P.2d 1043 (1940).

Also, donation is not compensation. A donation of a burial lot to widow of deceased in consideration of long and faithful services of the latter to the donor, was held not to be a compensation payment within the meaning of this section so as to toll the running of the statute. Moreno v. State Indus. Comm'n, 104 Colo. 610, 92 P.2d 739 (1939).

Compensation paid to a claimant under the workmen's compensation laws of a sister state does not constitute "compensation paid" as contemplated by this section so as to permit filing of a claim for compensation in this state after expiration of the statutory period for such filing. Indus. Comm'n v. Pearcy, 149 Colo. 457, 369 P.2d 560 (1962).

Rather, such payments satisfy all claims for disability. Where employee employed in another state is injured in this state and claims and is paid compensation under that state's law, and lump sum is paid in full and final settlement of all claims for disability resulting from accident, such payment is made and received as satisfaction of all claims for disability and not as compensation as contemplated by this section. Indus. Comm'n v. Pearcy, 149 Colo. 457, 369 P.2d 560 (1962).

Prior to 1941, employer's furnishing medical treatment was considered "compensation" tolling statutory limitation. Indus. Comm'n v. Globe Indem. Co., 74 Colo. 52, 218 P. 910 (1923); Royal Indem. Co. v. Indus.

Comm'n, 88 Colo. 113, 293 P. 342 (1930); Indus. Comm'n v. Lockard, 89 Colo. 428, 3 P.2d 416 (1913); Frank v. Indus. Comm'n, 96 Colo. 364, 43 P.2d 158 (1935); Miller v. Indus. Comm'n, 106 Colo. 364, 105 P.2d 404 (1940); State Hwy. Dept. v. Stunkard, 115 Colo. 358, 174 P.2d 346 (1946); Gregorich v. Indus. Comm'n, 117 Colo. 423, 188 P.2d 886 (1948); Gregorich v. Indus. Comm'n, 121 Colo. 477, 217 P.2d 614 (1950).

But mere medical examination and payment of burial expenses was not such "compensation" prior to the 1941 amendment. Evanoff v. Indus. Comm'n 96 Colo. 550, 45 P.2d 688 (1935); Garden Farm Dairy v. Dorchak, 102 Colo. 36, 76 P.2d 743 (1938); Moreno v. State Indus. Comm'n, 104 Colo. 610, 92 P.2d 739 (1939); Rahder v. Indus. Comm'n, 105 Colo. 594, 100 P.2d 1043 (1940).

Time limitation not tolled by payment of medical expenses. Payment of medical expenses, such as those paid for by the insurer on behalf of an employer, are not to be considered compensation so as to toll or modify the time limitation for filing a claim. Martin v. Indus. Comm'n, 43 Colo. App. 521, 608 P.2d 366 (1979).

VI. EXCUSE OF FAILURE TO FILE.

A. In General.

Failure of claimant to file within six months (now three years) requires showing of reasonable excuse and no prejudice to employer. Under this section a claim for compensation must be filed within the statutory time period after injury unless it is established by evidence produced by the claimant to the satisfaction of the industrial commission that a reasonable excuse exists for failure to file such claim and that the employer's rights have not been prejudiced thereby. Monks Excavating & Redi-Mix Cement v. Kopsa, 148 Colo. 586, 367 P.2d 321 (1961); Armour & Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 149 Colo. 251, 368 P.2d 798 (1962); Univ. of Denver-Colorado Sem. & Univ. Park Campus v. Johnston, 151 Colo. 465, 378 P.2d 830 (1963); Berry's Coffee Shop, Inc. v. Palomba, 161 Colo. 369, 423 P.2d 2 (1967); Bynon v. W.T. Rawleigh Co., 164 Colo. 182, 433 P.2d 333 (1967).

The industrial commission is entrusted with the discretionary power to determine the reasonableness of the excuse and the prejudice resulting from the delay. Indus. Comm'n v. Newton Lumber & Mfg. Co., 135 Colo. 594, 314 P.2d 297 (1957); Armour & Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 149 Colo. 251, 368 P.2d 798 (1962); State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Stampfel, 153 Colo. 448, 386 P.2d 582 (1963); State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Foulds, 167 Colo. 123, 445 P.2d 716 (1968); Indus. Comm'n v. Canfield, 172 Colo. 18, 469 P.2d 737 (1970).

And the commission's decision as to excuse and prejudice will only be set aside upon a showing of fraud or abuse of discretion. Indus. Comm'n v. Newton Lumber & Mfg. Co., 135 Colo. 594, 314 P.2d 297 (1957); State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Stampfel, 153 Colo. 448, 386 P.2d 582 (1963); State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Foulds, 167 Colo. 123, 445 P.2d 716 (1968); Indus. Comm'n v. Canfield, 172 Colo. 18, 469 P.2d 737 (1970).

B. Reasonable Excuse.

Not all reasons for delayed applications constitute legally justifiable excuses within the purview of the statute. Armour & Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 149 Colo. 251, 368 P.2d 798 (1962); Silsby v. Tops Drive In Restaurant-Dutton Enterprises, Inc., 160 Colo. 549, 418 P.2d 525 (1966); Indus. Comm'n v. Canfield, 172 Colo. 18, 469 P.2d 737 (1970).

For a "legally justifiable" excuse is one which the industrial commission, under all attendant circumstances, finds to be reasonably sufficient to excuse the delay. Silsby v. Tops Drive In Restaurant-Dutton Enterprises, Inc., 160 Colo. 549, 418 P.2d 525 (1966).

Thus, while a claimant may demonstrate his reason for the delayed filing of his claim, the reason may not compel the commission, as a matter of law, to accept it as a legally justifiable excuse. Indus. Comm'n v. Canfield, 172 Colo. 18, 469 P.2d 737 (1970).

However, this section makes no requirement that the reasonable excuse be one that is legally watertight. City & County of Denver v. Phillips, 166 Colo. 312, 443 P.2d 379 (1968).

As when there is evidence to support the referee's conclusion that the employee presented a reasonable excuse for his late filing, the referee errs in going further and holding that the excuse though reasonable is not legally sufficient. City & County of Denver v. Phillips, 166 Colo. 312, 443 P.2d 379 (1968).

Reasonable excuse where claimant does his best under circumstances. An incorrect address was given by the employer for claimant, hence the notice to claimant, enclosing claim forms did not reach him. The claimant was not made aware of the necessity of filing a claim for compensation until after he had retained counsel who secured the proper forms and promptly prepared and filed the claim for compensation. This claim was actually filed within six months from the date the employer filed its denial of liability. As we read this record it is apparent that this claimant was doing the best he could under the circumstances. Indus. Comm'n v. Newton Lumber & Mfg. Co., 135 Colo. 594, 314 P.2d 297 (1957).

But the fact that claimant did not desire to take the time to have x-rays taken which would have indicated the nature of her ail- ment, if considered the "reason" for her late filing, was legally insufficient. Armour & Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 149 Colo. 251, 368 P.2d 798 (1962).

C. Lack of Prejudice to Employer.

Finding of excuse will not stand without finding of nonprejudice. A finding of nonexcuse ends the matter, but a finding that the claimant is excused from the delinquency will not stand alone unless there is also a finding of nonprejudice to the employer. Univ. of Denver-Colorado Sem. & Univ. Park Campus v. Johnston, 151 Colo. 465, 378 P.2d 830 (1963).

And prejudice to the employer must be actual and must be shown to be so. Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 129 Colo. 287, 269 P.2d 696 (1954); Armour & Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 149 Colo. 251, 368 P.2d 798 (1962).

But the burden of proof of lack of prejudice to the employer is not on claimant. Colo. Fuel & Iron Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 129 Colo. 287, 269 P.2d 696 (1954); Indus. Comm'n v. Newton Lumber & Mfg., 135 Colo. 594, 314 P.2d 297 (1957).

Finding of reasonable excuse will stand where prejudice is not contended. Where it is not contended that the late filing of a claim resulted in any prejudice to the rights of the employer, and where the industrial commission has wide discretion in determining whether reasonable excuse exists for failure to file the claim within a year, and the court cannot say as matter of law that the commission has abused its discretion in permitting late filing of the claim, the finding that reasonable excuse existed will be sustained. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Stampfel, 153 Colo. 448, 386 P.2d 582 (1963).

And the employer's rights are not prejudiced by the late filing of the claim where the employer knows of the accident, when it occurred, who the medical attendants of claimant were, where he was hospitalized, when admitted and when discharged from the hospital, as disclosed by the employer's report. Indus. Comm'n v. Newton Lumber & Mfg. Co., 135 Colo. 594, 314 P.2d 297 (1957).

However, the receipt of initial medical reports does not support a ruling of nonprejudice where the employer admits it had notice of the accident, and that there was some treatment afforded and paid for, for notice of the accident is not equivalent to notice of claim for compensable injury. The initial reports, far from being notice to the employer, indicated that there was no claim for compensation. City & County of Denver v. Bush, 166 Colo. 76, 441 P.2d 666 (1968).

Employer prejudiced by claimant's failure to file within statutory period because not afforded opportunity to examine and treat injuries. Armour & Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 149

Colo. 251, 368 P.2d 798 (1962); City & County of Denver v. Bush, 166 Colo. 76, 441 P.2d 666 (1968).

8-43-104. Electronic filings - rules. (1) The rejection for technical errors by the division of any document, form, or notice that is filed electronically shall not affect the validity of the notice to the claimant or any other party.

(2) The director may promulgate rules concerning electronic filing of documents, forms, or notices in accordance with article 4 of title 24, C.R.S. Such rules shall be consistent with any policies, standards, and guidelines set forth by the office of information technology, created in section 24-37.5-103, C.R.S.

PART 2

SETTLEMENT AND HEARING PROCEDURES

8-43-201. Disputes arising under “Workers’ Compensation Act of Colorado”.

(1) The director and administrative law judges employed by the office of administrative courts in the department of personnel shall have original jurisdiction to hear and decide all matters arising under articles 40 to 47 of this title; except that the following principles shall apply: A claimant in a workers’ compensation claim shall have the burden of proving entitlement to benefits by a preponderance of the evidence; the facts in a workers’ compensation case shall not be interpreted liberally in favor of either the rights of the injured worker or the rights of the employer; a workers’ compensation case shall be decided on its merits; and a party seeking to modify an issue determined by a general or final admission, a summary order, or a full order shall bear the burden of proof for any such modification.

(2) The amendments made to subsection (1) of this section by Senate Bill 09-168, enacted in 2009, are declared to be procedural and were intended to and shall apply to all workers’ compensation claims, regardless of the date the claim was filed.

L. 2005: Entire section amended, p. 854, § 11, effective June 1. L. 2009: Entire section amended, (SB 09-168), ch. 184, p. 807, § 3, effective August 5. L. 2010: Entire section amended, (SB 10-163), ch. 66, p. 232, § 3, effective March 31.

Editor’s note: This section is similar to former § 8-53-101 as it existed prior to 1990.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article on “Colorado Practice in Workmen’s Compensation”, see 31 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 500 (1959).

Annotator’s note. (1) Since § 8-43-201 is similar to § 8-53-101 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the “Workers’ Compensation Act of Colorado”, articles 40 to 47 of this title, a relevant case construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this section.

(2) Cases included in the annotations to this section which refer to the industrial commission were decided prior to the 1969 amendment which required the submission of disputes concerning workmen’s compensation to the division of labor instead of the industrial commission.

Constitutionality. The general assembly’s grant of limited authority in this section to administrative law judges and the industrial claim appeals office over the area of workers’ compensation matters does not create a substantial threat to the separation of powers doctrine under article III of the Colorado Constitution, nor does it violate the requirement that district courts have original jurisdiction in civil cases as mandated in article VI, § 9(1), of the Colorado Constitution. Dee Enters. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 89 P.3d 430 (Colo. App. 2003); Aviado v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 228 P.3d 177 (Colo. App. 2009).

The establishment of original jurisdiction with administrative law judges by this section does not violate the constitutional conferment of jurisdiction on district courts, as the parties in workers' compensation proceedings have expressly surrendered common law rights, remedies, and proceedings in exchange for the benefits of the act. MGM Supply Co. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 62 P.3d 1001 (Colo. App. 2002); Aviado v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 228 P.3d 177 (Colo. App. 2009).

Industrial commission shall dispose of issues regarding compensation claims. One of the fundamental aims in adopting the workmen's compensation act was that of substituting for any and all previously existing remedies the special procedure supplied by the act. Anything that tends to complicate the issues arising out of claims for compensation or to take the disposition thereof away from the commission must be firmly discouraged. Roper v. Indus. Comm'n, 93 Colo. 250, 25 P.2d 725 (1933).

For the industrial commission is the only body or agency authorized to find the facts determinative of whether both the employer and employee are subject to the act. Miller v. Denver Post, Inc. 137 Colo. 61, 322 P.2d 661 (1958).

Hence, a hearing officer has authority to determine whether the conditions of coverage under a policy issued by the fund are met. Once the existence of a valid insurance contract has been established, the burden is upon the insurer to establish that the policy has lapsed. The allocation of the burden of proof is a substantial right of the parties, and it is reversible error if the burden is allocated improperly. Butkovich v. Indus. Comm'n, 690 P.2d 257 (Colo. App. 1984).

Since a bad faith tort claim falls outside of those "matters arising under" the act, this provision cannot place jurisdiction over the claim within the division of labor. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Savio, 706 P.2d 1258 (Colo. 1985).

Despite the division's original jurisdiction to determine workers' compensation issues, a trial court with jurisdiction over a personal injury tort claim also has jurisdiction to apportion settlement proceeds between loss of consortium, economic losses, and non-economic losses. Colo. Comp. Ins. Auth. v. Jorgensen, 992 P.2d 1156 (Colo. 2000).

The failure of the state compensation insurance fund to specify the time of effective cancellation of coverage results in the policy coverage being in effect until midnight of the date of cancellation. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Bldg. Sys., 713 P.2d 940 (Colo. App. 1985).

Under this section, the director has the authority to enter an order regarding a claimant's benefits even though the claimant's case is in the process of being determined by an administrative law judge. Cornerstone Partners v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 830 P.2d 1148 (Colo. App. 1992).

The director's authority to act under this section is not limited by § 8-43-208. Cornerstone Partners v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 830 P.2d 1148 (Colo. App. 1992).

Applied in Cornerstone v. Indus. Claim App. Office, 830 P.2d 1148 (Colo. App. 1992).

8-43-202. Director may refer taking of evidence in cases to appropriate officials of other states. The director, after notice to the parties in interest, may refer the taking of any evidence to any commission, court, or board administering in another state the compensation laws thereof, and such commission, court, or board of such other state, after notifying the parties in interest of the time and place of holding such hearing, shall hold hearings and take such evidence in the same manner and by the officers as authorized by the laws of such state, and all such proceedings shall be certified and return thereof made as prescribed by the director.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 8-53-104 as it existed prior to 1990.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. The following annotations include cases decided under former provisions similar to this section.

Original trier of fact. Where no petition for review of a referee's order is filed, the industrial commission (now director) may enter an order that additional evidence be taken upon application of the claimant, and the commission (now director) becomes the trier of the facts, and may enter an award without the recommendation or findings of a referee. There can be no doubt about the right to dispose of a claim in this manner, for there is nothing in the statute which deprives the commission (now director) of the power to function as an original trier of the facts regarding any claim. Pittman Motors, Inc. v. Indus. Comm'n, 156 Colo. 218, 399 P.2d 784 (1964).

8-43-203. Notice concerning liability - notice to claimants - notice of rights and claims process - rules. (1) (a) The employer or, if insured, the employer's insurance carrier shall notify in writing the division and the injured employee or, if deceased, the decedent's dependents within twenty days after a report is, or should have been, filed with the division pursuant to section 8-43-101, whether liability is admitted or contested; except that, for the purpose of this section, any knowledge on the part of the employer, if insured, is not knowledge on the part of the insurance carrier. The employer or the employer's insurance carrier may notify the division electronically. Unless exempted by the director pursuant to rule because of a small number of filings or a showing of financial hardship, beginning July 1, 2006, all notices of contest shall be filed electronically. The rejection of an electronically filed notice by the division for a technical error shall not affect the validity of the notice to the claimant. If the insurance carrier or self-insured employer denies liability for the claim, the claimant may request an expedited hearing on the issue of compensability if the application therefor is filed within forty-five days after the date of mailing of the notice of contest. The director shall set any such expedited matter for hearing within forty days after the date of the application, when the issue is liability for the disease or injury. The time schedule for such an expedited hearing is subject to the extensions set forth in section 8-43-209. If a claimant elects not to request an expedited hearing pursuant to this subsection (1), the time schedule for hearing the matter shall be as set forth in section 8-43-209.

(b) The written notice given pursuant to this subsection (1) shall include a specific reference to the claimant's obligations under section 8-42-113.5.

(1.5) (Deleted by amendment, L. 92, p. 1825, § 4, effective April 29, 1992.)

(2) (a) If such notice is not filed as provided in subsection (1) of this section, the employer or, if insured, the employer's insurance carrier, as the case may be, may become liable to the claimant, if the claimant is successful on the claim for compensation, for up to one day's compensation for each day's failure to so notify; except that the employer or, if insured, the employer's insurance carrier shall not be liable for more than the aggregate amount of three hundred sixty-five days' compensation for failure to timely admit or deny liability. Fifty percent of any penalty paid pursuant to this subsection (2) shall be paid to the subsequent injury fund, created in section 8-46-101, and fifty percent to the claimant.

(b) (I) If the employer or, if insured, the employer's insurance carrier admits liability, such notice shall specify the amount of compensation to be paid, to whom compensation will be paid, the period for which compensation will be paid, and the disability for which compensation will be paid, and payment thereon shall be made immediately.

(II) (A) An admission of liability for final payment of compensation shall include a statement that this is the final admission by the workers' compensation insurance carrier in the case, that the claimant may contest this admission if the claimant feels entitled to more compensation, to whom the claimant should provide written objection, and notice to the claimant that the case will be automatically closed as to the issues admitted in the final admission if the claimant does not, within thirty days after the date of the final admission, contest the final admission in writing and request a hearing on any disputed issues that are ripe for hearing, including the selection of an independent medical examiner pursuant to section 8-42-107.2 if an independent medical examination has not already been conducted. If an independent medical examination is requested pursuant to section 8-42-107.2, the claimant is not required to file a request for hearing on disputed issues that are ripe for hearing until the division's independent medical examination process is terminated for any reason. Any issue for which a hearing or an application for a hearing is pending at the time that the final admission of liability is filed shall proceed to the hearing without the need for the applicant to refile an application for hearing on the issue. This information shall also be included in the admission of liability for final payment of compensation. The respondents shall have thirty days after the date of mailing of the report from the division's independent medical examiner to file a revised final admission or to file an application for hearing. The claimant shall have thirty days after the date respondents file the revised final admission or application for hearing to file an application for hearing, or a response to the respondents' application for hearing, as applicable, on any disputed issues that are ripe for hearing. The revised final admission shall contain the statement required by this subparagraph (II), and the provisions relating to contesting the revised final admission shall apply. When the final admission is predicated upon medical reports, such reports shall accompany the final admission.

(B) The amendments made to sub-subparagraph (A) of this subparagraph (II) by Senate Bill 09-168, enacted in 2009, are declared to be procedural and were intended to and shall apply to all workers' compensation claims, regardless of the date the claim was filed.

(c) No penalty may be assessed under this subsection (2) for failure to timely admit or deny liability if a request for such penalty is filed more than seven years after the alleged violation. The division shall retain original claim records filed with the division for at least seven years after closure of the case. Seven years after a case is closed, the records may only be used for reopening a settlement on the grounds of fraud or mutual mistake of material fact.

(d) Once a case is closed pursuant to this subsection (2), the issues closed may only be reopened pursuant to section 8-43-303. Upon proper showing in writing made within said times fixed therefor, the director may extend the time for filing such admission of liability or notice of contest, but not exceeding ten days at any one time. Hearings may be set to determine any matter, but, if any liability is admitted, payments shall continue according to admitted liability.

(3) In addition to any other notice required by this section, at the time that the employer or, if insured, the employer's insurance carrier provides the notice required by subsection (1) of this section, the employer or insurance carrier shall provide to the claimant a brochure written in easily understood language, in a form developed by the director after consultation with employers, insurance carriers, and representatives of injured workers, describing the claims process and informing the claimant of his or her rights. If the claimant has previously authorized the employer or, if insured, the employer's insurance carrier to communicate with the claimant through electronic transmission, the brochure may be sent to the claimant electronically. The brochure shall, at a minimum, contain the following information:

(a) Who the claimant may contact with questions concerning the claim, the claims process, and assistance with the claim, including:

- (I) The insurance carrier or employer;
- (II) The division and the web site for the division;
- (III) The office of administrative courts and the web site for the office; and
- (IV) An attorney hired at the expense of the claimant;

(b) The claimant's right to receive medical care for work-related injuries or occupational diseases paid for by the employer or the employer's insurance carrier including:

(I) That most claimants have a right to choose from a list of at least two different doctors;

(II) That most claimants have a right to change doctors one time within ninety days after the injury and all claimants have the right to request a change of doctor at other times under certain other circumstances;

(III) The claimant's doctor's right to refer the claimant to other medical providers and specialists to provide the reasonable and necessary medical care that the claimant's work-related injuries or illness require;

(IV) The claimant's right to discuss with his or her doctor who should be present during a claimant's medical appointment, and the right to refuse to have a nurse case manager employed on the claimant's claim present at the claimant's medical appointment;

(V) The claimant's right to see and have copies of all of the claimant's medical records related to the medical care the claimant received for his or her work-related injury or illness;

(VI) The claimant's right to seek medical care and medical opinions about the claimant's work-related injury at the claimant's own expense;

(VII) The claimant's right to a medical examination by a doctor chosen by the claimant or by the division at the claimant's expense;

(VIII) The claimant's right to a permanent impairment evaluation after the claimant's treating doctors determine that the claimant has reached maximum medical improvement; and

(IX) The claimant's right to be informed whether medical care after maximum medical improvement will be provided and to receive reasonable continued medical care if it is necessary to maintain maximum medical improvement;

(c) A description of the claimant's right to receive benefit payments, including the claimant's right to receive:

(I) Wage replacement payments in the form of temporary total disability payments or temporary partial disability payments;

(II) Permanent impairment benefits if the claimant is left with a permanent impairment as a result of a work-related injury or disease;

(III) Disfigurement payments for permanent scarring or disfigurement caused by the claimant's work-related injury or surgery required because of the claimant's work-related injury; and

(IV) Mileage expenses for travel to and from work-related medical care and to and from pharmacies to obtain medical prescriptions for work-related medical care;

(d) A description of how the claims process works, including:

(I) The claimant's right to file a claim for workers' compensation with the division within two years after the date of the claimant's injury or occupational disease;

(II) The claimant's right to receive a general admission of liability or notice of contest once the claim has been properly reported to the division;

(III) The claimant's right to verify that the claimant's average weekly wage payments for temporary total disability have been properly calculated by the claimant's employer or the employer's insurance carrier;

(IV) The claimant's right to prehearings and hearings on disputed issues;

(V) The claimant's right to present evidence, testify, introduce medical and other records, present witnesses, and make arguments at any hearing;

(VI) The claimant's right to object to and request a hearing on any final admission of liability within thirty days after the mailing of the admission in order to retain certain rights;

(VII) The claimant's right to challenge a finding of an impairment rating or maximum medical improvement in a final admission of liability within thirty days after the mailing of the admission in order to retain certain rights;

(VIII) The claimant's right to pursue penalties for violations of the law including late payment of benefits or improper refusal to pay benefits;

(IX) The claimant's right, subject to certain requirements, to reopen a claim within six years after the date of the injury or illness or within two years after the date of the last receipt of medical or wage benefits; and

(X) A description of other rights conferred upon a claimant pursuant to law or rule.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Update on Colorado Appellate Decisions in Workers' Compensation Law", see 32 Colo. Law. 113 (Oct. 2003).

Annotator's note. Since § 8-43-203 is similar to § 8-53-102 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Section held to be constitutional. Eachus v. Cooper, 738 P.2d 383 (Colo. App. 1986).

Notice requirement. Notification by claimant that he was asserting his then current disability to be job-related was sufficient to trigger the notice requirement of this section. Gallegos v. Green Const. Co., 754 P.2d 1177 (Colo. App. 1987).

Subsection (2) directs that payments cannot be abrogated unilaterally. Vargo v. Indus. Comm'n, 626 P.2d 1164 (Colo. App. 1981); Snyder v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 942 P.2d 1337 (Colo. App. 1997).

Payments begun as result of admitted liability must continue until order is entered pursuant to a hearing. Vargo v. Indus. Comm'n, 626 P.2d 1164 (Colo. App. 1981); Snyder v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 942 P.2d 1337 (Colo. App. 1997); Pacesetter Corp. v. Collett, 33 P.3d 1230 (Colo. App. 2001).

Admission of liability for "closed" period not permitted. The insurer may not unilaterally terminate benefits without complying with § 8-42-105 (3) and other applicable statutes and rules governing the termination of benefits. Colo. Comp. Ins. Auth. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 18 P.3d 790 (Colo. App. 2000).

Retroactive withdrawals of admission of liability not permitted. There is no provision in subsection (2), or elsewhere in this section, which permits retroactive withdrawals of an admission of liability. Vargo v. Indus. Comm'n, 626 P.2d 1164 (Colo. App. 1981); Pacesetter Corp. v. Collett, 33 P.3d 1230 (Colo. App. 2001).

Admission based upon material false information declared void ab initio. Where the evidence supported the referee's finding that the claimant supplied materially false information upon which his employer and its insurer relied in filing an admission of liability, the referee was justified in declaring the admission void ab initio. Vargo v. Indus. Comm'n, 626 P.2d 1164 (Colo. App. 1981); Krause v. Aircraft Sign Co., 710 P.2d 480 (Colo. 1985); Pacesetter Corp. v. Collett, 33 P.3d 1230 (Colo. App. 2001).

Lack of causal connection may be asserted at any time. In a dispute over medical benefits that arises after the filing of a general admission of liability, an employer generally can assert, based on subsequent medical reports, that the claimant did not establish the threshold requirement of a direct causal relationship between the on-the-job injury and the need for medical treatment. Snyder v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 942 P.2d 1337 (Colo. App. 1997).

An employer is precluded from challenging the IME physician's finding that claimant was not at MMI, including the IME physician's finding regarding the cause of claimant's symptoms because employer failed either to admit or contest liability within 30 days of the IME physician's report as required by subsection (2)(b)(II). Leprino Foods Co. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 134 P.3d 475 (Colo. App. 2005).

Denial of withdrawal of admission of liability. Where an admission of liability is made by an insurance carrier and compensation paid thereunder for more than two years, there is no abuse of discretion in denying the withdrawal of such admission, where all the facts pertinent to the case were known to the carrier for more than two years, and there is no suggestion of fraud. Indus. Comm'n v. Johnson Pontiac, Inc., 140 Colo. 160, 344 P.2d 186 (1959) (decided under former § 8-53-103).

Release obtained as a result of a mutual mistake of material fact may be set aside in a workmen's compensation case. Loper v. Indus. Comm'n, 648 P.2d 1092 (Colo. App. 1982).

Successful claim requirement for recovery of penalties under subsection (2) is met by establishing the employer's liability, notwithstanding the fact that no additional compensation was payable as a result of that liability. Smith v. Myron Stratton Home, 676 P.2d 1196 (Colo. 1984); McManus v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 81 P.3d 1074 (Colo. App. 2003).

Claimant's receipt of benefits constitutes substantial compliance with the notice requirements of this section. Pub. Serv. Co. of Colo. v. Boatwright, 749 P.2d 456 (Colo. App. 1987); Pacesetter Corp. v. Collett, 33 P.3d 1230 (Colo. App. 2001).

A final admission must be mailed to the claimant's home address unless he or she has designated another location. Bowlen v. Munford, 921 P.2d 59 (Colo. App. 1996).

Claimant's receipt of benefit checks that were not mailed to his home address did not provide him with constructive receipt of the final admissions. Bowlen v. Munford, 921 P.2d 59 (Colo. App. 1996).

Contest of admission of liability. If an admission of liability is contested by either party, the determination of the matter placed in issue is subject to determination by the administrative law judge at the adversary hearing. The admission is binding only until the controverted issue is determined after the hearing. HIJ Mgmt. Group, Inc. v. Kim, 804 P.2d 250 (Colo. App. 1990).

Authority to modify erroneous admission. The administrative law judge's order providing for retroactive modification of employer's admission held incorrect. Since error in admission was caused by employer's own mistake in calculation of employee's average weekly wage, the order should apply to payments after the date of the order. HIJ Mgmt. Group, Inc. v. Kim, 804 P.2d 250 (Colo. App. 1990).

Employer's knowledge of employee's injury should not be imparted to insurer for the purpose of the penalty imposed by this section since it would be impossible for the insurer, without actual notice of the injury, to admit or deny liability within 25 days as required by this section. State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Wilson, 736 P.2d 33 (Colo. 1987).

An employer's knowledge of the employee's injury may not be imputed to the insurance carrier. Campbell v. IBM Corp., 867 P.2d 77 (Colo. App. 1993).

When employer admits liability, it is obligated to pay accordingly. Williams v. Indus. Comm'n, 723 P.2d 749 (Colo. App. 1986); Cibola Constr. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 971 P.2d 666 (Colo. App. 1998).

Employer required to pay claimant the full amount specified in its final admission of liability (FAL) where the employer failed to expressly notify the claimant in the final admission of a credit for benefits previously paid to claimant because an uncontested final admission dispositively settles the amount of an employer's liability. Cibola Constr. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 971 P.2d 666 (Colo. App. 1998).

Uncontested admission of liability became a "final" award, which could not be reopened except pursuant to statute, despite parties' assertion that fraud rendered award void ab initio. Lewis v. Scientific Supply Co., Inc., 897 P.2d 905 (Colo. App. 1995).

Issue of PTD, therefore, was closed by FAL based upon division-sponsored independent medical examination that agreed with a prior determination that placed claimant at maximum medical improvement (MMI) and when claimant failed to endorse the issue of PTD benefits within 30 days. Olivas-Soto v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 143 P.3d 1178 (Colo. App. 2006).

Although issues raised in an FAL automatically close if not contested within 30 days under subsection (2)(b)(II), where a second FAL is issued before that time expires, the first admission has been superseded in its entirety. Under these circumstances, finality does not attach to the initial admission, and the case remains open during the 60-day period following the second admission. Leeway v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 178 P.3d 1254 (Colo. App. 2007).

Final admission of liability for permanent partial disability (PPD) benefits implicitly denies admission of liability for permanent total disability (PTD) benefits. Olivas-Soto v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 143 P.3d 1178 (Colo. App. 2006).

To contest an aspect of an FAL, a claimant must state in the application for the hearing the benefit to which he or she is entitled. The claimant may not keep his or her case from being closed by filing a general objection to the FAL. Perego v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 87 P.3d 261 (Colo. App. 2004).

Neither subsection (2)(b)(II), nor any other provision in the Workers' Compensation Act, states or implies that a claimant may file an objection to an FAL without identifying a contested issue. Likewise, no provision states or implies that issues admitted in an FAL may remain open indefinitely until the claimant identifies a disputed issue and requests a hearing. Perego v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 87 P.3d 261 (Colo. App. 2004).

Neither state nor federal guarantees of equal protection are offended by the fact that a person whose claim has been closed under subsection (2)(b) must follow the reopening provisions of § 8-43-303 to reopen his or her workers' compensation claim. Perego v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 87 P.3d 261 (Colo. App. 2004).

The language "as to the issues admitted" in subsection (2)(b)(II) does not mean only those "issues" on which an employer agrees to pay benefits. Instead, the phrase should be interpreted as referring to issues on which the employer affirmatively takes a position, either by agreeing to pay benefits or by denying liability to pay benefits. Therefore, because permanent partial disability benefits and permanent total disability benefits both compensate for a claimant's permanent loss of earning capacity, an admission for permanent partial benefits constituted an implicit denial of liability for permanent total disability benefits. Dyrkopp v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 30 P.3d 821 (Colo. App. 2001).

An admission or denial of liability, though not in writing, is sufficient to terminate the running of the penalty period. Harrison v. Indus. Comm'n, 716 P.2d 477 (Colo. App. 1986); Eastman Kodak Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 725 P.2d 85 (Colo. App. 1986).

An admission of liability filed with the division of labor, with a copy to the claimant, is sufficient to terminate the penalty period; however, the penalty period is not terminated upon commencement of compensation payments absent such a filing because of the prejudice a claimant could suffer as a result of such an omission. Dorris v. Gardner Zemke Co., 765 P.2d 602 (Colo. App. 1988).

Section has been uniformly interpreted as requiring payment of a penalty in addition to payment of compensation. Therefore if an employer has failed timely to admit or deny liability and the claimant is successful in his claim for compensation, this section mandates assessment of a penalty in addition to requiring payment of compensation. Eastman Kodak Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 725 P.2d 85 (Colo. App. 1986).

Employee is not entitled to penalty for failure of employer to timely admit or deny liability if employee missed no time from work and only medical benefits are awarded. Racon Const. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 775 P.2d 61 (Colo. App. 1989).

No penalty is provided in this section for failure of employer to promptly report an injury to its insurer. Campion v. Barta Builders, 780 P.2d 23 (Colo. App. 1989); Campbell v. IBM Corp., 867 P.2d 77 (Colo. App. 1993).

Because the general assembly has amended this section several times, but has not changed the wording affecting the liability of an insured employer, the holding that an employer is not liable for failing to report an injury to its insurer remains valid. U.S. Fidelity & Guar., Inc. v. Kourlis, 868 P.2d 1158 (Colo. App. 1994).

For purposes of triggering a penalty assessment, a claim for compensation is successful at the time an employer files an admission of liability; a claimant need not establish an employer's liability through litigation on the merits of the claim. Dorris v. Gardner Zemke Co., 765 P.2d 602 (Colo. App. 1988).

Duty of carrier to admit or deny liability was not triggered by requests from employer for reimbursement of claimant's medical expenses under employer's wage continuation plan. There is no basis for holding that an employer's request for reimbursement is equivalent to actual notification or knowledge of a lost time work injury. Campbell v. IBM Corp., 867 P.2d 77 (Colo. App. 1993).

It is the duty of the trier of fact to resolve conflicting evidence, and court is bound by conclusions on review if such conclusions are supported by evidence. Eachus v. Cooper, 738 P.2d 383 (Colo. App. 1986).

Section 2-4-108 (1) covers computation of time periods under this section. Thus, the date of the claimant's injury should be excluded from the computation of the three-day waiting period. Ralston Purina-Keystone v. Lowry, 821 P.2d 910 (Colo. App. 1991).

Ruling of administrative law judge concluding that claimant had failed to establish the statutory requisites under subsection (2) was not contested by claimant and, thus, was binding on appeal. Rocky Mountain Gen. v. Simon, 827 P.2d 629 (Colo. App. 1992).

The issue of a penalty provided by subsection (2) was not an issue admitted in a final admission. Thus, the case was not automatically closed within the meaning of subsection (2). The ALJ retained jurisdiction to impose a penalty, and the claimant was not required to contest an FAL pursuant to § 8-43-303. Dalco Indus., Inc. v. Garcia, 867 P.2d 156 (Colo. App. 1993).

The phrase "as the case may be" included in subsection (2) is not ambiguous, but is the same as saying, "depending on the circumstances". U.S. Fidelity & Guar., Inc. v. Kourlis, 868 P.2d 1158 (Colo. App. 1994).

Employer's FAL for permanent total disability without reservation of the issue of the subsequent injury fund contribution was an admission that employer was solely liable. Safeway v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 968 P.2d 162 (Colo. App. 1998).

Once a claimant has successfully challenged a finding of MMI through the division independent medical examination (DIME) process, that process remains open, such that when the authorized treating physician (ATP) makes a second finding of MMI, the employer or insurer may not file an FAL to close the case until they return the claimant to the IME for a follow-up examination and determination of MMI. Williams v. Kunau, 147 P.3d 33 (Colo. 2006); Sanco Indus. v. Stefanski, 147 P.3d 5 (Colo. 2006).

A court's jurisdiction consists of two elements, jurisdiction over the parties and jurisdiction over the subject matter. The employer argued that "jurisdiction was lost" when claimant failed to respond to the first FAL within 30 days as required by subsection (2)(b)(II). In making this argument, employer conflates the issues of jurisdiction and failure to comply with a statutory provision. The ALJ and the panel had subject matter jurisdiction to consider claimant's MMI and PPD issues regarding compensation, so the subject matter jurisdiction of the ALJ and the panel are not implicated. Leeway v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 178 P.3d 1254 (Colo. App. 2007).

8-43-204. Settlements - rules. (1) An injured employee may settle all or part of any claim for compensation, benefits, penalties, or interest. If such settlement provides by its terms that the employee's claim or award shall not be reopened, such settlement shall not be subject to being reopened under any provisions of articles 40 to 47 of this title other than on the ground of fraud or mutual mistake of material fact.

(2) Such a settlement shall be in writing and shall be signed by a representative of the employer or insurer and signed and sworn to by the injured employee. For claims that have a settlement amount of seventy-five thousand dollars or more, a written notice of the settlement agreement shall be provided to the employer.

(3) The settlement shall be reviewed in person with the injured employee and approved in writing by an administrative law judge or the director of the division prior to the finalization of such settlement. The settlement shall be filed with the division as a part of the injured employee's permanent record.

(4) If an employee owes child support and a garnishment has been filed pursuant to section 13-54.5-101, C.R.S., or the state child support enforcement agency has filed a notice of administrative lien and attachment pursuant to section 26-13-122, C.R.S., with the insurer or self-insured employer, all proceeds of any award, lump sum settlement, and the indemnity portion of any structured settlement shall be subject to said garnishment or administrative lien and attachment. Proceeds up to the amount of the garnishment or administrative lien and attachment shall be paid as directed on the notice to the obligee or to the state child support enforcement agency on behalf of the obligee to whom support is owed.

(5) If an employee owes a debt for which a writ is issued as a result of a judgment for fraudulently obtained public assistance, fraudulently obtained overpayments of public assistance, or excess public assistance paid for which the recipient was ineligible and a garnishment has been filed pursuant to section 13-54-104 or 13-54.5-101, C.R.S., with the insurer or self-insured employer, all proceeds of any award, lump sum settlement, and the indemnity portion of any structured settlement shall be subject to the garnishment. Proceeds up to the amount of the garnishment shall be paid as directed by the county department of social services responsible for administering the state public assistance programs.

(6) To aid in settlement, the director shall review mortality tables from the United States government and private industry and issue rules establishing a single life expectancy table on July 1 in every even-numbered year, commencing July 1, 2010. The director may adopt current mortality tables used by medicare. Nothing in this subsection (6) shall be construed to limit the use of rated ages.

(7) Any lump sum payable as a full or partial settlement shall be paid to the claimant or the claimant's attorney within fifteen calendar days after the date the executed settlement order is received by the carrier or the noninsured or self-insured employer.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. The following annotations include cases decided under former provisions similar to this section.

Interest of state in recovery of just compensation induced provision requiring approval of settlements. It is the fact that the state has an interest in the recovery of just compensation by injured employees to the end that they do not, because of their injuries, become public charges, which induced the lawmakers to require the approval of settlements as a condition of their becoming binding on the parties to them. Indus. Comm'n v. London Guarantee & Accident Co. 66 Colo. 575, 185 P. 344 (1919).

A settlement made on stipulation in court is no more effective without such approval than is any other settlement. Indus. Comm'n v. London Guarantee & Accident Co., 66 Colo. 575, 185 P. 344 (1919).

Settlement does not discharge claim against physician for malpractice. Settlement under the workmen's compensation act for accidental injuries incurred by an employee does not operate to release or discharge a claim for damages for malpractice which he may have against the physician who treated his injuries. Froid v. Knowles, 95 Colo. 223, 36 P.2d 156 (1934).

A claim may be closed upon payment of a final settlement. In re Brunetti v. Indus. Comm'n, 670 P.2d 1246 (Colo. App. 1983).

The division of labor's approving the employer's admission of liability "subject to any further liability as provided by law" did not constitute a termination of claimant's right to payment for medical treatments by the employer's doctor. To the contrary, specific provision is made in the act for obtaining final approval by the commission of the settlement of a claim. Granite Constr. Co. v. Leonard, 40 Colo. App. 20, 568 P.2d 500 (1977).

Effect of settlements on reopening. In view of prior cases, the beneficial purposes of the act and the language of §§ 8-51-108 and 8-53-113, the conclusion is inescapable that the general assembly has given the director authority to reopen a case within requisite time limitations regardless of whether there was a settlement. Padilla v. Indus. Comm'n, 696 P.2d 273 (Colo. 1985) (decided prior to 1985 amendment).

Worker's compensation claim may be reopened despite claimant's stipulation waiving right to reopen case because the supreme court decision in Padilla v. Indus. Comm'n (696 P.2d 273 (Colo. 1985)) allowing such reopenings should be given retroactive effect. Loffland Bros. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 754 P.2d 768 (Colo. App. 1988), aff'd, 770 P.2d 1221 (Colo. 1989).

Document signed by claimant at request of claims adjuster in which claimant rejected his right to workers' compensation benefits was ineffective as a waiver where document was in the nature of a settlement and was not approved as required by this section. Oxford Chems., Inc. v. Richardson, 782 P.2d 843 (Colo. App. 1989).

Release signed by injured worker was ineffective in barring her pursuit of workers' compensation claims because it was not approved by the division. Cook v. McLister, 820 P.2d 1167 (Colo. App. 1991).

Administrative law judge properly found settlement was voidable on ground claimant was mentally incompetent at the time he entered into the settlement. Although the settlement of a claim may be reopened only on grounds of fraud or mutual mistake of fact, an administrative law judge is empowered to determine the competency of a claimant entering into such a settlement agreement, and when no such capacity exists because of mental incompetency, the contract is voidable by the person lacking capacity to contract. Powderhorn Coal Co. v. Weaver, 835 P.2d 616 (Colo. App. 1992).

A mutual mistake is one which is reciprocal and common to both parties to an agreement, and both parties must share the same misconception as to the terms and conditions of the agreement. Cary v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc., 867 P.2d 117 (Colo. App. 1993).

A prehearing administrative law judge has jurisdiction to enter an order approving a settlement agreement in a workers' compensation case. Indus. Claim Appeals Office v. Orth, 965 P.2d 1246 (Colo. 1998).

The orders of a prehearing administrative law judge that relate to prehearing conferences are not final for purposes of appeal. Indus. Claim Appeals Office v. Orth, 965 P.2d 1246 (Colo. 1998).

However, the orders of a prehearing administrative law judge approving a settlement are final for purposes of appeal. Indus. Claim Appeals Office v. Orth, 965 P.2d 1246 (Colo. 1998).

Subsection (4) applies to a claimant's settlement for an injury that occurred prior to the enactment of subsection (4), thereby subjecting the settlement to a lien filed by the division of child support enforcement for unpaid child support. While the state constitution prohibits laws that are retrospective in operation, subsection (4) can be applied retroactively because it created a procedural enforcement remedy that does not impair the claimant's substantive rights. Div. of Child Support Enforcement v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 109 P.3d 1042 (Colo. App. 2004).

The statutory amendment creating subsection (4) merely created a new enforcement remedy by allowing a portion of a claimant's settlement to be sent directly to the child support registry to satisfy a preexisting child support obligation. Claimant's right to the lump-sum settlement vested after subsection (4) was enacted and is, therefore, subject to the lien filed by the division of child support enforcement. Div. of Child Support Enforcement v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 109 P.3d 1042 (Colo. App. 2004).

8-43-205. Mediation. (1) Any party involved in a claim arising under articles 40 to 47 of this title may request mediation services by filing a request for mediation services with the division. However, mediation shall be entirely voluntary and shall not be conducted without the consent of all parties to the claim. If a request for mediation services is made after an application for a hearing has been filed, the administrative law judge hearing the dispute shall approve, on motion of the parties, the submission of the dispute to mediation prior to hearing the matter. An application for mediation services shall be filed on a form prescribed by the director. Upon receiving the application for mediation services, the director shall cause a mediation conference to occur within thirty days thereafter. At a mediation conference, the claimant may be represented by the claimant, counsel, or any other agent of the claimant's choice. Mediators need not be attorneys.

(2) Mediation proceedings conducted pursuant to this section shall be considered to be settlement negotiations and are confidential. No admission, representation, or statement made in the course of such mediation proceedings that is not otherwise subject to discovery or otherwise obtainable under the procedures established in articles 40 to 47 of this title shall be admissible as evidence or subject to discovery under said articles. No mediator who participates in mediation proceedings conducted pursuant to this section shall be compelled or permitted to testify about any matter discussed or revealed during such proceedings in any other proceeding under articles 40 to 47 of this title.

(3) The division shall develop a program to implement the provisions of this section. Such program shall be a simple, nonadversarial method for the mediation of disputes arising under articles 40 to 47 of this title. Such program shall provide for the use of neutral mediators and the conduct of proceedings in an informal setting. The director shall adopt rules and regulations to implement such program.

ANNOTATION

In workers' compensation proceedings, "authorization" refers to the treating physician's status as the health care provider legally authorized to treat an injured worker rather than the particular medical treatment or procedure recommended by the authorized treating physician. One Hour Cleaners v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 914 P.2d 501 (Colo. App. 1995).

8-43-206. Settlement conference procedures. (1) Any employee, insurer, or employer, if self-insured, involved in a dispute arising under articles 40 to 47 of this title may request settlement conference services from the director or the office of administrative courts in the department of personnel. However, such settlement procedures are optional and entirely voluntary, and no such procedures shall be conducted without the consent of both parties to the dispute.

(2) Settlement conferences shall be conducted by a settlement conference officer who may be a prehearing administrative law judge or an administrative law judge in the office of administrative courts in the department of personnel appointed pursuant to section 24-30-1003, C.R.S., and assigned to hear disputes arising under articles 40 to 47 of this title. The parties may agree on the selection of a settlement conference officer; except that such officer shall not be the administrative law judge who is regularly assigned to hear the employee's case. If the parties fail to agree on the selection of such officer, they may apply to the director or to the office of administrative courts for the designation of a settlement conference officer who shall not be the administrative law judge who is regularly assigned to hear the employee's case.

(3) Settlement conference proceedings conducted pursuant to this section shall be considered to be settlement negotiations and are confidential. No admission, representation, or statement made in the course of such settlement conference proceedings that is not otherwise subject to discovery or otherwise obtainable under the procedures established in articles 40 to 47 of this title shall be admissible as evidence or subject to discovery under said articles. No settlement conference officer who participates in settlement conference proceedings conducted pursuant to this section shall be compelled or permitted to testify about any matter discussed or revealed during such proceedings in any other proceeding under articles 40 to 47 of this title.

(4) The executive director of the department of personnel shall adopt rules and regulations to implement the provisions of this section. Such rules and regulations shall be consistent with the provisions of section 8-43-204.

(5) The director of the division of workers' compensation shall adopt rules and regulations to implement the provisions of this section. Such rules and regulations shall be consistent with the provisions of section 8-43-204.

8-43-206.5. Right to binding arbitration for resolution of disputes under articles 40 to 47. At any time prior to a hearing, the parties may agree to submit any dispute under articles 40 to 47 of this title to binding arbitration. Said arbitration shall be by an administrative law judge of the parties' choice or pursuant to arbitration procedures as provided by the Colorado rules of civil procedure. Any arbitration award pursuant to the provisions of this section shall be binding upon the parties, and no other procedure contained in this article shall be available to the parties for the further review of such award.

8-43-207. Hearings. (1) Hearings shall be held to determine any controversy concerning any issue arising under articles 40 to 47 of this title. In connection with hearings, the director and administrative law judges are empowered to:

(a) In the name of the division, issue subpoenas for witnesses and documentary evidence which shall be served in the same manner as subpoenas in the district court;

(b) Administer oaths;

(c) Make evidentiary rulings;

(d) Limit or exclude cumulative or repetitive proof or examination;

(e) Upon written motion and for good cause shown, permit parties to engage in discovery; except that permission need not be sought if each party is represented by an attorney. The director or administrative law judge may rule on discovery matters and impose the sanctions provided in the rules of civil procedure in the district courts for willful failure to comply with permitted discovery.

(f) Upon written motion and for good cause shown, conduct prehearing conferences for the settlement or simplification of issues;

(g) Dispose of procedural requests upon written motion or on written briefs or oral arguments as determined appropriate;

(h) Control the course of the hearing and the conduct of persons in the hearing room;

(i) Upon written motion and for good cause shown, grant reasonable extensions of time for the taking of any action contained in this article;

(j) Upon good cause shown, adjourn any hearing to a later date for the taking of additional evidence;

(k) Issue orders;

(l) Appoint guardians ad litem, as appropriate, in matters involving dependents' claims, and assess the reasonable fees and costs, therefore, from one or more of the parties;

(m) Determine the competency of witnesses who testify in a workers' compensation hearing or proceeding and the competency of parties that have entered into settlement agreements pursuant to section 8-43-204. Such competency determinations shall only be for the purpose of the particular workers' compensation proceeding.

(n) Dismiss all issues in the case except as to resolved issues and except as to benefits already received, upon thirty days notice to all the parties, for failure to prosecute the case unless good cause is shown why such issues should not be dismissed. For purposes of this paragraph (n), it shall be deemed a failure to prosecute if there has been no activity by the parties in the case for a period of at least six months.

(o) Set aside all or any part of any fee for medical services rendered pursuant to articles 40 to 47 of this title if an administrative law judge determines after a hearing that, based upon a review of the medical necessity and appropriateness of care provided pursuant to said articles, any such fee is excessive or that the treatment rendered was not necessary or appropriate under the circumstances. If all or part of any fee for medical services is set aside pursuant to this paragraph (o), the provider of any such services shall not contract with, bill, or charge the claimant for such fees and shall not attempt in any way to collect any such charges from the claimant. No fee for medical services shall be set aside pursuant to this paragraph (o) if the treatment was authorized in writing by the insurer or employer.

(p) Impose the sanctions provided in the Colorado rules of civil procedure, except for civil contempt pursuant to rule 107 thereof, for willful failure to comply with any order of an administrative law judge issued pursuant to articles 40 to 47 of this title;

(q) Require repayment of overpayments.

- III. Evidence.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For note, "Use of Evidence in Hearings Before Colorado Administrative Agencies", see 29 Dicta 437 (1952). For note, "The Right to Cross-Examine Adverse Witnesses as a Part of Due Process in Hearings Before Colorado Agencies", see 31 Dicta 383 (1954). For article, "An ALJ's View: The New, Unified Hearings in Worker's Compensation Cases", see 18 Colo. Law. 2327 (1989).

Annotator's note. Since § 8-43-207 is similar to § 8-53-103 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Jurisdictional challenge to hearing officer. Additional hearing required where claimant alleged that hearing officer lacked jurisdiction to enter an order after the hearing officer had terminated his employment. Welch v. Indus. Comm'n, 722 P.2d 439 (Colo. App. 1986).

Retrospective application of section by administrative law judge (ALJ) in order to determine whether claimant was competent at the time he entered into the settlement agreement was proper because it effected a procedural rather than a substantive change. Powderhorn

Coal Co. v. Weaver, 835 P.2d 616 (Colo. App. 1992).

The administrative and judicial review provisions of the Act are complete, definitive, and organic, without the need of supplementation from other legislative acts or the procedural relief afforded by C.R.C.P. 16. Gardner v. Friend, 849 P.2d 817 (Colo. App. 1992).

General extension-of-time provision in subsection (1)(i) does not overcome the jurisdictional time limits set forth elsewhere in the act. Speier v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 181 P.3d 1173 (Colo. App. 2008).

An aggrieved party to a medical utilization review proceeding may request an evidentiary hearing under former § 8-53-103 if the order of the director of the division of labor terminates a medical benefit or if a party seeks to terminate medical benefits based on the review proceedings. Hargett v. Dir., Div. of Labor, 854 P.2d 1316 (Colo. App. 1992) (decided under former § 8-53-103 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of title 8).

If the issue in controversy involves the necessity and appropriateness of medical care, rather than industrial disability, the medical utilization committee reports and the director's order based thereon are admissible in hearings under former § 8-53-103, subject to the hearing officer's evidentiary rulings. Hargett v. Dir., Div. of Labor, 854 P.2d 1316 (Colo. App. 1992) (decided under former § 8-53-103 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of title 8).

Party adversely affected by a medical utilization review proceeding can request that the matter be litigated de novo in a hearing under this section. Donn v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 865 P.2d 873 (Colo. App. 1993).

Where the director's medical utilization review order issued pursuant to § 8-43-501 terminates the claimant's care by a previously authorized health care provider, the claimant is entitled to have the order adjudicated de novo by an ALJ. McWhorter v. CNA Ins. Co., 868 P.2d 1128 (Colo. App. 1993).

II. POWERS OF THE DIRECTOR AND HEARING OFFICERS.

Broad powers are granted by this section and govern all proceedings on an initial claim or upon reopening. Colo. Auto Body, Inc. v. Newton, 160 Colo. 113, 414 P.2d 480 (1966).

Under the broad powers granted by this section, the ALJ committed no abuse of discretion by joining parties when the question of their liability had been raised and the joinder posed no risk of prejudice. Renaissance Salon v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 994 P.2d 447 (Colo. App. 1999).

Power to give notice, adjourn hearing, and give parties right to be present. When it develops at a hearing that there is a possibility that disabilities in connection with which the claimant is seeking additional compensation might be the result of another accident, under this section — either upon the application of “any party” or upon its own motion — the fact-finder is empowered to send reasonable notice to all interested parties and to adjourn the hearing from time to time and to give all parties the right to be present. Colo. Auto Body, Inc. v. Newton, 160 Colo. 113, 414 P.2d 480 (1966).

Questions of fact can be determined only by the fact-finder. Roper v. Indus. Comm'n, 93 Colo. 250, 25 P.2d 752 (1933); O.P. Skaggs Co. v. Nixon, 97 Colo. 314, 50 P.2d 55 (1935).

Fact-finder determines which of two causes produced injury. Where an existing condition may result from one of two causes shown in the evidence, it is the province of the director fact finder to determine which of these two causes produced the result of which complaint is made. Indus. Comm'n v. Barton, 98 Colo. 51, 52 P.2d 670 (1935).

Hearing officer has discretion to reject consolidation of claims when issues are distinct and claimant will have future opportunity to litigate other claims. Roe v. Indus. Comm'n, 734 P.2d 138 (Colo. App. 1986).

Division has the authority to grant the parties to a medical utilization review proceeding an extension of time for good cause shown. Donn v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 865 P.2d 873 (Colo. App. 1993).

The power to grant reasonable extensions of time cannot overcome the jurisdictional time limitation on filing a notice of appeal of a medical utilization review order, pursuant to § 8-43-501. Cramer v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 885 P.2d 318 (Colo. App. 1994).

ALJ's imposition of discovery sanctions reasonable upon a finding of a willful discovery violation when ALJ explicitly found that employer had not fully complied with the order compelling discovery. When the order is read in conjunction with: (1) The presumption accorded by department of labor & employment rule VIII(E)(7); (2) employer's failure to timely respond to the original discovery request; (3) its failure to timely comply with both the order compelling discovery and the order for discovery entered at the prehearing conference; and (4) its failure to respond to the motions to compel and for sanctions, the ALJ clearly found the violation was willful. Shafer Commercial Seating, Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 85 P.3d 619 (Colo. App. 2003).

Employer did not substantially comply with the order to compel when it supplied the requested information only two or three days beyond the last imposed deadline without a showing that its belated production of the information was the result of mistake, lack of knowledge, or some other basis that would explain the failure to comply with the prior orders and negate the determination of deliberate intent. Shafer Commercial Seating, Inc. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 85 P.3d 619 (Colo. App. 2003).

III. EVIDENCE.

Annotator's note. Cases included in the annotations to this section which refer to the industrial commission were decided prior to the enactment of 1986 Senate Bill No. 12 which abolished said commission and transferred its powers, duties, and functions to the industrial claim appeals panel.

The rules of evidence are generally the same in workmen's compensation cases as they are in civil suits. Watson v. Merritt, 149 Colo. 562, 369 P.2d 989 (1962).

For the general assembly did not authorize the adoption of rules of evidence which courts themselves are without authority to adopt. Puncce v. City & County of Denver, 28 Colo. App. 542, 475 P.2d 359 (1970).

Due process and fundamental rights may not be disregarded. Although the rules of evidence may be somewhat more relaxed in an administrative proceeding than in a court of law, they cannot be so relaxed that due process of law and fundamental rights are disregarded. Puncce v. City & County of Denver, 28 Colo. App. 542, 475 P.2d 359 (1970).

Thus, in a compensation hearing cross-examination is a fundamental right, and not a mere privilege. Although its scope may be restricted, within the sound discretion of the court, it cannot be denied. And where the claimant does not request an opportunity to inspect the hospital records before the director or seek to cross-examine on them, the referee's failure to advise claimant of her right of cross-examination is improper, as is his failure to offer her an opportunity to inspect the records before using them against her. Puncec v. City & County of Denver, 28 Colo. App. 542, 475 P.2d 359 (1970).

Due process requires that a hearing officer either read or hear the evidence. Therefore a hearing officer may read and rely on the transcript of evidence presented before another hearing officer and need not grant a de novo hearing. Walton v. Indus. Comm'n, 738 P.2d 66 (Colo. App. 1987).

Hearing officer did not deprive employer and insurer of due process in denying their request to depose experts in different city even though, as a result, experts did not testify since deposition should have been taken in advance and employer and insurer were advised 60 days in advance of hearing date that all evidence was to be presented at that time. IPMC Transp. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 753 P.2d 803 (Colo. App. 1988).

Use of video teleconferencing technology to hear testimony from a remote location in evidentiary hearing did not violate claimant's due process and equal protection rights. Kroupa v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 53 P.3d 1192 (Colo. App. 2002).

Although hearing officer had discretion to grant petitioner's request in conduct of evidentiary proceeding upon a showing of good cause, such cause must be balanced against competing interests of other parties. IPMC Transp. v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 753 P.2d 803 (Colo. App. 1988).

Rule against hearsay evidence may not properly be disregarded in proceedings under the workmen's compensation act. Olson-Hall v. Indus. Comm'n, 71 Colo. 228, 205 P. 527 (1922); Armour & Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 78 Colo. 569, 243 P. 546 (1926); New Jersey Fid. & Plate Glass Ins. Co. v. Richey, 85 Colo. 376, 275 P. 937 (1929); H.C. Lallier Const. & Eng'r Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 91 Colo. 593, 17 P.2d 532 (1932).

Parties are expected to introduce all their evidence at the appointed hearing and on that evidence, so introduced, a decision is made. Frank v. Indus. Comm'n, 96 Colo. 364, 43 P.2d 158 (1935).

Burden of proof. It is elementary in compensation cases, as in other actions, that the burden of proof is upon the party asserting the claim and it is the duty of the claimant to show that the death or injury of the employee was the proximate result of an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment. Olson-Hall v. Indus. Comm'n, 71 Colo. 228, 205 P. 527 (1922).

Where all the evidence supports the claim, because no evidence has been introduced to the contrary and no impeachment has taken place, the conclusion necessarily drawn by the law from the evidence must be enforced. Frank v. Indus. Comm'n, 96 Colo. 364, 43 P.2d 158 (1935).

Hearing officer did not err in taking additional evidence which might have affected the outcome of a claim for benefits during an additional hearing conducted upon remand. Potomac Ins. Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 744 P.2d 765 (Colo. App. 1987).

It is always proper for a claimant to testify as to his general health and feeling immediately preceding and succeeding an accident, to the end that comparison may be made and the extent of the injury evaluated. Montgomery Ward & Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 128 Colo. 465, 263 P.2d 817 (1953); Indus. Comm'n v. Newton Lumber & Mfg. Co., 135 Colo. 594, 314 P.2d 297 (1957).

Statements of a deceased employee as to his bodily or mental feelings are admissible in evidence. Olson-Hall v. Indus. Comm'n, 71 Colo. 228, 205 P. 527 (1922).

However, statements of a deceased employee as to the cause of his illness are not admissible, if not within the res gestae rule. Olson-Hall v. Indus. Comm'n, 71 Colo. 228, 205 P. 527 (1922).

Admissions against interest justify the finder of the facts in considering as established the facts admitted. In the absence of opposing evidence their prima facie character remains undisturbed and intact. Watson v. Merritt, 149 Colo. 562, 369 P.2d 989 (1962).

Probative value of employer's declaration against interest. The report of an accident by an employer stating that a claimant strained or pulled his heart muscle when attempting to lift a transmission into an automobile is a declaration against the interest of the employer having probative value, the weight of which is for the fact-finder to determine. Indus. Comm'n v. Johnson Pontiac, Inc., 140 Colo. 160, 344 P.2d 186 (1959).

The written report of a doctor acting as a witness for a claimant may be considered when filed and made part of the record. J.W. Metz Lumber Co. v. Taylor, 134 Colo. 249, 302 P.2d 521 (1956).

Consideration of testimony of doctor. The doctor who makes out a death certificate certifies as to the correctness of its contents at the time he makes it out, and where the doctor who makes out the certificate in the first instance seeks to explain away the legal effect of what he certifies, the fact-finder is justified in considering that circumstance carefully. Elleman v.

Indus. Comm'n, 100 Colo. 120, 66 P.2d 323 (1937).

Opinion evidence of physician is competent in workmen's compensation cases. Card Iron Works Co. v. Radovich, 94 Colo. 426, 30 P.2d 1108 (1934).

Thus, question based on death certificate held not to be error. It is not prejudicial error to ask a medical expert whether death was the result of an accident based upon his examination of the death certificate alone. It is reasonable that such an expert can make certain deductions from the contents of a death certificate, and in such a case it is at least corroborative testimony. Elleman v. Indus. Comm'n, 100 Colo. 120, 66 P.2d 323 (1937).

Employer's report of accident, its conduct relative thereto, and report of mine inspector are proper evidence in a workmen's compensation case involving a coal mining accident. Empire Zinc Co. v. Indus. Comm'n, 94 Colo. 98, 28 P.2d 337 (1933).

Furthermore, hospital records may be received as evidence. The general assembly authorized the director to receive as evidence, and use as proof of any fact in dispute, hospital records of an injured employee. Puncce v. City & County of Denver, 28 Colo. App. 542, 475 P.2d 359 (1970).

When claimant refused to sign release of psychiatric records, the ALJ properly imposed sanctions. The judge agreed to review the records in camera to determine which, if any, should be released to respondents, but the claimant argued that the judge should meet in camera with her psychiatrist to identify areas that would not be disclosed. Sheid v. Hewlett Packard, 826 P.2d 396 (Colo. App. 1991).

The orders of a prehearing ALJ that relate to prehearing conferences are not final for purposes of appeal. Indus. Claim Appeals Office v. Orth, 965 P.2d 1246 (Colo. 1998).

However, the orders of a prehearing ALJ approving a settlement are final for purposes of appeal. Indus. Claim Appeals Office v. Orth, 965 P.2d 1246 (Colo. 1998).

Additional hearings. If a party seeks an additional hearing after the apparent completion of the contemplated hearing process, the commission may deny a further hearing unless there is presented a sufficient showing in justification for an additional hearing. Raffaello v. Indus. Comm'n, 670 P.2d 805 (Colo. App. 1983).

The industrial commission erred in refusing to set aside an order of a referee denying claimant's request for an additional hearing to present further medical evidence where there was a stipulation for further evaluation of claimant, it was undisputed that the evaluation was completed, and opposing counsel acceded to the desirability of further hearing. Raffaello v. Indus. Comm'n, 670 P.2d 805 (Colo. App. 1983).

8-43-207.5. Prehearing conferences. (1) Notwithstanding any provision of articles 40 to 47 of this title to the contrary, at any time not less than ten days prior to the formal adjudication on the record of any issue before the director or an administrative law judge in the office of administrative courts, any party to a claim may request a prehearing conference before a prehearing administrative law judge in the division of workers' compensation for the speedy resolution of or simplification of any issues and to determine the general readiness of remaining issues for formal adjudication on the record. The issues addressed in such prehearing conference shall be limited to: Ripeness of legal, but not factual, issues for formal adjudication on the record before the director or an administrative law judge in the office of administrative courts; discovery matters; and evidentiary disputes. The filing of an application for hearing with the office of administrative courts shall not be a prerequisite to a request for a prehearing conference under this section. The director and the administrative law judges in the office of administrative courts may also request a prehearing conference under this section.

(2) "Prehearing administrative law judge" means a qualified person appointed by the director pursuant to section 8-47-101 to preside over prehearing conferences pursuant to this section, to approve settlements pursuant to section 8-43-204, to conduct settlement conferences pursuant to section 8-43-206, and to conduct arbitrations pursuant to section 8-43-206.5. Such prehearing administrative law judges shall have authority to: Order any party to participate in a prehearing conference; issue interlocutory orders; issue subpoenas in the name of the division for production of documentary evidence which shall be served in the same manner as subpoenas in the district court; make evidentiary rulings; permit parties to cause depositions to be taken; determine the competency of any party to a claim to enter into a settlement agreement; and strike the application for hearing of a party for failure to comply with any provision of this section.

(3) An order entered by a prehearing administrative law judge shall be an order of the director and binding on the parties. Such an order shall be interlocutory. Prehearing conferences need not be held on the record; however, any party to a claim may request in advance that a record be made of the prehearing conference, either taken verbatim by a court reporter provided and paid for by the requesting party or electronically recorded by the division.

(4) The director shall adopt rules and regulations as may be necessary to implement the provisions of this section.

8-43-208. Nor is the commission, on reviewing an order or award of its referee, required to take further testimony, if it does not deem such a course necessary. Warner v. Mullens, 111 Colo. 60, 137 P.2d 420 (1943).

This section does not limit the director's authority to act pursuant to § 8-43-201. Cornerstone Partners v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 830 P.2d 1148 (Colo. App. 1992).

Verbal notice to supervisor and company physician of pain and suffering caused by prolonged standing and lifting was sufficient notification to employer to require compliance with § 8-53-102. Jones v. Adolph Coors Col., 689 P.2d 681 (Colo. App. 1984).

Combined investigatory and adjudicatory functions. Any order purporting to combine investigatory and adjudicatory functions in a single referee would raise serious questions of propriety. Thompson v. Indus. Comm'n, 33 Colo. App. 369, 520 P.2d 139 (1974).

Extrajudicial visit to claimant's home improper. Absent any authorization for such an investigation, the referee acted in excess of his powers when he made an extrajudicial visit to claimant's home. Thompson v. Indus. Comm'n, 33 Colo. App. 369, 520 P.2d 139 (1974).

8-43-209. Time schedule for hearings - establishment. (1) Hearings shall commence within one hundred days after the hearing is set pursuant to section 8-43-211 (2). One extension of time to commence the hearing of no more than sixty days shall be granted by an administrative law judge upon agreement of the parties.

(2) One extension of time to commence the hearing of no more than sixty days may be granted by an administrative law judge upon written request by any party to the case and for good cause shown, in the following cases: When pulmonary lung disease, cancer, cardiovascular disease, or stroke is alleged as the cause of the disability; when the subsequent injury fund is a party; when permanent total disability is alleged; upon agreement of the parties; or when compensability of the injury is contested. In all other cases, extensions of time to commence the hearing of no more than twenty days may be granted by an administrative law judge upon written request by any party to the case and for good cause shown.

(3) Once the hearing is commenced, the administrative law judge may, for good cause shown, continue the hearing to a date certain to take additional testimony, to file an additional medical report, to file the transcript of a deposition, or to file a position statement. Except upon the agreement of all parties or for good cause shown, a continuance to complete a hearing shall not exceed thirty calendar days.

ANNOTATION

Claimant's reliance on this section is misplaced because the statute addresses time limits for setting a hearing, not time limits for issuance of an order and delivery of benefits. Bodensieck v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 183 P.3d 684 (Colo. App. 2008).

Further, because benefits were denied, any claim of undue delay in delivery of benefits is moot. Bodensieck v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 183 P.3d 684 (Colo. App. 2008).

8-43-210. Evidence. Notwithstanding section 24-4-105, C.R.S., the Colorado rules of evidence and requirements of proof for civil nonjury cases in the district courts shall apply in all hearings; except that medical and hospital records, physicians' reports, vocational reports, and records of the employer are admissible as evidence and can be filed in the record as evidence without formal identification if relevant to any issue in the case. Depositions may be substituted for testimony upon good cause shown. Convictions for alcohol-related offenses, pursuant to titles 18 and 42, C.R.S., the transcripts of proceedings leading to such convictions, and the court files relating to such convictions may be admissible in all hearings conducted under the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of this title, where such conviction resulted from the same occurrence, accident, or injury occurring on the job that forms the basis for the workers' compensation claim. All relevant medical records, vocational reports, expert witness reports, and employer records shall be exchanged with all other parties at least twenty days prior to the hearing date.

ANNOTATION

A tribunal has broad discretion to determine the admissibility of expert testimony and appellate courts may not overturn a ruling unless it is manifestly erroneous. An ALJ is accorded similar discretion in a workers' compensation proceeding. One Hour Cleaners v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 914 P.2d 501 (Colo. App. 1995).

Letter properly admitted into evidence. The letter written by claimant's employer was a vocational report and a record of the employer. Therefore, such letter was properly admitted into evidence. Churchill v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 720 P.2d 171 (Colo. App. 1986) (decided under former § 8-53-115 as it existed prior to the 1990 repeal and reenactment of the "Workers' Compensation Act of Colorado", articles 40 to 47 of title 8).

Physician's letter calculating claimant's probable blood alcohol level at the time of the accident, explaining the adverse effects of such ethanol levels on claimant's abilities to function while driving, and concluding that the adverse effects of the ethanol in claimant's body would have contributed to, if not caused, claimant's accident, are "physicians' reports" within the meaning of the statute and therefore admissible. Ackerman v. Hilton's Mechanical Men, 914 P.2d 524 (Colo. App. 1996).

Section 8-41-301 (2) does not require that a mental impairment claimant produce a live witness in all cases. Such a requirement would serve no legitimate purpose and would result in an equal protection violation when other claimants are allowed to submit expert reports and only provide the expert witness when the opposing party chooses to examine the expert. Esser v. Indus. Claims Appeals Office, 8 P.3d 1218 (Colo. App. 2000), aff'd on other grounds, 30 P.3d 189 (Colo. 2001).

Exceptions to the 20-day rule are clearly contemplated by the allowance of continuances to file additional reports in appropriate circumstances, such as those stated in § 8-43-209 (3). Ortega v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 207 P.3d 895 (Colo. App. 2009).

8-43-211. Notice - request for hearing. (1) At least thirty days prior to any hearing, the office of administrative courts in the department of personnel shall send written notice to all parties by regular or electronic mail or by facsimile. The notice shall:

(a) Give the time, date, and place of the hearing;

(b) Inform the parties that they must be prepared to present their evidence concerning the issues to be heard;

(c) Inform the parties that they have the right to be represented by an attorney or other person of their choice at the hearing.

(2) Hearings shall be set by the office of administrative courts in the department of personnel within eighty to one hundred days after any of the following occur:

(a) The director sets any issue for hearing. The director may expedite the hearing for good cause shown.

(b) Any party requests a hearing on issues ripe for adjudication by filing a written request with the office of administrative courts in the department of personnel on forms provided by the office. The request shall be mailed to all parties at the time they are filed with the office of administrative courts. After the filing of the requests, the office of administrative courts in the department of personnel shall set the matter for hearing insofar as is practicable in the order in which requests are received by the office of administrative courts.
